PREFACE TO THE SIXTH EDITION

THE fifth edition having been exhausted within the middle of the last year a reprint edition had to be issued in August 1927 while I was preparing for the present edition This is due to the kind patronage which has been extended by the Bench and the Bar to this humble work

Nearly 600 fresh rulings have been embodied in the present edition and all amendments up to 1927 incorporated in their proper places

PREFACE TO THE FIFTH EDITION

Once more my heartiest thanks are due to the legal profession for the kind patronage they are extending to this humble work which has seen the light of yet another edition within a year

In preparing this edition I have not merely contented myself with adding the new rulings but have made a searching scrutiny into the cases in the light of the amendments, and I can humbly assure the lawyers and Judges that if they carefully study this work they will not fall into the error, (which they frequently do as is evident from numerous reported cases) of citing and following the old rulings which have been superseded by the Amendments of 1923 and later years

As time rolls on, the effects of these amendments are being perceived and commented on by High Court Judges But unfortunately those amendments have not been able to do away with the conflicts of rulings which still exist under almost every section of the Code In glancing at any commentary on the Code, one is almost struck with the differences of opinion among the High Courts on every important point Perhaps in no other branch of the law is judicial opinion so much divided Some of those conflicts have been set at rest by the 1923 amendments but still there is enough work left for the Legislature To attempt to reconcile these conflicts is a hopeless task for the commentator, and I have merely pointed out the differences

Lastly the case law has been brought down to May 1926 Parallel references have been given, as far as possible to the Criminal Law Journal and the All India Reporter

PREFACE TO THE FOURTH EDITION

In bringing out the fourth edition of this book, the author begs to convey his heartfelt thanks to the legal profession for their kind appreciation of this humble work which is passing through three successive editions within the space of barely two years

In this edition the Notes have been numbered throughout and the references in the Index and Table of Cases are given to the numbers of Notes and not to the numbers of pages

PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION

THE second edition of this work having been exhausted within the short space of [illegible] months the present edition is issued after a careful revision of the whole book and addition of the recent rulings bringing the case law down to the end of 1923

20th February 1924 B B MITRA

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

SINCE the publication of the first edition of this work in 1920 the Criminal Procedure Code has undergone a salutary change by the passing of not less than seven amending Acts The earliest of these is the Election Offences and Inquiries Act XXXIX of 1920 which however does nothing more than add two words to sec 196 of this Code and certain sections of the I P Code (171 E to 171 I) to Schedule II The next is the Press Law Repeal and Amendment Act XIV of 1922 which adds a few sections after sec 99 Three other amendments of 1923 do not require anything more than a mere passing reference they are—the White Slave Traffic Act (XX of 1923) which introduces sections 366A and 366B of the Indian Penal Code into Schedule II the Cr P C Further Amendment Act XXXV of 1923 which amends the definition of Pleader in section 4 and the Cr P C Second Amendment Act XXXVII of 1923 which amends secs 364 388 and 562

But the most [illegible] wrought by the [illegible] its have been (popularly known [illegible] Act XII of 1923 Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act) and the The first Act is the result of a compromise between the members of a Committee appointed in 1921 to amend certain [illegible] ns of this Code which differentiated between European [illegible] dian British subjects in Criminal trials and proceedings

The disabilities of second and third class Magistrates to try European British subjects, the requirement of the first class Magistrate being a European British subject and a Justice of the Peace in order to be able to try European British subjects, the right of such subjects to claim a jury before a District Magistrate, their exemption from security proceedings, the lower scale of punishment, the more extensive rights of appeal—all these privileges have now been taken away, though certain inequalities are still retained under the present Code. The amendments have been duly noticed in this book not only by reference to the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill but also to the Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee.

The Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 has got a long history behind it. The kernel of the Act was a Bill prepared in 1914, in which three fourths of the present amendments were contained. This Bill was referred to a small Committee (known as the Lowndes Committee) in 1916 which submitted its Report at the end of the same year but owing to the interposition of the war further consideration on the Bill was postponed. Meanwhile suggestions and criticisms were invited and collected and in 1921 another Bill was prepared (embodying the above Report with certain alterations made in pursuance of the suggestions received) and was referred to a Joint Committee which submitted its Report in 1922. This Bill with various alterations ultimately passed into law.

From this it is evident that neither the Bill of 1921 nor the Report of the Joint Committee of 1922 gives the whole history of the amendments; in order to understand the Objects and Reasons one has also to consult the earlier Bill of 1914 and the Report of 1916. The editor has therefore spared no pains to trace each amendment to the original Bill and Report in order to elucidate the lawyer as to the reasons of the particular amendment and where an amendment has been affected during the discussions in the Legislative Assembly, reference has been given to the Debates in the Assembly (with dates), and extracts from speeches have been cited where necessary. All the rulings modified or overruled by the amendments have been duly noticed. The amendments have been shown in italics, and where a section or subsection has been materially amended it has been printed in parallel columns, the left hand column representing the old Act and the right hand column giving the new.

The citations have been brought down to the present year, and as in the previous edition the notes have been supplemented by extracts from Police Codes and [illegible] and by Rules, Notifications, and Circulars.

THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, 1898

ACT NO. V OF 1898.

[As amended up to date.]

RECEIVED THE G. G's ASSENT ON THE 22ND MARCH, 1898.

An Act to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Criminal Procedure.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to criminal procedure; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1 The 1923 Amendments and their history :—The Criminal Procedure Code, 1898 has undergone drastic amendments at the hands of the Legislature in 1923 by two Acts, viz, the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923 (popularly known as the Racial Distinctions Act) and the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 Of these the latter Act is the more important and is the outcome of a general revision of the whole Code, whereas the former Act is limited to the amendment of certain sections relating to the trial of European British Subjects. These Amendment Acts have come into force from 1st September 1923

The genesis of Act XVIII of 1923 dates as far back as 1914. In that year a Bill (no 3 of 1914) was introduced in the Imperial Legislative Council on the 21st March, and was thereafter referred to the Local Governments and Administrations Their opinions were received and partially examined, but further progress with the Bill was suspended until the conclusion of the war Meanwhile the Government by a resolution dated the 18th September 1916 referred this Bill and the opinions received to a small Committee (known as the Lowndes Committee). This Committee sat for 21 days and its work was finished on the 23rd December 1916 The Bill as revised by this Committee was again introduced in the Imperial

Legislative Council on the 26th September 1917, but further consideration of the Bill was postponed until after the war Meanwhile some further suggestions for the amendment of the Code were considered by the Government, and after the termination of the war, a new Bill was prepared in 1921 which was substantially the Bill as revised by the above Committee, supplemented by the amendments regarded as advisable as a result of the consideration above referred to

This Bill (no 3 of 1921) was introduced in the Council of State on the 21st February 1921 by Sir William Vincent, and in September 1921 it was referred to a Joint Committee composed of representative members of the Legislative Assembly and the Council of State This Committee sat for 14 days and submitted its report after a year (in September 1922), and the Bill as revised by this Committee with certain alterations made during the discussions in the Council of State in September 1922 and in the Legislative Assembly in January and February 1923 ultimately passed into law, and has been enacted as Act XVIII of 1923

(For Bill 3 of 1914, see Gazette of India Part V 28th March 1914, for the Report of the Select Committee of 1916 see Gazette of India Part V, September, 1917, reprinted in the Gazette of India, February 26 1921, at p 39, for Bill 3 of 1921 see Gazette of India, Part V, February 26, 1921, for the Report of the Joint Committee see Gazette of India Part V, September 9 1922)

The changes made from time to time by other minor Amendment Acts up to date have been noticed in this book in their proper places

2 Pending cases are not affected by changes in the law :— The general rule as to new laws of procedure is that they take effect from their coming into operation so that the procedure from that date would be governed by such laws It is also a general rule that such laws are not to affect vested rights Therefore, where a person was being tried under an old Act, and before the conclusion of the trial, the new Act came into force, the trial ought to be continued in accordance with the procedure laid down in the earlier Act, which was in force at the commencement of the trial—Srinivasachari v Queen, 6 Mad 336, Mukund v Ladu 3 Bom L R 584

2A Construction :— A penal statute must be construed strictly; that is, nothing is to be regarded as within the meaning of the statute which is not within the letter—which is not clearly and intelligibly described in the very words of the statute itself—Emp v Kola, 8 Cal 214, Lakhmi Chand v Emp, 1901 P R 24 Bisumbhur v Q E, 5 C W N 108 Penal provisions have to be strictly construed, nor can the liability to punishment for the neglect of a statutory obligation be extended by inferential reasoning—Kazi v. Q E, 28 Cal 504 In interpreting statutes of a penal character, it is important to see that the powers conferred upon the Magistrates are duly exercised with reference to the rendering unlawful of acts which would otherwise be lawful—Q E v Sheodin, 10 All. 115 A penal statute must be construed strictly, and Magistrates ought to be very careful before they proceed to inflict imprisonment in a summary manner They must avoid all appearance of oppression—In re Ganesh Narayan 13 Bom 600 Words importing a doubtful or ambiguous meaning must be construed strictly and in favour of the subject that is to say unless the meaning of the Legislature is perfectly clear no penalties are to be imposed upon the subjects of the Crown nor are their liberties to be restricted—Q E v Imam 10 All 150 (F B) See also 17 Bom 573 Palandin v K E 2 A L J 26 Reg v Bhista 1 Bom 308

The same rules of interpretation apply to notifications issued under penal statutes—Lakhmi Chand v Emp 1901 P R 24

The marginal notes to a section do not form part of an enactment and cannot be referred to for the purpose of construing the section They should not be allowed to vary the clear grammatical meaning of the rule embodied in the section—Punardeo v Ram Sarup 25 Cal 858 Bijoyendra v Emp 7 C W N 883 Q E v Mahomed 2 Bom L R 918 Dukhi v Halway 23 Cal 55 Swayambu v Municipal Council 1 M L J 37 In construing a section it is not competent to refer to the proceedings in the Legislative Council as legitimate aids to the construction of a law —Q E v Srichurn 22 Cal 1017 F B Q E v Tilak 22 Bom 112 nor is it proper to refer to the previous history of the law—Sarat v Emp, 7 C W N 301

It is not regular for a Magistrate to allow his decision to be guided by anything that appears in some proposed Bill that has not become law—Raunak v Harban 3 All 283

PART I

PRELIMINARY.

CHAPTER I

1 (1) This Act may be called the Code of Criminal Procedure 1898, and it shall come into force on the first day of July, 1898

Short title Commencement

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, but in the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, nothing herein contained shall affect any special or local law now in force, or any special jurisdiction or power conferred, or any special form of procedure prescribed, by any other law for the time being in force or shall apply to—

Extent

(a) the Commissioners of Police in the towns of Calcutta Madras, and Bombay, or the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay,

(b) heads of villages in the Presidency of Fort St George, or

(c) village Police Officers in the Presidency of Bombay

Provided that the Local Government may, if it think fit, * * * by notification in the official Gazette, extend any of the provisions of this Code, with any necessary modifications, to such excepted persons

The words with the sanction of the Governor General in Council which occurred in the proviso have been omitted by the Devolution Act XXXVIII of 1920

N B —The amendments made by Acts XII and XVIII of 1923 have come into force from 1st September 1923

3 Object of the Code —The object of the Criminal Procedure Code is to provide a machinery for the punishment of offences against the substantive law—In re Ganesh Narain 13 Bom 590 Q E v Abdul Rahman 16 Bom 580 Dular v Nejabut 14 Cal 536 Q E v Rama

Chandra Ratanlal 776 (778) Q E v Mona Puna, 16 Bom 661 (669), Q E v Abdul Ratanlal 577 (579) In re Ramasami, 43 M L J 710, 23 Cr L J 691 (692)

4 Extent —British India —The term 'British India' shall mean all territories and places within Her Majesty's dominions which are for the time being governed by Her (His) Majesty through the Governor General of India or through any Governor or other officer subordinate to the Governor General of India (Sec 3 General Clauses Act X of 1897)

The following are within British India —Aden Laccadive Islands, (Q E v Cheria Koya 13 Mad 353) Andaman and Nicobar Islands, (Triccam v B B & C I Ry Co 9 Bom 244) Ajmer and Merwara (9 Bom 244) Island of Perim (Q E v Mangal Tekchand 10 Bom 258)

Native States —The Native States and Tributary Mahals are not within British India therefore this Code does not apply to Rajkot (Q E v Abdul Latif 10 Bom 186) Civil Station of Wadhwan (Emp v Chiman Lal 37 Bom 15? but see 9 Bom 244) Mourbhanj (Emp v Keshub, 8 Cal 98?) Keonjhar (Bichitranand v Bhugbut 16 Cal 667), the lands occupied by the Hyderabad State Railway (Muhammad Yusufuddin v Q E 25 Cal 20 P C) Railway Station in a Native State (Emp v Raghunathrao, 5 Bom L R 873)

But although the Code as such does not apply to the Native States, many of those States have in fact adopted it, e g the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore (In re Hayes 12 Mad 39) Mysore Kashmir the Native States in the Rajputana Agency etc

Transfer of territory from British India to Native State —The British Court has jurisdiction to proceed with the trial of an offence committed in a territory which formed part of British India at the date of the offence and at the date of commitment to the Sessions, but was transferred to a Native State before the case came on for trial—King Emp v Ram Naresh 34 All 118 Similarly, the British Appellate Court has jurisdiction to hear an appeal if the transfer took place after a conviction but before the appeal therefrom was heard—Mahabir v King Emp, 33 All. 578

Other places where the Code does not apply —The Code does not apply to the North Cachar Hills (Soonderjee v Maylon 26 Cal 874) or to the Chittagong Hill Tracts (Q E v Sonai Mugh, 27 Cal 654) It also does not apply to the Garo Hills the Khasia and Jaintia Hills, the Naga Hills the North Cachar Subdivision of the Cachar District, the Mihir Hill Tracts in the Nowgong District the Dibrugarh Frontier Tracts in the Lakhimpur District and the Lushai Hills, see Assam Gazette, 1898 Part II page 788

Places to which the Code has been extended —The Code has been extended to the following places —(1) The District of Angul (with effect from 1st August, 1898) see Calcutta Gazette 1898, Part I p 7?9, (2) Upper Burma (excluding the Shan States), see Burma Laws Act (XIII of 1898), (3) the Shan States (by the Shan States Laws and Criminal Justice Order 1895 as amended by Notification no 29 dated 19 12 1898 Burma Code), (4) the Scheduled Districts in Ganjam and Vizagapatam

see Fort St George Gazette, 1898, Part I, page 306, see also Public Prosecutor v Sadananda, 23 M L J 670 13 Cr L J 856 (5) Sonthal Parganas see Calcutta Gazette, 1898, Part I, page 665 (6) Districts of Hazaribagh, Lohardaga, Manbhum, Palamau, Pargana Dhalbhum and the Kothen in the Singbhum District see Calcutta Gazette, 1898, Part I, page 714, and Gazette of India 1899, Part I, page 779 (7) Pargana of Manpur see Gazette of India, 1899, Part I page 419, (8) British Baluchistan see Gazette of India, 1898, Part I, page 221 (9) Chittagong Hill Tracts see section 4 of the Chittagong Hill Tracts Regulation I of 1900, but see Q E. v Sonai Mugh, 27 Cal 654

The Code has also been extended to the British Protectorates on the East Coast of Africa (Order of Council, 1897), Somaliland (Order, 1899), the Persian Coast and Islands (Order, 1897), and Zanzibar (Order, 1884, under which Zanzibar is to be treated as a District in the Bombay Presidency)

As regards Muscat, it has been held that the Bombay High Court is invested with original criminal jurisdiction over it, but not appellate or revisional jurisdiction—In re Rattansee, 24 Bom 471

High Seas —The trial of a British seaman for an offence committed on the high seas on a British ship must be conducted under the Code of Criminal Procedure, though the offence charged was an offence under the English Law—Q E v Gunning, 21 Cal 782, Q E v Barton, 16 Cal 238; Q v Thompson, 1 B L R O Cr 1, Reg v Elmstone, 7 B H C R 89

5 Special law.—The expression 'special law' in this section has reference to statutory enactments and not to local family law (e g Marumakkattayam law)—Thillu Amma v Sankunni, 37 M L J 361, 20 Cr L J 733 The Coroner s Act is an instance of special law

6 Local law —This Code will not affect any local law, as for instance, Act XXXVII of 1885 which is still in force in Sonthal Parganas So, an order under that Act sentencing an accused to imprisonment is not open to revision under this Code—Dulat v Nijabat, 12 Cal 536 So also, the Criminal Procedure Code will not apply to proceedings held under the Sind Frontier Regulations (V of 1872 and III of 1892)—Emp v Ghulam Kadir, 5 S L R. 105, 12 Cr. L J 568

7 Special jurisdiction:—The following are instances of special jurisdiction —The jurisdiction conferred by sec 3 of Madras Act XXIV of 1839 (Vizagapatam Agency Act) regarding the administration of criminal justice in the Vizagapatam Agency Tract—Q E v Budara Janni, 14 Mad 121, the jurisdiction conferred by secs 20 23, Cattle Trespass Act—Shama v Lachu, 23 Cal 300, Budhan v Isvur, 34 Cal 926, the jurisdiction conferred by Bombay Village Police Act VIII of 1867—Q E v Ragho Mahadu, 10 Bom 612

8. Special powers —Instances :—Powers conferred on second-class Magistrates by secs 3 (5) and 56 of the Bombay Abkari Act V of 1878 —Q. E v Gustadji, 10 Bom 181, powers possessed by the High Courts to punish for contempts—Surendra Nath Banerjee v Chief Justice, 10 Cal 109 (P C) powers possessed by the High Courts under Sec 29 of the Letters Patent to transfer criminal cases before itself—Sitapathi v. Queen 6 Mad 32, power of superintendence under Sec 15 of the Charter Act—Lakhraj v Deb Pershad, 12 C W N 678.

9 Police of Calcutta, Bombay :—This Code does not apply to the Police in the city of Calcutta, unless expressly made applicable to them—Emp v Madho Dhobi 31 Cal 557 Section 155 however, applies to the Police of Calcutta and Bombay—Q E v Nilmadhub, 15 Cal 595; Q v Visram Babaji 21 Bom 495 Also, Secs 42 44, 54, 55, 56, 68, 83, 84, 85 86 127 164 202 and Col 3 of Schedule II have been specially extended to the Police in the town of Calcutta Sections 386 and 387 have been, by notification under the proviso, extended to the Commissioner of Police for the town of Calcutta (see Calcutta Gazette, 23rd March, 1904) Secs 42, 44, 68 84, 85, 86, 127, 164 202 and Col 3 of Sch II apply to the Police of Bombay But Secs 54 55 56 and 83 are no longer applicable to the Police of Bombay under Sec 2 (1) of the City of Bombay Police Act IV of 1902

This Code applies to the Police but not to the Commissioner of Police, Madras See Madras Act III of 1888

10 Madras Village Headmen —No part of this Code applies to Village Headmen who are empowered by Madras Regs XI of 1816 and IV of 1821 to try petty cases—In re Viziramutha Pillai, 2 Weir 1 But Sec 528 now applies to Madras Village Headmen Sections 480 and 482 do not apply to Village Munsiffs—Q E v Venkatasami, 15 Mad 131

This section should not be read to mean that village Magistrates cannot complain or be tried under this Code, but it only means that in his official capacity as a village Magistrate, that is, in the proceedings he takes as a village Magistrate, he is not governed by the Cr P Code—Pub Pros v Mari Mudali, 19 L W 30, 25 Cr L J 221, A I R 1924 Mad 730

11 Bombay Village Police-officers :—The ancient village system of Police regulated formerly by Reg IV of 1818 and Reg XII of 1827 and now by Bombay Village Police Act VIII of 1867 remains unaffected by the Criminal Procedure Code—Q E v Ragho Mahadu, 19 Bom 612

2. [Repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act X of 1914]

References to Code of Criminal Procedure and other repealed enactments

3 (1) In every enactment passed before this Code comes into force in which reference is made to, or to any chapter or section of, the Code of Criminal Procedure, Act XXV of 1861, or Act X of 1872 or Act X of 1882, or to any other enactment hereby repealed, such reference shall, so far as in

be practicable, be taken to be made to this Code, or to its corresponding chapter or section

(2) In every enactment passed before this Code comes into force, the expressions "Officer exercising (or 'having') the powers (or 'the full powers') of a Magistrate," "Subordinate Magistrate, first class" and "Subordinate Magistrate, second class," shall respectively be deemed to mean "Magistrate of the first class," "Magistrate of the second class," and "Magistrate of the third class", the expression "Magistrate of a division of a district" shall be deeme [illegible]
sion " [illegible]
"Dist [illegible]

Expression in former Acts

4 (1) In this Code the following words and expressions have the following meanings unless a different intention appears from the subject or context

Definitions

Section 4 is an interpretation clause Its legitimate function is to declare that certain words and expressions used in the code shall wherever permissible not only have the meaning which is generally attached to such words and expressions but such meaning as is assigned to such words and expressions by the interpretation clause But by no means it is intended to annex to such words or expressions every incident which may seem to be attached to them by any other Act of the Legislature—Brooks v Baruch A I R 1930 Sind 58 (61) 91 I C 99

(a) "Advocate General" includes also a Government Advocate, or, where there is no Advocate-General or Government Advocate, such officer as the Local Government may, from time to time, appoint in this behalf

(b) "bailable offence" means an offence shown as bailable in the second schedule, or which is made bailable by any other law for the time being in force, and "non-bailable offence" means any other offence:

(c) "charge" includes any head of charge when the charge contains more heads than one

(d) * * * * *

(e) "Clerk of the Crown" includes any officer specially appointed by the Chief Justice to discharge the functions given by this Code to the Clerk of the Crown

(f) "cognizable offence" means an offence for, and 'cognizable case" means a case in, which a police officer, within or without the Presidency towns, may, in accordance with the second schedule, or under any law for the time being in force, arrest without warrant

12 Cognizable offence —The words a Police officer in this clause do not mean any and every Police officer That is an offence is regarded as a cognizable offence if the offender can be arrested without warrant by certain Police officers though not by any and every Police officer If the power of arrest without warrant is limited to any particular class of Police officers that does not prevent the offence being regarded as a cognizable one—Q E v Deodhar 27 Cal 144 Thus under the Gambling Act it is not every Police officer who can arrest without a warrant It is only the District Superintendent of Police who can so arrest but still the offence under that Act will be treated as a cognizable offence—Ibid

But the power of arrest referred to in this clause must be an unqualified power and not a conditional power like the one conferred upon the Police by sec 14 Opium Act I of 1878 which authorises a Police officer to arrest without warrant if the accused does not furnish the security required by that section An offence under sec 9 Opium Act is not therefore a cognizable offence—Bahabal v Taraf Nath 24 Cal 691

(g) "Commissioner of Police" includes a Deputy Commissioner of Police

(h) "complaint" means the allegation made orally or in writing to a Magistrate, with a view to his taking action under this Code, that some person, whether known or unknown, has committed an offence, but it does not include the report of a police-officer

13 Complaint —Who can make a complaint —A complaint need not necessarily be made by the person injured but may be made by any person aware of the offence The rule is that if a general law is broken

(5) the submission of a record by an Assistant Magistrate trying a rent suit to the Collector who was also the District Magistrate for starting a case under sec 193 I P C against the plaintiff in the rent suit—Emp v Sundar Sarup 26 All 514

(6) a Yadast sent by a Revenue Officer to a Magistrate charging a certain person with having disobeyed a summons issued by him—Queen v Moni, 11 Mad 443

(7) an application by a complainant to have his witness summoned coupled with his oral allegations though not on oath nor reduced to writing —Ipurba Krishna v Emp 35 Cal 141

(8) proceedings of a Court under sec 476 sending a person to the nearest first class Magistrate—Q E v Rachappa 13 Bom 109 Q E v Narakka 13 Mad 144 Ishri Prosad v Sham Lal 7 All 871 Emp v Irjan 31 Cal 663 Cranpoli Athan v King Emp 26 Mad 98 In re Lakshmidas 32 Bom 184 (contra—Ityakannu v Emp 32 Mad 49 Mata Ratan v Mahabir 4 A L J 803 In re Bal Gangadhar Tilak 26 Bom 785 In re Alamdar Husain 23 All 249)

(9) a communication by a Revenue Court to the District Magistrate that certain documents tendered in evidence before it were forgeries and that such action might be taken as the Magistrate might deem fit—Inder Bhan v King Emp 1905 P R 30

(10) a committal sheet signed by a Superintendent of the Salt Department and sent to the Magistrate (in accordance with the procedure laid down by para 12 of the Instructions issued by the Commissioner of Salt Revenue for the guidance of the Salt Revenue Department) and containing inter alia a definite request to the Magistrate to summon certain witnesses and to try the accused for the offences set out in the sheet is a complaint—Phagun Sahu v K E 1 P L J 59 18 Cr L J 366

(11) where A charged B with house breaking and B lodged an information against A for theft of his gun but the Police reported B s case to be false, whereupon B filed a petition of objection asking the Magistrate to make an investigation and to summon the accused held that the petition of objection filed by B was a complaint —Sadhu Charan v Balai Swain 1 P L J 316 19 Cr L J 871

(12) where in the course of an insolvency proceeding the District Judge found that certain transfers made by the insolvent were fraudulent and the Judge made a report to the District Magistrate asking him to prosecute the transferees held that the report was a complaint—Mahadeo v Emp 18 A L J 50 21 Cr L J 56

(13) where a Magistrate sent a report to the District Magistrate that a certain person had made an alteration in a document filed in his Court and had committed an offence under sec 177 I P C held that the report amounted to a complaint—Suraj Prasad v Emp 21 A L J 825

15 What are not complaints :—

(1) statements made in a deposition—Emp v Imamkhan 14 Bom L R 141 13 Cr L J 287

(2) a letter merely conveying a sanction of the Local Government under sec 196 authorising the prosecution—Shamal Khan v Emp, 1890 P R 16

(3) an application for issue of process—Emp v Lalit Mohan 38 Cal 559 15 C W N 98

(4) a petition for maintenance under sec 488 of this Code—Sardaran v Amir Khan 1905 P R 29 Hildephonsus v Malone 1885 P R 13 Tokee Bibi v Abdul Khan 5 Cal 536 Nur Mahomed v Bismulla 16 Cal. 781 Venkata v Paramma 11 Mad 199 Pozarto v Ingles 18 Bom 468

16 Report of a Police Officer —In King Emp v Sada 26 Bom 150 (153) it has been held that although the word report is not defined in the Code still the Legislature has studiously attached to the expression Police report a peculiar meaning whenever that expression occurs that the words report of a Police officer in section (4) (h) and the Police report in sections 157 173 and 190 (b) are confined to reports in cognizable cases only and that if the Police officer goes beyond his duties and makes of his own motion a report of an information of a non cognizable case (e g if he lays an information of a non cognizable offence under sec 51 of the Bombay District Police Act) it is not a report but an information or rather a complaint within the meaning of section 4 (b) This view has also been taken in Chidambaram v Emp 32 Mad 3 Emp v Ghulam 6 Lah L J 606 25 Cr L J 1361 A I R 1925 Lah 237 Harihar v Emp 23 C W N 481 and Emp v Khushaldas 6 S L R 82 The Select Committee of 1916 after considering the above Bombay case changed the words Police report in section 190 (b) into the words report in writing made by a Police Officer remarking that the term police report in section 190 was not intended to be a technical expression but was used to cover any report made by a police officer But the Legislature has not made any amendment in section 4 (h) and hence the words report of a police officer in clause 4 (h) should be interpreted to mean only the report of a Police officer in a cognizable case and any information of a non cognizable offence which a Police officer may report to a Magistrate would fall within the definition of a complaint Thus the Bombay High Court holds that the report of a police officer in sec 4 (h) means a report which a police officer is authorised to make under sec 173 and does not include the report of a police officer in a non cognizable case A report of the latter kind amounts to a complaint—Emp v Shivaswami 29 Bom L R 747 A I R 1927 Bom 440 (442) See also Radhika v Hamid Ali 54 Cal 371 28 Cr L J 316 A I R 1927 Cal 405 But a contrary view has been taken by Sir J G Woodroffe who observes A police report in a non cognizable case was treated either as a complaint under sec 4 cl (h) or as a police report under sec 190 (1) (b) But now section 190 clause (b) has been amended so as to include any report whether in cognizable or non cognizable cases and therefore the term 'complaint will exclude both —Woodroffe s Criminal Procedure p 12

ing which commences when the case is called on with the Magistrate on the Bench and the accused on the dock and the representatives for the prosecution and the accused are present in Court for the hearing of the case—Gomer Sirda v Q E 25 Cal 863 It refers only to trials for offences and not to miscellaneous matters such as those coming within sec 145 of this Code—Sufferuddin v Ibrahim 3 Cal 754 The word trial as used in sec 497 includes appeal—Mathub Chunder v Nobodeep 16 Cal 121 A proceeding under section 107 is a trial—In re Ramaswami 27 Mad 510 Venkatachinnayya v K E 43 Mad 511 (F B), 21 Cr L J 402

Trial when begins—In a case triable exclusively by a Court of Session the trial begins only after the charge is framed—Palaniandy v Emp 32 Mad 218 So also in a warrant case the trial commences when the accused is called upon to plead to a charge and till a charge has been framed there is no trial but only an inquiry—Manna v Emp 9 N L R 42 Sreeramulu v Veerasalingam 38 Mad 585 15 Cr L J 673 Narayanaswami v Emp 32 Mad 220 F B (at pp 224 and 234) Hamfass v Santulli 15 Cal 608 (F B) In a summons case however as it is not necessary to frame a formal charge the trial may be said to commence when the accused is brought or appears before the Magistrate

(l) "investigation" includes all the proceedings under the Code for the collection of evidence conducted by a police officer or by any person (other than a Magistrate) who is authorized by a Magistrate in this behalf

20 Clause (l)—Investigation—A police Inspector who got information that certain persons were carrying on a wagering business, and having satisfied himself obtained a warrant and effected the arrest of the accused and the seizure of books articles of gaming etc was held to have taken part in the investigation of the case—Emp v Tribhovan Das, 26 Bom 531

(m) "judicial proceeding" includes any proceeding in the course of which evidence is or may be legally taken on oath :

21 Clause (m)—Judicial Proceedings, what are —

(19) an inquiry on an application under Sec 100 to issue a search warrant is a judicial inquiry and proceedings preliminary to the issue of a search warrant are judicial proceedings—Abdul Aziz v Crown, 1916 P R 31

22 Judicial Proceedings, what are not —(1) It was held that the proceedings of a Magistrate under Sec 88 investigating claims

third parties to attached property were not judicial proceedings because the Magistrate had no authority to hold such proceedings—Q E v Shaikh al 6 All 487 But this decision can no longer stand as correct, because Sec 88 as now amended in 1923 provides for an inquiry into the claims of third parties to the attached property and such an inquiry is a judicial proceeding

(2) A departmental inquiry by a Magistrate into a complaint made against a Sub Magistrate—Surya Narayana v Emp 29 Mad 100

(3) A departmental inquiry by a District Registrar into a complaint made against a Sub Registrar—Mulfat Ali v K E 2 C L J 619

(n) "non cognizable offence" means an offence for, and "non-cognizable case" means a case in which a police officer, within or without a presidency town may not arrest without a warrant

(o) "offence" means any act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force, it also includes any act in respect of which a complaint may be made under section 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871 :

23 Clause (o) Offence —This definition is the same as that given in Sec 3 (37) of the General Clauses Act The definition in Sec 40 I P Code is wider and includes acts committed outside British India In the Extradition Act the word has a still wider meaning and is not restricted to offences as defined in Sec 40 I P C or in this Code—Adams v Emp 26 Mad 607

Civil wrong —Where an act may be a criminal offence or a mere civil wrong according to the intention of the person doing the Act the aggrieved party should not be encouraged to go into a Criminal Court unless he is fully prepared to prove that the act is criminal and not a mere civil wrong—Gulzar v Emp 1887 P R 50

Offence under the Cattle Trespass Act —Since an offence as defined in this clause includes an act in respect of which a complaint may be made under Sec 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act a Magistrate who is generally empowered under the Cr Pro Code to receive complaints of offences is competent to receive complaints under Sec 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act and he need not be specially authorised by the District Magistrate to receive complaints under that section—Deenadayalu v Patra 52 M L J 251 SCr L J 301

(p) officer in charge of a police station' includes when the officer in charge of the police-station is absent from the station house or unable from illness or other cause to perform his duties, the police officer present at the station house who is next in rank to such officer and is above the rank of constable or, when the Local Government so directs, any other police officer so present:

26 Clause (p) —This clause is not applicable to the Police of Calcutta—Emp v Madri Dhar 31 Cal 557

The words present at the station house do not mean physically present at the station house therefore if a person is deputed to be in charge of a police station in the absence of the permanent incumbent the fact that he was doing duty within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Police Station but outside the station house does not deprive him of his capacity as Station House Officer—Assan Alliar v Masilamani 47 Mad 446 36 M L J 252 20 Cr L J 472

If the Sub Inspector in charge of the thana is ill the Writer Head Constable who is the officer next in seniority to him can act in his place Thus where the Magistrate sent a cognizable case to the Police for investigation and report and the Sub-Inspector was ill that day it was the duty of the Writer Head Constable who was in charge of the Police Station on that day to investigate the case although he was not generally empowered to make investigation into cognizable cases—K L v Bhola Bhagat 2 Pat 379 (384) 4 P L T 521 24 Cr L J 375

(q) "place" includes also a house, building tent, and vessel

(r) "pleader," used with reference to any proceeding in any Court means a pleader or a mukhtar authorized under any law for the time being in force to practise in such Court, and includes (1) an advocate, a vakil, and an attorney of a High Court so authorized, and (2) any other person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in such proceeding

27 Clause (r) —Change in the law —The definition of pleader has been amended by the Criminal Procedure Code Further Amendment Act (XXXV of 1923) The old definition ran as follows —

Pleader used with reference to any proceeding in any Court means a pleader authorised under any law for the time being in force to practise in such Court and includes (1) an advocate a vakil and an attorney of a High Court so authorised and (2) any mukhtar or other person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in such proceeding

Thus under the old law a mukhtar fell under the second part of the definition of the word pleader that is a mukhtar was not entitled as of right to practise in Criminal Courts but it was necessary for him to obtain permission of the Court in each case before he was authorised to practise before Magistrates and Sessions Judges (In re Hart Ram 30 All 66 Ishan Chandra v Emp 38 Cal 488) though such permission was usually and naturally granted The mukhtars were placed in the sa

category as "other person" i e, ordinary persons without any training or license For this reason the mukhtars had a sentimental grievance and it was desirable that it should be removed (see the Report of the Select Committee on Bill 6 of 1922, in the Gazette of India, 1923, Part V, pages 129—131) Accordingly the definition has been amended by the Amendment Act (XXXV of 1923) This amendment has done away with the necessity of obtaining the permission of the Court, and gives a legal status to mukhtars

'Practise' —The word 'practise' does not connote the doing of acts habitually or often, but signifies the performance of even a single act by a person as a professional man which as a private individual he could not do—Emp v Beni Bahadur, 26 All 380

A petition-writer who attends Court all day cannot be said to practise —Shib Churn v Ishan Chunder, 18 W R 27. Only persons entitled to appear, plead or act in Court can be said to practise—Tassaduq v Girhar, 14 Cal 556 (565)

Mukhtar —The word refers to such Mukhtars as have obtained a certificate of qualification from the High Court—In re Anant Ram 30 All 66

License for one district —A pleader who holds a license to practise in a particular district is not entitled as a matter of right to practise in a Criminal Court of another district, unless he is permitted to practise in the latter Court—Kimatrai v Crown, 4 S L R 207 It is the duty of a pleader who appears in a Criminal Court of a district to which his sanad does not apply, to inform the Magistrate that he cannot appear as of right, and to apply for a permission under this clause—Re Clements, 7 S I R 98

Other person —The words other person' embrace pure outsiders as well as duly qualified and enrolled mukhtars who have failed to take out their certificates—Tassaduq v Girhar, 14 Cal 556

The Code entitles a prisoner to authorise any person to be his agent in any Criminal Court—Reg v Ramchandra, Ratanlal 1, see also Q E v Chandrabhaga Ratanlal 206 It is open to the accused to appoint any person (e g the manager of his estate) to appear in his stead and plead and do other acts on his behalf but there must be clearly on record something to show that the person who represents the accused has been duly appointed by him (just as an ordinary pleader has to file a Vakalatnama), and that the Court has given the requisite permission for his appearance in place of the accused—Dorabshah v Emp, 50 Bom 250, 28 Bom L R 102, 27 Cr L J 430 (434), A I R 1926 Bom 218.

(s) "police station" means any post or place declared generally or specially by the Local Government to be a police-station, and includes any local area specified by the Local Government in this behalf:

(t) "Public Prosecutor" means any person appointed under section 492, and includes any person acting under the directions of a Public Prosecutor, and any person conducting a prosecution on behalf of His Majesty in any High Court in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction

28 Clause (t)—Public Prosecutor —The appointment of a Magistrate who had in the first instance tried the accused as a Public Prosecutor to conduct an inquiry subsequently directed in the case is a most improper proceeding—Reg v Kashinath 8 B H C R 126

The complainant may appoint a pleader and the Public Prosecutor may avail himself of his services but in doing so the Public Prosecutor does not deprive himself of the management of the case—In re Narayan 11 B H C R 102

As to who may be appointed a Public Prosecutor see sections 492 and 495

(u) "sub division" means a sub division of a district

(v) "summons case" means a case relating to an offence, and not being a "warrant case" and

(w) "warrant case" means a case relating to an offence punishable with death transportation, or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months

Clause (w) —The term Sessions Case has not been defined here This term does not necessarily mean cases triable exclusively by the Court of Session but includes all cases which a Magistrate has committed to a Court of Session although he might have tried them himself—Reg v Gulabdas 11 B H C R 98

Words referring to acts

(2) Words which refer to acts done extend also to illegal omissions, and

Words to have same meaning as in Indian Penal Code

all words and expressions used herein, and defined in the Indian Penal Code, and not hereinbefore defined, shall be deemed to have the meanings respectively attributed to them by that Code

30 Thus the words force and criminal force used in sec 522 must be interpreted according to the definition given in sections 349 and 350 of the Indian Penal Code—Balram v Chamru, 2 P. L. T 120 Chitra nan v Ramlal 25 All 341 Hari Chand v Emp 1919 P [illegible] 6 Is Chandra v Dena Nath 27 Cal 174 So also the defin[illegible]

Judge given in section 19 I P Code would apply to the word Judge used in sec 559 Cr P Code—Ramchandra v Emp 5 Pat 110 27 Cr L J 499 (501) A I R 1926 Pat 214

But the principle of this clause does not always hold good for instance the term adultery' in section 488 (of the Cr P Code of 1882) should not be construed with reference to the definition given in the Indian Penal Code Adultery on the part of the husband might not justify a conviction under section 497 I P C (e g adultery with a widow or with a concubine) but it was sufficient for the purpose of section 488 of the Cr P Code (1882) to entitle the wife to live separate from her husband and to claim separate maintenance The term adultery was used in that section (488) in the ordinary sense ie the sexual connection of a married man with a woman who is not his wife—Gantapalli v Gantapalli 20 Mad 470 (F B) Under the present Code the specific reference to adultery on the part of the husband has been omitted

Trial of offences under Penal Code

5. (1) All offences under the Indian Penal Code shall be investigated inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions hereinafter contained

Trial of offences against other laws

(2) All offences under any other law shall be investigated, inquired into tried and otherwise dealt with according to the same provisions, but subject to any enactment for the time being in force, regulating the manner or place of investigating, inquiring into, trying, or otherwise dealing with such offences

31 Power of High Court to punish for contempt —The power to punish for contempt vested in the High Court by the Common Law of England is not affected by the provisions of this Code A contempt of the High Court by a libel published out of Court when the Court is not sitting is not included in the words offences under the Indian Penal Code or offences under any other law in Sec 5 of the Cr P Code though the contempt may include defamation It is something more than mere defamation and is of a different character which the High Court can deal with by virtue of its superior powers—Surendra Nath Banerjee v Chief Justice 10 Cal 109 (P C)

32 Clause (2) —Where a special law (e g the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act IV of 1887) has provided a special procedure for the manner or place of investigating or inquiring into any offence under it its provisions must prevail and no provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code can apply Where however the special Act is silent the Cr P C would be applicable—Emp v Kallu 31 Bom 438

of this Code shall not apply thereto—Khilunda Ram v Emp 3 Lah 359 23 Cr L J 621 So also under the Madras Abkari Act (I of 1886), an accused person has the right to a special procedure regulating the course of investigation and providing for a much more elaborate inquiry than is provided for in the Cr P Code and if a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence under the Madras Abkari Act under the provisions of this Code the proceedings are not properly instituted—In re Kuppusamy 44 M L J 231 24 Cr L J 335

Where the special law prescribes no special procedure the procedure of the Cr P Code must be followed So, an offence under sec 20 of the Calcutta Rent Act must be summarily inquired into under the provisions of Chapter XXII of this Code—Ishan Chandra v Manmatha, 37 C L J 98 A I R 1923 Cal 339 The Cr P Code is applicable to trials before a Magistrate of offences under the Bengal Excise Act—Upendra v Emp 41 Cal 694 (702) 18 C W N 486

The Cr P Code is applicable to a prosecution under the Calcutta Municipal Act—See Sisir Kumar v Corporation of Calcutta 30 C W N 535 Umesh Chandra v Corporation of Calcutta 43 C L J 231 Seu Prosad v Corporation of Calcutta 9 C W N 18 Krishen Doyal v Corporation of Calcutta 31 C W N 506

A simultaneous conviction under the Indian Penal Code as well as under a special law for the same offence is illegal—Queen v Hussun Ali 5 N W P H C R 49

33 "Enactment" —A rule framed under any act (e g, Calcutta Rent Act) is not an 'enactment' within the meaning of clause (2) of this section—Gobardhan v Doolie Chand 25 C W N 661, 22 Cr L J 354

Power to put Magistrate in charge of sub-division

13. (1) The Local Government may place any Magistrate of the first or second class in charge of a sub-division, and relieve him of the charge as occasion requires.

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Sub-divisional Magistrates

Delegation of powers to District Magistrate

(3) The Local Government may delegate its powers under this section to the District Magistrate

Special Magistrate

14 (1) The Local Government may confer upon any person all or any of the powers conferred or conferrable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first, second, or third class in respect to particular cases or to a particular class or particular classes of cases or in regard to cases generally in any local area outside the presidency towns.

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Special Magistrates and shall be appointed for such term as the Local Government may by general or special order direct.

(3) * * * The Local Government may delegate, with such limitations as it thinks fit, to any officer under its control the power conferred by sub section (1).

(4) No powers shall be conferred under this section on any police officer below the grade of Assistant District Superintendent, and no powers shall be conferred on a police officer except so far as may be necessary for preserving the peace, preventing crime, and detecting apprehending, and detaining offenders in order to their being brought before a Magistrate, and for the performance by the officer of any other duties imposed by any law for the time being in force.

PART II.

CONSTITUTION AND POWERS OF CRIMINAL COURTS AND OFFICES

CHAPTER II.

OF THE CONSTITUTION OF CRIMINAL COURTS AND OFFICES

A.—Classes of Criminal Courts.

Classes of Criminal Courts

6. Besides the High Courts and the Courts constituted under any law other than this Code for the time being in force, there shall be five classes of Criminal Courts in British India, namely:—

I.—Courts of Session.
II.—Presidency Magistrates.
III.—Magistrates of the first class.
IV.—Magistrates of the second class.
V.—Magistrates of the third class.

34. Magistrate.—COURT.—A Magistrate as such is not a Court unless he is acting in a judicial capacity.—Clark v. Brojendro Kishore 36 Cal. 433.

The Court of a Police Patel is not a Criminal Court within the enumeration contained in this section.—Q. E. v. Rama Ratanlal 317.

35. Presidency Magistrate.—The term "Presidency Magistrate" would not be ordinarily included in the words "District Magistrate" or "Magistrate of the first class" because secs. 10 and 12 of the Code show that the District Magistrates and Magistrates of the first class are appointed only in districts outside the Presidency towns.—Emp. v. Chota Singh 32 Mad. 303. But the term "Magistrate of the first class" used in sec. 111 of the Emigration Act (XX of 1883) means a Magistrate appointed to exercise the highest magisterial powers and includes a Presidency Magistrate.—Emp. v. Jeevanji 31 Bom. 611; Emp. v. Haji Shaik Mahomed, 32 Bom. 10.

District Magistrate.—The Code does not recognise any Court other than the 5 classes mentioned in this section. A District Magistrate's Court is, for the purposes of an ordinary criminal trial, the Court of a Magistrate of the first class.—Emp. v. Syed Sajjad 3 A. L. J. 825; 4 Cr. L. J. 140.

The terms Deputy Magistrate , General Deputy Magistrate are unknown to this Code and should not be used—P P v Sadananda 23 M L J 670 13 Cr L J 850

B —Territorial Divisions

Sessions divisions and districts

7 (1) Every province (excluding the presidency-town) shall be a sessions division, or shall consist of sessions divisions and every sessions division shall, for the purposes of this Code, be a district or consist of districts

Power to alter divisions and districts

(2) The Local Government may alter the limits, or * * * the number of such divisions and districts

Existing divisions and districts maintained till altered

(3) The sessions divisions and districts existing when this Code comes into force shall be sessions divisions and districts respectively unless and until they are so altered

Presidency towns to be deemed districts

(4) Every presidency town shall, for the purposes of this Code, be deemed to be a district

The words with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council which occurred in sub section (2) have been omitted by the Devolution Act XXXVIII of 1920

36 Local Government may alter etc —This section assumes the existence of Sessions Divisions in every part of British India but it does not contemplate the creation of such divisions by the Local Governments which can only alter the limits or number of such divisions under sub section (2) of this section—Q E v Mangal Tekchand 10 Bom 274

37 Sessions Division —Instances —Cachar is a Sessions Division of Assam (see Assam Gazette 1874 page 3) Darjeeling is included within the Purnea Division The District and Town of Rangoon are two Sessions Divisions for the purposes of this Code (see Gazette of India, 1874 p 62) The Ganjam Collectorate consists of two Sessions Divisions one consisting of the Agency District and the other of the Non agency Tracts—Sadananda 23 M L J 670 13 Cr L J 850 The Districts of North and South Malabar are two Sessions Divisions in the Malabar District—Valia Amlu v Emp 30 Mad 136

Power to divide districts into sub divisions

8 (1) The Local Government may divide any district outside the presidency-towns into sub divisions, or make any portion of any such district sub-division, and may alter the limits of any sub-division.

Existing sub-divisions maintained

(2) All existing sub-divisions which are now usually put under the charge of a Magistrate shall be deemed to have been made under this Code

C.—Courts and Offices outside the presidency-towns.

Court of Session

9. (1) The Local Government shall establish a Court of Session for every sessions division, and appoint a Judge of such Court.

(2) The Local Government may, by general or special order in the Official Gazette, direct at what place or places the Court of Session shall hold its sitting, but, until such order be made, the Courts of Session shall hold their sittings as herebefore

(3) The Local Government may also appoint Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges to exercise jurisdiction in one or more such Courts

(4) A Sessions Judge of one sessions division may be appointed by the Local Government to be also an Additional Sessions Judge of another division and in such case he may sit for the disposal of cases at such place or places in either division as the Local Government may direct

(5) All Courts of Session existing when this Code comes into force shall be deemed to have been established under this Act

38 The High Court exercising original criminal jurisdiction is not a 'Court of Session' within the meaning of this Code A Court of Session is established in the mofussil in every Sessions Division and belongs to a class of Courts different from the High Courts—Emp v Harendra, 51 Cal 980 (982), 29 C W N. 384

The Additional Sessions Judge will try such cases as would be made over to him by the Sessions Judge But that does not oust the jurisdiction of the Sessions Judge over those cases, therefore if a Sessions Judge makes over a particular appeal to the Additional Sessions Judge to be tried by the latter, he can afterwards withdraw the case from the latter, and take it on his own file and decide it—Birju Manuari v Emp, 44 All 157 19 A L J 952 23 Cr L J 107.

Under Sec 20 of the Aden Courts Act (Bom Act II of 1864), the Resident of Aden is not a Court of Session, but is a persona designata invested with the powers of a Court of Session except as in that Act otherwise provided The powers of the Court of Session conferred on the Resident are not wholly such as are defined in the Cr P Code, but only such as are specially provided in Act II of 1864—Emp v Robert Comley, 29 Bom 575

10 (1) In every district outside the presidency-towns, the Local Government shall appoint a Magistrate of the first class who shall be called the District Magistrate.

District Magistrate

(2) The Local Government may appoint any Magistrate of the first class to be an Additional District Magistrate * * * and such Additional District Magistrate shall have all or any of the powers of a District Magistrate under this Code or under any other law for the time being in force as the Local Government may direct.

(3) For the purposes of sections 192 sub-section (1), 407 sub-section (2), and 528 sub-sections (2) and (3), such Additional District Magistrate shall be deemed to be subordinate to the District Magistrate.

39. Change :—In sub section (2), the italicised words have been added, and the words 'for a period not exceeding six months' occurring after the words 'an Additional District Magistrate' have been omitted, by Sec 2 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

Sub-section (3) has also been newly added by the same Amendment Act Prior to this amendment, the Code did not define the relation between a District Magistrate and an Additional District Magistrate Section 12 also did not make an Additional District Magistrate subordinate to a District Magistrate, and therefore the latter had no power under section 528 to transfer a case from a Sub divisional Magistrate to the Additional District Magistrate—Pralas Chunder v Emp, 34 Cal 918. This case is no longer good law, because under sub section (3), newly enacted, the District Magistrate has been expressly empowered to transfer cases under sec 528 to the Additional District Magistrate

40. District Magistrate :—A District Magistrate is appointed in a district outside the Presidency towns Therefore a Presidency Magistrate is not included in the term 'District Magistrate'—Emp v Chota Singh, 32 Mad. 303

The term 'Zillah Magistrate' used in the Bombay Regulations means a District Magistrate—Reg v Prabhakar, 3 B H C R 11 ; Reg v Hira, 7 B H C R 59 A Deputy Commissioner in a non Regulation Province is a District Magistrate—In re Boron, 16 W. R 1

District Magistrate and 1st class Magistrate —Where a trial was commenced by an officiating District Magistrate and before its close the officer reverted to his original position as First class Magistrate of the district in which capacity also he had jurisdiction over the offence it was held that he had jurisdiction to continue the trial This Code does not recognise any particular Court as that of the District Magistrate but only Courts of First Second and Third Class Magistrates—Emp v Syed Sajjad Husain 3 A L J 825

11 Whenever, in consequence of the office of District Magistrate becoming vacant, any officer succeeds temporarily to the chief executive administration of the district, such officer shall, pending the order of the Local Government, exercise all the powers and perform all the duties respectively conferred and imposed by this Code on the District Magistrate

Officers temporarily succeeding to vacancies in office of District Magistrate

40A An officer absent on casual leave is not treated as absent from duty While such officer is on casual leave the next senior officer remains in charge of the current duties There is no vacancy and no temporary succession within the meaning of this section when a Sub divisional Magistrate is temporarily looking after the current duties of a District Magistrate absent on casual leave on account of illness and when there is no order appointing him to officiate as District Magistrate—K E v Achhaibar 4 O C 255 2 Cr L J 713

Local limits of their jurisdiction

(2) Except as otherwise provided by such definition, the jurisdiction and powers of such persons shall extend throughout such district,

41 Magistrate —A cantonment Magistrate is a Magistrate appointed under this section—Q E v Maula Baksh 1897 P R 1

42 Local area —Although the expression local area includes a sessions division district or subdivision (Punardeo v Ram Sarup 25 Cal 858) still it appears sufficiently clear that the Legislature did not contemplate the exercise of jurisdiction by any Magistrate outside the limits of an area called a District in which he might be appointed by the Local Government—In re Shaik Fakruddin 9 Bom 40 A Sub-divisional Magistrate who has had his jurisdiction defined within a sub-division or local area in the district by order of the District Magistrate cannot take cognizance of a matter outside such local area—Kunj Behari v Lanua 19 A L J 7 22 Cr L J 1 But where a notification appointing a Magistrate did not specify any local area within which he was to exercise jurisdiction, but conferred on him power to try all such cases as might be instituted in his Court it was held that the notification by necessary implication conferred jurisdiction throughout the province—Lakhmi Chand v Emp 1901 P R 24

But a Magistrate having jurisdiction within a district cannot record a confession in a place outside British India (e g in a Native State) although the offence in respect of which the confession is made has been committed within that district—Nahar Singh v Emp 19 A L J 355 22 Cr L J 567

43 Jurisdiction throughout district —Unless the powers of a Magistrate have been restricted to a certain local area he has jurisdiction over the entire district—Sarat Chandra v Bipin 29 Cal 389 Hiranand v K E 10 C W N 1095 (1098) Emp v Achhaibar Singh 24 O C 253 22 Cr L J 713 therefore a Magistrate appointed for a whole district but put in charge of a particular taluk or sub division only, is not without jurisdiction if he enquires into or tries a case in another taluk or sub division of the same district—Q E v Jamshedji Ratanlal 177 Rameshwar v Emp 1 P L T 632 21 Cr L J 321 Q E v Lalai U B R (1892—96) 16

A Magistrate in the division whose powers have not been formally limited to any particular portion of the division has jurisdiction to try an offence committed within the division although beyond the local limits of what was regarded as his jurisdiction—Anon 2 Weir 13

44 Effect of transfer —Since the jurisdiction of a Magistrate extends throughout the district it follows that the transfer of a Magistrate from one local area to another local area in the same district does not oust his jurisdiction over the former area—Karuppana v Ahotalamalam 22 Mad 47 Cases on the file of one Magistrate in a district do not automatically pass to his successor in the local area merely because the former has been transferred to another local area in the same district

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Special Magistrates, and shall be appointed for such term as the Local Government may by general or special order direct

(3) * * * The Local Government may delegate, with such limitations as it thinks fit to any officer under its control, the power conferred by sub section (1)

(4) No powers shall be conferred under this section on any police officer below the grade of Assistant District Superintendent and no powers shall be conferred on a police officer except so far as may be necessary for preserving the peace, preventing crime, and detecting, apprehending, and detaining offenders in order to their being brought before a Magistrate, and for the performance by the officer of any other duties imposed upon him by any law for the time being in force

The words with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council which occurred at the beginning of sub section (3) have been omitted by the Devolution Act XXXVIII of 1920

45 "Any local area" —The words any local area can be extended to cover if necessary a whole province therefore where the Local Government by a Notification appointed a special Magistrate under this section with all the powers of a first class Magistrate in regard to cases generally throughout the Panjab it was held that the appointment was not ultra vires—Hiralal v Crown 1918 P R 7 19 Cr L J 310 Lakhmi Chand v Emp 1901 P R 4

It is essential that a Special Magistrate should be appointed for a local area The connotation of a Special Magistrate under this Code is that he should have (1) specified powers conferrable on a Magistrate by the Local Government ( ) a local area within which to exercise those powers and (3) jurisdiction to try particular cases or classes of cases generally Each of the above ingredient enters into the conception of a Special Magistrate as defined in this section but the last is a variable element and does not necessarily require specific mention If nothing is said about the cases to be tried it will be understood that all cases triable by law by a Magistrate invested with the powers of a Special Magistrate may be tried by him But the powers and the local area must be defined—Lakhmi Chand v Emp 1901 P R 4

15 (1) The Local Government may direct any two or more Magistrates in any place outside the presidency towns to sit together as a Bench, and may by order invest such Bench with any of the powers conferred or conferrable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first second, or third class, and direct it to exercise such powers in such cases, or such classes of cases only and within such local limits as the Local Government thinks fit the Bench, belongs, and, as far as practicable, shall, for the purposes of this Code, be deemed to be a Magistrate of such class

See notes under sec 350 A

46 Powers of a Bench —Where a case triable by a first class Magistrate was at first tried by a Bench of Magistrates which could exercise first class powers when sitting together but neither of whom was individually invested with first class powers and at the adjourned hearing only one member of the Bench was present it was held that he was not competent to try the case alone—In re Baroda 7 C L R 348 An Honorary Magistrate who is a member of a Bench which exercises powers of third class collectively cannot act independently (that is when not sitting on the Bench) unless he is authorised to act independently—Emp v Nuri Sheikh 29 Cal 483

Where there was a rule framed under this section that only such cases as could be tried summarily should be transferred to the Bench and in spite of this rule a case not triable summarily but within the competency of the Bench was transferred to it and the Bench tried the case in the regular way it was held that this contravention of the rule in transferring a case which the Bench could not try summarily was cured by the provisions of sec 529 (f) and the trial by the Bench was valid—Nga San v K E 1910 U B R (Cr P C) 70 11 I C 247 12 Cr L J 383

16 The Local Government may, or subject to the control of the Local Government the District Magistrate may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Code for the guidance of Magistrates' Benches in any district respecting the following subjects —

(a) the classes of cases to be tried,

(b) the times and places of sitting

(c) the constitution of the Bench for conducting trials,

(d) the mode of settling differences of opinion which may arise between the Magistrates in session

47. "Consistent with this Code" —The rules framed under this section must be consistent with this Code The Judges have recently had occasion to call for and examine the rules made in each district and they noticed that in several districts District Magistrates have exceeded the powers conferred upon them by sec 16 either by making rules inconsistent with the Code itself or by adding rules on the subject

not mentioned in the section in question and so not within the powers conferred by it Care should therefore be taken to limit action under the section to the powers conferred by it"—Punj Cir, No 13 2612 G, of 1890

48 Classes of cases to be tried.—Magistrates should ordinarily not make over cases to Benches which are likely to be of a protracted character—Q v Bholanath 2 Cal 23 So also cases involving difficult questions of fact or law should not be directed to be tried by a Bench of Honorary Magistrates—Pub Pro v Varadarajulu 47 Mad 716 (722), 47 M L J 470 25 Cr L J 1070

Constitution of Bench—Quorum:—See notes under section 350A

49. Differences of opinion—According to the new rule (vide Cal Gaz 1906 Part I p 980) framed in Bengal in case of difference of opinion as to the finding between an even number of Magistrates the case shall be referred back to the District Magistrate or the Sub divisional Officer and the provisions of section 350 shall then apply—Chand v Shamsher 19 Cr L J 312 (Cal) But in Eastern Bengal and Assam, the old Notification under which the difference of opinion between two Honorary Magistrates forming a Bench is to be settled by the casting vote of one of them viz the Chairman, is still in force See Utfal v K E 18 C W N 394 14 Cr L J 684

According to the U P rules if there is an irreconcilable difference of opinion among the members of a Bench as to the guilt of the accused, he should be given the benefit of doubt The Bench cannot refer the case to a District Magistrate, such a reference is irregular and is not justified by any provisions of the Code—Kashinath v Shanker, 16 Cr L J 113 (All) Abdul Aziz v Emp 15 A L J 237 18 Cr L J 506

(2) Every Magistrate (other than a Sub-divisional Magistrate) and every Bench exercising powers in a sub-division shall also be subordinate to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, subject, however, to the general control of the District Magistrate.

Subordination of Assistant Sessions Judges to Sessions Judge

(3) All Assistant Sessions Judges shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge in whose Court they exercise jurisdiction, and he may from time to time make rules consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among such Assistant Sessions Judges

(4) The Sessions Judge may also when he himself is unavoidably absent or incapable of acting, make provision for the disposal of any urgent application by an Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge or if there be no Additional or Assistant Judge by the District Magistrate, and such Judge or Magistrate shall have jurisdiction to deal with any such application

(5) Neither the District Magistrate nor the Magistrates or Benches appointed or constituted under sections 12 13 14 and 15 shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge except to the extent and in the manner hereinafter expressly provided

POWERS OF COURTS

A.—Description of Offences cognizable by each Court

28. Subject to the other provisions of the Code, any offence under the Indian Penal Code may be tried—

Offence under Penal Code

(a) by the High Court, or
(b) by the Court of Session, or
(c) by any other Court by which such offence is shown in the eighth column of the second schedule to be triable

Illustration

A is committed to the Sessions Court on a charge of culpable homicide He may be convicted of voluntarily causing hurt an offence triable by a Magistrate

61 Commitment to Sessions —The illustration shows that in a case committed to the Sessions Court for a more heinous offence the accused can be convicted of a minor offence triable by a Magistrate—Q E v Schade 19 All 465 The provisions as to the other Courts indicated in clause (c) do not cut down or restrict the jurisdiction of the High Court or the Sessions Court This section gives powers to the High Court and the Court of Session to try any offence under the Penal Code—Q E v Kharga 8 All 665 Therefore the fact that in a case committed to the Sessions the Sessions Judge adds a charge of an offence triable exclusively by a Magistrate does not affect the jurisdiction of the Sessions Judge to try it—Q E v Kharga 8 All 665 There is nothing illegal in a Magistrate committing a person charged with an offence under section 147 I P C to the Sessions Court if in his opinion it cannot be adequately punished by him though the second Schedule of this Code says that the offence is triable by a Magistrate only—Q E v Kayemulla 24 Cal 429

But if the offence falls under some other law and that law specifies a particular Court the forum cannot be changed (see sec 29) Thus an offence under sec 9 of the Opium Act must be tried by a Magistrate a Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction over the offence and the Magistrate has no power to commit the case to the Sessions—Q E v Schade 10 All 465

62 Offences within and beyond jurisdiction —When an offence is triable by an inferior tribunal but it also contains an element of aggravation which puts the offence beyond the jurisdiction of that tribunal

the jurisdiction of that tribunal is not necessarily ousted thereby—Anonymous, 2 Weir 20 (21) In other words, where the facts disclose an offence within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, it is a complete fallacy to say that he is not empowered to try the offence merely because the same facts disclose a more serious offence beyond his jurisdiction—*K. A Magistrate is not entitled to decline jurisdiction on the ground that the offence is a petty one ordinarily triable by heads of villages, and to direct the complainant to seek redress from the head of the village—Anonymous 2 Weir 22 7 M H C R App 31 So also a Magistrate is not entitled to decline to exercise jurisdiction in a case on the ground that it falls under the jurisdiction of ecclesiastical authority, when the act of that authority plainly amounts to an offence Thus where the ecclesiastical authority threatened a Roman Catholic that unless he abstained from certain acts (which he was legally entitled to do) he would be excommunicated the action of the ecclesiastical authority was illegal and amounted to criminal intimidation and the Criminal Courts had therefore jurisdiction over the offence—In re Paul De Cruz, 8 Mad 140

Offence under other laws

29. (1) Subject to the other provisions of this Code, any offence under any other law shall, when any Court is mentioned in this behalf in such law, be tried by such Court

(2) When no Court is so mentioned, it may be tried by the High Court or subject as aforesaid by any Court constituted under this Code by which such offence is shown in the eighth column of the second schedule to be triable.

Change:—In sub-section (1), the italicised words have been substituted for the words "subject to the provisions of sec 447," by sec. 5 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XII of 1923).

In sub-section (2) the italicised words have been added by section 5 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

Trial of European British Subject by second and third class Magistrates

29A. No Magistrate of the second or third class shall inquire into or try any offence which is punishable otherwise than with fine not exceeding fifty rupees, where the accused is an European British subject who claims to be tried as such

This section has been added by sec 6 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XII of 1923) The Bill does away with all provisions under which a person who may try an European British subject must be a Justice of the Peace Except in cases punishable with sentences of fine only not exceeding rupees fifty the Bill provides that European British subjects shall not be triable by second or third class Magistrates but all first class Magistrates are given power to try European British subjects no matter what their nationality may be —Statement of Objects and Reasons Para 8 (1)

Jurisdiction in the case of juveniles

29B. Any offence other than one punishable with death or transportation for life, committed by any person who at the date when he appears or is brought before the Court is under the age of fifteen years, may be tried by a District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate or by any Magistrate specially empowered by the Local Government to exercise the powers conferred by section 8 sub section (1), of the Reformatory Schools Act 1897, or, in any area in which the said Act has been wholly or in part repealed by any other law providing for the custody, trial or punishment of youthful offenders by any Magistrate empowered by or under such law to exercise all or any of the powers conferred thereby

This section has been added by section 6 of the Cr P Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) This amendment was for the first time introduced by Bill 3 of 1921 and did not exist in the Bill of 1914

The reasons for the amendment have been thus stated The existing procedure of committal to a Court of Session is lengthy and often involves the prolonged detention of juvenile offenders as undertrial prisoners although the offences generally committed by them seldom require to be so severely punished as to necessitate the intervention of a Sessions Court the sentence or order eventually passed being often in commensurate with the time and energy expended upon a committal and sessions trial It is therefore proposed that offences of children unless so serious as to be punishable with death or transportation for life should be triable by a District Magistrate a Chief Presidency Magistrate or by any Magistrate specially empowered to exercise the powers conferred by sec 8 sub section (1) of the Reformatory Schools Act 1897 —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1921)

Offences not punishable with death

30. In the territories respectively administered by the Lieutenant Governors of the Punjab and Burma and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh the Central Provinces Coorg and Assam in Sind and those parts of the other provinces in which there

Deputy Commissioners or Assistant Commissioners, the Local Government may notwithstanding anything contained in section 29 invest the District Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first class with power to try as a Magistrate all offences not punishable with death

65 Magistrate must purport to act under this section —A first class Magistrate who is simply described on the heading of his judgment as invested with the powers under this section but not purporting to act under such powers cannot exercise those powers in passing the sentence —Mali v Crown 1908 P W R 17

66 Powers of District Magistrate —As a general rule the cases which a District Magistrate should refrain from trying under his higher powers are those in which a sentence more severe than a District Magistrate can inflict under sec 34 appears to be called for if the offence be established and secondly those cases in which the issues are so complex or the difficulty of ascertaining the true facts or of correctly applying the law to them so considerable as to make a trial before a Sessions Judge more appropriate than a trial before a District Magistrate—Saw Kadu v Q E L B R (1893 1900) 219

In the exercise of special powers under this section a District Magistrate has no power to try cases summarily—Fazlu v Emp 1879 P R 25

A District Magistrate empowered under this section cannot try an offence punishable with death (e g murder) and find the accused guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder on the ground that the case falls within one of the exceptions mentioned in sec 300 I P C —Q E v Gurdit Singh 1891 P R 3 Emp v Shamira 27 Cr L J 846 A I R 19 6 Lah 575 He cannot legally try the offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder punishable under the first part of sec 304 I P C an offence not punishable with death The reason is that where there is credible evidence both of murder and of qualified murder the accused should be committed for trial before a Court which is competent to try both offences once for all and to pronounce a judgment which shall be an effectual bar to a second trial on the same facts—Mangal Singh v Emp 1893 P R 1 So where there is sufficient evidence to constitute an offence of murder a Magistrate exercising special powers under this section should not try the case as on a minor charge—Emp v Paramananda 10 Cal 85 Similarly, the offence of attempting to wage war against the Queen should not be tried as a dacoity case by a District Magistrate—1 Bur S R 158

67. Deputy Commissioner —A Magistrate holding an inquiry into a case triable by a Court of Session cannot make over the case to a Deputy Commissioner specially empowered under this section to try such cases because the Deputy Commissioner is a Magistrate and not a Sessions Judge Such a commitment was held to be illegal and was quashed and the case was ordered to be committed to the Court of Session—Crown v Piran Ditta 1873 P R 17 Q v Pitam 5 N W P H C R 210 Put in a Calcutta case the High Court maintained the conviction by the Deputy Commissioner where it was found that the accused had not been prejudiced by such trial—Imir Khan v K E 7 C W N 457

Where a Deputy Commissioner tries a case exclusively triable by a Sessions Court, under the powers conferred by this section, he does so as a Magistrate, and if he tenders conditional pardon to one of the accused, he is precluded from trying the case himself—Paban Singh v Emp, 10 C W N 847

68. Appeals —See section 408 proviso (b) Where the Magistrate was acting within his ordinary powers as a Magistrate of the 1st class, and not within the special powers conferred by this section, an appeal would lie to the Court of Session, and not to the High (Chief) Court—Tulsi Ram v Emp 1881 P R 23 Where however, it appeared from the sentence awarded that the District Magistrate in trying the particular case had exercised enhanced powers under this section the appeal would lie to the High Court and not to the Court of Session—Bahadur v Crown, 1877 P R 8 Mohamed Newaz v Emp 1879 P R 33, Jaytumal v Emp, 1880 P R 36, Q E v Jai Singh, 1900 P R 12, Q E v Batera, 1898 P R 3 If however the offence is not one exclusively triable by a Court of Session, and the sentence of imprisonment awarded does not exceed two years, an appeal lies to the Court of Session, and not to the High Court, even though the District Magistrate records that he is exercising his powers under this section—Nathu v Crown, 1875 P R 10

69. Revision —A Sessions Judge is competent under sec 437 (now 436) to revise the order of a District Magistrate and order further inquiry, even though the latter was exercising enhanced powers under this section The District Magistrate acting under this section is inferior to the Sessions Judge within the meaning of sec 435—Jalloo v K E 1904 P R 15

B—Sentences which may be passed by Courts of various Classes

Sentences which High Courts and Sessions Judges may pass

31. (1) A High Court may pass any sentence authorised by law.

(2) A Sessions Judge or Additional Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorised by law; but any sentence of death passed by any such Judge shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court

(3) An Assistant Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorized by law, except a sentence of death or transportation for a term exceeding seven years, or of imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years.

70. Transportation in default of fine.—Under sec 19 I. P C it is competent to the Judge to award a sentence of tr ation in lieu of a substantive term of imprisonment, but this not authorise th award of a sentence of transportation in lieu of the imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine—Kunhussa v Queen 5 Mad 78 Emp v Vira 1880 P R 17

Sentences which Magistrates may pass

32 (1) The Courts of Magistrates may pass the following sentences namely —

(a) Courts of Presidency Magistrates and of Magistrate of the first class	Imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years including such solitary confinement as is authorised by law Fine not exceeding one thousand rupees Whipping
(b) Courts of Magistrates of the second class	Imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months including such solitary confinement as is authorised by law Fine not exceeding two hundred rupees
(c) Courts of Magistrate of the third class	Imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month Fine not exceeding fifty rupees

(2) The Court of any Magistrate may pass any lawful sentence combining any of the sentences which it is authorized by law to pass

71. Powers and discretions of Judges and Magistrates —It is necessary in awarding punishment to exercise some discretion and to consider the circumstances of each case and the degree of guilt disclosed in awarding punishment—Kesauer v K E 10 Bur L T 268 18 Cr L J 489 The theory of deterrent punishment should not be loosely put into practice Deterrent punishments are necessary only when waves of imitative crime commence to sweep over the State or in times of public tumult where there is a danger of a wide breach of the peace or security or where a highly organised association of persons engineer series of offences—Gossain v Emp P L T 506 Cr L J 679 See also Badri v Emp 17 Cr L J 243 (All)

A sentence of two years imprisonment on a juvenile offender when his adult co-accused with three previous convictions is awarded only one year s imprisonment is improper—Abdul v Emp 46 Bom 429 23 Cr L J 93 23 Bom L R 1199

The powers of the Magistrate to pass sentence are limited by this section Even a request by the accused to pass a greater sentence will not empower a Magistrate to pass a sentence which he is not authorised by law to pass—In re Krishnanand 3 B L R App 50

72 Nature of sentence must be defined — A Magistrate who pronounces a sentence must define precisely the nature of the sentence intended Generally the sentence ought to be self contained—Q E. v Rama 24 Mad 13

73 Sec 75 I P C ·—A Magistrate in passing an enhanced sentence under section 75 I P C (for previous conviction) cannot exceed the powers limited by sec. 32 of the Cr P Code Thus where a person who was convicted of theft was sentenced by a second class Magistrate to undergo six months rigorous imprisonment and to further imprisonment for six months under sec 75 I P C on account of his previous conviction held that the second class Magistrate had no power to so sentence under sec 75 as to make the total sentence exceed six months—Q E v Gulab Ratanlal 688

74 Solitary confinement —The punishment of solitary confinement can be awarded only for offences under the Penal Code—Crown v Gholam Hoosain 1866 P R 120 Hurnarain v Crown 1870 P R 20, Crown v Manawar, 1875 P R 4 Thus a person convicted of an offence under section 35 of the Excise Act (Emp v Gurdit Singh 1889 P R 17) or under section 48 of the Post Offices Act (Emp v Mukh Ram, 1879 P R 24) is not liable to a sentence of solitary imprisonment

Again solitary confinement can be awarded only as part of a substantive sentence of imprisonment—Crown v Umar Sing 1869 P R 20 and not when such imprisonment is awarded in default of payment of fine—Crown v Jita 1873 P R 26 Emp v Jamdad 1887 P R 53 or in default of furnishing security—Kurdan v King Emp 36 All 195 Solitary confinement cannot be awarded in default of payment of fine—Bunsi v Emp 1882 P R 9

But it is not illegal to award solitary confinement as part of an imprisonment awarded in lieu of whipping under sec 393 of this Code—Q E v Gaman, 1899 P R 14 nor is it illegal to impose solitary confinement as part of a sentence in a summary trial under Chapter XXII—Emp v Anu, 6 All 83

A Magistrate has no power to direct that a sentence of solitary confinement should be undergone in the first week of every month because the mode of such punishment is regulated by the Penal Code—Emp v Jiman, 5 C P L R 17

75 Fine —In imposing fine regard is to be had to the nature of the offence and the means of the accused—Q E v [illegible], U B R (1897 1901) I 244, Crown v Subhan, 1878 P R [illegible] fine is not suited to the nature of the offence and is beyond the means of the offender to pay it, it ought not to be inflicted merely in order that a further period of imprisonment in default should be [illegible] If the substantive sentence awardable by the Magistrate is [illegible] for the offence the case should be sent for trial to a Court which can award adequate sentence—Mohana v Emp, 1895 P R 20

Rules for whipping — The Governor General in Council observes that the extent to which the punishment of whipping is inflicted in the several provinces is a matter which should even during ordinary times when the circumstances of the country are normal be carefully watched by Local Governments and administrations in order that any tendency towards an indiscriminate or ill judged resort to this form of punishment may be promptly checked This is especially necessary during times of scarcity when from causes more or less beyond their own control, the poorer classes of the population are driven to the commission of petty crimes The policy of largely resorting during times of agricultural distress to whipping as a punishment for petty thefts and other offences of a similar nature may no doubt be defended by the argument that it would be impossible at such times to provide accommodation for all offenders in the jails But if due and timely provision is made for employment of the industrious poor there need be no excessive resort to punitive measures of this kind and the Governor General in Council trusts that if such times should unfortunately recur the matter will be watched with especial care by the Local Governments and Administrations concerned and that it may be found possible to distinguish between those members of the criminal classes who take advantage of seasons of public trouble to prey upon their neighbours and the honest labouring poor who are driven by sheer necessity to grain pilfering or similar offences For the former the punishment should be sharp and effective and whipping may often be most appropriate The latter should be considerately dealt with and put in the way of relief after such punishment of fine or moderate imprisonment as may seem to be appropriate in each case —Proceedings of the Government of India Home Department (Judicial) 11th January 188

'The Judges of the Punjab Chief Court have invited the attention of the Criminal Courts to the following points —(1) that persons in respectable position of life should not ordinarily be whipped (2) that the punishment should be inflicted only in case of false evidence extortion and forgery under any exceptional circumstances (3) that whipping as an additional punishment should only be ordered when a further deterrent appears to be really called for in the interests of justice (4) that special care and judgment should be exercised in times of agricultural scarcity and distress —Punjab Cir LXII p 280

Whipping being a punishment which to certain classes of the community carries great disgrace with it shall not be inflicted when there are special circumstances which render it undesirable or make it in reality a greater punishment than the law intends More especially should this be borne in mind in cases where it is proposed to inflict whipping as the sole punishment and where consequently either no appeal lies in law or there is often no practical appeal No man who up to the time of his conviction has occupied a position of some respectability should be subjected to this punishment which is meant rather for persons of the lowest classes who commit such petty thefts etc as are properly visited with whipping Neither adults nor juveniles may be punished with whipping for an offence under a special Act unless the Act contains a special provision to that end —C P Cir Part III No 3

Sentences which Courts and Magistrates may pass upon European British Subjects.

34A. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 31, 32 and 34—

(a) no Court of Session shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than a sentence of death, penal servitude, or imprisonment with or without fine, or of fine; and

(b) no District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than imprisonment which may extend to two years or fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or both.

This section has been added by section 7 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923 Under the old law, the sentences that could be awarded by Magistrates of the first class, District Magistrates and Courts of Session in the case of European British subjects were limited to three months' imprisonment and a fine of Rs 1,000 six months' imprisonment and a fine of Rs 2,000, and one year's imprisonment and unlimited fine, respectively These restrictions are now removed "The Bill proposes that so far as sentences of death, penal servitude, or imprisonment with or without fine, or of fine only are concerned, the powers of those officers shall be identical in the case of European British subjects and Indian British subjects, except as regards Magistrates who have been specially empowered under section 30 of the Code Such Magistrates will only be able to pass those sentences on European British subjects which could be passed by ordinary first class Magistrates Such Magistrates will, however have power to try European British subjects for the same additional offences as they are able to try Indian subjects under their special powers —Statement of Objects and Reasons, Para 8 (iii)

This section further shows that an European British subject shall not be punished with whipping

Sentence in case of conviction of several offences at one trial

35. (1) When a person is convicted at one trial of two or more * * offences, the Court may, subject to the provisions of section 71 of the Indian Penal Code, sentence him, for such offences, to the several punishments prescribed therefor which such Court is competent to inflict; such punishments, when consisting of imprisonment or transportation, to commence the one after the expiration of the other in such order as the Court may direct, unless the Court directs that such punishments shall run concurrently.

Provided that—

Proviso as to certain cases

(a) the term is not in excess of the Magistrate's powers under this Code

(b) in any case decided by a Magistrate where imprisonment has been awarded as part of the substantive sentence, the period of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of the fine shall not exceed one-fourth of the period of imprisonment which such Magistrate is competent to inflict as punishment for the offence otherwise than as imprisonment in default of payment of the fine

(2) The imprisonment awarded under this section may be in addition to a substantive sentence of imprisonment for the maximum term awardable by the Magistrate under section 32

them and state definitely that section 35 must be read subject to section 71 I P C It is also declared that aggregate sentences passed under section 35 in case of conviction for several offences at one trial shall be deemed to be a single sentence for the purpose of appeal, if they run consecutively —Statement of Objects and Reasons (Bill 3 of 1914)

Section 71, I P C —Section 71 of the Indian Penal Code provides as follows —

"Where anything which is an offence is made up of parts any of which parts is itself an offence, the offender shall not be punished with the punishment of more than one of such offences, unless it be so expressly provided

Where anything is an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished or where several acts of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence, constitute when combined a different offence

the offender shall not be punished with a more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for any one of such offences

In all other cases (e g where the offences are distinct), the Court can pass separate sentence for each of the offences under section 35 of the Cr P Code

78A. Cases under sec. 71 I. P. C. :—In awarding punishment under section 71, I P C in case of convictions for several separable offences falling within the purview of the section it is illegal to impose a sentence for each offence—Nilmony v Q E, 16 Cal 442; Keamuddi v Emp, 51 Cal 79 Mithoo Sing v Gopal Lal 3 C W N 761, Bhagwan v Emp 1901 P R 4 Thus it is improper to pass separate sentences upon the accused both for rioting and theft, when the former offence is but an element of the latter—Mithoo v Gopal, 3 C W N 761 If a person abducts a woman with intent to commit rape, and then actually commits rape, he cannot be awarded separate sentences under secs 366 and 376 I. P. C The sentence under sec 366 I. P C will be set aside—Imam v Emp, A I R 1926 Lah 212, 27 Cr L J 338 Separate sentences under sections 148 and 324/149 I P. C are illegal—Nilmony v Q. E, 16 Cal 442. The infliction of separate punishments under sections 147 and 325/149 of the Penal Code is illegal, even though the sentences are made to run concurrently—Keamuddi v. Emp, 51 Cal. 79, 28 C. W. N 347, 25 Cr L J. 947 Where an accused is charged under sections 121 and 124A of the I P Code in respect of a single speech, he will be liable to one punishment only, even if he is convicted of both the offences charged—Emp v Hasrat Mohani, 24 Bom L. R 885, A I. R. 1922 Bom 284 The Bombay High Court holds in some other cases that though a Court in awarding punishment under the provisions of sec. 71, I P. C should pass one sentence for either of the offences and a separate one for each offence, still if two sentences are passed aggregate of them does not exceed the punishment provided any one of the offences, or the jurisdiction of the Court, it

(2) In the case of consecutive sentences, it shall not be necessary for the Court, by reason only of the aggregate punishment for the several offences being in excess of the punishment which it is competent to inflict on conviction of a single offence, to send the offender for trial before a higher Court

Provided as follows —

Maximum term of punishment

(a) in no case shall such person be sentenced to imprisonment for a longer period than fourteen years,

(b) if the case is tried by a Magistrate (other than a Magistrate acting under section 34) the aggregate punishment shall not exceed twice the amount of punishment which he is, in the exercise of his ordinary jurisdiction, competent to inflict

(3) For the purpose of appeal the aggregate of consecutive sentences passed under this section in case of convictions for several offences at one trial shall be deemed to be a single sentence

Explanation Separable offences which come within the provisions of section 71 of the Indian Penal Code are not distinct offences within the meaning of this section	(Omitted)
Illustration A breaks into a house with intent to commit theft and steals property therein A has not committed distinct offences	(Omitted)

Change —This section has been amended by section 7 of the Cr P Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 In sub-section (1) the word distinct has been omitted and the italicised words have been added in sub-section (3) the words aggregate of consecutive have been substituted for the word aggregate and the Explanation and Illustration have been omitted

"The existing Explanation and Illustration to section 35 have occasioned considerable misunderstanding It is therefore proposed to omit

are overruled In these cases it was held that if the offences were not distinct the trying Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass enhanced sentence under the provisions of sub-section ( ) and proviso (b)

82 "May sentence" —The words may sentence do not mean that the Court must necessarily pass distinct sentences—Q E v Mahomed Ratanlal 597 (per Jardine J) The use of the word may shows that this section only permits and does not make it obligatory on Courts to pass separate sentences in one trial—Q E v Nga Kyu L B R (1872 189) 271 Ngakyu v Emp 1 Bur S R 71

But though it is not illegal to pass one sentence for all the offences still it is generally the proper course to pass a separate sentence for each offence—Mahomed Ratanlal 597 Anonymous 4 M H C R App 27 because such a course will enable the Appellate Court to know the punishment to be remitted in case the conviction for one of the offences is set aside—4 M H C R App If one aggregate sentence is imposed for all the offences it is impossible to apportion it to the different offences of which the accused is convicted—Bahadur v Emp 1886 P R 14 But the passing of one aggregate sentence for the several offences is not an illegality but a mere irregularity it is not an error or defect in consequence of which the High Court would reverse or alter the sentence—Reg v Vinayak B H C R 391

On the other hand if the offences are not separate (e g offences under secs 39 and 5 I P C) the awarding of two separate sentences is illegal—In re Muthurakka 18 M L T 1 1 18 Cr L J 611

83 Consecutive sentences —If separate sentences are passed for each offence of which an accused stands convicted the sentences must commence one after the expiry of the other—Q E v Maung Kala L B R (1872 1892) 5 6 Where a man is imprisoned under two warrants ordering consecutive sentences the first should be completely executed both in regard to the substantive term of imprisonment as well as the imprisonment in default of fine before any effect is given to the second warrant—Anonymous Ratanlal 132

84 Concurrent sentences —The Court must expressly direct whether the sentences are to run concurrently or consecutively Omission to determine whether the sentences of imprisonment and transportation (in a case where both sentences have been passed) are to run concurrently or consecutively makes the sentence defective in form—Khokua v King Emp 21 C W N 608 23 C L J 596 17 Cr L J 238

Before Sec 397 was amended by the Cr P C Amendment Act 19 3 it was held that the only cases in which a Court could pass concurrent sentences for two offences were when the accused was convicted at the same trial for both the offences (Sec 35), and if the trials were separate Sec 397 applied and the sentences were to take effect consecutively—Emp v Khuda Bux S L R 23 Kamal v K E 0 C W N 1300 18 Cr L J 410 Joyenulla v Emp 2 C W N 597 Dulli v Emp 47 All 59 26 Cr L J 570 Harak Narain v Emp 19 A L J 310 Emp v Buddhu 15 C P L R 57 Debi Dayal v K E 16 O C 370 Makbul irregularity only and not an illegality—Q E v Valu, 23 Bom. 706 (F B), Emp v. Piru Rama, 49 Bom 916, 27 Cr L J 113 A I R 1926 Bom 64, Q E v Bara, 17 Bom 260 The Allahabad High Court likewise holds that it is not illegal to pass separate sentences for all the offences, but the amount of punishment should not be heavier than that which the Court can inflict for any one of the offences—Q E v Wazir, 10 All 58.

Where the offences are independent of each other e g the offence of house breaking at night with intent to commit theft (sec 457 I P C) and the offence of theft of ornaments in a dwelling house (sec. 380 I P C), the case does not fall under section 71 I P Code and separate sentences can be passed for the two offences the one sentence to commence after the expiration of the other—Kanchan v K E 41 C L J 563, 26 Cr L J 1253 A I R 1925 Cal 1015 In this case the change in the law has been very fully explained

79. Scope of Section—'Convicted'—This section applies only to convictions for offences it does not apply to imprisonments under sec 123 of the Code—Emp v Kanu, 5 Bom L R 26, Emp v Tukaram, 4 Bom, L R 876.

Therefore it is illegal for a Magistrate to direct under this section that a sentence of imprisonment for an offence should take effect after the expiry of the sentence which the accused may be undergoing for default of furnishing security for good behaviour—In re Pichari Anthu, 16 Cr. L J 62 (Mad) The order is also illegal under sec 120

This section is not restricted to cases where the several punishments are all of the same kind i e all are sentences of imprisonment or all are sentences of transportation It covers cases of the description where one of the punishments is imprisonment while the other is transportation —Khohua v. K E 21 C W N 608, 17 Cr L J 238

80 One trial This section has reference only to the conviction of an accused person of two or more offences at one trial It does not apply to sentences passed at different trials—Q v Puban, 7 W R 1, Bahadur v Emp 1880 P R 14 In re Daulatai 3 All 305 Emp v. Thakur 1881 A W N 23 Kamal v K E 20 C W N 1300 Thus it does not include the case of separate trials held on the same day for separate offences committed by the same accused—Q E v Venkatesagadu, 2 Weir 30 This section has no application whatever when a person is convicted in two or more separate trials even though in all of them the complainant is the same and the offences are similar and they are concluded on the same date—Sheo Narain v Crown, 1910 P. L. R 105, 11 Cr L J 679

81 Distinct offences:—By reason of the omission of the word distinct' the present section applies to all cases whether the offences are distinct or not. In all cases, the Court will be competent to inflict an aggregate punishment in excess of the punishment which it is ordinarily competent to inflict in respect of a single offence

are overruled In these cases it was held that if the offences were not distinct the trying Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass enhanced sentence under the provisions of sub section (2) and proviso (b)

82 "May sentence" —The words may sentence do not mean that the Court must necessarily pass distinct sentences—Q E v Mahomed Ratanlal 597 (per Jardine J) The use of the word may shows that this section only permits and does not make it obligatory on Courts to pass separate sentences in one trial—Q E v Nga Kyin L B R (1872 1892) 271 Ngakyn v Emp 1 Bur S R 271

But though it is not illegal to pass one sentence for all the offences still it is generally the proper course to pass a separate sentence for each offence—Mahomed Ratanlal 597 Anonymous 4 M H C R App 27 because such a course will enable the Appellate Court to know the punishment to be remitted in case the conviction for one of the offences is set aside—4 M H C R App 2 If one aggregate sentence is imposed for all the offences it is impossible to apportion it to the different offences of which the accused is convicted—Bahadur v Emp, 1886 P R 14 But the passing of one aggregate sentence for the several offences is not an illegality but a mere irregularity it is not an error or defect in consequence of which the High Court would reverse or alter the sentence—Reg v Vinayak 2 B H C R 391

On the other hand if the offences are not separate (e g offences under secs 392 and 75 I P C) the awarding of two separate sentences is illegal—In re Muthurakka 18 M L T 171 18 Cr L J 611

83 Consecutive sentences —If separate sentences are passed for each offence of which an accused stands convicted the sentences must commence one after the expiry of the other—Q E v Maung Kala L B R (1872 1892) 576 Where a man is imprisoned under two warrants ordering consecutive sentences the first should be completely executed both in regard to the substantive term of imprisonment as well as the imprisonment in default of fine before any effect is given to the second warrant—Anonymous Ratanlal 13

84 Concurrent sentences —The Court must expressly direct whether the sentences are to run concurrently or consecutively Omission to determine whether the sentences of imprisonment and transportation (in a case where both sentences have been passed) are to run concurrently or consecutively makes the sentence defective in form—Khokhua v King Emp 21 C W N 608 23 C L J 596 17 Cr L J 238

Before Sec 397 was amended by the Cr P C Amendment Act 1923 it was held that the only cases in which a Court could pass concurrent sentences for two offences were when the accused was convicted at the same trial for both the offences (Sec 35) and if the trials were separate Sec 397 applied and the sentences were to take effect consecutively—Emp v Khuda Bux 2 S L R 23 Kamal v K E 20 C W N 1300 18 Cr L J 410 Joyenulla v Emp 22 C W N 597 Dulli v Emp 47 All 59 26 Cr L J 570 Harak Narain v Emp 19 A L J 310 Emp v Budhu 15 C P L R 57 Debi Dayal v K E 10 O C 370 Makbul

v. K E, 11 A I J 263 14 Cr L J 240 Emp v Mahomed Isal, 13 Bom. It is not illegal to direct a sentence of imprisonment to run concurrently with a sentence of transportation —Bora v Crown 1913 P R 21, 15 Cr L J 68

The imprisonment referred to in this section is a substantive sentence of imprisonment an order directing that the terms of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine shall run concurrently is illegal—Imp v Akhtar 1 S L R 203 13 Cr L J 53 Emp v Sutrao 27 Bom L R 1351 A I R 1926 Bom 6 Cr L J 111

85 Appeal —An accused who has been sentenced to concurrent sentences of imprisonment no one of which is individually appealable, has no right to aggregate them and appeal against them collectively—Aziz Shaikh v Emp 41 Cal 611 17 C W N . . Abdul Jabbir v Emp, 25 C W N 613 23 Cr L J . . . . . Emp 17 C L J 492, 13 Cr L J . . Gur Sah v Emp . P L J 138 19 Cr L J 90 Tulsi Ram v Emp 35 All 154 Contra Abdul Khalil v K E . C W N 72 and Bepin Behari v Emp 15 C W N . 4 where it was held that concurrent sentences must be aggregated for purposes of appeal as otherwise there would be no distinction between a concurrent sentence and a single sentence in which no sentence was passed under the second charge But these two rulings can no longer stand as good law in view of the recent amendment made in sub-section (3) under which only consecutive sentences can be aggregated for the purpose of appeal

86 Proviso a —According to proviso (a) fourteen years is the maximum term of imprisonment which can be awarded as an aggregate sentence A sentence of transportation in lieu of imprisonment awarded under sect . I P C is therefore subject to the limitation which has been . . . by s . Cr P Code in the case of sentences of imprisonment . . . . C P I R . . An aggregate sentence of 20 years rigorous imprisonment is contrary to proviso (a) of this section—Sher Singh v Crown 1910 P L R 10. 11 Cr L J 6 .

Sentences of imprisonment may be accumulated beyond 14 years in more than one trial The limit of 14 years has reference only to sentences passed simultaneously at one trial or passed on charges tried simultaneously —Queen v. Pultan, 7 W R 1

The fact that the Magistrate passes the maximum term of imprisonment under this section is no bar to his awarding further punishment on the same accused for a distinct offence tried separately Thus, where a person was charged with two charges of dacoity and one charge of kidnapping and was tried separately for the dacoity and for the kidnapping and the Magistrate inflicted a sentence of 14 years for the charges of dacoity held that this would not disqualify him from passing further sentence for the offence of kidnapping although the trial for that offence was contemporaneous with the trial on the dacoity charges and terminated on the same day—Bahadur v Emp 1886 P R 14

87 Proviso (b) —Where there are separate trials the Magistrate s power of punishment is not limited to twice the amount which he is competent to pass—In re Daulatai 3 All 305 Nga Kyin v Emp 1 Bur S R 271

88 Sub section (3) —For the purpose of appeal —It is only for the purposes of appeal (and for no other purpose e g for the purpose of commutation into transportation) that the consecutive sentences can be treated as one sentence therefore two or more sentences cannot be added up so that the aggregate period may be commuted into transportation—Queen v Ootum Mal 2 W R 1

For the purposes of appeal only consecutive sentences are allowed to be taken in the aggregate as one sentence This sub section does not apply to concurrent sentences—Saw Hlaing v Emp U B R (1897 1901) 13 Nga Shwe v Emp L B R (1900 1902) 57 Sher Muhammad v Emp, 1901 P R 25 Jagadish v K E 10 N L J 135 28 Cr L J 672 See notes under Appeal above

Only substantive sentences can be aggregated under this section a sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine must not be included for the purposes of calculation—189 P R page 2

This sub section which provides that the aggregate of consecutive sentences should for the purpose of appeal be deemed to be a single sentence refers only to sentences of imprisonment and not to sentences of fine—Shidlingappa v Emp 28 Bom L R 668 27 Cr L J 926 A I R 1926 Bom 416

89 Splitting up of offences —No Magistrate is entitled to split up an offence (over the whole of which he had no jurisdiction) into its component parts for the purpose of giving himself jurisdiction over a part thereby depriving the prisoner of the right of appeal—Emp v Abdool Karim 4 Cal 18

C — Ordinary and Additional Powers

36. All District Magistrates Sub divisional Magistrates and Magistrates of the first, second and third classes have the powers hereinafter respectively conferred upon them and specified in the third schedule Such powers are called their "ordinary powers "

Ordinary powers of Magistrates

90 Secs 36 and 107 —Where a person is not sent before the District Magistrate by any other Magistrate under sec 107 (3) the District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to commit him to custody under sec 107 (4) Nor can the District Magistrate commit the accused to custody under sec 36 different if he vacates his office by absenting himself without leave—Bal Harku v Sitaram, 2 Bom L R 536

Powers may be cancelled

41. (1) The Local Government may withdraw all or any of the powers conferred under this Code on any person by it or by any officer subordinate to it.

(2) Any powers conferred by the District Magistrate may be withdrawn by the District Magistrate.

PART III

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

CHAPTER IV

OF AID AND INFORMATION TO THE MAGISTRATES, THE POLICE AND PERSONS MAKING ARRESTS

42 Every person is bound to assist a Magistrate or police-officer reasonably demanding his aid whether within or without the presidency towns,

Public when to assist Magistrates and police

(a) in the taking or preventing the escape of any other person whom such Magistrate or police officer is authorized to arrest,

(b) in the prevention or suppression of a breach of the peace, or in the prevention of any injury attempted to be committed to any railway, canal, telegraph or public property

95A Every person —A police officer charged with the duty of arresting an accused can ask a chowkidar to assist him in arresting the accused or preventing his escape—Manik v Kenaram 6 C W N 337

96 Reasonably —No person is bound to obey an unreasonable order of a Magistrate or Police officer Thus where a Magistrate ordered a landholder to find a clue to a theft within 15 days it was held that such an order was unreasonable and unwarranted by this section and the landlord was not bound to perform an act for which the police are appointed and paid Disobedience by the landlord to such an order is no offence—Emp v Bakshi Ram 3 All 201 Members of the public are bound to assist a police officer reasonably demanding their aid in the taking of any dacoits or suspected dacoits whom that officer is authorised by law to arrest The law however does not intend that the police officers should have a general power of calling upon the members of the public to join them in arresting a number of unknown persons whose whereabouts are not known Refusal to assist the police officer in such a quest is not a offence—Joti Prasad v Emp 42 All 314 18 A L J 169 21 Cr L J 80

97. Aid :—The aid that can be demanded under this section is the personal assistance of the person of whom it is demanded, and not the supply of a contingent of men to assist—In re Rama 2 Weir 37

Punishment —Omission to assist under this section is punishable under sec 187 I P C

Aid to person other than police-officer, executing warrant

43. Where a warrant is directed to a person other than a police-officer any other person may aid in the execution of such warrant, if the person to whom the warrant is directed be near at hand and acting in the execution of the warrant

Public to give information of certain offences

44. (1) Every person, whether within or without the presidency towns aware of the commission of or of the intention of any other person to commit, any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code (namely) 121 121A 122 123, 124, 124A, 125 126 130, 143 144, 145, 147 148, 302, 303, 304, 382 392, 393 394 395 396 397 398, 399, 402, 435, 436 449 450 456 457 458 459 and 460, shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse the burden of proving which shall lie upon the person so aware, forthwith give information to the nearest Magistrate or police officer of such commission or intention

(2) For the purposes of this section the term "offence" includes any act committed at any place out of British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India

98 Information sent through chowkidar —Where one of several lambardars, to the knowledge of others directs the chowkidar to report a burglary at the thana the requirements of this section have been complied with and the lambardar cannot be said to have failed to give information if the chowkidar omits to report it at the thana—Sher Singh v Emp, 1899 P R 5

99. No duty after information —Where once the information of a crime reaches the police, the object of this section is fulfilled and no further duty is imposed upon the persons mentioned in this section to give information—Q E v Sada, Ratanlal 674

Punishment —Omission to give information under this section is punishable under Secs 118 176 and 202 I P C For false information, see Sec 177 I P C.

Omission to report a plot of waging war against the Crown does not amount to abetment of waging war unless the accused's intention in omitting to report the plot was with a view to aiding the waging of war—Goman v. Emp 6 Bur L T 153 14 Cr L J 610

Village headmen accountants, land holders and others bound to report certain matters

45. (1) Every village headman village accountant, village watchman, village police officer, owner or occupier of land, and the agent of any such owner or occupier in charge of the management of that land and every officer employed in the collection of revenue or rent of land on the part of Government or the Court of Wards, shall forthwith communicate to the nearest Magistrate or to the officer in charge of the nearest police station, whichever is the nearer, any information which he may possess respecting—

(a) the permanent or temporary residence of any notorious receiver or vendor of stolen property in any village of which he is headman, accountant, watchman or police-officer, or in which he owns or occupies land, or is agent, or collects revenue or rent;

(b) the resort to any place within, or the passage through, such village of any person whom he knows, or reasonably suspects, to be a thug, robber, escaped convict or proclaimed offender,

(c) the commission of, or intention to commit, in or near such village, any non bailable offence or any offence punishable under section 143, 144, 145, 147 or 148 of the Indian Penal Code

(d) the occurrence in or near such village of any sudden or unnatural death or of any death under suspicious circumstances or the discovery in or near such village of any corpse or part of a corpse in circumstances which lead to a reasonable suspicion that such a death has occurred or the disappearance from such village of any person in circumstances which lead to a reasonable suspicion that a non bailable offence has been committed in respect of such person

(e) the commission of or intention to commit at any place out of British India near such village any act which if committed in British India would be an offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code namely 231 232 233 234 235 236 237 238 302 304 382 392 393 394 395, 396 397 398 399 402 435 436 449 450 457, 458 459 460 489A 489B 489C and 489D,

(f) any matter likely to affect the maintenance of order or the prevention of crimes or the safety of person or property respecting which the District Magistrate by general or special order made with the previous sanction of the Local Government has directed him to communicate information

(2) In this section—

(i) "village" includes village lands and

(ii) the expression "proclaimed offender" includes any person proclaimed as an offender by any Court or authority established or continued by the Governor General in Council in any part of India, in respect of any act which if committed in British India would be punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code namely, 302, 304 382 392, 393 394 395, 396, 397, 398 399, 402 435 436 449 450, 457 458 459 and 460

(3) Subject to rules in this behalf to be made by the Local Government, the District Magistrate or Sub divisional Magistrate may from time to time appoint one or more persons with his or their consent to perform the duties of a village-headman under this section, whether a village-headman has or has not been appointed for that village under any other law

Appointment of village headman by District Magistrate in certain cases for purposes of this section

Change —The italicised words have been added by section 9 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The reasons are stated below

100 Object of Section —The provisions of this section are not to be worked sôlely for the purpose of vexation but for the purpose of ensuring that information be not intentionally withheld by persons whose position renders them liable to give it Therefore when information is given to the nearest Magistrate or Police by one of the persons bound to give such information it is not reasonable that every other person bound to give the information should be prosecuted for not having done so—Emp v Sashi Bhushan 4 Cal 623 In re Pandya 7 Mad 436 Q E v Gopal 20 Cal 316 Q E v Hari Gopal Ratanlal 778 Where the police are already informed of a fact by the Chowkidar there is no further obligation upon the village headman to report the same information again to the police—Rampal v Emperor 23 Cr L J 162 (Oudh)

101 Persons bound —Village headman in Madras means a Village Munsiff or Village Magistrate—In re Sivan Chetti 39 Mad 258 A Zaildar is not a village headman within the meaning of this Section—Q E v Hari Singh 1894 P R 25 Shah Mahammad v Emp 1886 P. R 19

A Village Accountant was not bound under the corresponding section of the Code of 1872 or 1882—In re Raminiki Nayar 1 Mad 266, but now he is expressly mentioned

The owner or occupier of a house in a village is not the owner or occupier of land —Q E v Ichuta 12 Mad 92 Residence in a dwelling house belonging to another is not occupation of land—In re Mudhoo Soodun 23 W R 60

Owner and agent —The liability of the resident agent arises when the owner is not resident and has no personal knowledge of the fact to be reported Where the owner has such knowledge the liability certainly attaches to the owner (and not to the agent)—In re Mudhoo Soodun 23 W R 60 Under the present law the agent is liable only if he is in charge of the management of the land

These words have been added during the Debate in the Legislative Assembly on the motion of Mr Agnihotri who stated the reasons as follows — The word agent should be qualified and made definite in such a way that only such agents be made liable to give information under sec 45 as may be connected with the land or be in charge of the management of the land the occurrence on which is to be reported The word agent is very comprehensive and vague for instance there may be agents for various purposes they may be for the collection of land revenue they may be for looking after the cultivation of the land they may be for the construction of buildings on the land or for conducting and defending suits for title of such land and so on the word may apply even to servants And to make such agents liable would be to make the term very wide and troublesome so it is necessary to restrict it only to such persons as are in charge of the management of the land and who may be in a better position to know about the occurrences on that land —Legislative Assembly Debates January 16 1923 page 1114

A Khazanchi of a Zemindar of a village is not an agent A dewan may be an agent during the absence of his master but not a dewan who acts only under the orders of his resident master—Emp v Achirat 4 Cal 603

Forthwith —The word forthwith must be construed with reference to the object of the enactment Where a kulkarni gave information of a suspicious death some 7 or 8 hours after he was aware of the same held that the information was not given forthwith—Reg v Pirtappa Ratanlal 78

102 Information — The persons enumerated in this section are bound to report an information and not a mere rumour—Lachmi v Emp 5 P L T 505 25 Cr L J 972 Where the Zemindar heard of the disappearance of a man from the village and a rumour that he had been murdered the omission to report such rumour to the police was not an offence—In re Bhup Singh 1900 A W N 207 But under clause (d) as now amended the disappearance of a man under suspicious circumstances must be reported

'Possess' —This word has been substituted for the word obtain In 1904 the Madras Government found that the word obtain did not cover information obtained by personal observation because the word undoubtedly meant obtain by making inquiries There was therefore some difficulty in making certain that information obtained by personal observation such as for example the discovery of a corpse on the ground came within the scope of the law Moreover the deletion of the word was absolutely necessary because it implied an obligation to seek the information The Magistrates were likely to be misled by the word obtain they might come to the conclusion that it was obligatory on the persons concerned to obtain information It was therefore necessary to make an amendment by substituting the word possess for the word obtain In moving the amendment Mr Pantulu observed The offending portion of the section is that the landholder would be called upon to give informa tion which he may possibly obtain but which he may not have in his possession Now if we take away the word obtain and substitute the word possess it comes to this that the landlord is bound to give only the information which he possesses and not information which he may possibly obtain by making inquiries If my amendment is carried, it will be incumbent upon the prosecution to show that the accused had that information in his possession, and not merely that he might have obtained it Therefore, I think that if this amendment is carried, the sting will be taken out of the section —Legislative Assembly Debates, January 16, 1923 page 1116 See also Lachmi v Emp (ubi supra)

103 Clause (b) —Resort to or passage through —The bringing of a suspected robber under arrest to the village and releasing him there does not amount to the resorting to or the passage through the village of such robber—Emp v Malik Daud 1887 P R 30

Proclaimed offender —These words include persons ever and above those to whom the words in their ordinary sense apply—Q E v Narpat, 1901 A W N 10 The fact that the offender s property has been attached and sold under the provisions of sec 88 of this Code does not raise any presumption that he is a proclaimed offender It is on the prosecution to prove that the proclamation was made in the manner prescribed by sec 87 of this Code—In re Pandya Nayak, 7 Mad 436

104 Clause (c) —The information to be given to the police under clause (c) is the information of the commission of an offence An information that a certain jewel is missing is not an information that an offence has been committed, and need not be communicated to the police —In re Vemi Reddi, 5 M L T 257, 9 Cr L J 224

105 Clause (d)—Occurrence of death —The duty imposed by this section on a village headman etc of giving information as to the occurrence of any sudden or unnatural death is intended to apply only when the death takes place at or near the village of which he is the headman, owner, occupier, etc —In re Mudhoosoodun, 23 W R 60

If a body is found on one s land, the presumption is that the death took place there, and the owner is under an obligation to give information regarding the matter—Maluki v Queen, 11 Cal 619 (Mitter J, dissenting, held in this case that there could be no such presumption, it could be equally presumed that the death took place in another village, and the dead body was thence removed to this village) Under clause (d) as now amended, the finding of a corpse must be reported, without reference to the question of presumption as to whether the death took place in the same village or in another village

If a dead body is found in a stream, it is enough to give rise to a presumption that the death took place under suspicious circumstances, and the person finding it is bound to report it under this section—Sher Muhammad v Emp 1887 P. R 20

When a man fell from a tree and died two days afterwards, held that although the death was 'unnatural' in the ordinary sense of the word, still it would not come within the meaning of the word 'unnatural' as used in sec 45 (d), so as to require to be reported immediately, unless it occurred fairly soon after the cause—Domarsing v Emp, 23 Cr L J 345 (Nag)

Proof —To support a conviction for omitting to give information under this section, it should be proved that the accused bears the character which raises the obligation under this section—1 Mad 266 it must be proved that a specified offence has been committed by some one, that the accused knew of its having been committed and that he wilfully omitted to give the information—Queen v Ahmed Ali 22 W R 42

107 Sub section (3) —Appointment of village headmen —An order of a District Magistrate dismissing a person from the office of a head man of a village under the rules framed under this sub section, is an executive order and is not subject to revision by the High Court—In re Damma, 29 All 563

With his or their consent —These words were added during the Debate in the Assembly on the motion of Mr Rangachariar My amendment would remove any misconception there may be as to the power of the District Magistrate to appoint persons against their will and it is for this reason that I have inserted this clause that when they are so appointed it should be with their consent I know that in the case of enlisting special police, people without their consent are enlisted This ought not to degenerate into such a provision It must be a voluntary duty to be performed by people who are given a certain status' —Legislative Assembly Debates, January 16, 1923, page 1117

Search of place entered by person sought to be arrested

47 If any person acting under a warrant of arrest, or any police officer having authority to arrest, has reason to believe that the person to be arrested has entered into or is within, any place, the person residing in or being in charge of, such place, shall, on demand of such person acting as aforesaid or such police officer, allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein

111 Scope —This section is not intended to restrict the powers of the Police to enter the place to be searched On the contrary it is a provision compelling householders to afford the police facilities in carrying out their duties and the next section provides that if difficulties are placed in the way of a Police officer he may use force to obtain ingress—Romesh Chandra v Emp 41 Cal 350 18 C W N 496 15 Cr L J 385

Demand —No precise words are needed it is enough to give notice that entry is sought under proper authority Russell on Crimes p 745

Procedure where ingress not obtainable

48 If ingress to such place cannot be obtained under section 47, it shall be lawful, in any case for a person acting under a warrant and in any case in which a warrant may issue but cannot be obtained without affording the person to be arrested an opportunity of escape, for a police officer to enter such place and search therein, and in order to effect an entrance into such place, to break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place, whether that of the person to be arrested or of any other person, if after notification of his authority and purpose, and demand of admittance duly made, he cannot otherwise obtain admittance

Breaking open zanana

Provided that, if any such place is an apartment in the actual occupancy of a woman (not being the person to be arrested) who according to custom, does not appear in public, such person or police-officer shall, before entering such apartment, give notice to such woman that she is at liberty to withdraw and shall afford her every reasonable facility for withdrawing and may then break open the apartment and enter it

Power to break open doors and windows for purposes of liberation

49 Any police-officer or other person authorised to make an arrest may break open any outer and inner door or window of any house or place in order to liberate himself or any other person who, having lawfully entered for the purpose of making an arrest is detained therein

No unnecessary restraint

50 The person arrested shall not be subjected to more restraint than is necessary to prevent his escape

For punishment for unnecessary restraint see sec 220 I P C

Search of arrested persons

51 Whenever a person is arrested by a police-officer under a warrant which does not provide for the taking of bail, or under a warrant which provides for the taking of bail but the person arrested cannot furnish bail and whenever a person is arrested without warrant, or by a private person under a warrant, and cannot legally be admitted to bail, or is unable to furnish bail, the officer making the arrest or, when the arrest is made by a private person the police officer to whom he makes over the person arrested, may search such person, and place in safe custody all articles, other than necessary wearing apparel, found upon him

Mode of searching women

52 Whenever it is necessary to cause a woman to be searched the search shall be made by another woman with strict regard to decency

Power to seize offensive weapons

53 The officer or other person making any arrest under this Code may take from the person arrested any offensive weapons which he has about his person and shall deliver all weapons so taken to the Court or officer before which or whom the officer or person making the arrest is required by this Code to produce the person arrested

B Arrest without Warrant

When police may arrest without warrant

54 (1) Any police officer may without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest—

first any person who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned

secondly any person having in his possession without lawful excuse the burden of proving which excuse shall lie on such person any implement of house breaking thirdly, any person who has been proclaimed as an offender either under this Code or by order of the Local Government, fourthly any person in whose possession anything is found which may reasonably be suspected to be stolen property, and who may reasonably be suspected of having committed an offence with reference to such thing, fifthly, any person who obstructs a police officer while in the execution of his duty or who has escaped, or attempts to escape, from lawful custody, sixthly, any person reasonably suspected of being a deserter from Her Majesty's Army, Navy or Air Force or of belonging to Her Majesty's Indian Marine Service and being illegally absent from that service, seventhly, any person who has been concerned in, or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been concerned in any act committed at any place out of British India, which, if committed in British India would have been punishable as an offence, and for which he is, under any law relating to extradition or under the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 or otherwise liable to be apprehended or detained in custody in British India, eighthly any released convict committing a breach of any rule made under section 565, sub section (3), and ninthly, any person for whose arrest a requisition has been received from another police officer, provided that the requisition specifies the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made and it appears therefrom that the person might lawfully be arrested without a warrant by the officer who issued the requisition

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta

Change —In the fourth clause the word and has been substituted for the word or and the ninth clause has been newly added by section 10 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 For reasons see below

113 Any Police Officer —Village Chowkidars are not Police-officers within the meaning of this section—Kalai v Kalu Chowkidar 27 Cal 366 Emp v Kallu 3 All 60 Bolai v Emp 35 Cal 361 Purna Chandra v Hachanali 41 Cal 17

The words any police officer show that where a warrant has been issued for the arrest of certain culprits on a charge of a cognizable offence any police officer even though he is not entrusted with the execution of such warrant and has not got the warrant with him will be justified under this section in making the arrest—Ratna Mudali v Emp 40 Mad 1028 18 Cr L J 709

Where a complaint has been made against any person in respect of a cognizable offence any police officer may arrest him without warrant even though the Police officer be not in his uniform—Mahadeo v Emp 1 A L J 791 25 Cr L J 652

114 Power of arrest —The words may arrest show that the power of arrest is discretionary A Police officer is not always bound to arrest for cognizable offences If a complaint of such an offence is made to him he ought if there be circumstances in the case which lead him to suspect the information to refrain from arresting persons of respectable position and to leave the complainant to go to a Magistrate and convince him that the information justifies the serious step of the issue of a warrant of arrest—Q E v Irappa Ratanlal 795

The powers under this section must be cautiously used This section gives wide powers to a Police officer to make an arrest without an order from the Magistrate and without warrant only in certain circumstances limited by the provisions contained in this section and it is necessary in exercising such large powers to be cautious and circumspect—In re Charu Chandra 44 Cal 6 20 C W N 1233

Power to detain —Authority given to arrest under this section implies authority to detain—Q E v Ramchandra Ratanlal 220 But when certain persons were arrested under section 54 Cr P Code on suspicion of having been concerned in a dacoity and afterwards the investigating police officer reported to the Magistrate that there was no sufficient evidence upon which to charge those persons with participation in the dacoity the Magistrate ought to discharge those persons and ought not to detain them in order that the police might institute proceedings under sec 110 If the police believe that those persons were habitual thieves or robbers they ought to re arrest them under section 55 —Emp v Rahu 43 All 186 18 A L J 1114

115 Punishment —A police officer arresting a person unjustifiably or otherwise than on a reasonable ground is guilty of an offence under sec 220 I P Code

116 Clause (1)—Reasonable complaint or suspicion, credible information —What is a reasonable complaint or suspicion must depend on the circumstances of each particular case but it must be at least founded on some definite fact tending to throw suspicion on the persons arrested and not a mere vague surmise or information Still less have the police any power to arrest persons as they sometimes appear to do merely on the chance of something being hereafter proved against them—Q v Beldry 7 W R 3 (5)

A general definition of what constitutes reasonableness in a complaint or suspicion and credibility of information cannot be given Both must depend upon the existence of tangible legal evidence within the cognisance of the Police-officer and he must judge whether the evidence is sufficient to establish the reasonableness and credibility of the charge information or suspicion—Reg and Ord A B P Sec 10 para 366 (8) Subodh v K E 52 Cal 319 29 C W N 98 26 Cr L J 625

If a Magistrate after taking the statement of the complainant respecting an offence under section 406 I P Code issues a warrant for the arrest of the accused there is a reasonable complaint of the accused being concerned in a cognizable offence consequently a constable who arrests the accused without a warrant is justified in doing so under this section — Ilay Muhammad v Emp 22 Cr L J 758 (All) If a warrant of arrest is issued against the accused on a charge of cognizable offence by the Police of any other province it amounts to a credible information that the accused has committed a cognizable offence—Gopal Singh v Emp 36 All 6 11 A L J 957

Where a complaint of a cognizable offence was made to the Magistrate who recorded it under section 200 and directed the police to make an investigation and send a report and the police after making the investigation arrested three persons it was held that the complaint recorded under sec 200 was a credible information upon which the police were entitled to arrest under this section even though the Magistrate had not issued process against the accused—Emp v Bhola Bhagat 2 Pat 379 4 P L T 521 24 Cr L J 375 The police can make an arrest under this section on a complaint of a cognizable offence made before them—Mahadeo v Emp 21 A L J 791 25 Cr L J 652

117 Clause 4) —A formal complaint need not be made in order to authorise a police officer to arrest under this clause any person found with stolen property—Queen v Gowree Singh 8 W R 28

The possession of stolen property must be recent and exclusive—Ibid

The word and has been substituted for or Under the old law as it stood before 1923 a police officer could arrest any person in whose possession anything was found which might reasonably be suspected to be stolen property even though he might come in possession of that property innocently The effect of the amendment is that the mere possession of stolen property will not empower a police officer to arrest the person in possession of it but the person must also be reasonably suspected of having committed an offence in respect of the thing See the Legislative Assembly Debates 16th January 1923 page 1154

117A Clause(5)—Obstruction to police officer —Where a police constable after questioning a person carrying bundles of cloth under his arms (suspecting the cloth to be stolen) and receiving unsatisfactory replies took hold of the pieces of cloth in order to inspect them but the latter refused to allow the officer to inspect the cloth and

scuffled with him after which the police officer arrested him held that the person was legally arrested under the fifth clause of this section for obstructing a police officer while acting in the execution of his duty—Bhawoo v Mulji 12 Bom 377

118 Clause (7) —Offence committed out of British India —By virtue of this clause the ruling in 19 Bom 72 is no longer good law This clause authorises the police in British India to arrest without warrant a British subject committing outside British India any of the offences enumerated in the first Schedule of the Extradition Act—Emp v Husein ally 7 Bom L R 463 2 Cr L J 439

An arrest in British India by a police of the Native State of a person suspected to have committed an offence in the Native State is illegal—Emperor v Debi 29 All 377

The wording of this clause indicates that the arresting Police officer has to exercise his own judgment and form his own opinion as to whether he should or should not act and to enable him to do so he must have the necessary facts before him A bare assertion of the commission of an offence does not amount to a reasonable suspicion or a credible information on the basis of which an arrest can be made under this clause If there is a credible information of the issue of a warrant by the Foreign State that would justify an action under this section—Subodh v Emp 52 Cal 319 29 C W N 98 40 C L J 489 26 Cr L J 625

The expression liable to be apprehended etc contemplates cases in which there is a present liability to apprehension or detention in custody in British India under the laws of extradition or the Fugitive Offenders Act or any other law and not cases in which there may be liability in future for apprehension or detention The issue of some sort of process under the law would create such a liability though the process may not have arrived and is not available for execution—Ibid

119 Clause (9) —The first two lines of this clause have been added on the recommendation of the Select Committee in 1916 and the latter portion on the recommendation of the Joint Committee in 1922 As regards the first two lines the Select Committee of 1916 observed The Committee are of opinion that an amendment is required in section 54 to meet the case of a requisition from a police officer to arrest a man at a distance We think it is clear that there should be power for an investigating officer to require by telegram the arrest of a person who may perhaps have absconded from the place where the investigation was taking place We therefore propose to add a clause at the end of section 54 As regard the rest of the clause the Joint Committee (1922) added We agree with those critics who desire that some safeguard should be provided and we have therefore proposed to lay down that the requisition should reveal the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made so that the arresting officer can satisfy himself that the arrest could lawfully have been made without warrant by the officer issuing the requisition

Before the ninth clause was added it was held that the reasonable suspicion and credible information in this section must be based upon definite facts which the Police officer must consider for himself before he could act under this section He could not delegate his discretion or take shelter under another person's belief or judgment Thus where a Police officer arrested the accused on receipt of a letter written by an Inspector of Police in which it was stated that the accused committed offences under secs 409 and 420 I P C and it appeared that the officer effecting the arrest relied solely on the aforesaid letter and had no personal knowledge of the facts of the case it was held that the arrest of the accused was not proper—In re Charu Chandra 44 Cal 76 This ruling is no longer correct in view of this new clause

120 Arrest without warrant under Special Acts —Arrest of a person in possession of a contraband salt (Sec 24 Madras Act VII of 1864 Sec 4 of Madras Act I of 1887) carrying arms under suspicious circumstances (Sec 17 Arms Act XI of 1878) Gambling in open streets (Sec 13 of the Indian Gambling Act III of 1867) committing offences under the Railways Act (Sec 132 Railways Act 1890) or under the Cantonments Act (Sec 250 of Act II of 1924) or under the Criminal Tribes Act (Secs 21 22 25 of Act VI of 1924) or under the Emigration Act (XXI of 1883 Sec 12) or under the Indian Explosives Act (IV of 1884 Sec 13) or under the Forest Act (Act VII of 1878 Sec 63) or under the European Vagrancy Act (Act IX of 1874 Sec 19) or under the Assam Labour and Emigration Act (VI of 1901 section 195) or under the Bengal Excise Act (VII of 1878 secs 40 and 41) or under the Cruelty to Animals Act (Bengal Act III of 1869 section 1) or under the Punjab Municipal Act (XX of 1891 secs 18 83) or under the Bombay Gambling Act (IV of 1867 sec 12A) or under the Rangoon Tramways Act (XXII of 1883 sec 19)

Arrest of vagabonds habitual robbers etc

55 (1) Any officer in charge of a police station may in like manner, arrest or cause to be arrested—

(a) any person found taking precautions to conceal his presence within the limits of such station under circumstances which afford reason to believe that he is taking such precautions with a view to committing a cognizable offence or

(b) any person within the limits of such station who has no ostensible means of subsistence or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself or

(c) any person who is by repute an habitual robber house breaker or thief or an hab

tual receiver of stolen property knowing it to be stolen or who by repute habitually commits extortion or in order to the committing of extortion habitually puts or attempts to put persons in fear of injury

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta

121 Object of section —The powers with which officers in charge of police stations have been armed under the Code for the purpose of restraining bad characters are exceptional powers They provide very strong remedies and should never be put in force without the greatest deliberation and except upon convincing evidence This section was intended for the suppress on of habitual bad characters whom an officer in charge of a Police station suddenly finds within his jurisdiction or about whom he has good cause to fear that they will commit serious harm before there is time to apply to the nearest Magistrate empowered to deal with the case under sec 112—In re Daulat Sing 14 All 45

122 Illegal arrest —A person against whom proceedings under Chapter VIII were held by the High Court to be illegal was re arrested under this section within the Court precincts after giving him ostensible release and proceedings against him under Chapter VIII were renewed It was held that the re arrest was illegal and an unlawful exercise of authority as it was an attempt in another way to do what had been declared by the High Court to be illegal—Emp v Amir Khan 1883 A W N 223 Similarly where the Sessions Judge has passed orders for the immediate release of an accused person who had been prosecuted for dacoity the action of a Police officer or a Magistrate in re arresting him under this section and subsequently taking proceedings against him is a grave irregularity and wholly without jurisdiction—Emp v Mauku 41 All 483 17 A L J 458 20 Cr L J 381

In order to justify an arrest under clause (c) of this section the prosecution will have to prove that the man was reputed to be a habitual robber or house breaker etc it is illegal to arrest a person merely on the ground that the police had reason to suspect that he was concerned in several offences—Appasami v King Emp 47 Mad 442 (445) 46 M L J 447 25 Cr L J 563

123 Section applies to Calcutta Police —This section is expressly made applicable to the Police of Calcutta Therefore an officer in charge of a Police station in Calcutta may arrest a person although there is no declaration by Government declaring a thana or police station in Calcutta to be a police-station within the meaning of this Code—Emp v Madho Dhobi 31 Cal 557

124 Bail —When the Police arrest under this section they are bound to give the person arrested the option of bail and the bond should not be excessive but in accordance with the position in life occupied by the person arrested—In re Dwilal Singh 14 All 45

125 Clause (a) —Habitual gambler —Only the persons enumerated here can be arrested under this section Persons who are suspected of earning their livelihood by unlawful gambling are not liable to arrest by the Police The proper course is to proceed under sec 112 of the Code—King Emp v Kyaw Dun 3 L B R 94 3 Cr L J 20

126 Sections 55 and 110 —This section is independent of Chapter VIII of this Code although proceedings under that Chapter might follow on arrest under this section as a natural sequence A police officer can therefore arrest or cause to be arrested without a warrant or an order of a Magistrate any person who is by repute a robber house breaker or thief or otherwise comes under section 110 of the Code—Nepal v Emperor 35 All 407 14 Cr L J 618 11 A L J 596

A person who can be dealt with under clauses (d) and (e) of sec 110 is in most cases a person who would fall within one of the categories given in section 55 A Police officer who intends to proceed against a man under sec 110 can cause him to be arrested under sec 55 without a warrant It is not necessary that all the formalities of Chap VIII are to be observed before he can be arrested because it would in many cases render proceedings under Chap VIII useless If the Police or the Magistrates who are contemplating taking proceedings under that chapter against desperate and dangerous characters or vagabonds and vagrants are to allow the suspects to remain free until all the formalities of Chap VIII have been fulfilled and a regular committal order passed against such persons it would often time happen that the offenders would abscond and the proceedings would be wholly infructuous The police can therefore arrest a suspected criminal under sec 55 and then proceed against him either for a substantive offence or under Chap VIII—Hardayal v Emp 20 S L R 85 27 Cr L J 628 (630)

Procedure when police-officer deputes subordinate to arrest without warrant

56 (1) When any officer in charge of a police-station or any police officer making an investigation under Chapter XIV requires any officer subordinate to him to arrest without a warrant (otherwise than in his presence) any person who may lawfully be arrested without a warrant, he shall deliver to the officer required to make the arrest an order in writing specifying the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made

The officer so required shall before making the arrest notify to the person to be arrested the substance of the order and, if so required by such person shall show him the order

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta

Change —The italicised words have been added by sec 11 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

We consider that a Police officer making an investigation should no less than an officer in charge of a police station have power to depute a subordinate to effect an arrest under the provisions of section 56 (1) and we propose an amendment in this sub section accordingly —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

The second para of sub section (1) did not exist in the Bills of 1914 or 1921 but was added on the motion of Mr Rangachariar during the debate in the Assembly See Legislative Assembly Debates January 17 1923 page 1186

127 'Officer subordinate" —A choukidar is an officer subordinate to an officer in charge of a police station—Bahubal v Emp 10 C W N 287 Umrao v Emp 26 Cr L J 795

128 In his presence —If the arrest is made in the presence of the officer in charge of the Police station the arrest is virtually made by him and no order in writing is necessary a verbal order is sufficient—Queen v Shaikh Emoo 11 W R 20

129 Order in writing —The order in writing is an authority to a subordinate officer to make an arrest which the superior Police-officer if present could himself make on his own responsibility—Q E v Basant Lal 27 Cal 320 The mere writing of the name of the subordinate on the back of the warrant and the signing of that endorsement by the officer in charge of the station does not constitute the warrant an order in writing But adding the words arrest the person within named and for the offence within stated would make it a valid order in writing—Q E v Dalip 18 All 246

A Sub Inspector may arrest persons who fall under certain categories given in sec 55 If he wishes any other police constable to arrest such person he must specify the cause for which the arrest is to be made i e he must state within which category as given in se 55 the supposed offender falls If it is intended that the police officer should arrest a man with a view of taking proceedings under sec 110 it is strictly and specially necessary that he should specify one of the clauses given in sec 55—Hardayal v Emp 20 S L R 85 27 Cr L J 628 (629)

Section 80 of the Code applies only to warrants and not to orders in writing mentioned in this section therefore it was held that a subordinate officer making an arrest under an order in writing was not bound to notify to the person arrested the authority for and the cause of his arrest—Q E v Basant Lal 27 Cal 320 (323) This is no longer good law, because the new second para of sub-section (1) now expressly makes it obligatory on the subordinate officer to notify to the person arrested the substance of the order in writing and to show him the order if called upon to do so

But the provisions of section 56 (requiring a constable to notify the substance of the order to the person to be arrested) do not deprive the constable of his statutory power under sec 54 to arrest without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant any person who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned If the person to be arrested falls under this category the mere fact that a command certificate (order in writing) has been given to the constable under sec 56 is immaterial as the constable independently of any such command certificate is entitled to make the arrest The failure of the constable in such a case to notify the substance of the command certificate to the person to be arrested does not take away from him the protection which attaches to him while acting in the discharge of his duty in a manner authorised by law—Kishun Mandar v Emp 5 Pat 533 27 Cr L J 1310 (1311) 8 P L T 237

The subordinate officer making the arrest is not bound on his own initiative to show the accused the order given by the officer in charge of the police station unless he is asked to produce the order—Umrao v Emp 26 Cr L J 795 (796)

130 Warrant by a Magistrate —The issuing of a warrant by a Magistrate for the arrest of a person does not exclude the jurisdiction of the officer in charge of the Police station and prevent him from issuing the order under this section It might be different if the Magistrate has decided that no warrant should issue and that summons only should issue—Q E v Dalip 18 All 246

57. (1) When any person, who in the presence of a police officer has committed or has been accused of committing a non cognizable offence refuses, on demand of such officer to give his name and residence or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he may be arrested by such officer in order that his name or residence may be ascertained

Refusal to give name and residence

(2) When the true name and residence of such person have been ascertained, he shall be released on his executing a bond with or without sureties, to appear before a Magistrate if so required

Provided that, if such person is not resident in British India, the bond shall be secured by a surety or sureties resident in British India

(3) Should the true name and residence of such person not be ascertained within twenty four hours from the time of arrest or should he fail to execute the bond, or, if so required, to furnish sufficient sureties, he shall forthwith be forwarded to the nearest Magistrate having jurisdiction.

131. Refusal to give name and address —A police constable asked a man not to create any disturbance on the public road Upon the man's declining to do so the constable demanded his name and address which were not given Then the constable arrested and dragged him to the police chowky and detained him there till his name and address were ascertained It was held that the constable had lawfully exercised the powers conferred by this section—Emp v Goolab Rasul 5 Bom L R 597.

Where two police officers arrested without warrant a person who was drunk and creating disturbance in a public street, and confined him in the police station, though one of them knew his name and address, held that the police officers action was not justified under this section—Gopal Naidu v. K E, 46 Mad 605 625 (F B) 44 M L J 655 24 Cr L J 599

Pursuit of offenders into other jurisdictions

58. A police officer may, for the purpose of arresting without warrant any person whom he is authorized to arrest under this Chapter, pursue such person into any place in British India

132. Pursuit in foreign territory —The Police may in hot pursuit follow an offender into an independent Native State if they arrest him there they must take him at once to the nearest Police authority of that State if not in hot pursuit they should ordinarily apply to the nearest Police authorities of the State and request them to effect the arrest of the fugitive—C P Pol Man, p 170

Arrest by private persons

Procedure on such arrest

Arrest by private persons Procedure on such arrest

59. (1) Any private person may arrest any person who, in his view, commits a non-bailable and cognizable offence or any proclaimed offender, and without unnecessary delay, shall make over any person so arrested to a police-officer, or, in the absence of a police-officer, take such person or cause

officer, or in the absence of a police officer, take such person to the nearest police station him to be taken in custody to the nearest police station

(2) If there is reason to believe that such person comes under the provisions of section 54, a police officer shall re arrest him

(3) If there is reason to believe that he has committed a non cognizable offence and he refuses on the demand of a police officer to give his name and residence or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he shall be dealt with under the provisions of section 57 If there is no sufficient reason to believe that he has committed any offence, he shall be at once released

Change —Sub section (1) has been re drafted by sec 12 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) but the actual amendment made in the sub-section is the addition of the words or cause him to be taken in custody This amendment gives effect to the ruling in 29 All 575 cited below

133 Principle —The principle of this section is that for the sake of preservation of the peace any individual who sees it broken may restrain the liberty of him whom he sees breaking it so long as his conduct shows that the public peace is likely to be endangered by his acts —per Parke B in Timothy v Simson (1835) 4 L J Ex 81 Thus if a person is drunken and disorderly and is committing assault on others so that his conduct is at that time a grave danger to the public he may be rightly arrested under this section by a private citizen—In re Ramaswamy Iyyar 44 Mad 913 22 Cr L J 417

134 Scope of Section —The intention of this section is to prevent arrest by a private person on mere suspicion or information and the power of arrest by such person is restricted only to non bailable and cognizable offences committed in his presence and to a proclaimed offender —Q E v Poladu 11 Mad 480 The words in his view mean in his presence or within his sight and not in his opinion The Legislature did not intend to give a private person authority to arrest an offender if upon information received or from other circumstances appearing before him he is of opinion that an offence has been committed—Gokul v Emp 7 P L T 65 26 Cr L J 1462 (1463)

This section enables a private person to arrest an accused for committing the abetment of a non bailable and cognizable offence (e g abetment of the offence of extortion —Raghunath v K E 5 P L J 1.9 1 P L T 60

The arrest by a private person is authorised only in case the offence is committed in the presence of such person therefore an arrest by a private person would be illegal if it is made after the offence (which is not a continuing one) has been completed before such person comes up and makes the arrest—Bolai v Emp 35 Cal 361 Where a private person whose bullock was lost traced the bullock to the house of the thief arrested him and made him over to the police chaukidar held that the arrest was not lawful as the offence of theft was not committed in the presence of the private person arresting the thief—K E v Johri 23 All 266 A private person has no power to arrest an accused who is running away after committing murder where the murder did not take place in the presence of such person—Alaual v Emp 1922 P L R 19, 23 Cr L J 3

135 'Make over to a police officer' —A village Chowkidar (Kalai v Kali Chowkidar 27 Cal 366 Purna Chandra v Hachanah 41 Cal 17 17 C W N 978) or a village Talayari or a village Toti (Q v Bojjigan, 5 Mad 22) is not a Police officer to whom the arrested person may be made over But under the present amendment the arrested person may be made over to the Chowkidar etc so that the Chowkidar may take such person to the nearest police station

'Take such person to the police station' —It is not the intention of the Legislature that the person making the arrest should be bound himself to take the arrested person to the police station—Emp v Parsiddhan Sing 29 All 575 Q I v Potadu 11 Mad 480 See also King Emp v Johri 23 All 266 The directions are sufficiently complied with if the person arresting the accused forwards him in charge of a servant or a village servant—Ibid This is now made clear by the addition of the words or cause him to be taken

A private person making an arrest must either make over the arrested person to a police officer or take him to the nearest police station If he keeps the arrested person in his own custody he will be guilty of an offence under sec 342 I P C (wrongful confinement)— Inant Prasad v Emp 8 P L T 204

60 A police officer making an arrest without warrant shall without unnecessary delay and subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, take or send the person arrested before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or before the officer in charge of a police station

Persons arrested to be taken before Magistrate or officer in charge of police station

136 "Send the person" —On a police-officer arresting a person the prisoner should not be kept in confinement in any place which the officer might select but should be sent immediately to the police station and be placed in the custody of the officer in charge of the station who is the person entrusted by the Act with the conduct of the enquiry—Q v Tarinee, 7 W R 3

Report to the Magistrate —Where a policeman arrested a thief but being himself unable to send or take the accused to a Magistrate made a report upon which the Magistrate issued a warrant it was held under the circumstances that the accused was legally brought before the Magistrate—Reg v Mahipya 5 B H C R 99

61. No police officer shall detain in custody a person arrested without warrant for a longer period than under all the circumstances of the case is reasonable, and such period shall not in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under section 167, exceed twenty-four hours exclusive of the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Magistrate's Court

Person arrested not to be detained more than twenty four hours

137. Object of section —The intention of the Legislature having regard to this section and section 167 is that an accused person should be brought before a Magistrate competent to try or commit with as little delay as possible—Q E v Engadu 11 Mad 98 Ponnusami v Queen 6 Mad 69 Narendra v Emp 36 Cal 166 In re Nagendra Nath 51 Cal 402 (412) 38 C L J. 358 The precautions laid down in sections 60 and 61 seem to be designed to secure that within not more than 24 hours some Magistrate shall have seisin of what is going on and some knowledge of the nature of the charge against the accused however incomplete the information may be—Dwarkadas v Ambalal 28 C W N 850 25 Cr L J 1203

Section 61 does not apply to the Calcutta Police but the detention of an offender by the Deputy Commissioner of Police in Calcutta for an unlimited period is improper—Emp v Panchkari 51 Cal 67 29 C W N 300 26 Cr L J 782 (79) and an improper exercise of such power may be corrected by the High Court under the suitable provisions of law such as sec 491 Cr P Code—Srilal v Emp 41 C L J 134 27 Cr L J 1185 (1186)

138 Detention in custody —Where the accused were not allowed to leave the thana or to go to their homes held that they were detained in custody within the meaning of this section and the mere fact of there not being a special guard over them would not alter the nature of their position—Queen v Basooram 19 W R 36

139 Period of detention —Although this section gives power to a police-officer to detain an accused person for a period of 24 hours still in no case is a Police officer justified in detaining a person for a single hour without bringing him before a Magistrate except upon some reasonable ground justified by all the circumstances of the case and it is for the police officer to show that he had reasonable grounds He is not entitled to detain the accused if he can send the accused to a Magistrate at once—Q v Suprosunno, 6 W R 88 (89) Even if a person be rightly arrested, it does not rest with the police officer to keep the prisoner in custody where and as long as he pleases Under no circumstances can he be detained without the special order of a Magistrate under sec 167, for more than 24 hours Unless the special order has been obtained the prisoner must either be discharged or sent on to the Magistrate, and any longer detention is absolutely unlawful—Q v Tarince 7 W R 3

The provisions of this section are imperative, and where a police officer is charged with having detained prisoners for more than 24 hours without the special order of a Magistrate it is not necessary for the Crown to prove that the police officer detained them with a guilty knowledge—Queen v. Basooram, 19 W R 36

The detention mentioned in this section means continuous detention This section does not apply to cases where there has not been a continuous detention for more than 24 hours The law does not mean that the number of hours during which an accused person is detained at a thana is to be added up irrespective of circumstances Thus, where the accused person was brought to the thana at 3 o clock in the afternoon and was allowed to go (to get bail) at noon the next day and was not a prisoner in the thana till his return on the morning of the next day and then he was sent up to the sudder station by the evening held that although the period of detention exceeded 24 hours there was no continuous detention for more than 24 hours, and that the detention was not illegal—In re Indrobeer, 1 W. R. 5.

Time occupied in journey —The 24 hours of detention are to be counted up to the time when the accused person leaves the police station on the way to the Magistrate The time occupied in journey to the Magistrate is not to be counted in the 24 hours but it is the duty of the Magistrate to see that the time so occupied is reasonable with reference to the distance to be travelled and other local considerations—Circular, Ratanlal 22

Police to report apprehensions

62. Officers in charge of police stations shall report to the District Magistrate or if he so directs, to the Sub divisional Magistrate, the cases of all persons arrested without warrant, within the limits of their respective stations, whether such persons have been admitted to bail or otherwise.

Discharge of person apprehended

63. No person who has been arrested by a police-officer shall be discharged except on his own bond, or on bail, or under the special order of a Magistrate

64. When any offence is committed in the presence of a Magistrate within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he may himself arrest or order any person to arrest the offender, and may thereupon, subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, commit the offender to custody

Offences committed in Magistrate's presence

140. Secs 64 and 556 —Although this section gives to a Magistrate authority to arrest a person committing an offence in his presence, yet it is clearly not intended to trench upon the general principle embodied in Sec 556 of this Code that no Judge or Magistrate shall try a case in which he is personally interested Therefore where a Magistrate while travelling in a railway carriage requested the accused who were his fellow passengers to desist from smoking and on their contemptuously refusing to do so arrested and subsequently tried and convicted them it was held that the Magistrate was legally and morally disqualified from exercising his judicial functions in relation to the offence imputed—Q E v Venkana Ratanlal 339

65. Any Magistrate may at any time arrest or direct the arrest, in his presence, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, of any person for whose arrest he is competent at the time and in the circumstances to issue a warrant

Arrest by or in presence of Magistrate

141 Arrest under Bombay Gambling Act —Under the provisions of sec 6 of the Bombay Gambling Act IV of 1887 a first class Magistrate has power to give authority under a special warrant to a Police officer to make an arrest and search those provisions must be read subject to the provisions of secs 65 and 105 of this Code that is the Legislature must be presumed to have intended that the Magistrate should have authority to make the arrest and search himself if necessary—Emp v. Fernand 31 Bom 438 9 Bom L R 695 6 Cr L J 60

OF PROCESS TO COMPEL APPEARANCE

A.—Summons

68. (1) Every summons issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing in duplicate, signed and sealed by the presiding officer of such Court or by such other officer as the High Court may, from time to time, by rule, direct

Form of summons

(2) Such summons shall be served by a police officer, or, subject to such rules as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf, by an officer of the Court issuing it or other public servant

Summons by whom served

(3) This section applies to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay

Scope.—The corresponding sections in the Code of 1872 (secs 152 and 153) were limited to service of summons against an accused person only The scope has now been enlarged This is the only section which provides for the issue of a summons under this Code and a summons to an assessor must comply with the terms of this section—In re Sarat Chandra 1 C W N cxvi

142 Application for summons.—Duty of Court.—When an application is made for a process to compel the appearance of witnesses it is the duty of the Court to pass an order either granting the prayer or refusing it To make a mere order directing the petition to be filed is to leave the matter open and is improper—Bhomar v Digambar, 6 C W N 548

143 Form and Contents.—A summons should be clear and specific in its terms as to the title of the Court the place at which and the day and the time of the day when the attendance of the person summon is required and it should go on to say that such person is not to leave the Court without permission and if the case in which he has been summoned is adjourned without ascertaining the date of the adjourn ment If these formalities are not duly observed a conviction for non attendance in obedience to the summons cannot be sustained—Emp v Ram Saran 5 All 7

Summons how served

69 (1) The summons shall, if practicable, be served personally on the person summoned, by delivering or tendering to him one of the duplicates of the summons

Signature of receipt for summons

(2) Every person on whom a summons is so served shall if so required by the serving officer, sign a receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate

(3) Service of a summons on an incorporated company or other body corporate may be effected by serving it on the secretary, local manager or other principal officer of the corporation, or by registered post letter addressed to the chief officer of the corporation in British India In such case the service shall be deemed to have been effected when the letter would arrive in ordinary course of post

This is the only section which provides for the procedure of service of summons and every summons (e g summons to attend as assessor) under this Code must be served in accordance with the provisions of this section Any other mode (e g sending summons by post or under registered cover) is illegal and not justifiable—In re Sarat Chandra 1 C W N cxvi

144 Service how effected —The mere showing of a summons to the person summoned is not sufficient service Either the original should be left with the party meant to be served or should be exhibited to him and a copy of it delivered to him—Reg v Karsanlal 5 B H C R 20

Refusal to take or sign —If however the person refuses to take the summons the mere tendering is sufficient service—Emp v Ganga Ram 1886 A W N 93 Sahadeo v Emp 40 All 577 16 A L J 453 19 Cr L J 716 What is necessary to the service of summons is that the summons should be delivered or tendered and if the summons is delivered or tendered then it is served whether the person signs a receipt for it or not—Reg v Kalya 5 B H C R 34

70. Where the person summoned cannot by the exercise of due diligence be found, the summons may be served by leaving one of the duplicates for him with some adult male member of his family or, in a presidency town, with his servant residing with him, and the person with whom the summons is so left shall, if so required by the serving officer, sign a receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate

Service when person summoned cannot be found

145 Cannot be found —It must be shown by affidavit of the person entrusted with the service of summons that he made his best endeavours to effect personal service on the accused and that the accused evaded service or that he could not be found by the exercise of due diligence—Emp v Sundar 188 A W N 170

Where sufficient steps have not been taken to serve the accused personally and there has been want of reasonable diligence in that behalf a substituted service of summons should not be ordered—Jadho v Manik 6 N L J 63 23 Cr L J 739

If the person summoned cannot be found the summons may be served on an adult male member of his family the service of summons on the mother of the accused is not warranted by this section—Sawan Singh v Emp, 26 Cr L J 1370 A I R 1926 Lah 50

Service on servant —Outside the Presidency Towns a service of summons on a juror cannot be effected on his servant—In re Behari Lal, 1899 A W N 13

71 If service in the manner mentioned in sections 69 and 70 cannot by the exercise of due diligence be effected, the serving officer shall affix one of the duplicates of the summons to some conspicuous part of the house or home-stead in which the person summoned ordinarily resides, and thereupon the summons shall be deemed to have been duly served

Procedure when service cannot be effected as before provided

145A The procedure which is provided by section 71 cannot be made use of unless service in the manner mentioned in sections 69 and 70 cannot be effected by the exercise of due diligence It is not enough to show that service could not be effected in the manner provided by section 69 it must also be shown that the service could not be effected in the manner provided by section 70—Beni Madha v Jadu Nath 31 C W N 148 27 Cr L J 715 (716)

72 (1) Where the person summoned is in the active service of the Government or of a Railway Company, the Court issuing the summons shall ordinarily send it in duplicate to the head of the office in which such person is employed, and such head shall thereupon cause the summons to be served in manner provided by section 69, and shall return it to the Court under his signature with the endorsement required by that section

Service on servant of Government or of Railway Company

(2) Such signature shall be evidence of due service

Mode of service on Government employees —see Cal C R & C O Ch I Rules 14 18 All R & O pages 78 Punj Cir Vol II pp 152 153

146 Scope —This section requiring service of summons to Government servants to be effected through the heads of their departments is intended to apply only to summonses issued by a Court of Justice and not to summonses or orders of police officers investigating a crime under Chap XIV of this Code A summons or notice issued by the police may be served directly on the Government servant and need not be sent through his departmental superior Therefore refusal by an amin (a Government servant) to attend at a police investigation in obedience to a summons directly served on him by the police is an offence punishable under sec 174 I P Code—In re Gumparthi Venkataramia 18 Cr L J 733 734 (Mad)

Summons to a Sub Inspector of the Railway Police should be served through the superintendent of the Railway Police of that district—Gouri Shankar v Collector 6 P L T 215 26 Cr L J 965 (968)

73 When a Court desires that a summons issued by it shall be served at any place outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, it shall ordinarily send such summons in duplicate to a Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person summoned resides or is, to be there served

Service of summons outside local limits

74 (1) When a summons issued by a Court is served outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, and in any case where the officer who has served a summons is not present at the hearing of the case, an affidavit, purporting to be made before a Magistrate, that such summons has been served, and a duplicate of the summons purporting to be endorsed (in manner provided by section 69 or section 70) by the person to whom it was delivered or tendered or with whom it was left, shall be admissible in evidence, and the statements made therein shall be deemed to be correct unless and until the contrary is proved

Proof of service in such cases and when serving officer not present

(2) The affidavit mentioned in this section may be attached to the duplicate of the summons and returned to the Court

B —Warrant of Arrest

75 (1) Every warrant of arrest issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing signed by the presiding officer, or in the case of a Bench of Magistrates, by any member of such Bench, and shall bear the seal of the Court

Form of warrant of arrest

(2) Every such warrant shall remain in force until it is cancelled by the Court which issued it, or until it is executed

Continuance of warrant of arrest

147 Grounds for issuing warrants —A Magistrate should issue a warrant on good and legal grounds It is essential that he should have a knowledge of the offence having been committed and that knowledge must be either personal or derived from testimony legally given before him The report of the Police or any statement which is not on oath and which falls short of actual formal complaint is not sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction to issue a warrant—Q v Surendra 13 W R 27 (31)

148 Warrant —Form —When any Act does not provide a form of warrant the form to be used is the ordinary one prescribed by this Code—Alter Caufman v Govt of Bombay 18 Bom 636

Pardanashin lady —Until and unless a Magistrate is convinced that there is strong likelihood of the charge being proved a purdanashin lady of good position should not be ordinarily compelled to appear in person in the first instance—Prem Kuer v Mai Sham Nath 1908 P W R 70

General warrants —The issuing of a general warrant which means a warrant to apprehend all persons committing a particular offence or offences is illegal—In re James Hastings 9 B H C R 154 No general warrant for arrest should ever be issued by a Court of Justice Every warrant should state as shortly as possible the special matter on which it proceeds A strict adherence to the forms of warrants of arrest prescribed by the Code will tend to prevent their being granted irregularly and without inquiry as to whether the circumstances justify their issue—Punj Cir P 144

Conditional warrants —A warrant which directs that in the event of a certain named person not leaving British India forthwith all officers to whom the warrant is directed are to arrest that person is invalid—Alter Caufman v Govt of Bombay 18 Bom 636 The proper procedure in this case would be first to issue an order directing the person to leave British India forthwith which should be duly served upon him and then in case of his refusal or neglect to comply with its terms there should be a further order by the Governor in Council authorising his arrest and detention in jail—Ibid

149. Requisites of a valid warrant —

(a) It must be in writing

(b) It must be signed signing not by full name but by initials is a mere irregularity and does not affect the validity of the warrant or vitiate the arrest—Bankey Behary v Emp 3 P L J 493 19 Cr L J 747 Q E v Janki Prosad 8 All 293 In Abdul Gafur v Q E 23 Cal 896 it was held that the signing must be by full name But this does not seem to be correct See note 143 under sec 68] The signing must be by pen and ink and not by stamp—Subramania Ayyar v Queen 6 Mad 396 The warrant must be signed by the presiding officer of the Court and not by any other Magistrate A warrant signed not by the Magistrate who took cognisance of the case but by an Honorary Magistrate who lived in the same town is invalid and a person resisting or escaping from an arrest made in pursuance of such warrant does not commit an offence under Sec 353 I P C—Jagpat Koeri v Emp 2 P L J 487 18 Cr L J 526

(c) It must be sealed An unsealed warrant is void—In re James Hastings 9 B. H C R 154 Mahajan v Emp 42 Cal 708 19 C W N 224, Alter Caufman v Government of Bombay 18 Bom 636

(d) The person named in the warrant must be described with sufficient certainty and particularity—Aller Caufman 18 Bom 636 The warrant must give particulars of the person to be arrested so as to identify him clearly A warrant which directs the committal of 'James Hastings' without giving any further description of him is invalid since it may lead to the arrest of any person bearing that name—In re James Hastings 9 B H C R 154 So also a warrant containing a wrong description of the accused (e g giving a wrong name of his father) is invalid—Debi Sing v Q E 28 Cal 399

(e) The warrant must specify the offence Where a warrant was issued for the arrest of a person on a charge of abduction it was held that since the act with which the accused was charged did not amount to an offence without a specific intention the warrant must state the intent with which the offence was committed otherwise it would be invalid—Bidloo rookhi v Sreenath 15 W R 4

(f) And lastly the warrant must contain the name and designation of the police officer or other person who is to execute it If the name is left blank the warrant is invalid—Emp v Gaman 1013 P R 16 14 Cr L J 142 A warrant not addressed to a bailiff as required by Form 154 of Schedule V of this Code or to any other person is not valid—Muhammad Baksh v King Emp 1904 P R 16

I Language of warrant —A warrant should be written in the language of the District from which it is issued If sent to another District or Province where a different language is in ordinary use it should be invariably accompanied by a translation—Cal G R and C O p 3 Bom H C Cr Cir p 10

Warrant by telegram —A Court should not issue a judicial order or communicate the purport of a warrant or process by telegram—N W P Reg and Ord p 71

150 'Shall remain in force' —When the law has not fixed any period limiting the duration of a warrant the presumption is that it remains valid until it is executed—Emp v Alloomiya 28 Bom 129

A warrant on which there is an endorsement for bail to be taken for the appearance of the accused on a particular date does not lapse on the expiry of that date after that date only the direction to take bail lapses but the warrant continues in force until it is cancelled by the Court which issued it or until it is executed—Raushan Singh v K E 13 C W N 1091

151. Cancellation of warrant —A Magistrate has discretion on sufficient cause shown to cancel a warrant and issue summons instead—Imp v Janat 1 S L R 69 Prem Koer v Mai Sham Nath 1908 P W R 20

When a warrant is cancelled it is at an end and cannot be re issued Even where a subordinate Magistrate issued warrants for the apprehension of some accused persons for trial and afterwards cancelled the warrants the District Magistrate had no authority to direct the re issue of the warrants against the accused—In re Guru Charan, 1 C W N 650

A warrant of arrest can only be cancelled by the Court issuing it—Linton v Crown 28 P L R 103 28 Cr L J 326

Court may direct security to be taken.

76. (1) Any Court issuing a warrant for the arrest of any person may in its discretion direct by endorsement on the warrant that, if such person executes a bond with sufficient sureties for his attendance before the Court at a specified time and thereafter until other wise directed by the Court, the officer to whom the warrant is directed shall take such security and shall release such person from custody

(2) The endorsement shall state—

(a) the number of sureties,

(b) the amount in which they and the person for whose arrest the warrant is issued, are to be respectively bound, and

(c) the time at which he is to attend before the Court

Recognizance to be forwarded

(3) Whenever security is taken under this section, the officer to whom the warrant is directed shall forward the bond to the Court

152 Scope of section—This section now applies to witnesses as well as to accused persons In the 1872 Code there were instead of the words for his attendance before a Court the words to answer the complaint which applied only to accused persons—Anon 2 Weir 39

152A Bond—Under sec 513, the Court or officer may allow a sum of money or G P Notes to be deposited in Court in lieu of executing a bond

A Magistrate should issue a bailable warrant even in non bailable cases when the offence charged borders on the technical (e g when the head of a mutt is alleged to have committed robbery in respect of pro perty which he admittedly claims to be his) and the accused is a man of position and respectability—Sivananlu v Emp (1911) 1 M W N 432 12 Cr L J 430

Bail bonds in criminal cases are exempt from Court fees under sec 19 Cl 15 of the Court Fees Act but the bonds given by sureties are not—Ahmedabad Magistrate s Endorsement Ratanlal 126

153 Attendance before a Court—The Magistrate may issue a warrant of arrest for attendance before himself or some other Court but he has no power to issue a warrant for the arrest and pro duction of a person in order that he may give evidence before the Police in an investigation under Chap XIV—Q E v Jogendra, 24 Cal 320.

77. (1) A warrant of arrest shall ordinarily be directed to one or more police-officers, and, when issued by a Presidency Magistrate, shall always be so directed; but any other Court issuing such a warrant may, if its immediate execution is necessary and no police-officer is immediately available, direct it to any other person or persons; and such person or persons shall execute the same.

Warrant to whom directed.

(2) When a warrant is directed to more officers or persons than one, it may be executed by all, or by any one or more, of them

Warrants to several persons.

154. This section merely directs that a warrant shall be ordinarily directed to one or more Police officers but it does not say that the name of that Police officer should be inserted in the warrant as well as his designation—Bankey Behary v Emp, 3 P L J 493, 19 Cr L J 747. The reasons have been thus stated It would be extremely difficult to carry on the Police administration of the country if every warrant had to be directed by name to a Police officer and upon his transfer it were to become incapable of execution till the name of some other officer had been substituted in his place'—Ibid In K I v Shankar Dayal, 25 O C. 111, 24 Cr L J 14, it has been held, however, that a warrant which does not contain the name of the police officer to whom it was issued and to whom authority to make the arrest was given, is irregular but it has been conceded that the evidence of the Magistrate who signed the warrant or of the Sub-Inspector who executed it may supply the omission The Rangoon High Court also holds that if a warrant is directed to a police thana without specifying the name of any officer in the station, it is at most a clerical error and does not invalidate the arrest if the accused has not suffered any prejudice—Makin v Emp, 3 Bur L J 182, 26 Cr. L. J 845, A I R. 1924 Rang 383.

Warrant by Presidency Magistrate —A warrant issued by a Presidency Magistrate shall always be directed to Police officers Where such a warrant was directed to a person other than a Police Officer, though such officer was immediately available, the High Court severely condemned the procedure—Queen v Synd Hossain, 8 W R 74.

Any other person:—A Magistrate may, under this section, direct a warrant to an unofficial person only when its immediate execution is necessary, and when he cannot immediately obtain the assistance of the Police—Queen v. Surendra Nath Roy, 13 W. R. 27.

Warrant may be directed to land holders etc

78 (1) A District Magistrate or Sub divisional Magistrate may direct a warrant to any landholder, farmer or manager of land within his district or sub division for the arrest of any escaped convict, proclaimed offender or person who has been accused of a non-bailable offence, and who eluded pursuit

(2) Such landholder, farmer or manager shall acknowledge in writing the receipt of the warrant, and shall execute it if the person for whose arrest it was issued is in, or enters on, his land or farm, or the land under his charge

(3) When the person against whom such warrant is issued is arrested, he shall be made over with the warrant to the nearest police officer, who shall cause him to be taken before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, unless security is taken under section 76

Warrant directed to police-officer

79 A warrant directed to any police officer may also be executed by any other police officer whose name is endorsed upon the warrant by the officer to whom it is directed or endorsed

155 Endorsement —If a warrant directed to a police officer is executed by another officer without endorsement (e g if a warrant addressed to the bailiff of the Court is executed by a naib nazir and process server without any endorsement by the bailiff) the execution is illegal—Ghasita v Emp 22 Cr L J 145 3 Lah L J 346 The endorsement should be regularly made by name to a certain person in order to authorise him to make the arrest—Durga Tewari v Rahman 4 C W N 85

Moreover the endorsement must be made by the Police officer to whom the warrant is directed Where a warrant was directed to a Court Sub Inspector and the endorsement was made by the Court Head Constable, it was held to be invalid—Durga Charan v Q E 27 Cal 457

Any other Police officer —A process serving peon is not included in the term any other police officer in the section—Durga Charan v Q E 27 Cal 457

156 Warrant under special Acts —A special warrant issued under section 6 of the Bombay Gambling Act IV of 1887 cannot be executed by any other officer except the officer therein named—Crown v Mithu 3 S L R 56 10 Cr L J 3 Similarly a warrant under sec 45 of the Bengal Chowkidari Act (VI of 18 o P C) can be executed only by the person named therein—Sheikh Nasir v Emp, 37 Cal 1.. The Burma Gambling Act does not contain any provision for endorsement of the warrant issued under section 6 of that Act by the Officer to whom it is issued to another officer—Po Tluat v Emp 12 Bur L T 165, 21 Cr L J 9

80 The police officer or other person executing a warrant of arrest shall notify the substance thereof to the person to be arrested, and if so required, shall show him the warrant

Notification of substance of warrant

157 Notify the substance —Where a Police officer simply shows the warrant to the accused but does not give him an opportunity of reading it and does not notify its substance to him the arrest so made is unlawful—Satish Chandra v Jadunandan 26 Cal 748 Abdul Gafur v Q E 23 Cal 896 But if the Police officer shows the warrant to the accused and gives him sufficient opportunity of reading the warrant itself the omission on the part of the officer to explain the particulars of the warrant does not invalidate the arrest because all that this section requires is that the accused should have reasonable opportunity of knowing on what charge he is being arrested and before what Court he is to appear so that he may take steps for arranging for his defence—Bankey Behary v Emp 3 P L J 493 19 Cr L J 747

158 Show the warrant —This implies that the arresting officer must have the warrant of arrest in his possession at the time of making the arrest otherwise it is illegal—Emp v Amar Nath 5 All 318 see also Emp v Ganesh Lal 27 All 258

Mere showing is not sufficient An opportunity should be given to the person to be arrested by showing him the warrant so that he might read it (26 Cal 748) and see that the person arresting has authority—Abdul Gafur v Q E 23 Cal 896 Satish Chandra v Jadunandan 26 Cal 748 Inard Lal v Empres 10 Cal 18 Q E v Tulsiram 13 Bom 168 Sheikh Nasur v Emp 3 Cal 1

81 The police officer or other person executing a warrant of arrest shall (subject to the provisions of section 76 as to security) without unnecessary delay bring the person arrested before the Court before which he is required by law to produce such person

Person arrested to be brought before Court without delay

159. Further detention —When the arrested person is brought before the Magistrate the Magistrate cannot lawfully commit him to prison or remand him without sufficient grounds and in the complete absence of evidence there can be no grounds—Queen v Surendra Nath 13 W R 27

The warrant is exhausted as soon as the person arrested is brought before the Court If the accused is to be further detained it must be under some fresh warrant or order such as an order of remand under

Sec 344 The warrant for further detention would be one of commitment directed to some jailor or other person having authority to receive and keep the prisoner—In re W Bourke 13 W R 1

Where warrant may be executed

82 A warrant of arrest may be executed at any place in British India

160 Arrest outside British India —Where the accused was arrested by a constable of the Jeypur State and was afterwards arrested by a British Constable in the Residency of Jeypur the arrest was held to be made outside British India—Emp v Sheu Bun 7 Bur L R 83

The arrest of a person at a Railway Station in a Native State (e g the Gwalior State) on a charge of an offence committed in British India is illegal The Gwalior State has ceded to the British Government jurisdiction over the Railway lands for the administration of civil and criminal justice in connection with the Railway and not in respect of offences not committed on those lands and having no connection with the Railway administration—Radha Kishen v Crown 1 Lah 406 21 Cr L J 303 So also the grant by the Nizam to the British Government of civil and criminal jurisdiction along the line of Hyderabad State Railway does not justify the arrest of a person on the lands of the State Railway under the warrant of a Magistrate in British India for an offence committed in a British territory and not committed in the Railway nor in any way connected with the administration of the Railway—Mahammad Yusufuddin v Q E 25 Cal 20 (P C)

Warrant forwarded for execution outside jurisdiction

83 (1) When a warrant is to be executed outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same such Court may instead of directing such warrant to a police officer forward the same by post or otherwise to any Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a presidency town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it is to be executed

(2) The Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner to whom such warrant is so forwarded shall endorse his name thereon and if practicable cause it to be executed in manner hereinbefore provided within the local limits of his jurisdiction

161 Warrant under Act XIII of 1859 —The provisions of this section read with Section 5 apply to a warrant issued under the Workmen s Breach of Contract Act Therefore a Magistrate cannot refuse to execute within his district a warrant issued by a Magistrate of another district under that Act—Q E v Clark 1898 P R 11 Q E v Kattayan

84 (1) When a warrant directed to a police officer is to be executed beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, he shall ordinarily take it for endorsement either to a Magistrate or to a police officer not below the rank of an officer in charge of a station, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed

Warrant directed to police-officer for execution outside jurisdiction

(2) Such Magistrate or police officer shall endorse his name thereon and such endorsement shall be sufficient authority to the police officer to whom the warrant is directed to execute the same within such limits, and the local police shall if so required assist such officer in executing such warrant

(3) Whenever there is reason to believe that the delay occasioned by obtaining the endorsement of the Magistrate or police officer within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed will prevent such execution the police officer to whom it is directed may execute the same without such endorsement in any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it

(4) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta

85 When a warrant of arrest is executed outside the district in which it was issued, the person arrested shall, unless the Court which issued the warrant is within twenty miles of the place of arrest or is nearer than the Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a presidency town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the arrest was made or unless security is taken under section 76, be taken before such Magistrate or Commissioner or District Superintendent

Procedure on arrest of person against whom warrant issued

86 (1) Such Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner shall, if the person arrested appears to be the person intended by the Court which issued the warrant, direct his removal in custody to such Court

Procedure by Magistrate before whom person arrested is brought

Provided that if the offence is bailable, and such person is ready and willing to give bail to the satisfaction of such Magistrate District Superintendent or Commissioner, or a direction has been endorsed under section 76 on the warrant and such person is ready and willing to give the security required by such direction the Magistrate District Superintendent or Commissioner shall take such bail or security, as the case may be and forward the bond to the Court which issued the warrant

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a police officer from taking security under section 76

C—Proclamation and Attachment

87 (1) If any Court has reason to believe (whether after taking evidence or not) that any person against whom a warrant has been issued by it has absconded or is concealing himself so that such warrant cannot be executed such Court may publish a written proclamation requiring him to appear at a specified place and at a specified time not less than thirty days from the date of publishing such proclamation

Proclamation for person absconding

(2) The proclamation shall be published as follows —

(a) it shall be publicly read in some conspicuous place of the town or village in which such person ordinarily resides;

(b) it shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which such person ordinarily resides or to some conspicuous place of such town or village and

(c) a copy thereof shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the Court house.

(3) A statement in writing by the Court issuing the proclamation to the effect that the proclamation was duly published on a specified day shall be conclusive evidence that the requirements of this section have been complied with, and that the proclamation was published on such day

162 Summons cases —This section read with section 88 shows that even in summons cases and as against witnesses a proclamation may be issued But to lay a foundation for the issue of a proclamation under this section with an accompanying order for attachment under Sec 88 it is necessary strictly to comply with the provisions of law relating to the issue of a warrant in a case where a summons is the ordinary mode of enforcing attendance—Yasin Khan v Emp 5 N L R 125 10 Cr L J 306

163 Conditions precedent to proclamation —The processes of attachment and proclamation are not to issue whenever a warrant fails of its effect Before issuing a proclamation the officer sent to serve the warrant must be examined as to the measures adopted by him to serve it If on his evidence or in any other manner the Magistrate is satisfied that the accused is absconding or concealing then and then only the processes of proclamation and attachment may be issued—Bislonath 3 W R 63 Sheudyal v Gribai 6 W R 73 K E v Po Ni 3 L B R 116 In re Ramkishore 19 W R 1 Yasin Khan v Emp 5 N L R 125

The previous issue of a warrant against the person whose attendance is required before the Court is a necessary condition Therefore if the Court has no authority or jurisdiction to issue a warrant an order for the issue of proclamation and a subsequent order for attachment are illegal—Kanwar Singh v Q L 1893 P R 15 In re Ramjibai 14 Bom L R 889 If a warrant is not served upon the accused the proclamation and subsequent order of attachment are illegal—Emp v Jiva Badhar 14 Bom L R 163 13 Cr L J 93

164 Absconding —The Magistrate must be satisfied that the accused was absconding or concealing himself for the purpose of avoiding the service of the warrant The mere fact that the Sub Inspector could not find the accused is not enough under this section—Sheudyal v Griban 6 W R 73 (74) Ram Kishore 19 W R 12 (13)

The term abscond does not necessarily imply change of place Its etymological and ordinary sense is to hide oneself and it matters not if a person departs from his place or remains in it if he conceals himself In either case he is said to abscond Moreover the term does not apply to the commencement of concealment If a person having concealed himself before process issues continues to do so after it is issued he is said to abscond—Srinivasa Ayyangar v Queen 4 Mad 393

To be deemed an absconder one need not be proclaimed as such under this section But an absent person should not be too readily assumed to be an absconder without due inquiry and notice—H C Proceedings, 2 Weir 40

A man who files a petition against an order issuing the warrant and takes steps to procure the order of a superior Court that he should be allowed to remain on bail after such warrant has been issued, cannot be said to be absconding or concealing himself, and a Magistrate is not justified in proceeding under this section—Qamardin v Emp, 1922 P L R 66, 23 Cr L J 454

165. Mode of publication —The procedure laid down in this section for the publication of the proclamation seems to indicate that it was the intention of the legislature that the accused person should have the means of deriving information through his friends or family, or in some other indirect way, when the warrant or the direct order to attend cannot be served upon him and that the Legislature has distinctly determined a sufficient time (30 days) to allow such indirect notice to reach him and for him to attend the Court in consequence of that notice—In re Ramkishore, 19 W R 12 (14 15)

The provisions of sub section (2) as to the mode of publishing a proclamation are perfectly clear and explicit in their terms, and failure to comply with the rules will vitiate the subsequent attachment and sale—Mian Jan v Abdul, 27 All 572 Where the provisions of clause (a) were not complied with at all, and although the provisions of clauses (b) and (c) were complied with, the proclamation did not specify a place and a time for the appearance of the absconder, held that the proclamation was not made according to law—Abdullah v Jitu, 22 All 216 (218), Abdul v Kazim, 1904 A W N 159 (cited in 27 All 572 at p 573)

But where the proclamation was made and was read and published in the places where the absconders were most likely to hear of them, but a copy was not affixed to the Court house, the flaw would in no way prejudice the proceedings, and would be cured by section 537—Malli v Crown, 1917 P R 39 18 Cr L J 979

The most important part of the publication is the publishing of the proclamation in the accused's place of residence, and it is from the date of such publication that the 30 days should be counted—Mala Singh v Emp, 1917 P R 6, 17 Cr L J 414 (416), Q E v Subbarayar, 19 Mad 3

Burden of proof—It is on the prosecution to prove that the proclamation was made in the manner prescribed by this section—In re Pandya Nayak, 7 Mad 436

166 Thirty days' time —The period of thirty days is to be counted not from the date of issuing the proclamation, but from the 'date of publishing such proclamation' i e from the date of the complete publication by doing all that is required under sub section (2) of this section—In re Ram Kishore, 19 W R 12 (14)

The rules prescribed by this section with regard to time and place are imperative, and if the date fixed for the appearance of the accused is less than 30 days from the date of publishing the proclamation, it is illegal and all subsequent proceedings (attachment and sale) will also be invalid and must be quashed—Emp v Multan Singh, 1919 P R 32, 21 Cr L J 210 Q E v Subbarayar, 19 Mad 3 In re Subba Naicken, 17 M L J 438

167. Disobedience to proclamation —An accused person against whom a proclamation has been issued must until he has surrendered, be regarded as in contempt and the Court will not entertain any application on his behalf. He must appear before the Magistrate and apply to him to be discharged on the ground that the warrant is informal or offer some explanation by way of purging his contempt, and at the same time application may be made for the release of his property It will then be the duty of the Magistrate to determine judicially whether the warrant was valid and when he has done so the person against whom and whose property the warrant was respectively issued may, if he be so advised apply for the revision of the proceedings—Q v Bisheshur, 2 N W P H C R 441 Q v Womesh Chandra, 5 W R 71

168 Statement in writing —When there is no endorsement or statement in writing made by the Court validating the proclamation, the proclamation is not made according to law and the subsequent attachment and sale are invalid—Mian Jan v Abdul 27 All 572, Abdulla v. Jitu 22 All 216 The Magistrate ought to take particular care to preserve the proclamation and there must be records in the Court to show that the formalities were strictly observed Where such records were lost (e g where neither the proclamation nor its copy was forth coming) the High Court set aside the proclamation and attachment and restored the property to the owner—Emp v Jina Badhar 14 Bom L R 163, 13 Cr L J 293 See also Sheudyal v Griban 6 W R 73

The statement in writing should state clearly that the proclamation was duly published and should also mention the date of publishing the proclamation Where the validating order merely stated that the proclamation was duly published, but omitted to specify the date of the publication held that it could not be considered as a conclusive evidence that the requirements of Sec 87 had been complied with—Emp v Multan Singh 1919 P R 32 21 Cr L J 210

Attachment of property of person absconding.

88. (1) The Court issuing a proclamation under section 87 may at any time order the attachment of any property, moveable or immoveable, or both, belonging to the proclaimed person.

(2) Such order shall authorize the attachment of any property belonging to such person within the district in which it is made; and it shall authorize the attachment of any property belonging to such person without such district when endorsed by the Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within whose district such property is situate.

(3) If the property ordered to be attached is a debt or other moveable property, the attachment under this section shall be made—

(a) by seizure, or

(b) by the appointment of a receiver, or

(c) by an order in writing prohibiting the delivery of such property to the proclaimed person or to any one on his behalf, or

(d) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit.

(4) If the property ordered to be attached is immoveable, the attachment under this section shall, in the case of lands paying revenue to Government, be made through the Collector of the district in which the land is situate, and in all other cases—

(e) by taking possession, or

(f) by the appointment of a receiver, or

(g) by an order in writing prohibiting the payment of rent or delivery of property to the proclaimed person or to any one on his behalf, or

(h) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit

(5) If the property ordered to be attached consists of livestock or is of a perishable nature, the Court may, if it thinks it expedient, order immediate sale thereof, and in such case the proceeds of the sale shall abide the order of the Court.

(6) The powers, duties and liabilities of a receiver appointed under this section shall be the same as those of a receiver appointed under Chapter XXXVI of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882

(6A) If any claim is preferred to, or objection made to the attachment of, any property attached under this section within six months from the date of such

ment by any person other than the proclaimed person, on the ground that the claimant or objector has an interest in such property, and that such interest is not liable to attachment under this section, the claim or objection shall be inquired into, and may be allowed or disallowed in whole or in part

Provided that any claim preferred or objection made within the period allowed by this sub section may, in the event of the death of the claimant or objector be continued by his legal representative

(6B) Claims or objections under sub section (6A) may be preferred or made in the Court by which the order of attachment is issued or if the claim or objection is in respect of property attached under an order endorsed by a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate in accordance with the provisions of sub section (2), in the Court of such Magistrate

(6C) Every such claim or objection shall be inquired into by the Court in which it is preferred or made

Provided that if it is preferred or made in the Court of a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate, such Magistrate may make it over for disposal to any Magistrate of the first or second class or to any Presidency Magistrate as the case may be, subordinate to him

(6D) Any person whose claim or objection has been disallowed in whole or in part by an order under sub section (6A) may, within a period of one year from the date of such order institute a suit to establish the right which he claims in respect of the property in dispute; but subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive

(6E) If the proclaimed person appears within the time specified in the proclamation, the Court shall make an order releasing the property from the attachment

(7) If the proclaimed person does not appear within the time specified in the proclamation the property under attachment shall be at the disposal of Government, but it shall not be sold until the expiration of six months from the date of the attachment and until any claim preferred or objection made under sub section (6A) has been disposed of under that sub section unless it is subject to speedy and natural decay or the Court considers that the sale would be for the benefit of the owner in either of which cases the Court may cause it to be sold whenever it thinks fit

Change —Sub sections 6A to 6F and the italicised words in sub section (7) have been added by Sec 13 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The reasons are stated below in their proper places

169 Proclamation and attachment —Having regard to the words at any time a Magistrate may issue a simultaneous order of proclamation (under Sec 87) and attachment (under this section)—Bhai Lal v Emperor 29 Cal 417 Since the object of attachment is to enforce the appearance of the absconder the attachment must immediately follow the proclamation and it is unnecessary or even illegal to wait till the time specified in the proclamation has run out and then to order attachment because the proclamation has not been obeyed—Empress v Mulchand Pemraj 6 C P L R 38

170 Property —The words of the section order the attachment of any property moveable or immoveable are enabling and not restrictive so that the Court may attach both kinds of property—H C Proceedings 4 M H C R App 48

But the Magistrate has no power to order the attachment of any property that does not belong to the absconder He should be most careful not to interfere with or disturb the rights of third persons—Queen v Kissoree Pater 7 W R 35

The Lahore High Court holds that with regard to ancestral lands all that can be attached is the interest of the absconder and on his death the lands must be released in favour of his heirs—Shah Muhammad v Crown 7 Lah L J 40 26 Cr L J 1148 26 P L R 395 See also Sadhu Singh v Secretary of State 1908 P R 18 and Nianat Ali v Secretary of State 1915 P R 52 But according to the Madras High Court the undivided property of a coparcener of a joint Hindu family cannot be attached and sold under this section because his interest cannot be ascertained—In re Chinnasa 2 Weir 43, Contra—2 Weir 43 (Footnote),

The unascertained share of a partner in the assets of the partnership which were then in the hands of a Receiver under a winding up order was not attachable such share not being property belonging to the defendant —Abbott v Abbott 5 B L R 382 But the share of a judgment debtor in partnership with another person who alone was in possession of the property at the time of attachment was liable to attachment but the attachment must be by prohibitory order and not by actual seizure—Thama Singh v Kalidas 5 B L R 386

171. Subsection (6A)—Claims of third parties.—Before the addition of this sub section by the Amendment Act of 1923, it was held in a number of cases that Secs 88 and 89 did not provide for the investigation by a Magistrate of the claims of third parties whose property had been attached as the property of the accused, the remedy of the claimant was by way of a civil suit, as the question was one more for the Civil Court than for the Magistrate—Q E v Sheodihal, 6 All 487; Queen v Kissoree Pater, 7 W R 35, Su We v K E, 4 L B R 109, Q E v Kandappa Goundan, 20 Mad 88, Emp v Gaman, 1911 P R 8 These rulings are now rendered obsolete by the new sub section 6A which provides for the investigation by the Magistrate of claims and objections preferred by third parties

The proviso to the sub section provides for the continuance of proceedings by the legal representative of a claimant or objector who may die pending the inquiry into his claim or objection

Subsection (6B) —"We have provided for the case of claims to property in another district from that in which the order of attachment was made"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

Subsection (6C):—"The sub sections which the Bill adds to section 88 imply that the Court which issues an order of attachment or endorses the same under sub section (2) is to investigate and determine a claim or objection We think that a limited power to transfer claims and objections for disposal to subordinate Magistrates would be useful, and we have therefore provided that the District Magistrates may transfer such cases to Magistrates not below the rank of second class Magistrates, and that Chief Presidency Magistrates may likewise transfer cases to Presidency Magistrates subordinate to them —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

172. Subsection (6D) —"We have provided a period of limitation within which proceedings in a Civil Court to establish a claim which has been disallowed by a Magistrate, must be instituted"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916 The language of this sub section may be compared with that of O XXI, rule 63, C P Code

A civil suit is maintainable by the real owner against the Government and the person at whose instance the criminal proceedings were instituted, to recover possession of the property attached, with mesne profits and damages done to the property while it was at the disposal of the Government—Secretary of State v Jagat Mohini, 28 Cal 540.

173. No revision of order passed on a claim.—It was held in Q E v. Sheodihal, 6 All 487, Queen v Kissoree Pater, 7 W. R. 35, Abdulla v. Jitu, 22 All 216, and Q E v Kandappa Goundan, 20 Mad 88 that since the Code did not contain any provisions for the investigation of claims of third parties to the attached property, the orders of Magistrates passed on claims of third parties were not 'judicial proceedings' and therefore they were not open to revision under Secs 435 439 of the Code.

Under the present law also, though the claim proceeding held by the

Magistrate would be a judicial proceeding still the Magistrate's order in such a proceeding is not liable to revision because the words subject to to the result of such suit if any the order shall be conclusive show that the order is not liable to be contested in appeal or revision

Subsection (6E) —Release of property —This subsection did not exist in the Bills or Reports but was added (on the motion of Mr Rangachariar) during the debate in the Legislative Assembly

The reasons have been thus stated by the mover of the amendment The object of the proclamation and attachment is a compulsory process to compel the party to appear in obedience to the summons or warrant of the Court and there is no provision here ordering the release of property from attachment in case he complies with the condition contained in the proclamation This is a slip I take it Whereas section 89 provides that if within two years from the date of attachment any person whose property is at the disposal of Government appears and shows that he had sufficient cause for not appearing then the property shall be restored to him but if he appears within the time limited in the proclamation there is no provision ordering the release of attachment An attachment has got some legal effects as Honourable members are aware It prohibits the party from alienating the property It prohibits the Civil Court from attaching the same property over again and various other complications do arise Therefore it is necessary that once the condition on which the attachment has been made is fulfilled the attachment should cease ipso facto —Legislative Assembly Debates January 17 1923 page 1199

The High Court can interfere in revision with an order passed by a Magistrate refusing to release the property from attachment—Santa Singh v Emp 25 Cr L J 82 (Lah)

174 Subsection (7)—Property shall be at the disposal of Government —The attached property shall be declared to be at the disposal of the Government if the accused does not appear within the time fixed in the proclamation and it is for the accused if he appears at any time within two years of the attachment to satisfy the Magistrate that he had not been avoiding the process of the Court—In re Bishonath 3 W R 63

The mere seizure of property of an absconder by the police does not confer any right on the Government unless and until proceedings are taken under secs 87 and 88 of this Code Therefore where the Police seized certain property of an absconder in August 1911 but no proceedings were taken under secs 87 and 88 until December an attachment of the property in October 1911 made by a creditor of the absconder in a civil suit would prevail and the refusal of the Magistrate to hand over the property in obedience to the order of the Civil Court was held to be wrong —Subramanyam v K E 6 L B R 57 13 Cr L J 568 But when proceedings have been taken under these sections and the property has been at the disposal of the Government no title can be conferred by an attachment and sale subsequently made in execution of a money decree by the Civil Court—Golam Abed v Toolseeram 9 Cal 861

When the property has been declared to be at the disposal of the Government the title of the accused to the property is put an end to the Government can regrant the property (which consists of vatan lands) to some other person such grant does not confer on the accused any right to institute a suit to recover the property from such person—Dattaji v Narayan 25 Bom L R 728 A I R 1923 Bom 198

Time —The law does not lay down any express time when the order of forfeiture should be made if by mistake it has not been passed before the accused appears it may be passed after he has appeared if he does not satisfy the Court that he has not been evading justice—Bishonath Sircar 3 W R 63 But it has been held in In re Ramkishore 19 W R 1^ (14) that if an order of forfeiture has not been made before the person has come in or has been brought in it ought not to be made at all after he has appeared because by that time its purpose has been effected though even possibly by other means than that of the process that was evaded

Irregularity —An order of forfeiture under this section if in substance quite legal cannot be disturbed on the ground of an irregularity in procedure—Baiju Baul v Gajun 8 W R 61

Power to restore property —Property which has been declared to be at the disposal of the Government can be restored to its owner only by the Government and not by the Court—Government of Bengal v Mir Sarwarjan 18 W R 33 even the High Court has no power to make any order with respect to that property—Government of Bengal Petitioner 9 B L R 342

175 Sale —Where the land was subject to a lease the sale should be subject to the right of the lessees to remain in possession until the expiry of the lease—Ham Das v King Emperor 1908 P R 9

Sale of revenue paying land should be done by the Collector and the procedure laid down in the C P Code for execution sale should be strictly followed See Cal G R and C O p 6

176 Setting aside of sale —Where the publication of the proclamation was not in accordance with law and the accused applied in revision to have the sale set aside and to have the purchase money refunded to the purchasers held that whatever irregularities there might have been in the publication of the proclamation when a sale has taken place and the purchasers have acquired some sort of title it is not open to the High Court in exercising its revisional power to pass an order affecting the title of persons (purchasers) who are strangers to the legal proceedings in which the order is made—Abdulla v Jitu 22 All 216 But the accused can institute a suit in a Civil Court for setting aside the sale and for recovery of his property from the purchaser if it turns out that the proclamation was illegal —Abdul v Kazim 1904 A W N 159 (cited in 27 All 572 at p 574) Mia Jan v Abdul 27 All 572

89 If, within two years from the date of the attachment, any person whose property is or has been at the disposal of Government under sub-section (7) of section 88, appears voluntarily or is apprehended and brought before the Court by whose order the property was attached or the Court to which such Court is subordinate, and proves to the satisfaction of such Court that he did not abscond or conceal himself for the purpose of avoiding execution of the warrant, and that he had not such notice of the proclamation as to enable him to attend within the time specified therein, such property, or, if the same has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale, or, if part only thereof has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale and the residue of the property, shall, after satisfying thereout all costs incurred in consequence of the attachment, be delivered to him

Restoration of attached property

177 Scope —This section does not apply where the proclamation and attachment are invalid It prescribes a remedy where there has been a good and legal publication of proclamation under sec 87 but offers no facility for the contesting of the legality of the proclamation In the latter case the person aggrieved has his remedy by a civil suit—Abdulla v Jitu 22 All 216 (218) Abdul v Karim 1904 A W N 159 Mala Singh v Emp 1917 P R 6 17 Cr L J 414 (417)

But in two other cases the Punjab Chief Court has held that it cannot be said that the person aggrieved by an illegal attachment has no remedy except by a civil suit for the Chief Court has revisional powers which it would employ to annul such an attachment—Malli v Emp 1917 P R 39 18 Cr L J 979 (disapproving Mala Singh v Emp 1917 P R 6) Emp v Multan Singh 1919 P R 32 21 Cr L J 210

178 Two years —An application under section 89 not made within two years from the date of attachment is not entertainable—Mala Singh v Emp 1917 P R 6

And proves etc —The phrase within two years qualifies not only the word appears but also the word proves therefore it is not enough that the accused person appears within two years it is also necessary that the proof that the accused has not been absconding should be offered within two years—In re Nilkanth 15 Bom L R 175 14 Cr L J 237 Buta Singh v Emp 27 Cr L J 1025 (1026) (Lah)

In order that the applicant may have the property restored to him it is necessary for him to show both that he had not absconded and that he had not proper notice it is not sufficient to show merely that he did not abscond—Buta Singh v Emp 27 Cr L J 1025 (1026) 27 P L R 825

der who appears within two years from the attachment of his property should not be carried into effect until after a regular inquiry into the cause of the offender s absence—In re Bishonath 3 W R 63

179 Restoration of property —For the purpose of this section it is not necessary that the absconding accused should himself personally apply for the restoration of the property the application can be made by any one on his behalf But it is essential that the absconding accused should appear and prove the facts required viz that he did not abscond or conceal himself for the purpose of avoiding the arrest and that he had not notice of the proclamation—In re Vithanath 15 Bom I R 175 14 Cr I J 237

A Magistrate s direction to his subordinate to write to the Collector and authorise the taking off of a certain attachment will amount to an order releasing the property from attachment—Jhundoo Singh 5 W R 8

After the sale of the property of an absconding accused if an application by him for restoration is allowed all that he can get is the nett sale proceeds and not the property itself—Emp v Faizaldad 24 Cr L J 573 (Lah)

Where land is attached regarding which no warrant has been issued the High Court may in the exercise of its inherent powers to rectify a grave irregularity under the provisions of section 530 (a) read with sec 439 release the property from attachment where it cannot do so under the strict provisions of section 89—B ti Singh v Emp 7 P I R 85 27 Cr I J 10 5 (10 6)

180 No Civil suit —Where the accused did not appear within two years of the attachment and the property was ordered to be sold no civil action could lie to set aside the sale—Mirza Zouad Ali v Hasset Bibee 8 W R 207 (civil)

Appeal —An order refusing restoration of property is appealable see sec 405

D—Other Rules regarding Processes

Issue of warrant in lieu of, or in addition to summons

90 A Court may, in any case in which it is empowered by this Code to issue a summons for the appearance of any person other than a juror or assessor, issue, after recording its reasons in writing, a warrant for his arrest—

(a) if, either before the issue of such summons, or after the issue of the same but before the time fixed for his appearance, the Court sees reason to believe that he had absconded or will not obey the summons , or

(b) if at such time he fails to appear and the summons is proved to have been duly served in time to admit of his appearing in accordance therewith, and no reasonable excuse is offered for such failure

181 Scope —This section applies to witnesses as well as to the accused But witnesses brought up under arrest should be dealt with not as criminals but simply as persons arrested on civil process Cal G R & C O p 7

This section empowers the Court to issue a warrant only in cases in which it is empowered to issue summons and not in a case in which it has no power to issue the latter Therefore where no case is found against the accused and he is discharged by a Magistrate under sec 253 it is not in the power of the District Magistrate to issue a warrant for his arrest for a retrial until the order of discharge is set aside and the case is taken to his own file—Kanwar Singh v Q E 1893 P R 15

182 Recording of reasons —A Magistrate ought not to issue a warrant either in lieu of or in addition to summons in a summons case, unless he has previously recorded his reasons for so doing—Yasin Khan v Emp 5 N L R 15 10 Cr L J 306 Q E v Anant Pershad O S C 99 Beli Singh v Emperor 1918 P L R 30 19 Cr L J 443 Where an accused person has been let out on his own bond a warrant issued under this section without recording reasons is illegal The recording of reasons is a necessary preliminary to the issue of a warrant and omission to do so vitiates the warrant such omission cannot be overlooked and cannot be cured by sec 537—Re Karuthan Ambalam 38 Mad 1088 17 Cr L J 132 In Mahar Singh v Emp 18 A L J 1149 22 Cr L J 111 the omission by the Magistrate to record reasons for the issue of a warrant in the first instance was held by the Allahabad High Court to be a mere irregularity and not an illegality

The Calcutta High Court also holds that the provisions as regards the recording of reasons are merely directory and not mandatory Therefore in a case in which the Magistrate had materials before him sufficient to justify the issue of a warrant and to which the Magistrate did apply his judicial discretion and the warrant was good and valid on the face of it and the Magistrate stated in the warrant the reasons upon which he relied the warrant was not invalid by reason of the fact that the Magistrate omitted to record separately in his order sheet the reasons which actuated him in issuing the warrant—Govt of Assam v Sahebulla 51 Cal 1 (F B) 27 C W N 857 24 Cr L J 881 (overruling Sukheshar Phukan v Emp 38 Cal 789) Magistrates should record their reasons specifically in writing in the warrant (though not necessarily in the order sheet) before issuing the warrant, and should not be satisfied with merely signing their names to warrants in the form given in the schedule—51 Cal 1 (at p 21)

183 Issue of warrant in the first instance—Grounds —In the absence of special grounds mentioned in this section the Court ought to issue a summons—Yasin v Emp, 5 N L R 125, K E v Po Nt, 3 L B R 116 Great care should be taken that a warrant which implies personal arrest and restraint never goes forth when a summons to attend would be sufficient for the ends of justice, and any attempt to coerce or restrain a party who has been summoned only should be checked and punished—Punj Cir, Chap XLI, p 144

A warrant cannot be issued to enforce the attendance of a witness unless the Magistrate is first satisfied that the witness will disobey or has disobeyed the summons served on him—Sutherland, 14 W. R 20, or unless he believes that the witness will not give evidence voluntarily—In re Bourke, 13 W R 1 or unless it is proved that summons has been duly served, and inspite of it the witness did not appear—In re Abdoor Rahman, 7 W. R 37 King Emp v Po Nt, 3 L B. R 116

Where in proceedings under section 498 I P C the complainant stated on oath that a warrant should be issued for the attendance of the abducted woman, or else the accused would remove the woman from their house, held that the Magistrate was justified in issuing a warrant for the arrest of the woman—Mahar Singh v Emp 18 A L J 1149, 22 Cr L J. 111.

184. Clause (b)—Proof of service of summons —A warrant ought not to issue unless due service of summons is proved But a report by the station writer that he served the summons is no evidence of service of summons under clause (b) of this section—K E v Po Nt, 3 L B R 116

Bail —A Magistrate is competent to admit to bail a recalcitrant witness arrested under this section—H C Proceedings 2 Weir 39

Power to take bond for appearance

91. When any person, for whose appearance or arrest the officer presiding in any Court is empowered to issue a summons or warrant, is present in such Court, such officer may require such person to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his appearance in such Court

185. Bond by Mukhtear —A bond by a mukhtear by which he undertook to produce a witness when called upon was held to be sufficient, although no security for appearance had been taken from the witness herself—Q E v Kazim Husain, 1901 A W N 35

Power to lock up,—Even though a Magistrate may suspect that the witness who is present may in future be kept out of the way by the accused, still it will not justify the Magistrate in arresting the witness and placing her in the lock up—Ibid

Arrest on breach of bond for appearance.

92. When any person who is bound by any bond taken under this Code to appear before a Court, does not so appear, the officer presiding in such Court may issue a warrant directing that such person be arrested and produced before him

186 Scope —Sec 9 1 as reference to the case of a person who is bound by a bond to appear in Court It provides for a warrant only in case the person does not appear at the time when he is bound by the bond to appear and does not apply to a case where prior to the time for appearance arrest by warrant is sought to be effected Such a case falls under sec 90—Re Karuthan Ambalam 38 Mad 1088 17 Cr L J 132

A —Summons to produce

Summons to produce document or other thing

94 (1) Whenever any Court or in any place beyond the limits of the towns of Calcutta and Bombay, any officer in charge of a police station, con

by or before such Court or officer, such Court may issue a summons, or such officer a written order, to the person in whose possession or power such document or thing is believed to be, requiring him to attend and produce it or to produce it at the time and place stated in the summons or order

(2) Any person required under this section merely to produce a document or other thing shall be deemed to have complied with the requisition if he causes such document or thing to be produced instead of attending personally to produce the same

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, sections 123 and 124, or to apply to a letter, postcard, telegram or other document or any parcel or thing in the custody of the Postal or Telegraph authorities,

187. Court —It was held in Brojendra Kishore v Clarke 12 C W N 973, Clarke v Brojendra Kishore, 36 Cal 133 and In re Harilal, 22 Bom 949 that if there were no proceedings pending before a Magistrate he was not a Court' within the meaning of this section and could not issue an order under sec 94 or 96 But the Privy Council in the case of Clarke v Brojendra Kishore, 39 Cal 953 (at p 966) has laid down that the words 'Court' and "Magistrate" are convertible terms, and that Sch V, Form VIII contemplates the issue of a search warrant before any proceedings are initiated, and in view of an inquiry to be made

188 Document —This section deals with documents forming the subject of a criminal offence as also with documents which are or can be used only as evidence in support of a prosecution—In re Lakhmidas 5 Bom L R 980 The words document or thing' are general and seem to cover any document the production and inspection of which are necessary or desirable or will serve the ends of justice When the premises to be searched are those of the accused person, the warrant issued under sec 96 need not be only for the document or thing in respect of which an alleged offence has been committed—Municipal Committee Jhang v Md Hayat, 1914 P R 36, 16 Cr L J 225

The document or thing must be clearly specified see Prankhan v King Emp, 16 C W N 1078

189. Necessary or desirable —Before the Magistrate can order for the production of any document he must judicially consider whether the production of the document is necessary or relevant for the purpose of the trial—In re Lakhmi Das, 5 Bom L R 980 The Magistrate cannot call for anything and everything from anybody and everybody The document or thing called for must have some relation to or connecpunished for the non production of a document, it is necessary to show that its production was material for the decision of the case in which the document was called for—Damri Ram v Emp, 4 P L W 65, 19 Cr L J 217 A document is a necessary document even though it is neces sary as a mere piece of evidence only—In re Lakhmi Das 5 Bom L R 980 It may be that the thing called for may turn out to be wholly irrelevant to the inquiry but so long as it is considered to be necessary or desirable for the purpose of the inquiry the power is there—Nizam of Hyderabad v Jacob 19 Cal 52

Whether the documents are necessary for the inquiry is a matter to be decided by the Magistrate at the time of issuing a summons under this section or a search warrant under sec 96—Mahomed Jackariah v Ahmed Mahomed 15 Cal 109 In a murder case the accused has a right to a copy of the statements made by the witnesses at the inquest inquiry and if the record of the inquest proceeding is not in the Court the Magistrate has power under this section to call for it to be produced by the Police—In re Chanlet 20 L W 745 26 Cr L J 4 6

190 Person in possession —The person called upon to produce need not be a party to the proceedings The Magistrate can order the production of things in the possession of the solicitor—Nizam v Jacob 19 Cal 52

Person whether includes accused —The provisions of this section apply to an accused and it is competent for the Magistrate to issue summons to an accused to produce a document or other thing (e g a stolen article) the production of which might incriminate him—Konda Reddi v Emperor 37 Mad 112 13 Cr L J 493 Mahomed Jackariah v Ahmed 15 Cal 109 Nizam v Jacob 19 Cal 52 The Magistrate has the power of issuing a search warrant under sec 96 to obtain documents in possession of the accused (Bisser Missar v Emp 41 Cal 261) and the issue of summons is a milder means of attaining the same end—Konda Reddi v Emp 37 Mad 112 Contra—Ishwar Chandra v Emp 12 C W N 1016 and Bajrangi Gope v Emp 38 Cal 304 15 C W N 343 where it is held that this section does not refer to stolen articles or to any incriminating document or things in the possession of an accused person

191 Order for production —The order for production must be made on sufficient materials Where a complaint was made against a certain person before the Chief Presidency Magistrate who examined the complainant and directed a local investigation and an application was made thereafter by the complainant for summons under this section and was granted by the Court after his further examination thereon held that there were sufficient materials on which an order under this section could properly be made and that it was properly made—T R Pratt v King Emp 47 Cal 647 24 C W N 410 1 Cr L J 577

Inspection —The jurisdiction of the Magistrate to order the production of a document or thing carries with it the jurisdiction to allow the prosecution the right of inspection But the Magistrate can order for production in Court he cannot allow the prosecution to inspect the entries in the account book kept by the accused in his solicitor s office They must be first produced in Court where they can be inspected—In re Lakhmidas 5 Bom L R 978, 980

Putting it in evidence —On production of a document the accused has no right to insist upon the prosecution putting it in evidence The prosecution is entitled to determine whether it is to be put in evidence or not—Mahomed Jackariah v Ahmed, 15 Cal 109, In re Lakhmi Das, 5 Bom. L R 980

Security for production —Where a Magistrate thinks that there are articles in a person's possession, the production of which is necessary, he can issue a summons under this section or a search warrant under sec 96, there is no section to enable him to demand security from the person for the production of the articles when required, instead of issuing a summons under sec 94 or a warrant under sec 96—Purna Chandra v Shasi Bhusan, 7 C W N 522 But after a warrant has been issued against a person for the search of certain articles in his premises, if such person offers an undertaking to produce the articles before the Court whenever required, the Magistrate may stay execution of the warrant conditionally on the execution of the bond by such person for production of the articles in Court whenever called upon—Kishori Mohan v Hari Das, 47 Cal 164, 21 Cr L J 391

Lien —The mere fact that the person in possession of the articles has a lien over them does not affect the power of the Magistrate to order their production—Nizam of Hyderabad v Jacob, 19 Cal 52

Punishment —Omission to produce the document or thing is punishable under sec 175 I P C

Procedure as to letters and telegrams.

95. (1) If any document, parcel or thing in such custody is, in the opinion of any District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate, High Court or Court of Session, wanted for the purpose of any investigation, inquiry, trial, or other proceeding under this Code, such Magistrate or Court may require the Postal or Telegraph authorities as the case may be, to deliver such document, parcel or thing to such person as such Magistrate or Court directs

(2) If any such document, parcel or thing is, in the opinion of any other Magistrate or of any Commissioner of Police or District Superintendent of Police, wanted for any such purpose, he may require the Postal or Telegraph Department as the case may be, to cause search to be made for and to detain such document, parcel or thing pending the orders of any such District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate or Court.

192 Production of Post office records before Courts —The attention of all Civil and Criminal Courts in the Provinces of Bengal and Eastern Bengal and Assam is invited to the following departmental instructions which the Director General of Post Office, with the approval of the Government of India, has issued for the guidance of Postmasters on the subject of the production of Post Office Records before Court —

A summons from a Court of Civil or Criminal jurisdiction to produce any of the records of a Post Office or a certified extract from or copy of any such records must be complied with The receipt of such a summons and such particulars as are known to the Post Master regarding the case should be at once reported to the Post Master General in case he should see fit to raise any objection in Court under secs 123 and 124 of the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) to the production of any of the records When any journal or other record of a Post Office is produced in Court and admitted in evidence the Officer producing it shall ask the Court to direct that only such portions of the record as may be required by the Court shall be disclosed —Cal G R and C O p 7

B —Search warrants

96 (1) Where any Court has reason to believe that a person to whom a summons or order under section 94 or a requisition under section 95, sub section (1), has been or might be addressed will not or would not produce the document or thing as required by such summons or requisition

When search warrant may be issued or where such document or thing is not known to the Court to be in the possession of any person or where the Court considers that the purposes of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code will be served by a general search or inspection, it may issue a search warrant, and the person to whom such warrant is directed may search or inspect in accordance therewith and the provisions hereinafter contained

(2) Nothing herein contained shall authorize any Magistrate other than a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate to grant a warrant to search for a document, parcel or other thing in the custody of the Postal or Telegraph authorities

193 Conditions precedent—Duty of Magistrate —

(a) Before issuing the search warrant the Magistrate must have before him some information or evidence that the document is necessary *

desirable for the purposes of the inquiry before him—Moideen Brothers v Eng Thaung 9 L B R 45 10 Bur L T 216

(b) The Court issuing the search warrant must have reason to believe that the person against whom the search warrant is issued is not likely to produce the document or thing in his possession in pursuance of a mere summons or order under section 94 or a requisition under section 95 (1) of this Code—In re Manekji Sorabji 5 Bom L R 1030 The issue of a search warrant is a judicial act and it is the duty of the Magistrate before issuing such warrant to satisfy himself by inquiry that summons may not have the desired effect Where without such inquiry the Magistrate issued a search warrant on the mere application of the complainant the order was ultra vires—Iyaroo Chetty v Jehangir 1917 M W N 494 18 Cr L J 837 Piyare Lal v Thakur Dat 1916 P W R 12 17 Cr L J 60

(c) A search warrant ought to be issued only after judicial inquiry and on proper materials—Mahomed Jackariah v Ahmed 15 Cal 109 Queen v Syud Hossain Ali 8 W R 74 In re Harilal 22 Bom 949 Rash Behary v Emperor 35 Cal 1076 Of course it is not obligatory on a Magistrate to wait until a preliminary inquiry is held and all the witnesses for the prosecution are examined and cross examined the Magistrate is entitled to act upon information which he considers credible provided that there is a complaint before him and the complainant is examined by him on oath or solemn affirmation—Q E v Mahant of Tirupati 13 Mad 18 In re Sinnagirunatha Pillai 1910 M W N 818 8 M L T 416 If a complaint is laid before a Magistrate a search warrant issued on the complaint without examining the complainant is irregular If the Magistrate is about to issue a search warrant on the strength of information as distinguished from a complaint the Court should if feasible examine the informant on oath and if evidence cannot be taken on oath the Court should act with a due appreciation of the fact that it is taking upon itself the responsibility of issuing upon the basis of that information an order of a very serious nature involving the invasion and search of a man s house—Mulchand v K E 8 A L J 51 The statement of a counsel who is appearing for the prosecuting complainant is not information on which a Magistrate is entitled to issue a search warrant—S A L J 517 A telegram received by the Police is not a good ground for issuing a search warrant—In re Hari Lal 22 Bom 949

The provision of the law requiring the sanction of a Magistrate before the issue of a search warrant means that the Magistrate should apply his mind to the facts and ought not to issue a search warrant simply because a Police officer asks him to do so When there is no inquiry or trial or other proceeding under the Code a general search warrant cannot be issued under this section Thus in the course of an investi [illegible]

tion with the dealings with the Munitions Board and praying for a search warrant against the firm of one T R Pratt There was nothing in the petition to connect T R Pratt with those offences It was held that there were no materials before the Magistrate on which he could decide that a search warrant should be issued—T R Pratt v Emp 47 Cal 597 21 Cr L J 313 24 C W N 403 An order under this section can not be made to further a police investigation which may or may not result in an inquiry The Magistrate is to form his own opinion upon the materials placed before him He is not relieved from his duty by stating that he believed that the officer holding the investigation for the purposes of which the documents or things were required had formed a correct opinion—Jagannath v Emp 24 C W N 405 21 Cr L J 573

Record —Although there is no express provision requiring the Magistrate to make a record or keep notes of the examination of the person on whose application he issues the search warrant still some record ought to be kept to enable the High Court to form an opinion as regards the materials upon which the Magistrate acted—Jagannath v Emp 24 C W N 405 21 Cr L J 573

194 Court —It means Magistrate Court and Magistrate are convertible terms and it is not necessary that the Magistrate in order to issue a search warrant should sit as a Court or that some proceeding should have been initiated before him—Clarke v Brojendra Kishore 39 Cal 953 at p 966 (P C) overruling Clarke v Brajendra Kishore 36 Cal 433

195 Person —The word person includes the accused—Municipal Committee Jhang v Muhammad Hayat 1914 P R 36 16 Cr L J 25 A search can be made for a stolen article or incriminating document in the possession of the accused person—Bissar Misser v Emp, 41 Cal 61 See Note 190 under sec 94

196 Who can make the search —The Magistrate who is competent to issue a search warrant is also competent to conduct the search himself see sec 105 Emp v Curesh 1884 A W N 213 Clarke v Brojendra Kishore 36 Cal 433 on appeal 39 Cal 953 (P C)

197 Only specific articles can be searched —The search must be for a specific article or thing and not for stolen property generally—Bissar Misser v Emperor 41 Cal 61 17 C W N 1209 The law does not authorise a search for anything but specified articles which have been or can be made the subject of summons or warrant to produce—Fran Khan v Emperor 16 C W N 1078 13 Cr L J 764 Moideen Brothers v Ptg Thaung 9 L B R 45

A search ought not to be conducted for fishing out evidence This section contemplates the production of a specified or distinct thing which may be deemed essential for the conduct of the inquiry and the conviction of the accused and for that purpose a specified house or place may be searched It does not empower police officers or other underlings to make harassing domiciliary visits to inquire into the private concern of individuals and to seize any papers under the bare chance of findi something tending to conviction—Queen v Synd Hossain, 8 W. R 74; Moideen Brothers v Eng Thaung, 9 L B R 45, 17 Cr L J 543 Therefore, where a Magistrate issued a search warrant for the search and seizure of all letter-books, letters, bills and books of account in a man's house for the purpose of inquiry as to whether he had used or sold articles with a counterfeit trade mark, it was held that the issue of such a search warrant was a gross perversion of the law—Moideen Brothers v. Eng Thaung, 9 L B R 45, Piyare Lal v Thakur Dat, 17 Cr L. J. 60

198. Extent of search —In taking action under this section, the Court is authorised to go as far as is physically possible in the search The accused can perhaps defeat the Court by concealing or destroying the document or by having it concealed or destroyed, taking of course the consequences of such action, just as the accused in the dock can, when questioned under sec 342, thwart the Court in its search for truth by answering falsely or refusing to answer But the mere fact that the accused can so defeat or thwart the Court is no reason for holding that the Court is debarred from going as far as the section specifically allows—Municipal Committee, Jhang v Muhammad Hayat, 1914 P R 36, 16 Cr L J. 225 The Magistrate has power to issue a search warrant for the production of copies of the infringing book, proofs, plates, printed and set up matters, together with letters and orders with reference to the book, for the purpose of making an order under section 10 of the Copyright Act—Kishori Mohan v Hari Das, 47 Cal 164, 21 Cr L J 391

199. Miscellaneous —Taking possession —Power to search given by this section includes also the power to take possession of the document or thing—Mahmed Jakaria v Ahmed Mahomee, 15 Cal 109 In re Bhanji, Ratanlal 677.

Inspection —When documents and other things seized upon the premises of an accused by virtue of a search warrant are brought before the Court, the Magistrate would have the power to allow the prosecution an inspection thereof They stand, when they are brought to the Court, precisely in the same position as documents or things found upon the person of a prisoner at the time of his arrest—Mahomed Jackaria v Ahmed, 15 Cal 109 In re Lakhmi Das, 5 Bom L R 980, but he is not entitled to examine it all, e g in case of account books, the Court should restrict the examination to the particular book or portions of the book relating to the subject matter under inquiry or trial—Mahomed Jackaria v. Ahmed, 15 Cal 109

Seizure without search warrant —An order of the Magistrate to seize certain account books without issuing a summons under Sec 94 or warrant under this section is illegal—Hari Charan v. Girish, 38 Cal 68.

Search warrant when to be executed —A search warrant should be executed between sunrise and sunset If for special reasons it is executed between sunset and sunrise, such reasons must be reported to the D S P. for the information of the Magistrate—Bengal Police Manual, 2nd Ed, p 402.

Issue of search warrant must be prompt —Where in a case of criminal trespass and theft, the complainant at the time of applying for process prayed for the issue of a search warrant, but the Magistrate after repeated applications made an order for the issue of warrant more than three weeks after, it was held that although the procedure was not contrary to the actual letter of sections 96 and 98, still it was so dilatory that it could only tend to defeat the very object for which such a warrant was issued—Bilas v Ram Gopal, 22 C W N 719, 19 Cr L J 707

200. Stay of execution of warrant on security —Where the person against whom a search warrant was issued prays for the stay thereof and offers an undertaking not to sell copies of the infringing book but to produce them before the Court whenever required, the Magistrate has jurisdiction to stay execution of the warrant conditionally on the execution of a bond to produce the copies in Court—Kishori Mohan v Hari Das, 47 Cal 164 (See this case cited in Note 191 under section 94)

Power to restrict warrant

97. The Court may, if it thinks fit, specify in the warrant the particular place or part thereof to which only the search or inspection shall extend; and the person charged with the execution of such warrant shall then search or inspect only the place or part so specified.

Search of house suspected to contain stolen property, forged documents, etc

98 (1) If a District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, upon information and after such inquiry as he thinks necessary, has reason to believe that any place is used for the deposit or sale of stolen property, or for the deposit or sale or manufacture of forged documents, false seal or counterfeit stamps or coin, or instruments or materials for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging, or that any forged documents, false seals or counterfeit stamps or coin, or instruments or materials used for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging are kept or deposited in any place, or, if a District Magistrate, Sub-Divisional Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate, upon information and after such inquiry as he thinks necessary, has reason to believe that any place is used for the deposit, sale, manufacture or production of any obscene object such as is referred to in section 292 of the Indian Penal Code or that any such obscene objects are kept or deposited in any place, he may by his warrant authorize any police-officer above the rank of a constable—

(a) to enter, with such assistance as may be required, such place, and

(b) to search the same in manner specified in the warrant and

(c) to take possession of any property documents, seals stamps or coins therein found which he reasonably suspects to be stolen unlawfully obtained forged false or counterfeit, and also of any such instrument and materials or of any such obscene objects as aforesaid, and

(d) to convey such property, documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials or such obscene objects before a Magistrate, or to guard the same on the spot until the offender is taken before a Magistrate, or otherwise to dispose thereof in some place of safety, and

(e) to take into custody and carry before a Magistrate every person found in such place who appears to have been privy to the deposit, sale or manufacture or keeping of any such property, documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials or such obscene objects, knowing or having reasonable cause to suspect the said property to have been stolen or otherwise unlawfully obtained, or the said documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials to have been forged falsified or counterfeited, or the said instruments or materials to have been or to be intended to be used for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging or the said obscene objects to have been or to be intended to be sold, let to hire distributed publicly exhibited, circulated, imported or exported

(2) The provisions of this section with respect to—

(a) counterfeit coin

(b) coin suspected to be counterfeit and

(c) instruments or materials for counterfeiting coin shall, so far as they can be made applicable apply respectively to

(a) pieces of metal made in contravention of the Metal Tokens Act 1889 [I of 1889] or brought into British India in contravention of any notification for the time being in force under section 19 of the Sea Customs Act 1878 [VIII of 1878]

(b) pieces of metal suspected to have been so made or to have been so brought into British India or to be intended to be issued in contravention of the former of those Acts and

(c) instruments or materials for making pieces of metal in contravention of that Act

Change —The italicised words have been added by the Obscene Publications Act (VIII of 1925)

201 Sections 98 and 96 —The Calcutta High Court has made a distinction between secs 96 and 98 and laid down that Section 96 contemplates the existence of a judicial proceeding in the course of which alone the Magistrate can issue a search warrant but that section 98 does not require a criminal proceeding as a condition precedent to the issue of a search warrant—Rash Behary v Emp 35 Cal 1076 But see Clarke v Brojendra Kishore 39 Cal 953 (P C) which lays down that it is not necessary that there should be any proceeding before the issue of any search warrant See Note 194

202. Search without warrant —If there is no search warrant under this section the search is illegal and the occupiers of the house have a legal right of private defence in resisting it—Bajrang Gope v Emp 38 Cal 304 (306) 15 C W N 343 But a police officer investigating a charge of theft is entitled to search without a warrant a house which he suspects to contain stolen property, in such a case his right to search is incidental to his right to investigate—Ex p v Nirmal Singh 42 All 67 (68) 17 A L J 1047 0 Cr L J 695

Disposal of things found in search beyond jurisdiction

99 When in the execution of a search warrant at any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued the same any of the things for which search is made are found such things together with the list of the same prepared under the provisions hereinafter contained shall be immediately taken before the Court issuing the warrant unless such place is nearer to the Magistrate having jurisdiction therein than to such Court in which case the list and things shall be immediately taken before such Magistrate and unless there be good cause to the contrary such Magistrate shall make an order authorizing them to be taken to such Court

Power to declare certain publications forfeited and to issue search warrants for the same

99A (1) Where—

(a) any newspaper or book as defined in the Press and Registration of Books Act 1867 or

(b) any document

wherever printed appears to the Local Government to contain any seditious matter or any matter which promotes or is intended to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects or which is deliberately and maliciously intended to outrage the religious feelings of any such class by insulting the religion or the religious beliefs of that class that is to say any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 124A or section 153A or section 295A of the Indian Penal Code the Local Government may by notification in the local Official Gazette stating the grounds of its opinion declare every copy of the issue of the newspaper [illegible] copy of such book or [illegible] to His Majesty and the [illegible] police officer may seize the same wherever found in British India and any Magistrate may by warrant authorize any Police officer not below the rank of Sub-Inspector to enter upon and search for the same in any premises where any copy of such issue or any such book or other document may be or may be reasonably suspected to be.

(2) In sub-section (1) "document" includes also any painting, drawing or photograph, or other representation.

Sections 99A to 99G have been added by Act XIV of 1922 (Indian Press Law Repeal and Amendment Act)

Amendments —The words or Majesty's subjects have been added by the Code of Criminal Procedure (Third Amendment) Act 1926 (Act XXXVI of 1926) Section 99A of the Code of Criminal Procedure empowers the Local Government to search for and confiscate all copies of newspapers, books or documents which appear to contain seditious matter There is no provision which enables similar action to be taken against publications calculated to promote feelings of hatred or enmity between different classes of His Majesty s subjects The publication and circulation of such documents have the effect of spreading and intensifying feelings of communal bitterness and hatred and as the law now stands, even if a prosecution is launched under section 153A of the Indian Penal Code there is no effective power to check circulation The experience of the last few months has emphasised the importance of amending the law so as to provide this power The Bill is accordingly intended to bring all documents which offend against sec 153A, I P Code, within the scope of the power of forfeiture conferred in respect of seditious documents by sec. 99A of the Code of Criminal Procedure"—Statement of Objects and Reasons, (Gazette of India 1926, Part V, p 139)

Consequential amendments have been made in sections 99B 99D and 99E below Further, the words "or which is deliberately that class" have been recently added by the Criminal Law Amendment Act 1927 (XXV of 1927)

Application to High Court to set aside order of forfeiture.

99B. Any person having any interest in any newspaper, book or other document, in respect of which an order of forfeiture has been made under section 99A, may, within two months from the date of such order, apply to the High Court to set aside such order on the ground that the issue of the newspaper, or the book or other document, in respect of which the order was made, did not contain any seditious or other matter of such a nature as is referred to in sub-section (1) of section 99A.

202A. When an application is made to the High Court under this section, the High Court is precluded by section 99D from considering any other point than the question whether in fact the matters contained in the book were seditious or not The High Court cannot enter into the question as to whether the Government Notification declaring all copies of the book to be forfeited complied with the requirements of section 99A—Baijnath v K E, 47 All 298, 23 A L J 1, 26 Cr L J 679

When an application is made under section 99B to have an order of forfeiture set aside on the ground that the matter published does not fall within the mischief of section 153A of the I P Code, it is for the applicant to convince the Court that for the reasons he gives the order is a wrong order It does not lie on the Government to establish that the order complained of was justified by law—Kalicharan v K E, A I R 1927 All 649

Hearing by Special Bench.

99C. Every such application shall be heard and determined by a Special Bench of the High Court composed of three Judges.

Order of Special Bench setting aside forfeiture

99D. (1) On receipt of the application, the Special Bench shall, if it is not satisfied that the issue of the newspaper, or the book or other document, in respect of which the application has been made, contained seditious or other matter of such a nature as is referred to in sub section (1) of section 99A, set aside the order of forfeiture.

(2) Where there is a difference of opinion among the Judges forming the Special Bench, the decision shall be in accordance with the opinion of the majority of those Judges.

Where the applicant is alleged to have published a series of seditious books, the whole series must be looked to, to determine whether the passages contained therein are seditious—Baijnath v K. E, 47 All 298, 26 Cr. L. J. 479.

The meaning of section 99D is that if the High Court is left in doubt after hearing the application, it should set aside the order (although it is contrary to the ordinary practice in an appeal in a civil suit)—Kali Charan v. K E, A I R 1927 All 649

Evidence to prove nature or tendency of newspapers

99E. On the hearing of any such application with reference to any newspaper, any copy of such newspaper may be given in evidence in aid of the proof of the nature or tendency of the words, signs or visible representations contained in such newspaper in respect of which the order of forfeiture was made

99F Every High Court shall, as soon as conveniently may be, frame rules to regulate the procedure in the case of such application, the amount of the costs thereof and the execution of orders passed thereon, and until such rules are framed the practice of such Courts in proceedings other than suits and appeals shall apply, so far as may be practicable, to such applications

Procedure in High Court

99G No order passed or action taken under section 99A shall be called in question in any Court otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of section 99B

Jurisdiction barred

C —Discovery of Persons wrongfully confined

100 If any Presidency Magistrate, Magistrate of the first class or Sub divisional Magistrate has reason to believe that any person is confined under such circumstances that the confinement amounts to an offence, he may issue a search warrant, and the person to whom such warrant is directed may search for the person so confined and such search shall be made in accordance therewith, and the person, if found, shall be immediately taken before a Magistrate, who shall make such order as in the circumstances of the case seems proper

Search for persons wrongfully confined

203 Duty of Magistrate —When a Magistrate has an application before him containing the allegations that are required by this section and asking him to issue a search warrant under it it is incumbent on such Magistrate to satisfy himself by holding an inquiry that there is foundation for the application—Abdul Aziz v Crown 1916 P R 34, 17 Cr L J 492

Arrest of ward —The powers conferred on a first class Magistrate under this section may be exercised by a District Judge in arresting a ward removed from the custody of the guardian See section 25 (3) of the Guardians and Wards Act

On an application for the recovery of a boy by his adoptive mother from the natural father, the health or safety of the boy in his being allowed to live with his natural parents should be a paramount consideration for the Court—Chagan v Hera Lal 24 C W N 104 20 Cr L J 729

204 Wrongful confinement —The Magistrate is not bound to issue a search warrant under this section unless he has reason to believe that the confinement amounts to an offence The jurisdiction conferred by this section is not as wide as that conferred by sec 491—Q E v Muktabai, Ratanlal 839

Complaint against husband —In the case of a complaint being made against the husband that he was keeping his wife in confinement, a Magistrate cannot make a summary order, but before disposing of the proceedings he is bound to hear both sides and after making such inquiry as may seem necessary, he should pass such order as may seem right If he finds the confinement amounted to an offence he should let the wife go and warn the husband against interfering with her except through a Civil Court If on the other hand he arrives at the conclusion that such is not the case, he should advise the wife to go home with her husband, warning the husband at the same time against using any coercion in taking the wife with him—Sher Sha v Sakina Begum, 1910 P W R 29, 11 Cr L J 450

205. Form of warrant —There being no prescribed form of warrant under this section, a Magistrate who had to issue one under this section adapted a form under Sec 96 to the provisons of this section by altering the figures and by drawing up the warrant in terms required by this section It was held that the warrant was perfectly legal it being immaterial what form was used provided that the substance of the warrant complied with the requirements of this section—Legal Remembrancer v Mozam Molla 45 Cal 905 20 Cr L J 47 (dissenting from Bisu Haldar v Emp, 11 C W N 836 where it was held that if a warrant was issued purporting to be under sec 96 while it ought to be under sec 100 the warrant was illegal)

A form under sec 98 also may be lawfully used for a warrant under this section with necessary alterations Where a search warrant (i e, a printed form used under sec 98) was used for the purpose of this section and was snatched away by the accused and destroyed held that the presumption was that the form under sec 98 was used with the necessary alterations needed for a warrant under sec 100, and that the issue of the search warrant was not illegal or without jurisdiction—Gora Mian v Abdul Majid 39 Cal 403, 16 C W N 336 13 Cr L J 186

D.—General Provisions relating to Searches.

Direction etc., of Search warrants.

101. The provisions of sections 43, 75, 77, 79, 82, 83 and 84 shall, so far as may be, apply to all search-warrants issued under section 96, section 98, section 99A or section 100.

The words "section 99 A" in this section have been added by Act XIV of 1922 (Indian Press Law Repeal and Amendment Act)

206 Section 79—Endorsement —A search warrant issued under the Gambling Act (III of 1867) is governed by the provisions of this Code and consequently the search warrant may be endorsed by the Police officer, to whom it is originally directed to another of equal rank—Emp v Kashi Nath 30 All 60 A search warrant issued under sec 98 can be endorsed over to any other Police officer of similar rank for execution—Crown v Mithu 3 S L R 56 10 Cr L J 3

Persons in charge of closed place to allow search

102 (1) Whenever any place liable to search or inspection under this Chapter is closed, any person residing in, or being in charge of, such place shall, on demand of the officer or other person executing the warrant, and on production of the warrant, allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein

(2) If ingress into such place cannot be so obtained, the officer or other person executing the warrant may proceed in manner provided by section 18

(3) Where any person in or about such place is reasonably suspected of concealing about his person any article for which search should be made, such person may be searched If such person is a woman, the directions of section 52 shall be observed

Search to be made presence of witnesses

103 (1) [illegible] this Chapter, [illegible] son about to [illegible] two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality in which the place to be searched is situate to attend and witness the search and may issue an order in writing to them or any of them so to do

(2) The search shall be made in their presence, and a list of all things seized in the course of such search and of the places in which they are respectively found shall be prepared by such officer or other person and signed by such witnesses, but no person witnessing a search under this section shall be required to attend the Court as a witness of the search unless specially summoned by it

(3) The occupant of the place searched, or some person in his behalf, shall, in every instance be permitted to attend during the search and a copy of the list prepared under this section, signed by the said witnesses, shall be delivered to such occupant or person at his request

Occupant of place searched may attend

(4) When any person is searched under section 102, sub section (3), a list of all things taken possession of shall be prepared and a copy thereof shall be delivered to such person at his request

(5) Any person who without reasonable cause refuses or neglects to attend and witness a search under this section when called upon to do so by an order in writing delivered or tendered to him, shall be deemed to have committed an offence under section 187 of the Indian Penal Code

The italicised words have been added by sec 14 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) For reasons see below

207 Searches under other Acts —According to Section 6 of the Burma Gambling Act (I of 1899) all searches made under that Act must be made in accordance with the terms of section 102 (3) and 103 of this Code—Ih Shwee v King Emp 3 L B R 229 Aya Dewa Singh v K E 4 L B R 134 Section 16 of the Opium Act lays down that searches under secs 14 and 15 of that Act shall be made in accordance with the provisions of this Code—Ma Hauk v Emp 4 L B R 101 (But if a search is made in an open place under section 15 of the Opium Act compliance with the provisions of section 103 of this Code is not obligatory —Kali Kuar v Emp 6 Bur L J 11 8 Cr L J 372) A search under the Madras Abkari Act (I of 1886) must by virtue of sec 36 of that Act be conducted in the manner laid down in the Criminal Procedure Code

But the Gambling Act (III of 1867 sec 5) prescribes a special procedure for searches under that Act and the provisions of Chapter VII of this Code will not apply thereto—Khilunda Ram v Crown 3 Lah 359 23 Cr L J 6 1 So also, the provisions of sections 102 and 103 of this Code do not apply to a search made under the Bengal Excise Act which contains a special provision relating to search Such a search is not invalid by reason of the fact that it was not made in the presence of two witnesses—Harbkaman v K E 54 Cal 601 31 C W N 667 (669) 28 Cr L J 579

208 Witnesses —It is obligatory on the officer about to execute a search warrant to call on and get two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality to witness the search before he enters the place to be searched —K E v Kut Han 4 L B R 213 7 Cr L J 479 The witnesses are to be selected by the officer conducting the search and not by any other person—Q E v Raman 21 Mad 83

The regularity and proper conduct of the search is to be secured by two or more witnesses the intention of the enactment is to ensure that searches are conducted with decency and in order and that no wrong doing such as planting of articles by the Police in the house searched should take place—King Emp v Kue Haw 4 L B R 213 Emp v Wun Nu 5 Rang 291 28 Cr L J 701 (702) Ah Shuee v K E 3 L B R 229 Abdullah v Emp 27 Cr L J 73 (Lah) and that no false evidence may be fabricated—Ti Ya v Emp 7 Bur L T 143 15 Cr L J 441

Persons unconnected in any way with the Government and officialdom should be called to witness the search—Ah Shuee v K E 3 L B R 229 Therefore the Headmen of Wards in Rangoon being appointed by the Commissioner of Police and having to do many Police duties it is not advisable that witnesses should be chosen from that class as being Police officials they are not likely to have the confidence of men—King Emp v Kwe Haw 4 L B R 213 7 Cr L J 479 Ah Shwee v K E 3 L B R 229 Emp v Khan Haw 4 Bur L T 91 (F B) In Ti Ya v Emp 7 Bur L T 143 (F B) it is held that Ward Headmen of towns other than Rangoon are competent witnesses to a search

It is objectionable to be constantly calling the same person to witness the search because such a practice is likely to prejudice the mind of the trying Magistrate against the prosecution—Mi Hauk v Emp 4 L B R 1 1

The witnesses are called not only to attend and witness the search but they can even assist the search and by rendering assistance to the search they do not cease to be witnesses of the search—Emp v Wun Nu 5 Rang 291 28 Cr L J 701 (703) dissenting from Ti Ya v Emp 7 Bur L T 143 15 Cr L J 441

209 Respectable inhabitants —Only those persons should be chosen as witnesses who can be reasonably relied on to secure the desired result (i e prevention of fabrication of evidence and decent and orderly conduct on the part of the officers conducting the search) and in whose trustworthiness and ability towards the carrying out of the particular duty required of them confidence can be felt—Emp v Kue Hau 4 L B R 213 Ti Ya v Emp 7 Bur L T 143 (F B) The intention of the Legislature is to exclude from the category of the inhabitants those persons in whom confidence cannot be felt and against whom a reasonable suspicion exists that they may not carry out the duty required of them—Ibid

A respectable person is a person who would be impartial and on whom the owner or occupier of the premises searched can prima facie rely—Ti Ya v Emp, 7 Bur L T 143 (F B) 15 Cr L J 441 The word respectable means respectable and independent—Emp v Khan Haw 4 Bur L T 91 F B (following Rex v Hall 1 B & C 123) Sher Ali v Emp 23 Cr L J 609 (Lah) Where one of the witnesses was a friend of the Sub Inspector and lived two miles away and the other witness lived a mile away, held that the search was illegal—Ma Hlway v Emp, 4 Bur L J 2 26 Cr L J 827

210 'Of the locality' —For the purposes of this section a person living in a quarter within a part of the place to be searched may reasonably be regarded as an inhabitant of the locality, even if a river flows between—Ti Ya v Emp 7 Bur L T 143 The word locality' in this section does not mean the same quarter of the town as the place which is to be searched—Ah Sein v Emp 4 Bur L T 222 12 Cr L J 479 Where the witnesses lived in a quarter exactly half a mile west of the house searched in Rangoon held that the witnesses lived within easy reach and in the same locality within the meaning of this section—Ah Pok v Emp 18 Cr L J 1009 Where the witnesses lived a mile or 2 miles away held that they were no inhabitants of the locality—Ma Hlway v Emp, 4 Bur L J 2

It has been held in some cases that the fact that the witnesses are not men of the locality is immaterial if they are respectable men the important point is that the men called in as witnesses should be persons of some standing whose word can be believed not that they should be persons living within a stone s throw of the house which is to be searched The stress is on the word respectable and not on the word locality —Ti Ya v Emp 7 Bur L T 143 Ah Pok 18 Cr L J 1009 and failure to call inhabitants of the locality as witnesses does not make a search illegal —Q E v Raman 21 Mad 83 Satagopacharlu v Satrughna 23 M L J 415 The failure to call persons of the locality as witnesses to the search does not render the search illegal especially where the search is conducted and witnessed by responsible and respectable officers in the presence of a Magistrate and a satisfactory explanation for not inviting the neighbours to witness the search has been furnished—Abdullah v Emp 27 Cr L J 73 (Lah)

But the intention of the Legislature is to lay equal stress on the words respectable and locality or rather to lay more stress on the word locality for the Report of the Select Committee of 1916 runs as follows — We think that the power thus given to the police practically to compel the attendance of respectable witnesses from as near as possible to the place where the search is to be effected should go far to put an end to the objectionable practice of bringing semi professional search witnesses from a greater distance and will also prevent the frustration of searches by the unreasonable refusal of witnesses to attend which we understand is by no means uncommon If executive instructions are issued to the police that with the new sub section (5) to back them they are whenever possible to require the attendance of respectable witnesses from the immediate vicinity we think that a considerable improvement will be effected '

211. Rights of occupant to be present —The language of sub section (3) is that the occupant of the place shall be permitted to attend during the search and it means that he is to be given the option of being present, and not that he is to be allowed to be present only if he demands

ii This section permits the occupants of the search to be present at the search and this rule is not one merely of technicality but of sub stance in that it is enacted to guarantee the reality of the search and the discoveries made thereat Therefore where the occupants of the house, who were inside the room searched by the Police were after the dis covery in their presence of a gun and after search of their persons arrested and sent out of the room and the search was continued it was held that the exclusion of the occupants during the search was not a technical but a substantial violation of the law enunciated in this sub section—Romesh Chandra v Emperor 41 Cal 350 (370 377) 18 C W N 496 15 Cr L J 385

The word occupant is not intended to cover every person who may happen to be in the place at the time but it refers back to the person mentioned in sec 102 i e a person residing in or being in charge of the place—R mesh Chandra v Emperor 41 Cal 350 (377)

212 Search-list —A search list prepared under this section is a proper evidence as to the matter contained therein vi the articles found and the place where they were found—Anon 2 Weir 47

After a search list has been prepared and signed, it is not proper to make additions thereto subsequently but such additions however will not invalidate the whole search nor is the omission of unimportant articles a circumstance invalidating the search—Htaung v Emp 7 Bur L T 163, 15 Cr L J 523

But it is competent for the Court to receive evidence other than the search list regarding the things seized in course of the search and the places in which they were found The provisions of section 91 of the Evidence Act do not apply to the case of a search list prepared under this section—Solai Naik v Emp 34 Mad 349 (F B) 21 M L J 281, 11 Cr L J 576 overruling 2 Weir 515

Non signing of search list —Refusal by a witness to sign the search list is not punishable under section 187 I P Code (intentional omission to assist a public servant in the execution of his duty) because the assistance referred to in sec 187 I P C must have some direct personal relation to the execution of the duty by the Police officer The signing of the list is an independent duty cast upon the witness whereas the word assistance in sec 187 I P C implies that the party who assists is doing something which in ordinary circumstances the party assisted could do for himself—In re Ramaya Naika 26 Mad 419 (F B)

In Ata Deua Sing v Emp 4 L B R 134 it has been laid down that unless the search list is signed by witnesses the search would not be legal But a more reasonable view has been taken in Solai Naik v Emp, 34 Mad 349 cited above

In the Bill of 1914 it was proposed to add another sub section (6) to this section as follows — The fact that any person so attending neglects or refuses to sign the list of the articles seized shall not affect the legality of the search But this was thought unnecessary and omitted by the Select Committee of 1916 who observed as follows — We doubt if it would be wise to enact the new sub section (6) proposed by the B and we recommend that it should be omitted We think that it will be sufficient to rely upon the law as expounded recently by the Full Bench in Madras (I L R 34 Mad 349) which shows that the facts with reference to a search may be proved otherwise than by the production of the search list "

213 Duty of prosecution to summon search-witnesses —The prosecution is in duty bound to call search witnesses at the trial unless it is of opinion that they would misrepresent facts and would mis state what happened The fact that the prosecution thought that these persons had formed an opinion unfavourable to the prosecution story regarding the search is no reason why those persons should not be called by the prosecution in as much as what these persons would be required to state in their deposition was what they observed and not what they thought —Munni Sotar v Emperor 9 C W N 438

Sub section (2) of this section suggests that while the rendering of assistance in making the search is imperative on the persons called upon to assist they are not compellable by the Inspector to attend the Court to give evidence without a summons in that behalf—In re Ippili Inagatha 38 M L J 27 21 Cr L J 33

214 Refusal to attend and witness search —See sub section (5) If a person who is requisitioned by a Salt Inspector to assist him in the search made under this section refuses to attend and witness the search he is punishable under sec 187 I P C —In re Ippili Inagatha 38 M L J 27 21 Cr L J 33

But the new sub section (5) now adds a further condition namely that an order in writing must have been tendered to the person requisitioned to attend the search We accept the proposal of the Bill to penalise an unreasonable refusal or neglect to attend as a search witness but would make it a condition precedent that the person in question should have been required to attend by an order in writing from the police officer In order to make this clear we have in addition to the new sub section (5) made a small amendment at the end of sub section (1) —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

216 Irregular search —A search is irregular if is conducted in violation of the police rules relating thereto such as the omission to make at the time a note of the articles found and where found the permitting of unauthorised persons to go in and out of the place searched, the omission to send up the articles found as soon as possible to the Magistrate or the exclusion of the occupant of the place during the search But the effect of such irregularities is only to necessitate a careful scrutiny of the evidence of search and if in spite of such irregularities it is found that no advantage was taken of them by the police they have no further effect (i e the search does not become illegal)—Romesh Chandra v Emp, 41 Cal 350 (368 371) 18 C W N 496 A search made without the presence of any witness is irregular but such irregularity does not entitle the occupants of the place to exercise their right of private defence by assaulting the police officer when it was not shown that that officer was acting maliciously and otherwise than in good faith—Queen Emp v Pukot

Koti 19 Mad 349 Where the police-officer made a search without a warrant and in the presence of only one witness and a constable entered the house to be searched by scaling a wall held that the search was grossly irregular, but the occupants had no right of private defence, and any assault committed by them on the police was punishable under section 323 (though not under sec 332) I P C —Emp v Mukhtar Ahmed 37 All 353 13 A L J 439 In a later Allahabad case however it has been held that a search without witness is absolutely illegal and the occupant of the house is entitled to exercise his right of private defence by assaulting the police officer so as to prevent him from entering the house—Emp v Nirmal Singh 42 All 67, 17 A L J 1047, 20 Cr L J 695

If for any reason the officer making the search is unable to get two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality, and a search is effected in the presence of one or more men available at the time, leading to the discovery of an excisable article the accused who is found in possession of that article can all the same be convicted under the Excise Act, if the Court is satisfied from the evidence that an offence has been committed The irregularity in the search would not mitigate the offence or operate as a bar to the conviction of the accused—Abdul Hafiz v Emp, 24 A L J 173 A I R 1926 All 188 27 Cr L J 263

216 'Before it —A Magistrate can impound a document produced in a case pending before him and not before any other Magistrate subordinate to him—Byas Hardeo Das v King Emperor, 1 A L J 607.

Jurisdiction —Where a Magistrate had no jurisdiction to summon a person to produce his account books this section does not apply so as to justify his sending the books out of his jurisdiction—In re Permanand Kessowji Ratanlal 880

PREVENTION OF OFFENCES

CHAPTER VIII.

OF SECURITY FOR KEEPING THE PEACE AND FOR GOOD BEHAVIOUR.

A.—Security for keeping the Peace on Conviction.

106. (1) Whenever any person accused of rioting, assault or other offence involving a breach of the peace, or of abetting the same, or of assembling armed men or of taking other unlawful measures with the evident intention of committing the same, or any person accused of committing criminal intimidation, is convicted of such offence before a High Court, a Court of Session or the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class,	106. (1) Whenever any person accused of any offence punishable under Chapter VIII of the Indian Penal Code, other than an offence punishable under section 143, section 149, section 153*A or section* 154 thereof, or of assault or other offence involving a breach of the peace, or of abetting the same, * * or any person accused of committing criminal intimidation, is convicted of such offence before a High Court a Court of Session or the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class,
Security for keeping the peace on conviction.	Security for keeping the peace on conviction.
and such Court is of	and such Court is of opinion that it is necessary to require such person to execute a bond for keeping the peace,	opinion that it is necessary to require such person to execute a bond for keeping the peace, such Court, may, at the time of passing sentence on such person, order him to execute a bond for a sum proportionate to his means, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace during such period not exceeding three years, as it thinks fit to fix	such Court may, at the time of passing sentence on such person, order him to execute a bond for a sum proportionate to his means, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace during such period, not exceeding three years, as it thinks fit to fix

(2) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, the bond so executed shall become void	(2) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, the bond so executed shall become void
(3) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision	(3) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court including a Court hearing appeals under section 407 or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision

Change —The words or of assembling committing the same which occurred in sub section (1) of the old section have been omitted and the italicised words have been added by sec 15 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) The reasons are stated below in their proper places

218 Object of this Chapter —The object of this Chapter is the prevention and not the punishment of offences and its provisions are aimed at persons who are a danger to the public by reason of the commission by them of certain offences—Emp v Vaman Sakharam 11 Bom L R 743 Emp v Murli 1885 P R 43 This Chapter gives a certain amount of discretion to the Magistrates and the High Court must always be slow to interfere with that discretion unless there is an error of law—Emp v Raoji 6 Bom L R 34 In re Umbica Prosad 1 C L R 268 But the Magistrate should exercise this preventive jurisdiction under this Chapter with cautious discrimination and watchful care and see that the administration of this branch of criminal law does not become harsh and oppressive—Q E v. Nga On, L B R (1893 1900) 223

219 Offences under Ch. VIII, I P. C. —In the Bill of 1914 it was proposed to include in this section the ' offences which are likely to lead to a breach of the peace But the Select Committee of 1916 changed those words into ' offences punishable under Chapter VIII of the I P Code ' and observed We think it is better to enlarge the scope of this section by including all offences under Chapter VIII of the Penal Code than to involve the Court in an inquiry whether the offence of which the accused has been convicted, though not involving a breach of the peace, was nevertheless likely to have occasioned a breach

A security can be demanded on a conviction for an offence under sec 147 I P C —Maharaj Singh v Emp, 20 Cr L J 760 (Nag), or on a conviction for rioting—In re Marimuthu 32 M L T 315 17 L W 577

The words or of assembling armed men or of taking other unlawful measures with the evident intention of committing the same" which occurred in the old section have now been omitted, because these offences are covered by Chapter VIII of the Indian Penal Code and specific mention of them is unnecessary The offence of assembling armed men is an offence under Chapter VIII of the I P Code therefore this section applies where armed men were assembled with the intention of committing a breach of the peace and an order for beating men was given, although no breach of the peace actually took place because the assembly did not go so far—Srihari v Lalkhan 5 C W N 250 So also, the offence of being an armed member of an assembly (sec 144 I P C) or joining such assembly after it has been commanded to disperse (sec 145 I P C) is an offence under Chapter VIII of the I P Code and brings an accused under this section The case of Yar Mahammed v Empress 1890 P R 3 in which the contrary view was held is no longer good law

An offence under sec 149 I P C is excluded from this section, for that section alone does not make any substantive offence—Chhedi Singh v Emp, 3 Pat 870, 6 P L T 330 26 Cr L J 426

220 Assault —The word 'assault' as used in this section refers to the offence of assault as defined in section 351 I P C An offence of causing grievous hurt under sec 325 I P C though it involves the use of criminal force and is in that sense an assault does not strictly fall under the category of assault" as contemplated by this section, and cannot form the basis of an order for security Moreover, such offence does not always involve a breach of the peace—Dubri v Emp, 8 O L J 318, 24 Cr L J 227 But where the offence of hurt was committed under such circumstances that it clearly implied the use of violence and a breach of the peace, e g assaulting a prosecution witness in a public place, the order for security was not improper—In re Ramaswami Thevan, 44 M. L J. 485, 24 Cr. L. J 455

221. Other offences involving breach of the peace :—These words refer to offences in which a breach of the peace is an essential or necessary ingredient and not to offences which merely provoke or are likely to lead to a breach of the peace—Arun Sama ta v Emp 30 Cal 366 Muthia Chetty v Emp 2) Mad 190 Kannookaran v Emp 26 Mad 469 Abdulla v Crown Lah 2-9 2 Cr L J 709 Raj Narain v Bhagabat 35 Cal 315 Kuppa Reddiar v K E 47 Mad 846 (848) 25 Cr L J 1096 47 M L J 3

But according to the Bombay High Court the words involving a breach of the peace include offences which are offences because a breach of the peace has occurred or because a breach of the peace is likely to occur And therefore when an accused person being convicted of an offence punishable under sec 504 I P C (insult with intent to provoke a breach of the peace) was ordered to furnish security to keep the peace it was held that the order was lawful in as much as a breach of the peace or a probability of a breach of the peace was an ingredient of the offence under section 504 I P C —Emp v Sayad Ya oob, 43 Bom 554 21 Bom L R 770 (dissenting from 30 Cal 366 and 26 Mad. 469) The Allahabad High Court likewise holds that the word 'involving connotes inclusion not only of a necessary but also of a probable feature circumstance antecedent condition or consequence That is an offence ' involving a breach of the peace mentioned in sec 106 does not mean only an offence which necessarily involves a breach of the peace or of which a breach of the peace forms an ingredient but includes an offence such as the removal of a landmark (punishable under section 448 I P C) which as a matter of common experience is often followed by serious riots and loss of life Therefore where the evidence shows that the accused were prepared to commit the act of removal of landmark by a breach of peace and were only prevented from doing so by the other side running away held that the offence was one which came within the terms ' involving a breach of the peace —Emp v Manik Lal 33 All 771 (dissenting from 30 Cal 93 30 Cal 366 35 Cal 315 and 29 Mad 190) Natha v Kanhaiyalal 25 Cr L J 71 (Nag)

Upon a conviction of criminal trespass where the intention of the trespass is to commit a breach of the peace, an order under sec 106 may lawfully be passed Thus where the accused came armed with lathis to assault the complainant and aimed a blow at him which missed whereupon the complainant took refuge in his house but the accused pushed the door open and assaulted the complainant inside the house held that a breach of the peace was a necessary ingredient of the offence (criminal trespass with intent to cause hurt sec 452 I P C) of which the accused was convicted and an order for security was proper in this case—Emp v Dharam Raj 47 All 345 18 A I J 300, 21 Cr L J 388 Dullah v Emp 26 Cr L J 1467 (Lah) Where the accused is convicted under sec 323 I P C he cannot be bound down to keep the peace merely on the ground that the parties were on bad terms There must be a further finding that a breach of the peace was involved in the occurrence—Md Rahim v Emp 23 A L J 1053 26 Cr L J 1457 Atma Ram v Emp 49 All 131 28 Cr L J 88 The Oudh Chief Court holds that the words "assault or other offence involving a breach of the peace" clearly include the offence of causing hurt under sec 323 I P Code—Emp v Ramanuj, 3 O W. N 311 (Supp), 28 Cr L J 144, dissenting from Dubri v Emp, 8 O L J. 318, 24 Cr L J 227

221A. Offences involving no breach of the peace :—(a) Merely being a member of an unlawful assembly (Sec 143 I P C)—Abdulla v. Crown, 2 Lah 279, Jib Lal v Jagmohan, 26 Cal 576, Raj Narain v Bhagabut, 35 Cal. 315, Kannookaran v Emp, 26 Mad 469 Sheo Bhajan v Mosawi, 27 Cal 983, Abdul Ali v Emp, 43 Cal 671, 20 C W N 197 an offence under sec 143 I P C is now expressly excluded from this section by the present amendment

(c) criminal trespass with intent to have illicit intercourse with the complainant s wife—Subal v Ramkanai 25 Cal 628,

(d) merely causing disturbance to religious worship—2 Weir 47,

(e) theft or mischief—Kannookaran v Emp, 26 Mad 469 Ram Charan v Umesh, 1 C W N 186, Q E v Muniram, Ratanlal 622,

(f) breaking open a locked shop and criminal trespass—Emp v Kundan, 1885 A W N 303,

(g) house trespass with intent to commit theft—Morali v K E, 4 L B R* 277, house trespass after preparation to commit hurt, assault etc (sec 452 I P C)—Santosh v Emp, 27 Cr L J 571 (Lah),

(h) grievous hurt—Q v Kunhiya, 4 N W P H C R 154,

(j) offence under sec 297 I P C—Abdulla v Crown, 2 Lah 279,

(k) wrongful confinement—Md Afzal v Emp, 24 Cr L J 271 (Lah); but if the accused is found to have violently seized another person, tied his hands and wrongfully confined him in an open garden, then it amounts to an offence involving a breach of the peace—Kuppa Reddiar v K E, 47 Mad 846 (849), 47 M L J 232, 25 Cr L J 1096,

(m) attempt to seduce married women and behaving indecently and immodestly towards them—Arun v Emp, 30 Cal 366

When a person is convicted of offences which do not, in themselves and apart from any other incidents, come within the terms of this section, it is incumbent on the Magistrate to record a clear finding with respect to the facts which in his opinion make this section applicable to the case—Baidya Nath v Nibaran, 30 Cal 93, Sheo Bhajan v Mosawi, 27 Cal 983; Jib Lal v Jagmohan, 26 Cal 576 Kinoo Sheikh v Darastulla, 29 Cal 393

222. "Convicted of such offence" :—This section refers only to parties convicted of rioting, assault, etc, and cannot be applied to cases where there is only a possible apprehension of a future breach of the peace It is only when there has been a conviction, and not until then, of the accused of the offence charged that a Magistrate can resort to this section—Q v Hur Kumari 24 W R 10 Therefore where a person was acquitted on a charge of unlawful assembly and trespass etc the Magistrate would be in error in demanding security from him on the same evidence —Dilloo Singh v Oolum Singh 22 W R 9 So also where the Magistrate only found that the accused threatened to beat the complainant but did not convict the accused for assault or criminal intimidation an order under this section was illegal—Subal v Ramkanai 25 Cal 628 The conviction must be for an offence specified in this section Therefore where the accused was charged with criminal intimidation but was convicted of theft or unlawful assembly (Sec 143 I P C) an order under this section was not legal—Kishore Sarkar v K E 8 C W N 517 Raj Narain v Bhagabat 35 Cal 315 Abdulla v Crown 2 Lah 279 (280) 22 Cr L J 09

Annulment of conviction —If the conviction is annulled on appeal the order directing security abates ipso facto by virtue of sub section (2) and it is not competent to the Appellate Court to order the security to be continued—Emp v Chajju Mal 1895 A W N 141

Summary trial —An order under this section may be made even if the conviction takes place in a summary trial provided the Magistrate has jurisdiction—Meghu v K E O C 338 Emp v Lachman 1886 A W N 181

223 Magistrates empowered —Since Section 18 confers full powers of a Presidency Magistrate on an Honorary Presidency Magistrate the latter can take action under this section—Hassan v Yas Kubar 7 Bom L R 833 2 Cr L J 770 If any Bench of Magistrates has first class powers the Bench is competent to pass an order under this section—See sec 15 (2) The ruling in Q v Bebheki 21 W R 12 is no longer good law A Sub divisional Magistrate even though he is a Magistrate of the second class can pass an order under this section binding over a person to keep the peace for a period exceeding six months The fact that the order carries with it an alternative sentence of imprisonment in case the security is not furnished which will be beyond his ordinary powers under sec 32 cannot have the effect of limiting the powers conferred on the Court of the Sub divisional Magistrate under this section So long as the order was passed by a Court which had authority to do so under this section and the period for which security was required did not exceed the limits he was authorised by this section to impose the liability of the accused to be detained in prison unless he furnished security is something independent of the powers of the Magistrate in the matter of passing substantive sentences of imprisonment—Ilm Singh v Emp 37 All 230 13 A L J 268 16 Cr L J 350

224 "At the time of passing sentence —The order for security is to be made at the time of passing the sentence Where a second class Magistrate convicted a person for assault and sentenced him to a fine but ordered the sentence to be in abeyance pending the order of the District Magistrate for binding over the person and the District

Magistrate ordered the accused to furnish security, held that the order of the District Magistrate was bad in law—Crown v Nura, 1901 P R 22 If a Magistrate of the 2nd or 3rd class is of opinion that the accused should be bound down under this section he must refer the whole case to a superior Magistrate under section 349, without passing any sentence himself—Rohimuddi v Imp 35 Cal 1093 The second or third class Magistrate when referring a case under sec 349 cannot even convict the accused Section 106 contemplates that before an order requiring security can be passed under it the accused shall have been convicted by the Court or Magistrate specified, who is not inferior to a Magistrate of the first class Reading sections 106 and 349 together, it follows that the conviction and order under section 106 must be passed by one and the same officer, and when a second or third class Magistrate refers a case to a superior Magistrate for an order under section 106 the conviction and sentence must be passed by the superior Magistrate and not by the Magistrate of the 2nd or 3rd class. Therefore where a third class Magistrate convicted the accused and then submitted the case to the District Magistrate with a recommendation that the accused should be bound over to keep the peace, and the District Magistrate ordered security under this section the order was ultra vires and illegal—Mahmudi v Ali Sheikh 21 Cal 622

A second class Magistrate ought not to pass any sentence at all, if he refers the case to a superior Magistrate for an order under section 106 Where a second class Magistrate convicted the accused under sections 147 and 325 I P C and sentenced the accused under section 147 I P C but passed no sentence under sec 325 I P C and forwarded the proceedings to the Sub divisional Magistrate in order that the accused should be bound down under sec 106 of this Code, held that the action of the 2nd class Magistrate was wrong If he thought that the binding down was necessary, he should have forwarded the whole case to the Sub divisional Magistrate, without passing any part of the sentences (viz, the sentence under section 147 I P C) himself—Rohimuddi v Emp, 35 Cal 1093

An order for recognizance or for security under this section must be passed at the time of deciding the original case If no such order is then made, the only procedure open to the Magistrate is to take subsequent proceedings under section 107—Ram Adhin v. Emp, 21 A L J 839 25 Cr L J 965 In re Gobind, 15 W R 56 If a Magistrate omits to order the accused to furnish security under this section at the time of passing the sentence, he cannot afterwards, upon receiving some further information (other than that which he derived from the previous trial) that the parties are likely to commit a breach of the peace, pass an order under this section—Q v Powell, 3 N W P 96

An Appellate Court can pass an order for security on confirmation of the sentence passed by the original Court. If the Appellate Court sets aside the sentence passed by the original Court, but passes no sentence itself, and makes an order for security, the order is illegal—Crown v Nura, 1901 P R 22, Reg v Bhaskar, 3 B H C R 1.

225 Order for security —An order under this section can only be made in the presence of the accused An order made at the instance of the prosecutor behind the back of the accused is bad in law—Reg v Bhaskar 3 B H C R 1

The security ordered under this section must be for keeping the peace An order for furnishing security for good behaviour under this section is bad in law—Mahabir v Emp 16 A L J 280 19 Cr L J 439

The security must be in addition to an award of punishment there fore a Magistrate cannot order security in lieu of other punishment—Crown v Nura 1901 P R 72

Who can be bound down —Only the accused person can be asked to give security Under this section a Magistrate is not authorised to demand security from the complainant (in a case under section 323 I P C) If he considers it necessary to demand security from the complainant he must record a separate proceeding and give the complainant an opportunity to be heard under secs 117 and 118—Crown v Kalli 1902 P R 3 The Magistrate is not competent to take security from a witness for the defence on the ground that his evidence in the trial proved that he was one of the rioters—Q v Kadar Khan 5 Mad 380

Proportionate to his means —The provision for taking security being a preventive measure intended to preserve future good conduct it should not be made an instrument of punishment by demanding excessive security disproportionate to the means of the person and thus making him undergo further imprisonment—Q E v Rama 16 Bom 372 Emp v Dedar 2 Cal 384 In re Juggut 2 Cal 110 Emp v Kala Chand 6 Cal 14 Wasya v Emp 1901 P R 28 Ali v Emp 1900 P R 17 Ram Singh v Emp 1883 P R 1 Jayaua v Emp 1890 P R 30 See Note 293 under sec 118

226 Cases when order should not be made —An order for security should not be made when a sentence of transportation or imprisonment for a long time is passed—Kyaw Wa v K E 5 L B R 34 10 Cr L J 69 or when such an order would prevent the party bound down from exercising his lawful rights—Nanda Kumar v Emp 11 C W N 1128 thus where upon the complainant trying to take possession of the land in the possession of the accused the latter used more force than was necessary to prevent the complainant from taking possession and the accused was punished for rioting it was held that he should not be bound down under this section as such order would have the effect of preventing him from resisting any further attempt by the complainant to take possession of his land—Nahar v Emp 11 C W N 840 6 Cr L J 40 In Bepin v Pranakul 11 C W N 176 it has been held that if it is necessary in order to prevent a breach of the peace to bind down the party entitled to possession and if the effect of such order is to prevent him from taking possession of the property, it is desirable that the other party should also be bound down under sec 107

that it is necessary to require the accused to execute a bond in order to prevent a breach of the peace That is in order to support an order under section 106 the Court must as a condition precedent, show some grounds for requiring the security The fact that the accused have been convicted of an offence involving a breach of the peace is not alone sufficient to justify an order under sec 106—Jai Singh v Emp 27 Cr L J 112 (Pat)

227 Sub-section (3)—Power of Appellate Court to direct security—The words including a Court hearing appeals under section 407 recently added in this sub section by the Amendment Act of 1923 have removed the conflict of opinion which existed between the several High Courts as to whether an Appellate Court could direct security where the original Court (e g a 2nd or 3rd class Magistrate) was not empowered to pass the order It has been held in some cases that an Appellate Court cannot pass an order under sub section (3) unless the person convicted has been sentenced by a Court not inferior to that of a first class Magistrate This result does not appear to have been intended and it is proposed to remove the restriction —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

Thus it has been held by the Madras Bombay Allahabad and Patna High Courts as well as in Oudh C P and Burma that an Appellate Court can pass an order under this section although the original Court was not competent (being a 2nd or 3rd class Magistrate) to pass the order —In re Solai Gounden 37 Mad 153 14 Cr L J 574 (over ruling 29 Mad 190 and 30 Mad 48) Doraisami v Emp 30 Mad 182 Dharam Das v K E 33 All 48 11 Cr L J 480 Emp v Bhausingh 33 Bom 33 10 Bom L R 759 Tilak Rai v Emp 43 All 372 22 Cr L J 310 Bachan Singh v Emp 2 P L J 21 18 Cr L J 118 Hasanbag v Emp 19 N L R 154 Lachmi Narain v Emp 23 O C 380 22 Cr L J 276 Bharat Singh v Emp 16 O C 281 14 Cr L J 592 (over ruling 10 O C 287) The word also in sub section (3) plainly implies that the order may be independently made by an Appellate Court or by a Court of Revision in addition to those mentioned in sub section (1) and it is not implied that the power of the original Court should in any way control or limit those of the Appellate or Revisional authority—Emp v Bhausingh 33 Bom 33

The Calcutta and Punjab Courts however were of opinion that where the original Court was not competent to order security under this section the Appellate Court could not exercise such powers—Emp v Momin Mahta 35 Cal 433 12 C W N 752, Karim Baksh v Emp 19 Cr L J 220 (Cal) Eusafali v Emp 24 Cr L J 308 (Cal), Gopal Singh v K E 1908 P R 21 Radha Singh v K E 1907 P R 6 Lalkhan v Crown 1918 P R 5 Karam Singh v Emp 23 Cr L J 457 (Lah)

In view of the present Amendment the above Calcutta and Punjab decisions are rendered obsolete

An Appellate Court can require the accused to furnish security even after the working out of the substantive punishment passed by the original

Court and such an order would not amount to an enhancement of punishment under sec 423 (1) (b)—Miran v K E 1905 P R 21 Maharaj Singh v Emp 20 Cr L J 760 (Nag)

An Appellate Court can cancel an order of security passed by the original Court while upholding the sentence—Abdul v Amiran 30 Cal 101 But if the conviction and sentence are cancelled by the Appellate Court the order of security is also cancelled ipso facto under sub section (2) and it is not competent to the Appellate Court to order the security to be continued—Emp v Chajju Mal 1895 A W N 141

228 Revision —This section gives a discretion to the Magistrate to pass an order for security and the High Court is reluctant to interfere upon a mere question of discretion unless the order is on the face of it such an improper exercise of discretion as to require interference—Emp v Dharam Raj 42 All 345 (346) 18 A L J 300 21 Cr L J 288 The High Court in revision set aside an order under sec 106 where the findings did not sufficiently and clearly show that the acts for which the accused were convicted necessarily involved a breach of the peace—Abdul Ali v Emp 43 Cal 671 20 C W N 197 17 Cr L J 241

B —Security for keeping the Peace in other Cases and Security for Good Behaviour

Security for keeping the peace in other cases

107 (1) Whenever a P[illegible] Magistr[illegible] trate or [illegible] is informed that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquility, or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace, or disturb the public tranquility, the Magistrate, if in his opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding, may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace for such period not exceeding one year as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix

(2) Proceedings shall not be taken under this section unless either the person informed against or the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended, is within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and no proceedings shall be taken before any Magistrate, other than a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, unless both the person informed against and the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended, are within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction

Procedure of Magistrate not empowered to act under sub section (1)

(3) When any Magistrate not empowered to proceed under sub section (1) has reason to believe that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquility or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquility, and that such breach of the peace or disturbance cannot be prevented otherwise than by detaining such person in custody, such Magistrate may after recording his reasons, issue a warrant for his arrest (if he is not already in custody or before the Court) and may send him before a Magistrate empowered to deal with the case together with a copy of his reasons

(4) A Magistrate before whom a person is sent under this section, may in his discretion detain such person in custody until the completion of the inquiry hereinafter prescribed	(4) A Magistrate before whom a person is sent under sub section (3) may in his discretion detain such person in custody pending further action by himself under this Chapter

Change —The italicised words have been added by sec 16 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) The words "until the completion of the inquiry hereinafter prescribed" previously occurring in sub-section (4) have been substituted by the words "pending further action by himself under this Chapter" The reasons have been thus stated "We also recommend an amendment of section 107 (4) as we think that the powers conferred by the sub section as it stands are unnecessarily wide. We think that it will be sufficient that the Magistrate should have power to detain the accused in custody pending further action by himself under this Chapter and we have made this change" —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

The words "if in his opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding" have been added during the debate in the Assembly adopting the phraseology of sec 204 and the object of this amendment is to prevent the Magistrate from proceeding upon any and every information The words "is informed" in this section are too wide and the amendment therefore makes it incumbent on Magistrates to be satisfied by some sort of inquiry whether private or public or by taking evidence whether in camera or in open Court about the correctness and veracity of that information before they take any action See the Legislative Assembly Debates January 18 1923 pp 1246 1254

229 Object of section —The object of this section is the prevention and not the punishment of offences It is intended not to punish persons for anything that they have done in the past but to prevent them from doing in the future something that may probably occasion a breach of the peace Therefore where offences have been committed the proper procedure is to institute regular trials for those offences and not to take proceedings under this section—Srikanta v Emp 9 C W N 898 Emp v Manu 25 Cr L J 1226

230 Information —There should be reliable information as to the probability of a breach of the peace—Malik Sultan v Bano 1903 P L R 115 The information must be of a clear and definite kind directly affecting the person against whom process is issued and should disclose tangible facts and details so that it may afford notice to such person of what he is to come forward to meet—In re Jai Prakash 6 All 26 Prankrishna v Emp 8 C W N 180 Atmuddin v Emp, 24 Cr L J 230 (Cal) When a Magistrate receives verbal communication from certain persons it is proper that he should order the institution of some inquiry into the truth of the matter before he proceeds to take action thereupon It is not open to a Magistrate to draw up proceedings under this section upon vague and general statements which do not amount to any direct accusation or allegation—Grant v Emp 2 P L T 669 22 Cr L J 745 Nitianund v Crown 3 Lah L J 480

The Oudh Chief Court however holds that there is nothing in this section which specifies what the nature of the information should be Undoubtedly a prudent Magistrate might not consider information sufficient to cause him to take action under the preventive sections unless it gave sufficient details against the person in question but there is nothing in this section laying down any quantum of information as a necessary condition for the Magistrate to take action If a Magistrate empowered receives information of the barest kind to the effect that a certain person is a habitual thief and is within the local limits of his jurisdiction it is within his powers to take action under this chapter and the legality of his action cannot be questioned—Emp v Ram Ghulam 2 Luck 157, 28 Cr L J 741

A Magistrate ought not to act under this section upon the following informations —A statement by a private person not upon oath or solemn affirmation—Reg v Jivaji 6 B H C R 1 Chamaro v Kashi Chunder, 8 W R 85, hearsay evidence—Mohan v Emp, 21 Cr L J 560 (Nag) conversation out of Court with persons however respectable—Emp v Babua 6 All 132 personal knowledge of certain facts which he from sources outside the record—Mathura v Emp, 14 A L J 769 1 Cr L J 484

A police report is in itself a sufficient information on which a " trate may issue a summons but it is in no sense evidence upon w'

can determine under section 118 whether it is necessary to take a bond to keep the peace or for good behaviour—Behari v Mahomed 12 W R 60 In re Brindaton 10 W R 41 When it appears that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace etc it is the duty of the police to lay information before the Magistrate having jurisdiction In laying such information the police should set out carefully the evidence on which they rely or the circumstances leading to the information—C P Pol Man I page 55

A statement of the complainant in the absence of the persons charged may be accepted by the Magistrate as credible information and may enable him to act upon it by issuing summons to show cause but it is not competent for the Magistrate on the appearance of the persons so charged to act upon his previous information and to pass final order without taking further evidence—Q v Nusseroodeen N W P 461, Q v Kristendra 7 W R 30 Similarly a report of a subordinate Magistrate is credible information to authorise a Magistrate to pass a preliminary order under this section—Ex parte Nalli Kel 2 M H C R 240 but if unsupported by other evidence it cannot form a sufficient ground for final adjudication under section 118—Reg v Jivarji 6 B H C R 1 Reg v Dalpatram 5 B H C R 105

But the Magistrate is not entitled to initiate proceedings upon facts and information which had already been the subject of inquiry under Sec 107 or in connection with charges under the Penal Code brought against the same persons and which had ended in favour of the accused Thus where there have been a number of cases and proceedings going on for a long time between the parties and in all these cases the persons accused of the offences were either discharged or acquitted and the proceedings under secton 107 fell through the Magistrate cannot initiate fresh proceedings under sec 107 upon the same facts and information when there are no fresh materials of any importance available in which fresh apprehension can arise of a breach of the peace The same facts cannot form the subject of repeated proceedings either under the Penal Code or under the Cr P Code—Kordi Redd v K E 41 Mad 246 18 Cr L J 878

231 Likely to commit breach of the peace —The information must contain evidence of some specific conduct on the part of the accused from which a reasonable and immediate inference can be drawn that the accused is likely to commit a breach of the peace and it is only on information of this character that the Magistrate should initiate proceedings under this section—Run Bahadur v Illessuree 22 W R 79 Q v Har Kumari 24 W R 10 Huree Mohan v Kali Nath 25 W R 15 Q v Abdul Haq 20 W R 57 Imp v Shimbhu 1888 P R 21 The mere finding that the accused is a bad character and that it is not right in any way to leave him without a guarantee is wholly insufficient to justify an order under this section—Imp v Shimbhu 1888 P R 21 Where the evidence on the record disclosed reliable statements that persons who were ordered to furnish security to keep the peace were men who had shown by their acts and general behaviour that their object was to disturb the public tranquility e g by wounding the religious feelings of the Muhammadans of a certain locality, it was held that the Magistrate was justified in making such order—Chimni Lal v Emp 14 A L J 430 17 Cr L J 301

The information must shew that there is a strong and reasonable probability of a breach of the peace and not merely a bare possibility—Q v Abdul Haq 20 W R 57 Malik Sultan v Bano 1903 P L R 115 Emp v Chanbasawa 6 Bom L R 862 The act likely to cause a breach of the peace must be an impending one and not one likely to happen at some future time it must be shewn to be in contemplation at the time of the information given and the fact that a person has done a wrongful act in the past should not give rise to the inference that he is likely to do the same again—In re Shivaram 6 Bom L R 663 In re Basdeo 26 All 190 Q v Kedarnath 7 N W P 233 Thus the mere fact that certain persons had made preparations for disturbing the public tranquility on the occasion of the last Muharram festival would afford no ground after the festival had passed without the public tranquillity having been disturbed for inferring that they would be likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquility at the next Mohurram and would not be a sufficient ground for binding them over—In re Basdeo 26 All 190 Zulfakar v Emp 8 P L T 370 28 Cr L J 719 But security should be taken in a case where though the occasion on which the ill feeling between the parties (Hindus and Mussalmans) first came to a head had passed without any actual disturbances there still remained the probability of a recurrence of it in the near future in fact at any moment—Ayodhya Prasad v K E 8 A L J 1080 12 Cr L J 493

232 " Wrongful acts that may occasion breach of the peace " —There are two distinct sets of circumstances in which a Magistrate may take action under Section 107 first where it appears that a person is likely himself to commit a breach of the peace or to disturb the public tranquility that is to say by a direct act e g by committing an assault and secondly where a person may be the indirect cause of a breach of the peace or the disturbance of the public tranquillity by doing a certain act but in the latter case the Magistrate may only take action where the act anticipated is a wrongful act This section does not authorise action against a person who is expected to do an act which may cause a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity unless that act is wrongful and the mere fact that the doing of a lawful act by certain persons may lead to the commission of a breach of the peace by other persons does not authorise the Magistrate to take action against the persons intending to do the lawful act unless they are themselves likely to commit a breach of the peace or to disturb the public tranquillity —Nga Tin v Maung Kyaw 11 Bur L T 59 18 Cr L J 512 Emp v Mahammad Yakub 32 All 571 (575) 7 A L J 649

Where the act which a person intends to commit is lawful in itself, there is no reason for demanding security from him under sec 107 even though his act is likely to induce his opponents to commit a breach of the peace In such a case it would be more reasonable to take proceedings against those who are expected to commit the breach of the peace and offer violence to law abiding citizens—Kha an Chand v Emp, 7 Lah 482 27 P L R 810 27 Cr L J 1063 Thus it is not unlawful for a chamar to draw water from a public well and he cannot be called upon to give security simply because his act of drawing water from the well is objected to by certain persons and is likely to lead to a breach of the peace—Kha an Chand v Emp (supra) The fact that a Muhammadan in the exercise of his legal right to kill cows may perhaps give offence to his Hindu neighbours and induce them to commit a breach of the peace is no ground for binding over the Muhammadan—Emp v Muhammad Yakub 32 All 571 11 Cr L J 355 The right of protection of lawful possession is a lawful right which may properly be exercised not only to resist any unlawful attempt to interfere with the possession but also to defend oneself if it becomes necessary in the process Where therefore the lawful possession of the accused had more than once been threatened by a show of armed force and he had collected a body of men armed with lathis and posted them on the property to resist any violence or interference with his possession it was held that as the intention was to maintain an existing right the accused was justified in adopting measures for the defence of his possession and that as there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace from his side there was no reason either for punishing him or binding him over to security—Janki Prasad v Emp, 18 A L J 157 21 Cr L J 337 Since a joint owner is entitled to improve the joint property no security can be demanded from him on the ground that his persistence in improving the joint property is likely to lead to a breach of the peace it being probable that such breach will be committed by his brothers—Thaker Singh v Emp 8 Lah 98 27 P L R 599 27 Cr L J 1094 (1095) Where a party has the right to take a procession along a particular road he cannot be bound down under this section because other persons object to his doing so and he insists on taking the procession along that road The proper course is to bind down the other persons—Jero e Ili v Emp 12 C W N 703 W

jurisdiction of a Magistrate under this section must be exercised with caution Where its exercise may undoubtedly lead to the infringement of an undoubted civil right, where an obligation which the law of the country imposes becomes incapable of being enforced owing to the exercise of such a jurisdiction, and where the breach of the peace apprehended by the Magistrate is a likely result of the enforcement of his legal right by a party in a legal way and the illegal denial of the corresponding obligation by the other party, the Magistrate ought not to bind down the party who has the legal right in him—Din Dayal v Emp, 34 Cal 935 (938), Nga Ti v Maung Kyau, 11 Bur L T 59, 18 Cr L J 512, Thaker Singh v Emp, 8 Lah 98, 27 P L R 599 27 Cr L J 1094

Where the act which a person intends to commit is lawful in itself, there is no reason for demanding security from him, under sec. 107, even though his act is likely to induce his opponents to commit a breach of the peace In such a case, it would be more reasonable to take proceedings against those who are expected to commit the breach of the peace and offer violence to law abiding citizens—Khazan Chand v Emp, 7 Lah 482, 27 P L R 810, 27 Cr L J 1063 This, it is not unlawful for a chamar to draw water from a public well, and he cannot be called upon to give security simply because his act of drawing water from the well is objected to by certain persons and is likely to lead to a breach of the peace—Khazan Chand v Emp, (supra) The fact that a Muhammadan in the exercise of his legal right to kill cows may perhaps give offence to his Hindu neighbours and induce them to commit a breach of the peace is no ground for binding over the Muhammadan—Emp v Muhammad Yakub, 32 All 571, 11 Cr L J 355 The right of protection of lawful possession is a lawful right which may properly be exercised not only to resist any unlawful attempt to interfere with the possession but also to defend oneself if it becomes necessary in the process Where, therefore, the lawful possession of the accused had more than once been threatened by a show of armed force, and he had collected a body of men armed with lathis and posted them on the property to resist any violence or interference with his possession, it was held that as the intention was to maintain an existing right, the accused was justified in adopting measures for the defence of his possession, and that as there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace from his side, there was no reason either for punishing him or binding him over in security—Janki Prasad v Emp, 18 A L J 157, 21 Cr L J. 337 Since a joint owner is entitled to improve the joint property, no security can be demanded from him on the ground that his persistence in improving the joint property is likely to lead to a breach of the peace, it being probable that such breach will be committed by his brothers—Thaker Singh v Emp, 8 Lah 98, 27 P. one of several co sharer landlords sought to make a measurement of lands contrary to the provisions of Secs 90 and 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act the other co sharer landlords would be justified in objecting to the survey, and where no force was used by them they ought not to be bound down to keep the peace—Bhabataran v Bankutesh 9 C W N 618 Where a Zemindari village was in the possession of the Mokhassadar and the tenants had been paying rents to him and the Zemindar came to the village with the express purpose of ousting him and incited the tenants not to pay rents to the Mokhassadar whereupon the Mokhassadar protested and asked the Zemindar in a threatening manner to leave the village it was held that in as much as the Zemindar was acting illegally, the Mokhassadar protesting against such illegal act was acting within his rights and could not be bound down under this section—Chandrasekhara v Emp, 14 M L J 491 Where a Magistrate found that persons who attempted to do bastu puja on a waste land were not entitled to perform it it was held that if the persons opposing it acted properly and within their rights there was no reason to suppose that any breach of the peace was likely to be committed—Bijoy Singha v Emp 3 C W N 463 Where there was already a cattle market and certain persons intended to open another cattle market on their own land not far from the old market and the Magistrate apprehending that there would be a breach of the peace consequent thereon bound over those persons to keep the peace the order of the Magistrate was illegal—Maku v Emp 16 A L J 279 19 Cr L J 337

But where there are doubts as to the existence of the respective rights and obligations of the parties (i e as to who is acting legally in the exercise of his rights and who is not) the proper procedure is to bind down both parties (until their rights and obligations have been determined by a proper tribunal) so that the order of the Magistrate may not be detrimental to either—Dindayal v Emp 34 Cal 935 (938) Ghasi Ram v Emp 20 Cr L J 191 (Pat) Musahel Saudagar v Nidhi Ram 8 P L T 645 28 Cr L J 605 Where however no doubt exists the party in the wrong should be bound down and prevented from illegally exercising an alleged claim An attempt to ascertain legal rights of parties should always be made by the Magistrate before he binds down one or the other party under this section—Din Dayal v Emp 34 Cal 935 (938)

234 Disputes relating to immoveable property —Proceedings under this section are only intended for the security of the public peace and not for the purpose of enabling one of two contending parties to help themselves in obtaining or retaining possession of immoveable property and having their adversaries hands tied down by an order under this section The proper procedure in such cases is to take proceedings under sec 145—Dhruv v Q E 25 Cal 798 Where the apprehension of a breach of the peace arises out of a dispute regarding possession of immoveable property the Magistrate can undoubtedly proceed under Section 145 but this fact will not preclude the Magistrate from taking proceedings under this section In such cases the Magistrate is not bound to act only under Sections 144 and 145 but has a discretion to proceed

either under those sections or under section 107—Sheo Rai v Chatter 32 Cal 966 In re Muthia 36 Mad 315 Thakur Pandav v K E 34 All 449 Emp v Abba 30 Cal 150 16 C W N 83 (F B) Dhuma v Emp 23 Cr L J 567 (Nag) K E v Basiruddin 7 C W N 746 Amulya v Amrita Lal 24 C W N 1075 2 Cr L J 224 Abdus Sayeed v Emp 23 Cr L J 123 (Cal) Ramacharlu v Emp 26 Mad 471 Sindama v Zemindar Weir 50 Balwinland v Crown 1 S L R 50 8 Cr L J 170

Where parties are clearly in the wrong they can be bound down under Section 107 to prevent a breach of the peace or a party threatening to usurp the rights of another can be restrained by a temporary order under Section 144 but where the dispute relates to lands and there is an apprehension of a breach of the peace as both the contending parties urge their claim to possession the proceedings should be under Section 145 of the Code—Gaurinath v Gobind Singh, 1 P L T 44 20 Cr L J 829

Sections 107 144 and 145 all give summary jurisdiction to Magistrates to take action in order to prevent a breach of the peace when such a breach is imminent There is a very thin line of demarcation between these sections When there is a bona fide dispute as to the right of possession between two rival parties the proper procedure is to take action under Sec 145 and not under Sec 107 because the former section is not only effective to prevent a breach of the peace but also is the one which causes the least prejudice to the contending parties—Himmat v Emp 19 Cr L J 712 (Pat) Balajit v Bhoju 35 Cal 117 Mahadeo v Bishu 25 All 537 Baishnab Das v E p 12 C W N 606 Emp v Debendra 1 C L J 632 Kali Pershad v Dhodhai 22 Cr L J 574 (Pat) Abdus Sayeed v Emp 23 Cr L J 123 (Cal) whereas the effect of an order under this section would be to bind down only one of the parties leaving the other party free without any adjudication upon the question as to which of the parties is in possession—Dolegobind v Dahnu 25 Cal 559 Bidhubhusan v Annoda 6 C W N 883 Baishnab Das v Emp 12 C W N 606 Driver v Q E 25 Cal 798 Shama Churn v Emp 6 P L T 766 26 Cr L J 1562 It should be noted that while section 107 leaves it to the Magistrate to demand security or not in the exercise of his discretion section 145 makes it obligatory upon him to institute proceedings if he is satisfied as to the existence of a dispute relating to immoveable property—Balajit v Bhoju 35 Cal 117 Proceedings under section 10 are intended only for the security of the public peace and not for the purpose of enabling one of the two contending parties to help himself in recovering possession of immoveable property after having his adversary s hands tied down by an order under this section In such a case the necessary action must be taken under section 145 of the Code—Jalil v Crown 1917 P L R 144 19 Cr L J 446 Even if the Magistrate proceeds at all under section 107 the proper order is to bind down both the parties—Baishnab Das v Emp 12 C W N 606 as for instance where both parties are equally dangerous—Bindrabun v Emp 22 Cr L J 701 (All)

But if the dispute is not bona fide i e if one party is clearly in possession of property and another party wrongfully and without any claim to possession seeks to eject him by force from the possession of the land and a breach of the peace is imminent there cannot be said to be a bona fide dispute about possession within the meaning of Sec 145 and the Magistrate is justified in taking action under section 107—Emp v Ram baran, 28 All 406 Lachmi v Emp 1 P L T 681, 22 Cr L J 86, Shama Churn v Emp, 6 P L T 766 26 Cr L J 1562 If one of the parties threatens to use violence to the other party if the latter should go upon the land of which the latter is in possession an order under section 107 binding down the former would be proper—Jafar v Jaribulla, 9 C W N 551 If it is probable that the parties to a land dispute will break the King's peace before the decision of the Civil Court can be given, that danger can be guarded against by an order under Sec 107 in an appropriate case—In re Mallappa 28 Bom L R 488 27 Cr L J 734 (735)

Where the dispute between the parties is not one concerning land and does not involve any question of actual possession but concerns the rights of the respective parties to carry on boring operations for coal over a specified area the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to enter into the intricate questions of title and possession which arise between the parties If in such a case there is any likelihood of a breach of the peace proceedings which are simpler in nature and which summarily and expediently dispose of the matter should be adopted That is, proceedings under sec 107 would be more appropriate in such a case than proceedings under sec 145—Indian Iron and Steel Co v Bansa Gopal 32 C L J 54 22 Cr L J 99

An order under sec 107 is no bar to a subsequent proceeding under Chapter XII—Baisnab v Gatinath 39 Cal 469 16 C W N 384 Ram Lochun v K F 36 All 143 12 A L J 162 Nasiruddin v Gofuruddin, 21 C W N 160.

Similarly an order under Sec 145 is no bar to the passing of an order under Sec 107 on the same facts if the Magistrate is satisfied that notwithstanding the order under Sec 145 one of the parties is likely to take the law into his own hands—In re Muthia, 36 Mad 315 K E v Bandi, 24 O C 21, 22 Cr L J 384

But it is illegal to institute proceedings under one section and to pass an order under another Thus, where the Magistrate instituted proceedings under Sec 145 and apprehending a disturbance of the peace, ordered a party to furnish security under Sec 107, it was held that the order was illegal and without jurisdiction—Emp v Sat Deo, 14 A L J 794, 17 Cr L J 527 Similarly, where a Magistrate proceeded under section 107 and concluded the proceedings thereunder but sebsequently passed an order under Section 145 held that the order of the Magistrate was ultra vires, as he failed to take written statements from the parties and receive evidence under the latter section—Sahdeb v Jumon, 19 Cr. L J 320 (Pat)

are taken under sec 10 instead of under sec 145 the Magistrate cannot pass an oder of attachment of property (which order can be passed only under sec 146)—Ram Sarup v K E A I R 1924 Oudh 345 25 Cr L J 350

235 Who can be bound down —Only the person who is himself likely to cause a breach of the peace (and no other) can be bound down under this section it is illegal and contrary to the provisions of this section to take recognisance from one person in order to prevent another from committing a breach of the peace—Ram Coomar v Rajagopal 17 W R 54 Kashi Chandra v Hur Kishore 19 W R 47 Thus the mere fact that a dispute exists between two rival Zemindars would not justify proceedings being taken against all their officers and servants unless there are materials to show that they are all likely to commit a breach of the peace It may be that they are all interested in the dispute between their masters—and in one sense all the members of the Zemindar s family are interested in a dispute relating to a property comprised in the Zemindary—but that by itself would be no ground for taking proceedings against them all—Ainuddin v Emp 24 Cr L J 230 (Cal) Where there were old standing feuds between the parties but the Magistrate finding no evidence against them discharged them but bound down their servants held that the order was illegal and without jurisdiction—Din Dayal v Emp 23 A L J 300 26 Cr L J 981

A non resident Zemindar cannot be bound over to keep the peace merely because his local agents are committing acts likely to cause a breach of the peace—In re Charoo Chundra 10 C L R 430 The mere fact that the patwari threatened to use violence does not justify the Magistrate in starting proceedings agains the proprietor and manager on the presumption that the latter must have acquiesced in the action of the patwari—Grant v Emp 2 P L T 669 22 Cr L J 745 But the master would be liable if he actually acquiesced in the servant s acts Thus where the master a panda of Gaya used to send his servant always armed with a lathi to the Railway station for procuring pilgrims and this led to a contest with a rival panda resulting in disturbance of the public peace it was held that this was sufficient to make the master liable under this section The fact that the master himself did not go to the Railway station but always remained in his house was no bar to the application of this section— Balalal v K E 1 P L J 361 18 Cr L J 374

So also where it was found that the petitioner was not himself likely to commit a breach of the peace he should not be ordered under this section merely because his act of attaching the crops of his raiyats would lead to a riot resulting from the resistence of the cultivators to the attachment—In re Sheo Surn, 3 C L R 280

236 Evidence —A Magistrate dealing with proceedings under this section must base his judgment upon evidence relevant to the case

He should not rely upon his knowledge of certain facts which he obtains from sources outside the record—Mathura v Emp 14 A L J 769 17 Cr L J 484 Where the order is passed against more persons than one there must be definite evidence in the case of any and every person that there is a danger of a breach of the peace by him The mere fact that a collective body of persons are indulging in feelings of hostility against another body of persons is insufficient—Shambhu v Emp 38 All 468 14 A L J 656 17 Cr L J 400

Consent of accused to be bound down —The fact of likelihood of a breach of the peace must be established by independent evidence In the absence of evidence to prove that the accused was likely to commit a breach of the peace the accused s own statement before the Magistrate that he is willing to give security would not justify an order being passed under this section—Jagdat v Emp 21 Cr L J 176 (All) Crown v Sheodan 1915 P R 24 16 Cr L J 784 Prem Singh v Crown 1917 P R 27 18 Cr L J 847 Joli v Emp 25 Cr L J 710 (Lah) 20 Cr L J 105 Prabudas v Emp 21 Cr L J 656 (Nag) Karam v Emp 23 Cr L J 175 (Lah) Ram Chandra v Emp 35 Cal 674 Chandra Sekhar v Emp 21 Cr L J 59 (All) In recent Allahabad cases it has been held (dissenting from the above rulings) that where the persons called upon to furnish security appeared in Court and expressed their willingness to be bound over whereupon the trial Court took no evidence and passed an order against them the consent of the accused must be taken to be a plea of guilty and the order for security was rightly passed —Ghariba v K E 46 All 109 1 A L J 882 25 Cr L J 750 Nasir Ahmed v Emp 28 Cr L J 609 (All)

Reference to sub-Magistrate or to Police —The power of taking action under section 107 is a discretionary power and there is nothing irregular in a Magistrate calling for a report from a subordinate Magistrate before issuing notice under section 112 especially if he doubts whether the information before him is reliable—Egambara v Murugappa 2 Weir 51 It is open to a Magistrate to refer a petition under section 107 to a police officer for investigation—Sanjivi v Koneri 49 Mad 315 50 M L J 460 A I R 1926 Mad 521

237 Subsection (2)—Local jurisdiction —In order to give the Magistrate jurisdiction over a person it is not necessary that such person should permanently or habitually live within his jurisdiction It is sufficient if at the time when the Magistrate receives information and takes proceedings under this section the person temporarily resides within his jurisdiction—Shama Charn v Kalu Mandal 24 Cal 344 Ullah Khan v Emp 22 Cr L J 109 (All) The terms of this sub section do not authorise a Magistrate to bind over a person residing outside the limits of his district concerning whom he has received information that such person is likely to commit a breach of the peace within his district—In re Jai prakash 6 All 26 (F B) In re Abdul Aziz 14 All 49 In re Rajendra 11 Cal 737 Dinonath v Girija 12 Cal 133 In re Krishnaji 23 Bom 32 The proper course in such a case is to cause information to be given to the Magistrate within whose district that person resides in order that proceedings might be taken by that Magistrate—In re Rajendra 11 Cal 737

If however a Magistrate proceeds under this section against a person not residing within the local limits of his jurisdiction and no objection is taken in the trial Court to his jurisdiction and no prejudice is caused the irregularity is cured by sec 531—Ram Deo v Emp 27 Cr L J 1132 (All)

Special powers of Chief Presidency and District Magistrates —Sub section (2) gives special powers to Chief Presidency and District Magis trates to proceed against persons outside jurisdiction Therefore where a District Magistrate is satisfied that a breach of the peace is apprehended within the local limits of his district the fact that the accused is living outside such limits in a Native State does not take away his jurisdiction to pass an order under this section—Sheo Baran v Emp 20 A I J 523 23 Cr L J 396 But the District Magistrate cannot delegate this special power to a subordinate Magistrate Thus a Sub divisional Magistrate can not on the direction of a District Magistrate draw up proceedings under this section against a person residing in another jurisdiction in such a case the proceedings must take place and be brought to a conclusion before the District Magistrate himself—Nirleekar v Emp 13 C W N 580 A District Magistrate is not competent to make over the initiation of proceedings under this section to a first class Magistrate who has no local jurisdiction over the matter—Konda Reddy v K E 41 Mad 246 But after proceedings have been initiated by a District Magistrate against persons residing outside jurisdiction he can transfer the proceedings to a subordinate Magistrate otherwise competent to deal with the matter This section only restricts the initiation of the proceedings against persons living outside the jurisdiction of the District Magistrate but does not prevent him from transferring such proceedings after initiation to a sub ordinate Magistrate though such Magistrate had no jurisdiction to initiate the proceedings—Surja Kanta v Emp 31 Cal 350, K E v Munna 24 All 151 Rakhal Mandal v Emp 27 C L J 314 But the District Magis trate cannot make over the case to a Magistrate incompetent to try the case e g a 2nd class Magistrate—Gobind v K E 37 All 70 12 A L J 1136

238 Sub-section (3 — Has reason to believe —The use of this expression as compared with is informed in sub section (1) shows that the Magistrate s discretion under this sub section is very limited The Magistrate should act when he has reason to believe, i e when he has reasonable grounds to believe and not merely to suspect See Emp v Rango 6 Bom 402

239 Sub-section (4)—Power to detain in custody —Only in the special circumstances referred to in clauses (3) and (4) does the law em power the Magistrate to detain a person against whom proceedings have been instituted under this section—In re Kunandan v Emp, 32 Cal 8 Therefore where an accused was not sent before a District Magistrate another Magistrate acting under clause (3) so as to bring the case under clause (4), such District Magistrate s order detaining the accused in custody was illegal—Chidambara v Emp 31 Mad 315 (F B)

240. Bail :—Even when the person has been arrested under clause (3), unless there are special circumstances, he should be admitted to bail When a Magistrate on the report of the D S P directed the re arrest of persons (whom he had previously admitted to bail on their appearance) and remanded them to custody it was held that the re arrest and remand were illegal as none of the special circumstances mentioned in clause (3) existed in the case, and the Magistrate was bound under section 496 to release them on bail—Raghunandan v Emp, 32 Cal 80 But the Madras High Court holds that the Magistrate may in his discretion detain such persons in custody, according to the clear words of sub section (4) these words cannot be qualified by sec 496 that section does not give an absolute right of bail but must be read along with any other provision giving to the Court a special power of detention and sub section (4) of this section gives such power—Narayanasuami v Emp 36 Mad 474

240A. Revision :—See note 294 under sec 118

An order of a Magistrate refusing to take action under sec 107 cannot be set aside by the superior Court in revision The object of this section is rather administrative than judicial If the Magistrate who is responsible for the administration of a subdivision is not satisfied that there is any need to take proceedings under this chapter a superior judicial tribunal cannot interfere with the exercise of his discretion—Ram Lal v Bankaleshar, 28 O C 44 1 O W N 359 25 Cr L J 1149 Phani Bhusan v Kunja 25 Cr L J 679 (Cal) A I R 1925 Cal 262

Persons who come to the High Court in revision against an order under section 107 should do so with the utmost promptitude and at any rate within 30 days of the order against which they complain—Ram Deo v Emp, 27 Cr L J 1132 (All)

241. Nature of proceedings under this chapter .—There is no unanimity of opinion among the various Courts as to whether proceedings under this Chapter are of a criminal nature or as to whether the persons proceeded against under this Chapter are accused persons In Wajid Ali v K E, 41 Cal 719 In re Ramasami 27 Mad 510 Desikachari v Emp 39 Mad 539 Lalit Mohan v Suryakanta 28 Cal 709 Mathura Prasad v Q E, 3 O C 247 and Md Niaz v Jai Ram, 41 All 503 it is held that proceedings under this chapter are of a criminal nature therefore, a person who brings a proceeding under sec 107 from malicious motives is liable to an action for malicious prosecution if the proceeding terminates in favour of the person against whom the allegation is made—Md Niaz Khan v Jai Ram 41 All 503, Chiranji v Dharam Singh, 43 All 402, whereas in Ahmed v K E, 1914 P R 5, 15 Cr L J. 563, and Rehmani v Crown, 1916 P L R 78, it has been held that proceedings under sec 110 are not criminal proceedings, and the Chief Court has no power to direct the transfer of such proceedings under sec 526 from one Magistrate s Court to another (But the word criminal has now been omitted from sec 526)

In the following cases it has been held that persons proceeded against under this chapter are in the position of accused persons—Hopcroft v Emp 36 Cal 163 Q E v Mutsaddi 21 All 107 Gokha Singh v Chetu 1905 P R 33 Crown v Ida 1900 P R 15 Nakhi Lal v Q E 27 Cal 656 Jhojha Singh v Q E 23 Cal 493 Q E v Mona Puna 16 Bom 661 In re Venkatachinnaya 33 Mad 511 (F B) and further inquiry can be ordered in case of such persons under sec 437 (now Section 436)—Q E v Mutsaddi 21 All 107 K E v Ziauddin 24 All 148 Gokha v Chetu 1905 P R 33 (But see sec 436 as now amended in 1923)

But in K E v Rameshwar 36 All 26? Emp v Basya 5 Bom L R 27 Raghunandan v Emp 32 Cal 80 it has been held that such persons are not accused persons within the meaning of Sec 16 nor are they accused persons within the meaning of sec 437 (now 436) of the Code—Md Khan v Emp 1905 P R 42 Q E v Iman Mandal 27 Cal 662 Dayanath v Emp 33 Cal 8 Velu v Chidambara 33 Mad 85 Narain v Durga 1911 P R 6 An application to take proceedings under this chapter is not an accusation of an offence—Md Khan v Emp 1905 P R 42 2 Cr L J 69, Natha Singh v Pala Singh 1896 P R 4 and therefore compensation cannot be awarded under sec 250 to the person against whom proceedings under this chapter have been dropped such proceedings not being proceedings in a case in which a person is accused of an offence —In re Govind 25 Bom 48 Hazari v Meman Mal 1893 P R 16, Crown v Kaura 1902 P R 33 Q E v Lakhpat 15 All 365 Mannu Khan v Chandi 20 A L J 624 23 Cr L J 474 Ram Badan v Janki 45 All 363 21 A L J 207 24 Cr L J 228 Ram Sukh v Mahadeo 7 A L J 743 Bindachal v Lal Behari 36 All 382 Natha Singh v Pala Singh 1896 P R 4 Jay Singh v Kanhya 1884 P R 37 A person called upon to give security is not an accused within the meaning of sec 342 nor is he guilty of any offence therefore omission to examine him under that section is not an illegality—Benode Behari v Emp 50 Cal 985

There are certain indications to show that it is not the intention of the Legislature to treat the persons proceeded against under this chapter as accused persons or as persons guilty of an offence —First the Legislature has studiously avoided the use of the word accused in sections 107, 116 and has deliberately used such expressions as the person such person the person informed against (section 107) the person called upon to show cause (Sec 116) etc whereas in the chapters relating to inquiries and trials (chapters XVIII XX—XXIII) the word accused has been used throughout And during the debate in the Legislative Assembly the Law Member stated that the word accused was really a misnomer in security cases (Leg Ass Debates 18 1 23 p 1753) Secondly in the similar case of a proceeding under chapter XXXVI the word accused has now been replaced by the words any person This is significant Thirdly in sec 340 the words against whom proceedings are instituted

under this Code have now been added in order to make it clear that the words a person accused of an offence occurring in that section do not include a person proceeded against under Chapter VIII Fourthly, in section 436 the words person accused of an offence have been substituted for the words accused person this shows that the person proceeded against under the present chapter is not a person accused of an offence and that sec 436 does not apply to such person

Security for good behaviour from persons disseminating seditious matter

108 Whenever a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, or a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf has information that there is within the limits of his jurisdiction any person who, within or without such limits, either orally or in writing or in any other manner intentionally disseminates or attempts to disseminate or in anywise abets the dissemination of,—

(a) any seditious matter that is to say any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(b) any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 153A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(c) any matter concerning a Judge which amounts to criminal intimidation or defamation under the Indian Penal Code

such Magistrate, if in his opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding may (in manner hereinafter provided) require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his good behaviour for such period not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix

No proceedings shall be taken under this section against the editor, proprietor, printer or publisher of any publication registered under, and edited, printed and published in conformity with, the rules laid down in [illegible] Books Act 1867 [XXV of [illegible] matter contained in such publication except by [illegible] order or under the authority of the Governor Gen[illegible] in Council or the Local Govern ment or some officer empowered by the Governor-General in Council in this behalf.

Change —The italicised words have been added by Sec 17 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

Or in any other manner — This amendment is to provide for the contingency where the matters covered by section 108 have been disseminated by other means than either orally or in writing e g by gramophone records —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

Intentionally —This word has been added during the debate in the Assembly on the motion of Mr Rangachariar so that innocent agents may not be proceeded against for instance boys who handle newspapers without knowing the contents and such other persons who are merely ignorant tools in the hands of other persons should not be proceeded against —Legislative Assembly Debates January 18 1923 page 1279

If proceeding —For reason of the addition of these words see notes to sec 107 under heading Change

Ind edited — In view of the recent amendments made in the Press and Registration of Books Act 1867 regulating the editing of newspapers, we have made a consequential amendment here We also think that the protection given by the last clause of section 108 should only extend to newspapers which are edited printed and published in conformity with that Act —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

With reference publication — This amendment is merely designed to make the intention of the Legislature clearer as regards the proceedings which require sanction prior to their institution —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

242 Essentials of the section —In a proceeding under this section it must be shown that the accused was connected with the dissemination of the seditious matter Thus the mere writing of a seditious matter is not a sufficient ground for proceeding against the author under this section unless it is shown that he was connected with the publication or the subsequent dissemination thereof So also in the case of a printer, although it must be assumed that by printing the seditious matter he abets the dissemination thereof still in order to make him liable under this section it must be shown that he had a knowledge of the contents of the matter printed especially in case of a big press which is managed by an independent staff such as manager, clerks and others where it is not possible for the owner of the press to scrutinize personally every detail of the concern As regards the publisher, he is liable under this section because as publisher he must be presumed to have knowledge of the contents of the matter and he therefore disseminated or at least abetted the dissemination of the matter within the meaning of this section—Imp v Pitre 47 Bom 435 25 Bom L R 97 25 Cr L J 150

243 Seditious matter —The test under this section is whether the person proceeded against has been disseminating seditious matter, and

whether there is a fear of the repetition of such offence In every case it is a question of fact which will have to be determined with reference to the antecedents of the person and other surrounding circumstances—Emp. v Vaman, 11 Bom L R 743 10 Cr L J 379 The preaching of swaraj, which means nothing more than Home rule under the present Government by constitutional means does not amount to dissemination of seditious matter and does not therefore justify an order under this section—Veni Bhu han v Emp, 34 Cal 991 Emp v Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 19 Bom L R 211 18 Cr L J 567 It is essential under clause (a) of this section that the matter disseminated must be seditious—19 Bom L R 211

244. Promoting enmity between classes.—To sustain an order under section 108, it is not sufficient that the language used was highly offensive to one community it must also be shown that the accused intended to provoke feelings of hatred or enmity between two communities But it is not necessary that he should have succeeded in provoking such feelings if deliberate intention to do so can be inferred—Dhammaloka v Emp, 4 Bur L T 84 In Sital Prosad v Emperor 43 Cal 591, 20 C W N 199 on the other hand it has been held that to justify an order under sec 108, one has only got to find that the words used in the leaflet or the matters complained of are likely to promote feelings of hatred or enmity, and there is no necessity under this section of finding intention such as would be necessary if the person were placed on his trial under sec 153A, I P C This decision seems to be no longer correct because the word 'intentionally has been newly added See P K Chakravarty v Emp, 54 Cal 59 30 C W N 953 27 Cr L J 1154 (Forward Case)

Security for good behaviour from vagrants and suspected persons

109. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class receives information—

(a) that any person is taking precautions to conceal his presence within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and that there is reason to believe that such person is taking such precautions with a view to committing any offence, or

(b) that there is within such limits a person who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself, such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix

245 Scope and object —This section provides for taking security not from persons suspected of a particular offence but from persons lurking within the Magistrate s jurisdiction who have no ostensible means of subsistence or cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves—Reg v Bhuja Ratanlal 63

This section aims at summarily disposing of cases of vagabondism where sturdy rogues are found to be lurking about—1 O S C No 73

Magistrates are empowered to put in force the provisions of this section whenever they have credible information that the accused has no ostensible means of livelihood or is unable to give a satisfactory account of himself and is within the local limits of his jurisdiction—Emp v Madho Dhobi 31 Cal 557 Mahadeo v K E 6 A L J 253 Honorary Magistrates can act under this section—Emp v Madho Dhobi 31 Cal 557

246 Within the Magistrate's jurisdiction —It is not necessary that the accused person should have a residence within the local limits of the Magistrate s jurisdiction—In re Narsimhappa 2 Weir 53

The passage within the local limits of the Magistrate s jurisdiction in clause (a) is part of the predicate to conceal his presence and the offence contemplated is that of a person probably although not necessarily coming from outside the jurisdiction into the Magistrate s jurisdiction for some nefarious purpose and taking precautions to conceal the fact that he is present in that jurisdiction Clause (a) is not intended to apply to a habitual resident or a person well known in the neighbourhood trying to conceal himself it is a mistake to read this clause as applying to a person who takes steps to conceal himself in the sense of concealing his presence in the way in which a criminal conceals his presence when he goes in the dark or by a deserted road or by some other secret means to commit a crime in his own neighbourhood—Emp v Bhairon 49 All 240 25 A L J 94 27 Cr L J 1116

The fact that the accused was arrested from a place outside the Magistrate s jurisdiction and that the arrest was illegal would not oust the Magistrate s jurisdiction to proceed under this section—Madho Dhobi 31 Cal 557 (following Emp v Ratalu 6 Mad 1-4)

When a person gives a satisfactory account of his presence within the limits of the Magistrate s jurisdiction he cannot be called upon by such Magistrate to give an account of his presence in any other jurisdiction—Satish Chandra v Emp 39 Cal 456 16 C W N 499 13 Cr L J 161

247 Concealing presence with a view to commit offence —Where a person s presence or residence within the Magistrate s jurisdiction was well known and there was no attempt to conceal the same his mere attempt to conceal his presence at a particular spot at a particular time or his inability to give a satisfactory explanation of what he was doing at a particular place at a particular time does no

bring his case within sec 109 and he cannot be ordered to give security for good behaviour This section refers to a continuous act and does not apply to a case where there is a momentary effort at concealment to avoid detection or arrest—Reshu Kabiraj v Emp 2? C W N 163 18 Cr L J 825 Sheikh Piru v Emp 41 C L J 142 26 Cr L J 842 See also Lallu v Emp 17 A L J 891 20 Cr L J 572 The Patna High Court however is of opinion that in order to bring a case under this section it need not be proved that the accused has followed a continuous course of conduct in taking precautions to conceal his presence—Rambirich v Emp 6 Pat 177 8 P L T 95 27 Cr L J 1128 (1129)

The concealment referred to must be with a view to committing some offence Therefore a person cannot be called upon to furnish security under this section in respect of an alleged temporary concealment in his father s house merely to avoid observation of police (owing to a warrant being issued against him) unconnected with any intent to commit an offence or with any previous concealment outside the Magistrate s jurisdiction—Satish Chandra v Emp 39 Cal 456 An old offender attempting on seeing a constable to conceal himself to avoid observation does not bring himself within the mischief of sec 109—Sheikh Piru v Emp 41 C L J 142 26 Cr L J 842 Rambirich v Emp 6 Pat 177 8 P L T 95 27 Cr L J 1128 This clause is one which must be used with discretion and the mere fact that a person was found talking at night with some persons of bad character is no evidence that he was taking precautions to conceal his presence There must be some definite attempt at concealment by taking precautions with that object in view whether it be disguise or otherwise indicating a desire to hide the fact that the person is present within the local limits of the Magistrate s jurisdiction—Ram Birich v Emp 6 Pat 177 8 P L T 95 27 Cr L J 1128

A person who gives a false name and delivers letters secretly containing incitement to commit crimes or demanding money for the means of committing crimes comes within the provisions of clause (a)—Preo Nath v Emp 15 Cr L J 255 (Cal) But where a person on being asked by the police gives a false name and then corrects it and there is nothing else to show that he was taking precautions to conceal his presence an action under this section is not justified—Sheo Prosad v Emperor 21 A L J 847

248 Want of ostensible means of subsistence —Mere proof of want of ostensible means of subsistence is not of itself a sufficient reason for passing an order for furnishing security Otherwise jails would be quite full especially in times of famine and scarcity A Magistrate is bound to consider whether the order is really necessary in order to secure good behaviour which is a matter for the Magistrate s judicial discretion and he ought not to send people to jail simply because the opinions of Police witnesses are unfavourable to them—O T v Kala Ratanlal 723

A young man out of employment staying in the house of his father who is a man of substance and able if necessary to support him cannot be held to be without ostensible means of subsistence within the meaning of this section Clause (b) is directed only against suspicious strangers lurking within the Magistrate s jurisdiction—Satish Chandra v Emp 39 Cal 456 Abdul Rashid v Emp 22 Cr L J 749 (Lah) Merely to be penniless or out of work is not an offence Many an honest man may find himself in either predicament and in a country where there are workless people but no workhouse persons ought not to be exposed to proceedings under sec 109 (b) merely because they cannot give a satisfactory account of the manner in which they are eking out a precarious existence—Victor v K E 53 Cal 345 30 C W N 380 27 Cr L J 497 If a person is unable to prove the source of his livelihood he ought not to be ordered to execute a bond under section 109 unless there is reasonable ground for suspecting that he is sustaining himself by some dishonest means for such an order can be made where it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour —Ibid The accused s explanation that he came to Calcutta 2 months ago and that he worked as a cooly but had no fixed abode is a satisfactory account of himself If a cooly could not show any immediate work it does not mean that he has no ostensible means of livelihood—Sheikh Piru v Emp 41 C L J 14 26 Cr L J 842 So also the mere fact that a man is doing no work at present and was previously convicted for bad livelihood (Q E v Poora 5 C W N 28 Sheikh Piru 41 C L J 14 26 Cr L J 842) or the mere fact that he belongs to a wandering tribe (Ire Yerukala 2 Weir 53) or to a gang which frequented mela and carried on illegal games (Malaleo v K E 6 A L J 253) or the mere fact that he is a gambler or opium smoker (1 Bur S R 246) or has no other means of subsistence except through play of ring game which is a game of skill and not an offence under the Gaming Act (Bargoli v Emp 40 Cal 702 14 Cr L J 15) is not a sufficient ground for requiring him to give security

249 Cannot give a satisfactory account of himself —Clause (b) of this section applies not only to vagrants or vagabonds but also covers suspected persons of any class who cannot give satisfactory account of themselves—Varendra v Emp 13 Cr L J 239 (Cal) A person who gives a false name or address (Abdur Rashid v Emp 22 Cr L J 749) or gives a false account or cannot give a satisfactory account of his association with persons who are dangerous political conspirators (Varendra 13 Cr L J 239) is included in this section

The words cannot give a satisfactory account of himself do not mean failure to satisfy the Magistrate that he spends his time or at least his leisure hours in a satisfactory manner and therefore the fact that a person (a Municipal peon) whose residence and occupation were well known was said to prowl about at night in the company of scoundrels and was armed with a lathi and used the lathi was not a sufficient ground for calling upon him to furnish security—Sharif Ahmad v K E 8 A L J 1 97 12 Cr L J 536

factory explanation when called upon to account for his presence in the place where he is found e g if he fails to account for being discovered in the company of persons living a dishonest or criminal life or detected in some place where he has no legal right to be But the poor and the outcast and the old offender must somewhere move and live and have their being and a person who was passing the time to all outward appearances innocently and in a manner void of suspicion could not be brought within the ambit of sec 109 merely because he was unable to prove that he was working for his living—Victor v K E 53 Cal 345 30 C W N 380 27 Cr L J 497

Where it was proved that the accused were residents of another district where they had their houses that they had money with them that they were dealers in cattle and that they had money in deposit with bankers it could not be said that they had not been able to give a satisfactory account of themselves And the mere fact that they were camping in an open ground in a city while on their way home would not justify the Magistrate in passing an order under this section—Nanka v Emp 18 A L J 321 21 Cr L J 366

'With sureties' —Compare this expression with the words with or without sureties in the preceding sections The requirement of surety in this section is obligatory and not optional

250 Evidence —Mere proof of want of ostensible means of livelihood is not a sufficient reason for passing an order under this section —Q E v Kala Ratanlal 723 the Magistrate should take evidence as to the general character of the person charged with bad livelihood and not convict him on the mere report of Police officers—Q v Ilum Sheikh 5 W R 2

The fact that the accused had previously been connected with a criminal conspiracy or might still be in correspondence with criminals is not relevant under this section though it might form the basis of a substantive proceeding under Sec 110—Satish Chandra 39 Cal 456

An order under this section passed more on suspicion than on any good basis of fact must be set aside Where three respectable residents of Delhi came to Meerut by a night train and were found on the road between the station and the city near to a place where a burglar s jemmy was found an order calling upon them to furnish security for good behaviour was illegal—Ghulam Jilani v Emp 17 A L J 432 20 Cr L J 401

Security for good behaviour from habitual offenders

110. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government receives information that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction—

(a) is by habit a robber, house breaker, thief or forger, or

(b) is by habit a receiver of stolen property knowing the same to have been stolen, or

(c) habitually protects or harbours thieves or aids in the concealment or disposal of stolen property, or

(d) habitually commits or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of, the offence of kidnapping, abduction, extortion or cheating or mischief, or any offence punishable under Chapter XII of the Indian Penal Code or under Section 489A, Section 489B, Section 489C, or Section 489D of that Code, or

(e) habitually commits, or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of, offences involving a breach of the peace, or

(f) is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community, such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding three years, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix

Change —The amendment of this section as shown by the italicised words has been effected by section 18 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

We agree that habitual kidnappers should be brought under this section but doubt the necessity of any reference to abduction We think that it is desirable to include all offences under Chapter XII of the Indian Penal Code and also habitual forgers We have included forger in section 110 (a) and have re arranged clause (d) in accordance with this note —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

251 Object and scope of section —The object of this section is to afford protection to the public against a repetition of crimes in which the safety of property is menaced as well as the security of

person is jeopardised—Emp v Nawab 2 All 835 Manindra v. Emp, 46 Cal 215 Rajendra v K L 17 C W N 238 14 Cr L J 5

Again the object of this section is the prevention and not the punishment of offences and with that object it authorises the Magistrate to take security for good behaviour But it is solely for the purpose of securing future good behaviour that the section can be used Any attempt to use it for the purpose of punishing past offences is wrong and not sanctioned by law—In re Umbica 1 C L R 68 In re Juggat 2 Cal 110 In re Raja Valad 10 Bom 174 Q E v Kandhaiya 7 All 67 Jagat Singh v Crown 2 Lah L J 237 Therefore where the accused have committed definite acts of extortion for which they are liable to be prosecuted under the I P Code an order for furnishing security under this section should not be passed because such order would seriously prejudice them in their trial for those offences—Inookool v Q E 27 Cal 781 So also where a man is alleged to have habitually committed robbery with 4 or more others it means that he is a member of a gang of dacoits and thereby commits a definite and specific offence for which he ought to be punished under sec 400 of the I P Code and no action should be taken under the preventive section of the Criminal Procedure Code It is for this reason that section 110 deliberately omits dacoity out of its purview—Ram Prasad v Emp 23 A L J 18 26 Cr L J 746 A I R 1925 All 250 But evidence going to show that a substantive offence has been committed or evidence which might possibly form the basis of a charge of substantive offence is not necessarily to be excluded from proceedings under section 110 and can form the basis of an order for security—Budan v Emp 3 A L J 507 47 All 733 26 Cr L J 1130 (distinguishing 3 A L J 18)

Moreover this section is not intended to afford the police a means of keeping a suspected person under detention until they are able to work out a case against him—King Emp v Paimal 10 A L J 331 13 Cr L J 827

252 Application of Section —This section arms the Magistrate with a powerful means of securing the interest of the community from injury at the hands of hardened offenders of the most dangerous classes Therefore the power given by this section should be exercised sparingly and with much discretion by the Magistrate and only in those cases where the evidence is very clear and precise—Rajendra v K L 17 C W N 238 Jagat Singh v Crown 2 Lah L J 237 Yaghi v Emp 1892 P R 5 3 Mad 238 nor on the other hand should its exercise be confined only to cases in which positive evidence is forthcoming of the commission of offences—In re Peddasna Reddi 3 Mad 238

This section is preventive and not punitive Its object to is protect society against persons who are so likely to commit offences that it is not advisable to leave them at large unchecked It is very undesirable to proceed under this section against a person who is trying to reform himself and so live an honest life—In re Billa Appayya 10 M L T 333 12 Cr L J 328

Moreover Magistrates should be cautious in making sure that the provisions intended for securing the peace of the community are not utilized for taking private vengeance under the aegis of a Crown prosecution—Kali Prasanna v Emp 38 Cal 156 15 C W N 366 12 Cr L J 164 It is to be feared that this section is often resorted to by the Magistrates for the purpose of ensuring the punishment of the persons suspected but not proved to have committed offences such as theft etc and it is notorious that accusations of bad livelihood are constantly made with the object of blackening an enemy s character and satisfying feelings of spite and hatred So it is incumbent on the Magistrates to see that this section is not resorted to unnecessarily and to annoy individuals—Sukha v Emp 1898 P R 4 The Courts must not make use of this section in order to secure a punishment of persons against whom a substantive charge has broken down—Raja Ram v Emp 23 O C 371 21 Cr L J 2-3 Bhagwat v K E 24 O C 317 Shiam Lal v K E 6 A L J 487 An order under section 110 should not be made against a person immediately after he has been acquitted of an offence unless a very strong case is made out against him—Abdulla v Emp 26 P L R 789 27 Cr L J 190 When proceedings have been taken under this section against a man soon after a discharge or acquittal from a charge of an offence of which he was suspected it is always necessary to make it clear that the proceedings have not been taken as a means of punishing in an indirect way a man whom the police suspected to be guilty—Shiam Lal v K E 6 A L J 487 9 Cr L J 518

This section has been made applicable to Burma Habitual Offenders Restriction Act by section 4 of that Act and section 3 of that Act permits an order of restriction to be passed in any case in which security can be required under section 110 of this Code—San Dun v K E 2 Rang 641 (642) A I R 1925 Rang 112

253 Sections 108 and 110 —The mere fact that sec 108 may have been applicable does not necessarily make sec 110 inapplicable—Manindra v Emperor 46 Cal 215 (234)

254 Sections 109 and 110 —The two sections overlap each other They must be carefully worked and great care should be taken not to abuse them The proceedings taken must clearly specify whether the accusation which the accused is to meet is one under section 109 or under sec 110—Mad Pol Man p 89 Therefore where the preliminary order passed by the Magistrate under sec 112 was not clear in that the accused did not know whether the accusation he had to meet was under section 109 or 110 the order was set aside—Q E v Iswar Chandra 11 Cal 13 An order under sec 110 is not valid during the continuance of an order under sec 109 the two sections having the same object and the evidence required to secure an order under either section being of the same nature —Gholam Ili v Emp 8 C W N 543 A person cannot be bound down under both the sections (109 and 110)—In re Rangaswami 38 Mad 535 16 Cr L J 631 In re Kosakumaran 38 Mad 556 16 Cr L J 6-6 (Contra —Jeomal v Emp 11 S L R 95 27 Cr L J 3 6)

255 Sections 107 and 110 —When the information set forth in the order of the Magistrate refers to an apprehended breach of the peace section 110 is not applicable but proceedings should be instituted under section 107 A Magistrate has no authority whatever under the law upon information that suggests the likelihood of an assault being committed and the peace endangered to resort to section 110 and it is altogether ultra vires for him to proceed thereunder—Emp v Babua 6 All 132 Emp v Kallu 27 All 92 When a Magistrate at first issued notice with reference to sec 110 but subsequently found that the case was under sec 107 he ought not to deal with the case as one under section 107 without issuing a fresh notice with reference to the altered view of the circumstances The notice issued with reference to sec 110 cannot be held sufficient to comply with the requirements of law because the facts necessary to be proved to make the accused liable under sec 110 are different from those under sec 107 and the accused should have notice of the facts on which the Magistrate proposes to proceed against him—Krishnaswami v Ramanamalai 30 Mad 282

Similarly where notice was issued to show cause why the accused should not be bound down to keep the peace under sec 107 he cannot be directed in the final order to execute a bond for good behaviour under Sec 110—Driver v Q E 25 Cal 798 But where the evidence was recorded at length and the parties had opportunity to cross examine the witnesses and were not prejudiced it was held that the irregularity was cured by sec 537—Sangamma v Emp 14 Cr L J 65 (Mad)

256 Magistrates empowered —This section only permits the particular Magistrates mentioned herein to deal with the cases falling under it Orders in such cases made by other Magistrates are invalid and without jurisdiction—Puran v Emp 17 Cr L J 141 (All) In the Punjab all first class Magistrates have been empowered to act under this section—Punjab Gazette 3 ? 1882 Part I p 32 In Madras according to Madras Act III of 1888 Sec 7 the Commissioner of Police can act as a Magistrate under this section

The special power must be conferred by the Local Government only it cannot be conferred by the District Magistrate—Q E v Khandu Ratanlal 838 Therefore a first class Magistrate not specially empowered under this section cannot exercise jurisdiction in a case arising under it upon a transfer thereof to him by the District Magistrate—Ibid Satish v Rajendra 27 Cal 898

257 Information —A Magistrate cannot proceed under this section unless he has the necessary information And there must be some information to work upon before a person can be arrested This section is not intended to empower the Police to arrest a person without any information and then to work out a case against him and give information to the Magistrate—K E v Paimal 10 A L J 351 13 Cr L J 827 A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to act under this section until he has such information before him as will suffice for his making an order in writing setting forth its substance and the further particulars required by sec

Nature and source of information —There is no limit to the nature and source of information on which a Magistrate may initiate proceedings under this section—In re Mithu 27 All 172 But the information cannot be proceeded upon unless it comes from a trustworthy source—Punj Cir p 165

The Magistrate is not bound to reveal the source of the information to the person concerned for the information is not any evidence against the accused moreover if a Magistrate is to set out before the accused the names of the persons from whom he receives information and the nature of the information given very few self respecting persons would dream of placing any information at the disposal of the Magistrate—In re Mithu Khan 27 All 172

The words receives information in this section include information howsoever obtained The law does not limit the method in which the Magistrate who is empowered by the Local Government is to receive the information He may receive the information through some other Magistrate Therefore where the police made a report to the senior Deputy Magistrate that certain persons were in the habit of committing mischief extortion and other offences and that Magistrate forwarded the report to another Magistrate of the first class held that the latter had jurisdiction to institute a proceeding under this section on that report—Hiranand v Emp 1 Pat 651 A I R 1922 Pat 586 24 Cr L J 31

As to what is or is not credible information see notes under sec 107

The information to be required by a Magistrate may be to some extent of a hearsay and general description but when the party to whom the order is directed appears in Court in obedience to such order the inquiry must be conducted on the lines laid down in section 117 of the Code—Emp v Babua 6 All 132

Conversations out of Court with persons however respectable are not legal or proper materials upon which to adopt proceedings under this section—Babua 6 All 132 It is incumbent on Magistrates to exercise the greatest caution and impartiality, and to be careful not to be influenced by outside gossip and vague rumours—Sukha v Emp 1898 P R 4

Magistrates are not competent to base their orders on their local and personal knowledge of the accused and witnesses—Ahmud Din v Emp 20 Cal 392 Jun Bahadur v Tilessuree 22 W R 79 Wali Md v Emp, 25 Cr L J 808 A I R 1925 Lah 166 No doubt a Magistrate is compelled in the performance of his duties to make private inquiries as to the character of his neighbourhood and as to the persons reputed to be of bad character and likely to cause trouble These inquiries are necessary to an executive officer having to inform himself of the nature of the population committed to his charge but where it is shown that the Magistrate has allowed the actual information obtained in such inquiries against certain individuals to influence his judgment in a judicial decision against those individuals brought before him by process of law his order would be quashed as being vitiated by the admission of such information—Ashiq Ali v Emperor 21 A L J 513 The proper procedure where it is important to utilize the personal knowledge of a Magistrate is for the case to be tried by another Magistrate and for the former Magistrate to give evidence as a witness—Ahmuddin v Emp 29 Cal 392 Nurdin v Emp 1903 P R 27 1 Cr L J 90

A local inquiry is most appropriate before instituting proceedings under sec 110 but once the accused are before the Court the case must be decided on the evidence alone and not on the basis of the local inquiry But it is not illegal for a Magistrate to use his inquiries to confirm the result at which he has arrived on a consideration of the evidence—Ram Pargat v Emp 12 O L J 341 2 O W N 350 26 Cr L J 1149

But although the private information possessed by a Magistrate concerning the accused person cannot be used as if it was evidence in the case yet such information is a form of check which the trial Court may legitimately use in order to test the nature of the evidence with which it has to deal and negative for example a suggestion that the police investigation has been unfair—Emp v Darbari Singh 45 All 749 (751)

258 "Within the Magistrate's jurisdiction" —A Magistrate can take action under this section only when the accused resides within the local limits of his jurisdiction—Sona Ram v K E 3 C L J 195 Kripa sindhu v Emp 1918 M W N 751 19 Cr L J 905 Crown v Kalu 1901 P R 12 and it is not contemplated by this section that he can issue a warrant so as to pursue the person concerned into another jurisdiction—Ketabos v Q E 27 Cal 993 nor is it contemplated that the Police should be at liberty to bring persons from distant places (e g from a different district or a different province) outside the Magistrate s jurisdiction to a place within the local limits of his jurisdiction and then to ask the Magistrate to exercise his jurisdiction in respect of offences committed elsewhere The jurisdiction given by this section is in terms confined to persons within the limits of the Magistrate s jurisdiction and certainly cannot have been meant to extend to persons who are within those limits merely because they have been brought there in police custody—Emp v Murli 1885 P R 13 But if a person has been arrested outside the jurisdiction for an offence committed within the jurisdiction and the charge of substantive offence fails the person can be proceeded against under this section—Manindra v Emp 46 Cal 215 (233)

But the residence need not be permanent residence within the local limits of the Magistrate s jurisdiction Therefore persons who ordinarily did not reside within the Magistrate s jurisdiction but resided within his jurisdiction at the time of taking action could be proceeded against by the Magistrate under this section—In re Kora Rangan 36 Mad 96 Lakhi Narain v K E 23 C W N 100 Sona Ram v K E 3 C L J 195 Bhola v Emp 23 Cr L J 86 20 A L J 40 Emp v Bapoo 9 Bom L R 214 In re Lamjibhai 14 Bom L R 889 13 Cr L J 706 Ghulam Kadir v Emp 27 Cr L J 1 61 (Sind) Having regard to the plain language of this section it is clear that a Magistrate is given power to deal with persons who have a general reputation as bad characters and who happen to be within his jurisdiction no matter whether they are residents of a place within his jurisdiction or not—Emp v Munna 39 All 139 17 Cr L J 390 The reason is that the most dangerous criminals have no well known residence anywhere and wander from place to place and it should be left in the power of the Magistrate to deal with them where the police or the Magistrate could be sure at any time of finding them—Emperor v Bapoo 9 Bom L R 244 In Emp v Durga Halwai 13 Cal 153 it has been pointed out that in none of the sections 107 110 does the word residing occur and therefore no residence within the local limits of the Magistrate s jurisdiction is necessary to bring the case under this section it is sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction if the evil habits were practised and the evil reputation acquired within the local limits of his jurisdiction i e if the various acts of house breaking and theft were committed at a place within the Magistrate s jurisdiction

Where the accused had a residential house within the Magistrate s jurisdiction to which he occasionally if not often went for the purpose of his business the Magistrate had jurisdiction over him provided the accused committed the acts of oppression while he so resided—Kasi Sundar v Emp 31 Cal 419

Residence always implies voluntary residence Therefore a person undergoing imprisonment within the Magistrate s jurisdiction cannot be said to be voluntarily residing—Ketaboi v Q E 27 Cal 993 In re Krishnaji 23 Bom 32 So also persons arrested from outside and brought and detained within the Magistrate s jurisdiction cannot be said to reside within the Magistrate s jurisdiction—Emp v Murli 1885 P R 43 But in Manindra v Emp 46 Cal 215 (235) and Emp v Nga Singh 8 L B R 353 17 Cr L J 88 (overruling 4 L B R 148) it has been held that an order under this section may be made against a person who is in custody in a jail within the local limits of the Magistrate s jurisdiction at the time of the proceeding This is also evident from the words when such person is in custody occurring in sec 114

259 Clause (a)—Habitual thief etc —The evidence must be of such a nature as would lead to a reasonable and definite ground for coming to the conclusion that the accused was a habitual thief—Gholam Ali v Emp 8 C W N 543 There should be proof of specific acts showing that he to the knowledge of some particular individual is by habit a thief or a dacoit—Kader v Emp 29 Cal 779 Where the evidence merely showed that the accused had been suspected of a single act of theft and kept bad company it did not amount to his being a robber by habit and an order under this section was not proper—Ishar Singh v Emp 1880 P R 32

Where a person stated that he was a bad character and that he had been once in jail but there was no evidence to show that he was a habitual thief an order under this section was not justified—R v Kaka 3 Bom L R 269

Mere association with men of bad character is not sufficient to bring a man under this section as being by habit a thief etc unless the association is to commit theft etc So the fact that a Zemindar had tenants of bad character and he used to lend money and paddy to them does not bring him under this section—Nilkamal v Emp 6 C L J 711 6 Cr L J 403 When the charge against the accused is that of being a habitual robber the fact that the accused gathered bad characters at his house does not go far enough to be in itself relevant It is necessary to show that these bad characters were robbers or were gathered there for the purpose of robbery or theft—Budhan v Emp 47 All 733 23 A L J 507 26 Cr L J 1130

Forger —By reason of the addition of this word in clause (a) the ruling in Mahtan Mal v Emp 1900 P R 28 (where it was held that a habitual forger did not come under this section) is no longer good law

260 Clause c —Aid in concealment of stolen property —This clause is designed to meet only the case of professional receivers of stolen property who assist the thief by protecting him from discovery and arrest and by helping him to dispose of such property—Nga Pu v K E (1910) U B R Cr P C 4 11 Cr L J 790 7 I C 462 (464)

Harbouring thief —The harbouring must be to screen the offender from punishment A person giving food or shelter or medical assistance to a starving or invalid criminal from mere motives of humanity and not with the intention of enabling him to escape justice does not come within the purview of this section—Ibid

261 Clause (d —Habitually committing extortion —Section 110 is not applicable to the case of persons who commit acts of extortion in a certain capacity (e g the burkundazes of Zemindars who commit acts of extortion on tenants) in the performance of their duties as it canot be said that they are in the habit of committing extortion as individual members of the community because if it so happens that they cease to be in the employ of the Zemindars they would no longer commit those acts of extortion The proper course of dealing with the case is to prosecute them or their masters under whose orders they act for specific acts of oppression—Anookool v Q E 27 Cal 781

It was formerly held that persons in the habit of bringing false claims by forged entries (Ganeshi v Emp 1884 P R 25) or obtaining decrees by means of forged documents (Crown v Chuni 1914 P R 21) did not come under this section as they could not be said to be habitually committing extortion But these rulings are no longer good law in view of the word forger added to clause (a) by the Amendment Act of 1923

A person who brings a claim in the Civil Court which he knows to be false commits an offence under sec 209 I P C but he does not by so doing commit an offence of extortion if he succeeds in the claim or an offence of attempting to commit extortion if he fails in his claim and he cannot be bound down under this section—Khushal v K E 20 O C 129 18 Cr L J 651 Bappuji v Emp 19 Cr L J 885 (Nag)

Committing mischief —This clause applies to persons who habitually commit mischief where the evidence shows the man to be of an excellent character one weak and unsupported charge of mischief by fire does not bring him within the purview of this clause—Hamidooddeen 24 W R 17

262 Clause (e)—Offences involving breach of the peace —See Note 221 under sec 106

Where the accused who was found by the Magistrate to be addicted to acts of immorality in attempting to seduce married women and behaving indecently and immodestly to them was bound over to give security for good behaviour under clause (e) of section 110 held that although the actions of the accused were certainly offences under the law and it might be desirable to control them still the offences were not such as involved a breach of the peace within the meaning of this section and of section 106 and the order for security was illegal—Arun Samanto v Emp 30 Cal 366 The words offences peace in this clause are to bear the same interpretation as in section 106—Ibid (at p 368)

263 Clause (f) —Desperate and dangerous character —A man of desperate and dangerous character in clause (f) means a man who has a reckless disregard of the safety of the person and of the property of his neighbours—Manindra v K E 46 Cal 215 Wahed Ali v Emp 11 C W N 789 Evidence of acts of extortion committed by a person unless those acts were accompanied by acts causing danger to life and property is not sufficient to bring the case under this clause—Wahid Ali v Emp 11 C W N 789

But where it was found that the accused persons were associated for the purpose of spreading disloyal doctrines among school boys and besides being engaged in preparing the young for the future revolution were connected with an organisation for the collection of money by dacoity it was held that these facts were sufficient to bring the case within this clause—Manindra v K E 46 Cal 215 23 C W N 193 19 Cr L J 696

The following persons though they are undoubtedly persons of bad character do not come under this clause as they cannot be said to be men of desperate and dangerous character —

270 Joint trial of several persons —See Note 90 under sec 117 (5)

The provisions of sec 117 (5) as to joint trial cannot properly be applied to proceedings under sec 110 when the matter under inquiry is whether a person is a habitual offender But there can be a joint trial of persons called on to show cause under sec 110 when there is evidence in the nature of a conspiracy or of acting in concert—Jogendra v K E 25 C W N 334 (335) 22 Cr L J 377 see also Kalu Mirza v Emp 37 Cal 91 Godhan v K E 4 P L J 7 The provisions about joint trial are applicable to cases coming under clause (f) as well as cases under clauses (a) to (e)—Jogendra v K E (supra) It is not advisable to take proceedings under this section against several persons jointly unless such persons are confederates or partners as against whom all the evidence is equally applicable—Emp v Angnu Singh 45 All 109 20 A L J 881 Ordinarily under this section every person has to be tried separately for the offences enumerated therein A joint trial is only permissible when two or more persons have been associated for the purpose of committing the offences mentioned in clauses (a) to (f) of this section Unless this circumstance is established a joint trial is illegal and the conviction would be set aside—Jai Rao v Emp 3 P L T 538 23 Cr L J 100 But if in a joint trial the evidence against each is separated and considered distinctly there is no prejudice and the order will not be upset—Shamsuddin v Emp, 26 Cr L J 1114 (Nag)

271 Evidence under this section —In a case under section 110 it is the duty of the Magistrate to hold an independent inquiry of the offence and not to bind down the accused person merely because he agrees to furnish security—Ram Charan v Imp 24 A L J 317 27 Cr L J 370 (371)

The evidence that is required to justify an order under this section is not necessarily evidence that the accused has committed definite criminal offences but it must be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise that he comes within the category of one of the clauses (a) to (f)—Sher Zaman v Emp 1899 P R 10 The mere fact that a man has a bad character does not necessarily make him liable to be called upon to furnish security for good behaviour There must be satisfactory evidence that he answers to one of the descriptions mentioned in the section—Imp v Babua 6 All 132 Emp v Kala Chand 6 Cal 11 In re Daulat Singh 14 All 45 In re Karupanam 8 M L T 246 11 Cr L J 638 Haku v Emp 1881 P R 12 Sohan v Emp 26 Cr L J 1377 The mere fact that a person has a record of several previous convictions does not satisfy the requirements of this section and he cannot be ordered to give security on that fact alone—In re Raja 10 Bom 174 (175) Imp v Nepal 13 C W N 318 The evidence must be of such a character that it will reasonably support the inference that it is necessary in the interests of public security to send the man to prison or to bind him down—Ahmuddi v Emp 2 A L J 678 25 Cr L J 1172 The evidence that a certain person is of bad character is not sufficient to put him on security under this section There should be clear evidence on the record to show what exactly he had been doing and how he had been living Where there is strong evidence of apparently respectable men on the record to show that a person has not in recent times lived a disreputable life and such evidence has not been rebutted security under this section ought not to be demanded—1916 P L R 30 Sham Lal v K E 6 A L J 487, 9 Cr L J 528 The mere fact that sixteen years ago the accused had on three occasions been bound over is no ground for considering that he is still a bad character and has not reformed himself and is not a ground of action under this section against him—Jagat Sing v Imp, 23 Cr L J 507 A Magistrate should not pass an order under this section where the witnesses for the prosecution are mostly enemies of the accused—Shajur v Emp 26 O C 242 24 Cr L J 565 Wali Md v Emp, 25 Cr L J 808 (Lah) Gur Dayal v Imp 26 Cr L J 99 (Oudh)

In a trial under this section the Magistrate must act on evidence duly recorded in the presence of the accused and it is not open to him to take into consideration any information obtained otherwise than from such evidence He must not act on anything extraneous to the evidence on the record e g, an information obtained from local inquiries—San Dun v K E, 2 Rang 641 (642)

Inquiries under Chapter VIII of the Criminal Procedure Code are governed by the ordinary rules of evidence and evidence which is not admissible under the Evidence Act cannot be admitted in proceedings under sec 110 of this Code—Bechai v Emp 12 A L J 937 15 Cr L J 705 Raj Narayan v Emp 25 A L J 393 28 Cr L J 502

Police evidence —In proceedings under this section the evidence of official and Police witnesses should as far as possible be eschewed Though there is no rule of law which prohibits a Magistrate from admitting Police evidence it should if not wholly discarded influence his judgment as little as possible Where the evidence of the police witnesses consists only of rumours and hearsay which they have recorded in their note books and diaries it is wholly inadmissible—In re Ranga Reddi 38 M L J 97 43 Mad 150 Entries in the Thana Village Crime Note Book are in themselves no evidence to support an order under this section—Pochai v K E 2? Mere suspicion is not evidence —The powers under this section are to be exercised very sparingly and only in those cases where the evidence is very clear and precise Where beyond the mere suspicion that the accused are habitual thieves nothing substantial has been established an action under this section is not justified—Jagat Singh v Emp 23 Cr L J 307 Amjad Ali v Emp 5 P L T 1?9 Where the only evidence against the accused was that he was a man of bad character and was suspected on many occasions by the Police an order under this section could not be sustained—Emp v Husain Ahmed 1905 A W N 34 Sohna v Emp 27 Cr L J 1067 (Lah) A person ought not to be bound down on the mere statement of witnesses that they suspect the accused to be a thief or a dacoit—Alep Pramanik v K E 11 C W N 413 Kisma v Emp 11 C W N 129 Sohna v Emp (supra) The fact that he was once convicted of theft and his house was searched on several occasions (but no stolen property was found and he was said to have associated with two or three persons of bad character does not justify an order under this section—Kashim v Crown 1907 P L R 23 5 Cr L J 24

Where the only thing appearing against the accused was that he was on a previous occasion arrested in connection with a dacoity but the police considered the evidence against him of so little value that he was released under sec 169 without even being placed before the Court held that this fact was insufficient for binding over the accused under this section —Jhardoo v K E ?5 Cr L J 43 A I R 1924 All 124 Sital Din v Emp 25 Cr L J 360 A I R 1925 Oudh 49 But if the evidence in support of the charge under section 110 is antecedent to the charge for

Evidence of habit —The persons mentioned in this section are those who are habitual criminals and the habit is to be proved by an aggregate of acts—Sriram Venkatasami 6 M H C R 120 1 Weir 457 The word habitually must be taken to mean repeatedly or persistently The word habit means persistence in doing an act a fact which is capable of proof by adducing evidence of the commission of a number of similar acts—Government v Hanmantrao 25 Cr L J 60 (Nag) The words by habit and habitually imply frequent practice or use and are used in this section in the sense of depravity of character as evidenced by the frequent repetition or commission of offences mentioned in the section—Bhubaneswar v Emp 6 Pat 1 8 P L T 335 28 Cr L J 359 The fact that a person was on only one occasion suspected of theft is no evidence that he is a habitual thief—Ishar Singh v Emp, 1880 P R 32 Where certain tenants formed into a party to compel the Zemindar to settle certain lands with them and many loots assaults and murders were committed by them against the Zemindar, but apart from this land dispute there was nothing on the record to show that the tenants bore any despicable character or that they were implicated in theft extortion etc or that they ever provoked a breach of the peace held that the tenants could not be said to be habitual offenders within the purview of clauses (a) to (e) but that they were desperate and dangerous characters and proceedings could be taken against them under clause (f)—Bhubaneswar v Emp (supra) The fact that a person has been convicted on a former occasion is not sufficient to justify the finding that he is an habitual offender unless there is some additional evidence to show that he has again done some acts that indicate an intention on his part to return to his former course of life—Emp v Nau ib 2 All 835 and to constitute an habitual offender it is necessary that the subsequent offences charged should have been committed by the accused after his previous conviction—Q E v Ippa Ratanlal 143

admissible as indicating formation of habit But such evidence, unless supplemented by evidence of misconduct committed by such person within a year or so cannot justify the making of an order under Sec 118—Wahid Ali v Emp, 11 C W N 789, 6 Cr L J 1

Proof of previous convictions —Whenever it is required to prove previous convictions against a man in a proceeding under this chapter, such previous convictions must be proved strictly and in accordance with law, unless they are so proved no Court can properly take such previous convictions into consideration against an accused person—K E v Sheikh Abdul 43 Cal 1128 20 C W N 725 17 Cr L J 185 See sec 511

272. Evidence of general repute —Under sec 117 (4) the fact that a person is a habitual offender or a desperate and dangerous character may be proved by evidence of general repute

A man's general reputation is the reputation which he bears in the place in which he lives amongst all the townsmen and if it is proved that a man who lives in a particular place is looked upon by his fellow townsmen whether they happen to know him or not as a man of good repute, that is strong evidence that he is a man of good character On the other hand if the state of things is that the body of his fellow townsmen who know him look upon him as a dangerous man and a man of bad habits, that is strong evidence that he is a man of bad character—Rai Isri Prasad v K E 23 Cal 621 Jogendra v K E 25 C W N 334 22 Cr L J 337 Crown v Nga Kyen 1 L B R 90 Raghubar v K E 10 O C 168, Dunia v K E 5 O C 203 Gokul v K E 10 O C 132 6 Cr L J 97, Emp v Jagarnath 1903 A W N 181 Kewal Kishore v Emp 29 O C 33 12 O L J 413 26 Cr L J 1283

Where in a proceeding under this section the accused person is able to produce witnesses on his behalf to speak of his good character the Court ought to pay particular attention to such evidence and to give substantial reason for not believing such evidence before it makes an order under section 118—Ramlagan v Emp 5 P L T 166 25 Cr L J 985 Amjad Ali v Emp 5 P L T 129 25 Cr L J 35 Hakim Singh v Emp 13 A L J 1035 Where the accused who was a Zemindar and money lender produced a large number of witnesses consisting of his own caste fellows and tenants to depose to his good character, but the Magistrate disbelieved the evidence simply on the ground that the accused by virtue of his position could produce a large number of witnesses, and assigned no other legitimate reason held that the case had not been approached from a proper point of view, and the High Court could interfere in revision—Miharban v Emp, 13 A L J 1036 16 Cr L J 805

Nature of the evidence —Evidence of general repute may be either the evidence as to the general opinion of the community or neighbourhood or the personal opinion of the witnesses who are examined But the opinion need not necessarily be the opinion of the entire community, but at least the opinion of a considerable number of persons—Bechai v K E, 12 A L J 937 15 Cr L J 705 In re Ranga Reddi, 43 Mad 450,

Duma Singh v K E 5 O C 203

The persons who testify to the character of the accused must be respectable persons who are acquainted with the accused (43 Mad 459) and should not ordinarily be officials—Nga Hein v K E 8 Bur L T 53 16 Cr L J 553 Thus when a large body of respectable persons testified to the character of the accused against the evidence of Police officers the opinion of the former should be accepted and an order under this section should not be made—Soman v Crown 1910 P W R 37 11 Cr L J 603

Evidence of accused's own caste fellows and neighbours is certainly the best sort of evidence available—Gur Baksh v Emp 12 Cr L J 542 (Oudh) Where witnesses voluntarily come forward as friends or associates or caste fellows of the accused to give evidence about the good character of the accused they must not be brushed aside unless they are discredited as regards their good faith and honesty—Emp v Angnu Singh, 45 All 109 (113) 24 Cr L J 257 Emp v Bahu 43 All 186 (190) 18 A L J 1114 Kewal Kishore v K E 29 O C 44 12 O L J 413 26 Cr L J 1283 In fact when the caste fellows of the accused voluntarily come forward and say that they regard the accused as the head of their brotherhood and they consider it a slur upon their community that the accused should be treated as a habitual robber or dacoit, it shows the good faith of the witnesses and their honest and emphatic belief that the accused is a respectable person enjoying the confidence of his community The Magistrate ought not to discredit the evidence of these witnesses—Emp v Bahu 43 All 186 (190) 18 A L J 1114 22 Cr L J 115 The mere fact that some of the witnesses are persons who have had commercial dealings with the accused and that others are persons of the same class and position as the accused is not a sufficient ground for excluding their evidence—Sohra v Emp 27 Cr L J 1067 (Lah)

But it is not always necessary that the persons who testify to the character of the accused should live in the immediate neighbourhood of the accused—Wahid Ali v Emp 11 C W N 789 6 Cr L J 1 Thus, a series of dacoities having taken place in a certain village the evidence of general reputation of the accused coming from the people of the village where the dacoities took place is certainly to be treated as evidence of general repute although the accused did not live among those people—Chintamoni v Emp 35 Cal 243 It is not right to discard the evidence of witnesses who speak to the reputation of the accused merely because they are not his immediate neighbours A man's general reputation in the place in which he lives amongst the inhabitants of that place is not always conclusive because it is quite possible for a cunning rogue to conceal his real character from his immediate neighbours What the Court has to do is to satisfy itself that the evidence of the witnesses is true and if it is satisfied on this point then it is entitled to accept the evidence Where a witness lives at a considerable distance from the person of whose reputation he speaks the Court should of course ma-

how he came by that knowledge and should take his answer into consideration in framing its estimate of the value of the evidence—K E v Po Yin 2 Rang 686 4 Bur L J 6 26 Cr L J 518

Moreover the persons testifying to the character of the accused must speak from their personal knowledge A vague and general statement that a man is a habitual offender is not sufficient Evidence of repute in respect of an accused person must be evidence of persons who are speaking to matters within their own personal knowledge and not from mere hearsay—Rup Singh v K E 1 A L J 616 Kalla v Emp 19 A L J 39 22 Cr L J 314 Emp v Angnu Singh 45 All 109 (113) San Dun v K E 2 Rang 641 (643) Deodhari v Emp 6 P L T 810 26 Cr L J 738

Mere rumour is not repute evidence of rumour is mere hearsay evidence of a particular fact evidence of repute is a totally different thing Rumours in a particular place that a man had done particular acts or has characteristics of a certain kind are not evidence of general repute —Isri Prasad v K E 23 Cal 621 Rajendra v K E 1 A L J 611 Kripasindhu v Emp 1918 M W N 751 19 Cr L J 905 Ramlagan v Emp 5 P L T 166 Evidence of association with bad characters is evidence of reputation but such reputation can only be based upon association with proved bad characters and not with reputed bad characters—Emp v Nepal 13 C W N 318 9 C L J 439

The witnesses must give their own opinion and their statements must not be mere repetitions of what other persons said to them about the accused and when they give their own opinion they may be asked to give the grounds of their opinion and to give names of the persons whom they have heard speak against the character of the accused—Bechai v K E 12 A L J 937 15 Cr L J 705 Kewal Kishore v Emp 29 O C 14 12 O L J 413 26 Cr L J 1283 Mere repetitions unaccompanied by direct evidence personally affecting each accused is insufficient in a case under this section—Emp v Angnu Singh 45 All 109 24 Cr L J 257 The evidence must relate to particular instances which have come to the knowledge of the witness and must be specific Evidence relating to mere beliefs and opinions without reference to acts or instances which have induced the witnesses to form an opinion cannot be regarded as evidence of repute The test of the admissibility of the evidence of general opinion is whether it shows the general reputation of the accused and it should at least be the opinion of a considerable number of persons It must not be the repetition of what certain persons have said to the witnesses It should be the evidence of respectable persons acquainted with the accused who live in the neighbourhood and are aware of his reputation —In re Langa Reddi 13 Mad 450 Ramlagan v Emp 5 P L T 166

The repute must be universal and there should be no doubt about it—Jhandu Ram v Crown 1915 P L R 215 16 Cr L J 106 Masti Khan v Emp 1897 P R 2 Ajmal v Emp 1898 P R 2 Wali Muhammad v Emp 25 Cr L J 808 (Lah) i e the evidence must be so general and overwhelming as to leave no doubt that the accused has been in the habit of committing the offences imputed—Q E v Sher Khan Ratanlal 639 Where as many good witnesses come forward to state that the man s reputation is good as those who state the contrary it can hardly be held safely that the man s general reputation is bad unless there is something to corroborote the evidence of witnesses against him—Ajmal Shah v Emp 1898 P R 2 Rajendra Prosad v K E 1 A L J 611

Mere suspicion against the accused is not evidence of general repute Statements of witnesses each of whom says that he suspected the accused to be implicated in this or that isolated offence do not amount to evidence of general repute—Bechai v K E 12 A L J 937 15 Cr L J 705 Amjad Ali v Emp 5 P L T 129 Raj Narain v Emp 25 A L J 393 28 Cr L J 502 So also evidence of cases in which the accused was suspected is not evidence of general repute—Raham Ili v K E 11 A L J 461 14 Cr L J 407 Bechai 12 A L J 937 Jabinuddin v Emp 20 Cr L J 689 (All) Where in a proceeding under this section the prosecution witnesses giving evidence of general repute say that they suspect the accused to be a thief or dacoit because his house was searched and he was arrested on several occasions such a suspicion is not sufficient evidence against the accused Where there is positive evidence for the defence that the accused is a good man it is not a sufficient reason for casting it aside to say that proof of malice against the accused on the part of the prosecution is wanting—Surendra v. Emp 21 Cr L J 170 (Cal)

But an evidence that a person had been suspected and named in a large number of cases extending over a con iderable interval may be very useful corroboration of general evidence against him Conversely in a doubtful case the fact that a person has never been suspected of any offence may weaken the general evidence of rep itation that is given against him—Raja Rai v Emp 23 O C 371 2 Cr L J 273

The fact that an accused person has been acquitted of a particular charge may dimin sh and will diminish in many cases and may even destroy wholly the value of the evidence but does not render it inadmissible—Budhan v Emp 23 A L J 507 47 All 733 26 Cr L J 1130

In order to establish general repute for the purposes of section 117 the evidence of the investigating police officer is inadmissible and irrelevant—Rameshwar v Emp 1 P L T 63 21 Cr L J 321

273 Duty of Court to test the evidence —The fact that a man is a habitual offender may not always be proved by actual previous convictions and it is necessary to prove it by evidence of general repute But the Magistrate should take great care where no previous conviction is proved to test the evidence for the prosecution and assure himself beyond reasonable doubt that the accused is really a habitual offender of the class named The Magistrate cannot convict a person on mere vague evidence of bad repute—Q E v Tilakchand 2 Bom L R 57 Where the evidence for the prosecution is of a vague character and when a case has to be established merely upon evidence of bad repute the Court should take into consideration the value and weight of evidence tendere

proceedings were started against him it was held that the order was illegal inasmuch as the accused was not given a sufficient opportunity of showing that he was willing to adopt an honest livelihood and the interval was not long enough to see whether the accused has reformed his course of life or not—Emp v Ranjit 28 All 306 3 A L J 29

A person who was previously bound over to be of good behaviour under this section cannot soon after his release be handed up again on vague evidence of suspicion without any tangible evidence to show that he has been leading a life of crime A convict should be given sufficient opportunity to reform himself before he is handed up again—Akbara v Emp 18 Cr L J 710 (Oudh) Where the accused was imprisoned for one year for failure to furnish security and several months afterwards fresh proceedings were instituted against him as a result of which he was ordered to execute a bond for good behaviour it was held that the order was bad, that the accused has not had a sufficient locus penitentiae and that the evil reputation which he had before his imprisonment stillfollowed him and permeated the evidence of many of the witnesses—Junab Ali v Emp 31 Cal 783 K E v Sheikh Abdul 20 C W N 725 43 Cal 1128, Nga Po v K E 1915 U B R 3rd Qr 86 17 Cr L J 85 But if upon being set at liberty, he returns to his former course of life a further order may be passed requiring him to furnish fresh security—In re Juswant, 6 W R 18

Error in form of bond —Where a bond required under section 110 was under a mistake executed in the form of bonds required to be entered into under section 107 it was held that the bond was void and the error could not be rectified under section 537—Wadhawa v Emp 1903 P R 32

Order should state on which clause it is based —On the conclusion of the inquiry if the Magistrate considers that the accused is a person falling within any of the description stated in this section he should record a distinct finding of the specific description which he considers proved If the finding be insufficient the final order based upon it will be open to reversal The same will be the case, if the finding be that he is a habitual thief (or dacoit) but the finding is not supported by evidence that the misconduct is habitual—Punj Circ, p 167 When a person is sought to be proceeded against under this section it must be made clear to him as to which sub section he is charged with coming under Mere assertion that he is a man of criminal tendency or is suspected of having committed crimes is insufficient—Sohan v Emp 26 Cr L J 1377, A I R 1926 Lah 45

Remand to custody :—Where proceedings are instituted under this section the Magistrate can remand the accused person to custody See Note 526 under section 167

276. Revision :—In questions arising under Sec 110 and Sec 107, the moment it is shown prima facie that there is something which the Courts below have done either in excess of their powers, or by a too summary exercise of their powers, or by misapplying the rules of evidence or by not giving due effect to the evidence for the defence an application for revision should be admitted But the High Court will not generally interfere on the merits except in very exceptional cases because it is idle to suggest that the High Court sitting with only the paper evidence before it should presume to differ on questions which are purely questions of fact and questions depending on the demeanour of witnesses—Gayani v Emp 17 Cr L J 161 (All) The High Court is not a Court of appeal in cases under sec 110 and the responsibility of administering that section does not rest upon it It is only when something appears unsatisfactory and unusual in the proceedings of the lower Court that the High Court will look into the record to examine whether the order under sec 110 has been properly passed—Raj Narayan v Emp 25 A L J 393 28 Cr L J 502 The High Court is not a Court of Appeal in cases under section 110 and the duty of the High Court is not to weigh the evidence given on behalf of one side or the other but only to see whether the Court below has approached the consideration of the case in a fair way having regard to the interest not only of the prosecution but also of the accused—Mitharban v Emp 13 A L J 1036 16 Cr L J 805 Kewal Kishore v Emp 29 O C 44 12 O L J 413 26 Cr L J 1283 A I R 1925 Oudh 473 The High Court will not interfere on the merits with proceedings under this section provided that the lower Court or the Appellate Court shows in its judgment that it has really and not merely nominally considered the evidence on the record—Shiam Lal v K E 6 A L J 187 9 Cr L J 528 The High Court is not disposed to encourage revision applications in respect of proceedings under this Chapter because so long as the cases proceed fairly and regularly the Magistrate is the best tribunal in fact the only tribunal who can satisfactorily decide them—Emp v Darbari Singh 45 All 749 (751) But at the same time the administration of this section has to be very carefully watched and where evidence has been misunderstood or ignored difficulties have not been seen or the rules of evidence have not been followed and the Judge has reviewed the case in a very perfunctory way without noticing the palpable defects in the evidence the grounds upon which a man has been bound down require to be carefully scrutinized—Bisheswar v Emp 19 A L J 668 If it is established to the satisfaction of the High Court that the proceedings under sec 110 are not bona fide and that in substance their continuation would mean an abuse of the statutory provisions on the subject it is not only competent to the High Court but it is its obvious duty to interfere—Rajendra v K E 17 C W N 238 Though the High Court finds it difficult to interfere with orders under section 110 still it has to be satisfied that the evidence is of a character which will reasonably support the inference that it is necessary in the interests of public security to bind down the accused—Alimuddin v Emp 22 A L J 678 25 Cr L J 1172

277. Order under Special Acts—An order restricting movements under the provisions of section 7 of the Punjab Act V of 1918 (Restriction of Habitual Offenders Act) cannot be passed against any person from whom a security has already been taken under section 110

of the Cr P Code—Kabir Baksh v Emp, 1 Lah 100, Bhana v Crown, 1919 P. L R 31

A double order both under sec 110 of this Code and under section 7 of the Burma Habitual Offenders Restriction Act is illegal, and the order of restriction must be set aside—Pan Zyaw v Emp, 1 Bur L J 257, 24 Cr L J 735 Where proceedings have been taken under section 110 of this Code by the Sub divisional Magistrate and a final order has been passed under sec 118, the District Magistrate (and he alone) can convert the order into an order of restriction under the Burma Habitual Offenders Restriction Act (II of 1919) where there has been a proper preliminary order under sec 112 and the District Magistrate has good reasons for the change—Parsodan v K E, 2 Rang 524

Proceedings under this section against persons who have been registered under sec 4 of the Criminal Tribes Act (III of 1911) are not illegal But such proceedings though not illegal are inexpedient, and the fact that the persons proceeded against are already registered under the Criminal Tribes Act may be a factor and an important factor which the Magistrate should take into consideration before he makes any order against them under section 110 of this Code—Ghulam Rasul v Emp, 20 Cr L J 30 (Cal) A person who has been registered under the Criminal Tribes Act may be proceeded against under sec 110 of this Code, if he pursues a career of crime bringing him within some of the clauses of this section Each case has to be scrutinized on its merits If such proceedings appear to be necessary in view of the exigencies of any particular case evidence of general repute, which is bound to be affected in a large measure by the very fact of the person proceeded against being a member of a criminal tribe should be, if at all, acted upon with great caution and scrutiny—Badu Mir v. Emp, 54 Cal 279, 31 C W N 165 (166), 28 Cr L J 106

111. [Repealed].

This section has been repealed by section 8 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XII of 1923) It ran as follows —

"111 The provisions of sections 109 and 110 do not apply to European British subjects in cases where they may be dealt with under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874

"We consider that section 111 should be repealed and that sections 109 and 110 should apply equally to Europeans and Indians"—Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee, para 16

112. When a Magistrate acting under section 107, section 108, section 109 or section 110 deems it necessary to require any person to show cause under such section, he shall make an order in writing, setting forth the substance of the information received, the amount of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be in force, and the number character and class of sureties (if any) required.

Order to be made

278 Scope —The provisions of this section must be complied with by a Magistrate passing a preliminary order under the Burma Habitual Offenders Restriction Act (II of 1919) and if that order does not set forth the substance of the information received and the term during which the order of restriction shall be in force the entire proceeding is irregular and orders passed thereon must be set aside—Parsodan v K E 2 Rang 524

279 Order in writing —A Magistrate acting under this Chapter has no power to act until he has recorded an order in writing under this section—Rameshwar v K E 36 All 262 12 A L J 365 The issue of a warrant under Sec 115 without recording an order under this section is illegal—Jatoi v Emp 20 S L R 12? 27 Cr L J 935 So also where the accused persons were arrested as suspected habitual thieves and the Magistrate fixed a date for the production of evidence with the object of issuing a notice under section 112 but on the date fixed after hearing the prosecution evidence he at once called upon the accused to enter upon his defence to a charge under section 110 held that the procedure was illegal and the proceeding must be set aside It is only after the Magistrate has recorded an order under sec 112 that the actual hearing can by law take place at all—Rajbansi v Emp 42 All 646 22 Cr L J 228 In Pragi v K E 10 O C 365 7 Cr L J 94 however it has been held that the provisions of this section are purely directory and a failure to record the order is a mere irregularity In In re Kavathai 26 M L T 385 20 Cr L J 763 it was held that the omission to draw up a proceeding under this section or to serve a copy of the order on the accused under section 115 did not vitiate the proceedings if the order was drawn up later and read out and explained to the accused who appeared in Court in pursuance of a summons

Where a Magistrate instead of making an order in writing wrote the order on the back of the police report which gave the information held that it was a mere irregularity cured by section 537—Ram Deo v Emp 27 Cr L J 1132 (All)

280 Contents of the order —The Magistrate should be very careful in drawing up the preliminary order, bearing in mind the provisions of Sec 118 which lays down that the final order shall not be at variance with the preliminary order passed under section 112

(a) Substance of the information —This should be stated with sufficient fulness for the accused person to have a clear understanding of the matter that he has to meet in his defence—Punj Cir Chap XLIV, p. 166 An order which does not set forth the substance of the information received is illegal and must be set aside—Maung Tun v Emp 4 Bur L J 172 27 Cr L J 318 (319) Magistrate should by no means be contented with allowing the office to fill up a vague lithographed or typed form but ought to do their best to see that the first order does actually contain the substance of the information no less and no more If this is done the accused cannot know till he comes to court precisely what he is charged with and as no charge is drawn up he may not know till the final order is passed what his alleged delinquency is—Sultan v Emp 19 S L R 337 26 Cr L J 767 Under this section the substance of the report made to the Magistrate should be clearly disclosed to the accused so that he may be informed of the charges or of the nature of the evidence which he is to rebut Thus a notice under section 110 must contain something more than a mere reproduction of the clauses of the section There should be sufficient indication of the time and place of the acts charged and sufficient details which enable the accused to know what facts he is to meet—Ranga Reddi v K E 43 Mad 450 Kripasindhu v Emp 19 Cr L J 905 1918 M W N 751 Tarwor v Emp 19 S L R 176 26 Cr L J 1398 The parties are entitled to something more than a mere assertion in writing by the Magistrate that he has been informed that an offence (e g a breach of the peace) is likely to be committed in order to enable them to bring evidence to rebut the truth of such information—Q E v Nathu 6 All 214 Q E v Iswar Chandra 11 Cal 13 The parties are entitled to know the nature of the accusation they have to meet and to a reasonable opportunity within which to prepare themselves to meet the accusation and to cite witnesses—Iswar Chandra 11 Cal 13 Nathu 6 All 214 Ranga Reddi 43 Mad 450 The accused is entitled to be told the nature and extent of the information on which the Magistrate intends to base the action against him It is that communication which is expected to enable the accused to summon witnesses on his side Therefore if the substance of the report made to the Magistrate is not clearly disclosed and the accused is not informed of the charges and of the nature of the evidence that he is to rebut the proceedings cannot be regarded as legal—Ranga Reddi v K E 43 Mad 450 38 M L J 97 21 Cr L J 354 Where a notice under sec 107 did not at all state when the threats complained of were uttered who were the persons who were threatened and when the apprehension of a breach of the peace arose held that the notice was vague and bad in law—Konda Reddi v K E 41 Mad 246 18 Cr L J 878 A notice which is very meagre and does not contain sufficient details regarding the charges brought against the persons must be held not to comply with the provisions of the Code and this defect cannot be remedied by any explanation given by the Prosecuting Inspector at the commencement of the trial—In re Kutti Gounder 47 M L J 680 A I R 1925 Mad 189 26 Cr L J 673

Merely informing an accused person that he is suspected to be a habitual thief is not a sufficient notice There must be something in the nature of an indictment or charge containing substantial particulars indicating the grounds upon which the police have given information to the Magistrate—Rajbansi v Emp 18 A L J 678 42 All 646 21 Cr L J 278 Nihal v Emp 49 All 5 24 A L J 908 28 Cr L J 9 The failure of the Magistrate to record the substance of the information which he has received is not a mere irregularity which would be covered by sec. 537 but is an illegality which vitiates the trial—Nihal v Emp (supra) The

Oudh Chief Court however dissents from these two rulings and is of opinion that the substance of the information in sec 112 does not mean anything more than the gist of the information It is not necessary to state more than will show the person against whom proceedings are taken and the particular section or sub section on which it is proposed to proceed against him In any view the failure to give the accused the information of the nature of the case against him is a mere irregularity cured by section 537—Emp v Ram Ghulam 2 Luck 157 28 Cr L J 744 The information under sec 112 need not be anything in the nature of a charge or indictment—Ibid

The omission to set forth the substance of the information will not of itself be sufficient to render the proceeding and the final order null and void unless the accused has been prejudiced by the omission and a failure of justice has been occasioned—Emp v Md Jafar 3 All 545 Abbasu v Umda 8 Cal 724 Emp v Bhagwan 1891 A W N 40 Tan voo v Emp 19 S L R 176 26 Cr L J 1398 the omission in the notice to give detailed information as to the nature of the evidence for the prosecution is not an irregularity sufficient to vitiate the proceedings especially if the accused had cross examined at great length the witnesses for the prosecution—Dohra v Emp 20 Cr L J 436 (Pat) or if as a matter of fact the accused had clear notice of the case made against them and had ample time and opportunity to let in evidence—Jai Singh v Emp, 23 Cr L J 42 (Pat)

In a proceeding under section 107 the Magistrate may give only the substance of the information received and it is not necessary to specify the definite acts which the accused intends to commit—Jaguji v Emp, 16 A L J 567 19 Cr L J 876 In proceedings under section 110 an order by the Magistrate stating that he has received some reliable information (though not definite) that the accused is a habitual cattle thief and a receiver of stolen goods is a sufficient compliance with the provisions of this section—In re Kala 1896 A W N 73

But a Magistrate is not bound to give the source of the information—In re Mitlu 27 All 172 Alimuddin v Emp 29 Cal 392 It is also not necessary to give a list of the prosecution witnesses in the order—Chintaman v Emp 35 Cal 243 12 C W N 299

(b) The amount of bond —The summons (i e the order in writing which is to accompany the summons under section 115) should strictly specify the amount and nature of the security required and the time for which the security is to run—Q v Gunga 20 W R 36 Omission to specify the amount of the recognizance and the surety is a mere irregularity which does not vitiate further proceedings—Abbasu v Umda 8 Cal 724

(c) The term of the bond —The order should set forth a definite period for which security is to be demanded—In re Pedda Siva 3 Mad 238 But this term should not be unnecessarily lengthy Thus where a disturbance of the peace was apprehended in a fair which was to last for a fortnight an order demanding security for a period of one year is unnecessary and excessive—Q E v Nathu 6 All 214

(d) Number, character and class of sureties —The Magistrate in setting forth the number, character and class of sureties should not place undue and unnecessary difficulties in the way of finding them—Rahmatulla v Emp 22 Cr L J 395 (All) The Magistrate should not impose impossible restrictions as the provisions of this chapter are preventive and not penal—Imp v Md Palor 1 S L R 46 8 Cr L J 166 The Magistrate is not competent to impose arbitrary conditions not essential to the object in view(viz to restrain a party from the infringement of the law) still less impossible conditions The object of the law is that the person charged should furnish if possible good and sufficient security—In re Narain Sooboddhee 22 W R 37

Therefore a Magistrate has no right to impose a condition requiring the accused to find sureties residing within certain geographical limits (e g within one mile or five miles) or residing in a certain locality —Narain Sooboddhee 22 W R 37 Tara Sing v Emp 1880 P R 38 Bhagwan v K E 7 A L J 993 11 Cr L J 536 Hamiduddin v K E 10 A L J 351 13 Cr L J 831 Raghunandan v Emp 20 A L J 520 23 Cr L J 400 K E v Mangal 6 O C 199 or to impose a condition that the sureties must be inhabitants of one village—Nga Po v K E 1915 U B R 3rd Qr 86 17 Cr L J 85 In Emp v Nabbu 24 All 471 it has been held that the Magistrate is entitled to prescribe certain geographical limits for the residence of sureties but it must not be too narrow and therefore where an order was passed by a Magistrate requiring the sureties to be ' residing within the Municipality of Mirzapore the High Court added the words or in the immediate neighbourhood

But of course it is reasonable to expect and require that the sureties must not live at such a distance as would make it unlikely for them to exercise any control over the accused—Q E v Rahim Baksh 20 All 206, and so where the sureties lived at a distance of 13 miles, they were rejected—Emp v Babu 1898 A W N 199 Emp v Tota 1895 A W N 143 A condition requiring that the sureties should be neighbours of the accused is reasonable—Md Ibrahim v Crown 8 S L R 322 16 Cr L J 479, Allahdad v Emp, 17 S L R 160 See Note 302 under Sec 122

Lastly as regards the class of sureties Since section 112 gives the Magistrate power to define the character and class of sureties it is open to him to require that they must be landholders or persons having a certain pecuniary status—Q E v Rahim 20 All 206 Emp v Jiva Natha 16 Bom L R 138 15 Cr L J 268 Allahdad v Emp 17 S L R 160 Jumo v Crown 16 Cr L J 252 8 S L R 229 (but see Wasya v Emp 1901 P R 28) or that they should be of respectable character and should not be of inferior standing to suspects—Md Ibrahim v Crown, 8 S L R. 173 16 Cr L J 100 But a condition that the sureties must not be lambardars inamdars and Chowkidars (K E v Karim Khan 1906 P R 18) or that they must not be related to the accused (Narain, 22 W R 37) or that they must not come from Kakaralt and must not be kunbis by caste (Q E v Yesu, 1 Bom L R 520) is too restrictive and illegal

As regards inquiry into the fitness of sureties and the grounds for their rejection see section 122

113 If the person in respect of whom such order is made is present in Court, it shall be read over to him or, if he so desires, the substance thereof shall be explained to him

Procedure in respect of person present in Court

'Is present in Court' —Even if persons are illegally arrested and brought into Court the Magistrate is justified in treating the persons as present in Court and may proceed to initiate proceedings—Emp v Ghulam Husain 12 Cr L J. 533 (Bom)

114 If such person is not present in Court, the Magistrate shall issue a summons requiring him to appear, or, when such person is in custody, a warrant directing the officer in whose custody he is, to bring him before the Court

Summons or warrant in case of person not so present

Provided that, whenever it appears to such Magistrate, upon the report of a police officer or upon other information (the substance of which report or information shall be recorded by the Magistrate), that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person, the Magistrate may at any time issue a warrant for his arrest.

281 Issue of summons —Where a charge of criminal trespass and mischief was dismissed and thereupon the Magistrate recorded an order in the presence of both parties calling on them to show cause on a day fixed why they should not furnish security for keeping the peace, it was held that it was not necessary to issue a summons to them—Q v Chowdhury, 2 B L R App 28

Where a Magistrate issued a notice with reference to section 110 but at the time of inquiry passed an order demanding security under section 107 it was held that the Magistrate ought to have issued a fresh notice with reference to section 107 to enable the party to know the facts on which the Magistrate intended to proceed against him—Krishnasawmi v Vanamamalai, 30 Mad 282

The notice issued to the accused to appear and show cause must give him sufficient time to produce his evidence So where notice was served on the 7th requiring the accused to appear on the 9th it was held that sufficient time was not given and the order for security was set aside—Q v Cheit Singh 22 W R 70

282. Issue of Warrant:—Section 114 contains two stringent elements obviously directed against ill considered precipitancy on the part of the Magistrate in making an order for immediate arrest He must be of opinion that the only way of preventing a breach of the peace is to commit the person to custody and he must put on record the substance of the Police report or other information by which he is influenced—Mani ruddin v Emp, 5 P L T 95, 24 Cr L J 829

To justify an arrest under this section the Magistrate must act upon information that has been recorded It is not enough for him to merely express a belief that such a course is necessary Not only must he have reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace but it must also be shown that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person—Emp v Bab ia 6 All 132

As for arrest without warrant see 20 S I R 85 cited in Note 126 under sec 55

284. Person outside jurisdiction:—A Magistrate cannot legally issue a warrant under this section for the arrest of a person who has already left the local limits of his jurisdiction The person proceeded against must be actually and physically present in the district in which the Magistrate exercises jurisdiction—In re Ramjilan 14 Bom L R 889 13 Cr L J 700 But see Manindra v Emp 46 Cal 215 (236) where it is held that section 114 is not limited to arrest within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction but applies to an accused arrested outside the jurisdiction and brought in custody within the jurisdiction for the purpose of proceeding under this chapter See Note 258 under section 110

115. Every summons or warrant issued under Section 114 shall be accompanied by a copy of the order made under Section 112 and such copy shall be delivered by the officer serving or executing such summons or warrant to the person served with, or arrested under, the same.

Copy of order under Sec 112 to accompany summons or warrant.

285. Omission to send copy of order —When the summons was not accompanied by a copy of the order passed under section 112 the whole proceedings were invalid and the order for security must be set aside—

116 The Magistrate may, if he sees sufficient cause, dispense with the personal attendance of any person called upon to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond for keeping the peace, and may permit him to appear by a pleader

Power to dispense with personal attendance

Where the person against whom proceedings were taken lived at a distance and there was no special circumstance making his personal attendance necessary it would be a very unwise exercise of jurisdiction to require him to appear personally since the Magistrate could under this section allow him to appear by a pleader—Dinonath v Giriji 17 Cal 133

The words bond for keeping the peace imply that this section applies only to a case under Sec 107

117 (1) When the order under Section 112 has been read or explained under Section 113 to a person present in Court or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with, or in execution of, a summons or warrant issued under section 114, the Magistrate shall proceed to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken, and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary.

Inquiry as to truth of information

(2) Such inquiry shall be made, as nearly as may be practicable, where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons cases, and where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant cases, except that no charge need be framed

(3) Pending the completion of the inquiry under sub section (1), the Magistrate, if he considers that immediate measures are necessary for the prevention of a breach of the peace or disturbance of the public tranquility or the commission of any offence, or for the public safety, may, for reasons to be recorded in writing direct the person, in respect of whom the order under Section 112 has been made, to execute a bond with or without sureties, for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour until the conclusion of the inquiry and may detain him in custody until such bond is executed or, in default of execution, until the inquiry is concluded

(a) no person against whom proceedings are not being taken under Section 108, Section 109 or Section 110 shall be directed to execute a bond for maintaining good behaviour, and

(b) the conditions of such bond whether as to the amount thereof or as to the provision of sureties or the number thereof or the pecuniary extent of their liability shall not be more onerous than those specified in the order under Section 112

(4) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person is a habitual offender or is so desperate or dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise

(5) Where two or more persons have been associated together in the matter under inquiry, they may be dealt with in the same or separate inquiries as the Magistrate shall think just

Change :—Sub section (3) and the italicised words in sub section (4) have been added by section 19 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) The reasons are stated below Sub sections (3) and (4) have been renumbered as (4) and (5)

286 Sub-section (1)—Inquiry into truth of information :—Under this section a Magistrate is bound to inquire into the truth of the information notwithstanding that the accused admits the allegations against him and consents to furnish security—K E v Nga Yan Shin U B R (1902—3) 1 Allahditto v Emp 19 S L R 101 26 Cr L J 1041 Where the Magistrate initiates proceedings on the strength of a police report, he is bound under this section to make an inquiry into the truth of the police report—Mulchand v Emp 37 All 30 If however the accused admits the truth of the information the Magistrate need not proceed with the inquiry—Q v Lal Beharee 11 W R 50

The inquiry to be held under this section is a full judicial inquiry It must be conducted judicially and becomes a judicial proceeding All the formal ties of a judicial proceeding have to be observed in the inquiry —Sher Zaman v Emperor 1899 P R 10 Nur Mahomed v Nil Dutton 18 W R 2 The object of the inquiry is that the accused should have an opportunity to exculpate himself—Q v Isree Pershad 20 W R 18 Iron 4 M H C R App 2

Place of inquiry —The inquiry should wherever possible be held in the village where the parties reside so as to avoid witnesses being needlessly harrassed and to enable the accused without difficulty to procure the attendance of persons willing to speak in his favour—1 Bur S R 546 The inquiry should not be held in a place which is outside the local limits of the Magistrate s jurisdiction and where he has no power to conduct any proceedings If he does so the order passed thereon is void—Sonaram v K E 3 C L J 193 3 Cr L J 246

Summoning witnesses —It is quite clear that the accused person when appearing to show cause must be ready with his evidence If he has been unable to bring the witnesses with him on account of the shortness of the notice or other reasonable cause it is his duty when he appears to apply at once for summons to the witnesses he proposes to call—Emp v Narayan 2 Bom L R 138, Chutan v Sukedal 23 W R 9 A Magistrate is bound to assist both parties in bringing their witnesses by issuing summons to attend—Q v Chet Singh 22 W R 70

The accused person must be given sufficient time to bring his witnesses and have their evidence recorded Where the accused has not had this opportunity the order against him must be set aside—Kream ullah v Emp 41 Cal 800, Q v Chet Singh 22 W R 70, Q E v Narain 6 All 214 Ponthiran v Emp 38 C L J 285 25 Cr L J 203

The inquiry ought to be conducted with attention to the ordinar

form of justice The defendant should have every opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses produced against him, of making his own statement, and of calling witnesses on his behalf—Anon, 4 M H C R App 22

Defence by Pleader —The person against whom proceedings have been initiated under this Chapter has a right to be defended by a pleader —Jhoja Singh v Q E, 23 Cal 193 Emp v Girand, 25 All 375 See notes under sec 340

287. Further evidence :—The words "further evidence" indicate that some evidence may be taken by the Magistrate even before drawing up the preliminary order under section 112—K E v Nga Po, U B R 1905 Cr P C 29, 2 Cr L J 462

The Magistrate trying a case is bound by law to hear those witnesses only whose list is sent up by the Police along with the case and as soon as the witnesses produced in support of the case have been heard, the Magistrate is then to ascertain the names of the persons likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case and shall summon to give evidence only such of them as he thinks necessary He is not bound by law to, and should not save in very exceptional cases, call the other witnesses that the police or any one else may from time to time choose to produce —Govind Sahai v Emp 12 A L J 262 15 Cr L J 363

In a proceeding under this section it is erroneous on the part of the Magistrate to admit fresh evidence for the prosecution after the close of the defence case No further evidence can be admitted except under Sec 540 for which valid reasons must be recorded—Ganga Singh v K E, 10 A L J 383, 13 Cr L J 772

288. Sub-section (2)– Nature of procedure :– An inquiry in a proceeding for security to keep the peace must be made in the same way as in a trial of a summons case —Emp v Bidyapati 25 All 273 See also Cal G R & C O page 81 If it is tried as a warrant case, the proceedings would be vitiated—Uttam Chand v K E, A I R 1924 All 695 26 Cr L J 430 The Magistrate must proceed as nearly as practicable in the same way as under section 242 He must state to the accused the particulars of the matter against him and ask him if he can show cause why he should not be required to execute bonds The question 'are you willing to execute the bond ?' answered by a statement that the accused would execute a bond, is not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section—In re Palaniappa 34 Mad 139 In an inquiry under section 107, the deposition need not be read over to the witness in the presence of the accused See 52 Cal 668 cited in Note 1028 under sec 360

An inquiry in a good behaviour case must be conducted as if it were a warrant case, and the procedure in Secs 251-256 must be followed According to those sections an accused person cannot be called upon to enter on his defence until the prosecution closes its case (sec 256)—Ganga Singh v K E, 10 A L J 383 13 Cr L J 772 The Calcutta and the Punjab High Courts are of opinion that the procedure prescribed for warrant cases is not to be followed strictly but is as nearly as practicable to be observed therefore the accused cannot invoke the aid of sec. 256 and is not entitled to ask the Court to recall the witnesses who have given evidence against him for further cross examination—Crown v Ahmed Baksh 1916 P R 1 Chintamon v Emp 35 Cal 243

Sub-section (3) — This sub section has been added to enable the Magistrate in emergent cases to take immediate steps to preserve the public peace or to the public safety by taking security pending the detailed inquiry —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

The Court passing an order under clause (3) of this section must state its reasons in writing for passing the order i e he must state that there was a likelihood of the accused committing a breach of the peace Where all that the Magistrate said was that the order was passed on account of emergency held that the order was bad and must be set aside—Sahib Dino v Emp 28 Cr L J 173 (Sind)

Where a Magistrate postpones the case after the accused has notified his intention to make a transfer application he has jurisdiction to pass an order under clause (3) pending the completion of the inquiry—Sahib Dino v Emp (supra)

289 Sub-section (4)—Evidence of general repute —See this subject fully discussed in Note 272 under section 110

Prior to the amendment of this sub section evidence of general repute was admissible only in those cases where the person was a habitual offender within the meaning of clauses (a) to (e) of section 110 It could not be adduced to prove under clause (f) of that section that a man was a desperate and dangerous character—Emp v Indar 40 All 372 Ganapat v Emp 19 Cr L J 871 (Nag) In re Ranga Reddi 13 Mad 450 Kalai v Emp 9 Cal 779 Balu Mirza v K L 9 O C 69 Emp v Hurmat 2 N L J 174 Walid Ali v Emp 11 C W N 789 Abhoy v Q E, 5 C W N 249 Nur Muhammad v Crown 1917 P W R 8 These rulings are no longer good law in view of the amendment of sub section (4) of the present section

But the evidence of general repute is not admissible in a case where a person is called upon to furnish security under section 107 of the Code—Emp v Bidyapati 25 All 273 Banarasi Das v Emp 1898 P R 16

Or otherwise —According to the general rule of interpretation the word otherwise must be read as meaning something ejusdem generis with the particular or particulars alleged above it e g hearsay evidence It is clear that the intention of the Legislature is that the Magistrate should use very large discretion as to the evidence which he may admit in the proceedings—Emp v Kalli Mal 1904 A W N 140

The expression or otherwise would include statements made by some of the co accused amounting to a confession of the actual commission of the offence and incriminating the other accused—Sarju v Emp, 41 All 231.

290 Sub-section (5) Joint trial —Under this section the, who have been associated together may be tried jointly But must be clear evidence to prove the association—Deodhari v Emp, 6 P. L T 810 26 Cr L J 738 Where several persons are proceeded against under sec 110 clause (5) of sec 117 does not make it a condition precedent to such joint inquiry that the suspects shall be shown to be associated together in the order itself It is a permissive clause which permits a joint enquiry being held where such persons are as a matter of fact associated together—Tarrior v Emp 19 S L R 176 26 Cr L J 1398 Where it was clearly established that the accused (who were father and his three sons) were associated together and formed a gang and the evidence against them was all the same held that the case was one in which the accused could be rightly dealt with together and that any minute inquiry into the complicity of each of the accused individually was not necessary—Parasulla v K E 13 C W N 244 If a gang of disorderly persons join together in jointly committing acts of violence or criminal intimidation proceedings against the whole gang in the same case are proper and it suffices in such cases that some members of the gang committed various acts It is not necessary that the evidence should establish that on every occasion the whole gang were together It is sufficient if the evidence establishes that there is a gang of persons joining together to commit such acts as the security section exists to prevent—Bakaram v Emp 23 Cr L J 741 (Nag) Where certain persons serving under a common master were found to have committed certain acts of extortion for the benefit of their master held that although each of the acts alleged was not done by all of them together yet they were so associated together as to justify a joint inquiry—Srikanta v Emp 9 C W N 898

The fact that persons are members of an undivided family would not by itself render each member liable for the misconduct of any other member The test to be applied is whether there has been habitual association between the persons charged in respect of the misconduct alleged in the complaint—Kripasindhu v Emp 1918 M W N 751, 19 Cr L J 905 Where no such association is proved a joint inquiry is improper but the trial need not be set aside unless it is shown that the accused was actually prejudiced or that the trial led to an improper order being passed—Baba Murtza v K E 9 O C 69 Q E v Abdul Kadir 9 All 452

Even where the association of the several accused is established satisfactorily the Magistrate has a discretion to try the accused jointly or separately—Hari Telang v Q E, 27 Cal 781 Hossein v Emp 6 Cal 96 Jai Govind v K E 15 O C 263 Although there is no legal prohibition in jointly trying a number of persons proceeded against under sec 107 still it is highly unjust and unfair to proceed against them jointly unless it is apparent that they formed a gang The case of each has to be considered separately and this is not likely to be effected if the trial is joint—Muhammed Ismail v Emp 21 A L J 841 25 Cr L J 952

to one tribe and village with a bad name is not sufficient evidence of association and therefore they cannot be tried jointly in one and the same proceeding—Murad v Emp 1895 P R 1 Thus the fact that the accused persons are close neighbours and had been previously implicated in good many cases together does not lead to the inference that they were associated together in the particular offence under inquiry and does not justify a joint trial of them all—Jogendra v Emp 21 Cr L J 700 (Cal)

The word association cannot apply to such cases where the offence is purely personal to the offender For instance the question whether the person is a habitual thief or not is personal to himself and forms a separate matter by itself So where four persons were charged under Sec 110 (a) as being thieves by habit it was held that there was an error in law in trying them all together—K E v Po Twe 4 L B R 46 6 Cr L J 84 So also the fact that the accused are desperate and dangerous persons hazardous to the community is a fact which pertains to each accused separately and there is no such connection between them in regard to their character which may be deemed as habitual association Consequently proceedings should be taken separately against each of the accused persons—Hari Telang v Q E 27 Cal 781 In re Kutti Govinden 47 M L J 689 A I R 1925 Mad 183 26 Cr L J 673

Again sub section (5) does not authorise a Magistrate to deal with persons charged under separate sections in one and the same inquiry Thus a person called upon to give security under section 109 and another person called upon to give security under section 110 cannot be tried together in the same proceeding—K E v Mehen 8 O C 91 2 Cr L J 224

And lastly two contending parties opposed to one another and inclined to commit an offence involving a breach of the peace cannot be said to have been associated together and a joint trial of such contending parties is illegal—Pran Krishna v Emp 8 C W N 180, In re Ganapathi 31 Mad 276 Kamat v Emp, 11 C W N 472 Har Datt v Emp, 14 A L J 268 17 Cr L J 165 Kishore v Emp, 6 P L T 768 26 Cr L J 1248 But in 9 All 452 it has been held that such a joint trial is not ipso facto null and void except where the accused has been prejudiced thereby

Separate finding and evidence —Where proceedings are taken jointly against more persons than one under this sub section the Magistrate must come to a separate finding as regards each of them individually—Ajodhya v Emp 35 Cal 979 Kalu v Emp 37 Cal 91 Murad v Emp 1895 P R 1 Brijnandan v Emp 37 All 33 16 Cr L J 46 Khairao v Emp 19 S L R 96 and the judgment must show that the Magistrate has considered the case of each individual accused—Kalu Mirza v Emp 37 Cal 91 The case of each person is to be considered on its own merits and it should not be allowed to be mixed up or prejudiced by that of the others—Q E v Nathu, 6 All 214, Md Ismail v Emp, 21 A L J 841 25 Cr L J 952 Upon general pr

ciples every accused person is entitled to insist that his case shall be tried separately from the case of other persons similarly circumstanced—Q E v Abdul Kadir 9 All 45; Bahadur Shah v Emp 1910 P R 4 10 Cr L J 591

The Magistrate must insist upon definite evidence being given against each person charged—Jai Govind v K E 15 O C 263 13 Cr L J 760 What is evidence against one cannot be treated as evidence against all others without discriminating between the cases of the various persons implicated—Q E v Abdul Kadir 9 All 452 Emp v Angnu Singh 45 All 109 (111) Thus where the evidence recorded by the Magistrate has bearing only on 11 out of 26 persons called upon to show cause his order binding down all the 26 persons is not valid it is valid only as regards those against whom the evidence is relevant—In re Kassim Biswas 10 C L R 335

118 (1) If upon such inquiry it is proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour as the case may be that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, with or without sureties the Magistrate shall make an order accordingly

Order to give security

first, that no person shall be ordered to give security of a nature different from or of an amount larger than or for a period longer than, that specified in the order made under section 112, secondly, that the amount of every bond shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and shall not be excessive, thirdly, that, when the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made is a minor, the bond shall be executed only by his sureties

291 "If it is proved etc"—Evidence —These words show that an order under this section cannot be made without inquiry and proof—Q E v Gasba Ratanlal 585 The Magistrate must give his reasons for finding it proved that security is necessary—In re Tija 10 Bom 174 (175) The finding of the Magistrate must be based on clear and full evidence As much detail as possible should be required before making an order under this section—Emp v Hamidulla 1889 A W N 114 A finding in general terms that it is for the interest of the community at large that the accused should be bound down for good behaviour is not sufficient—Nakki Lal v Q E, 27 Cal 656

The mere fact that the accused person says that he is willing to give security to keep the peace is not the kind of proof required by this section as a condition precedent to the taking of security—Prem Singh v Crown 1917 P R 77 18 Cr L J 847 Crown v Sheodan 1915 P R 24 See Note 236 under section 107 When the accused denied the allegations but expressed his willingness to execute a bond whereupon he was ordered to execute a bond the order was held to be illegal in as much as the accused denied every allegation on the basis of which he was considered liable to furnish security and no evidence was taken to prove those allegations—Emp v Rai Singh 20 Cr L J 105

As to the nature of evidence see notes under Secs 107 110

292 Order for security —The object of this section is the prevention and not the punishment of offences and consequently a Magistrate when passing an order in terms of this section ought not to have any direct intention of inflicting punishment—Q E v Kandhaia 7 All 67 Therefore a Magistrate ought not to impose arbitrary conditions not essential for the object in view which it would be impossible for the accused to fulfil still less impossible conditions The order must not be tantamount to saying that the prisoner shall not furnish any security at all but must go to jail It is not in the power of the Magistrate to pass such order The object of the law is that the person charged shall furnish if he can good and sufficient security—In re Narain Soobodhee, 22 W R 37

According to the first proviso to this section the final order must not be at variance with the preliminary order Thus the Magistrate cannot vary the conditional order passed under Sec 112 by imposing further conditions in the final order—Ramai and v K E 11 O C 267 8 Cr L J 344 Emp v Jangi Singh 1906 A W N 276 4 Cr L J 405 So also it is illegal to require a bond for good behaviour when the notice was to show cause with respect to keeping the peace—Driver v Q E, 25 Cal 798 Similarly the Magistrate is not competent to demand security with reference to Section 110 when the preliminary order was with reference to section 109—K E v Nga He U B R (1897—1901) 24 (In such a case the proper course is to institute fresh proceedings—Ibid) So again the Magistrate is not justified in demanding security for a larger amount than what was communicated to the accused in the preliminary order—Kishen v Crown 1907 P W R 11 5 Cr L J 219 Isree Pershad 18 W R 61 Emp v Debi 1885 A W N 30 nor is he justified in demanding sureties when the summons made no mention of sureties at all—Q v Isree Pershad 18 W R 61 In cases where heavier security is deemed necessary the Magistrate ought to issue fresh summons setting forth the amount intended to be taken—Isree Pershad 18 W R 61 Emp v Md Ismail 1881 A W N 152

Moreover, the Magistrate cannot in the final order direct th accused to give security for a longer period than what was mentioned in the notice under section 112—Ramchandra v Emp 26 Mad 471

A person against whom an order is passed under this section must be given sufficient time to furnish security Where the Magistrate ordered the accused to furnish security with four sureties of Rs 3 000 each on the very day and imprisoned the accused on his failure to do so held that the order was illegal and must be set aside—Maung Tun v Emp 4 Bur L J 1.. .. Cr L J 318

Supplementary order for larger security —A Magistrate passed a final order directing certain persons to furnish security in certain amounts A month later he passed another order directing one of the accused to furnish security in a much bigger sum and stating that he had overlooked that this accused had been called upon in the preliminary order to furnish a larger security It was held that the second order was ultra vires After the Magistrate had finished his case it was beyond his power to alter the order—Rajkumar v Emp 17 A L J 335

293 Amount of security —Under proviso (2) in fixing the amount of security, the Magistrate should have due regard to the circumstances of the case and the security should not be disproportionate to the ability of the accused to furnish it with reference to his means and station in life—Q E v Rama 16 Bom 372 Q E v Nathu 6 All 214 In re Ustbica 1 C L R 268 In re Juggut 2 Cal 110 Ali v Emp 1900 P R 17 Jaavaya v Emp 1890 P R 30 Lival v Emp 5 S L R 10 1. Cr L J 110 In re Nilmathub 19 W R 1 Q v Gholam Mahomed 22 W R 17 Anon 4 M H C R App 46 2 Weir 52 The amount should be such as to give the accused a fair chance of complying with the conditions of the security and the Magistrate should not fix an amount for which there is a probability of the accused being unable to find security—Ali v Emp 1900 P R 17 Wasia v Emp 1901 P R 28 Barkat v Crown 1900 P R 24 Anon 2 Weir 52, 4 M H C R App 46 Emp v Dedar 2 Cal 384 When the accused is unable to give security for the amount required and remains in jail it is an index that the Magistrate has not exercised a proper discretion in fixing the amount—Q E v Raza Ali 23 All 80

There is no warrant in law for taking separate bonds from the accused and his sureties individually and severally, exceeding in the aggregate the amount for which the accused is liable—Jawaya v Empress 1890 P R 30

Magistrate to state grounds —On a requisition from the High Court, the Magistrate is bound to state the grounds upon which he fixed the amount of security Where the amount of security is prima facie unreasonable the High Court can call upon the Magistrate to state the grounds for fixing that amount—In re Juggut 2 Cal 110 Ram Singh v Emp, 1883 P R 1

House property as security —The accused was ordered under this section to furnish a bond for Rs 200 and a respectable surety Such a

a surety came forward and offered security in the shape of house pro perty worth Rs 500 The Magistrate rejected the surety It was held that the surety being respectable and the house being worth Rs 500 should have been accepted though it was true that under section 514 only moveable property could be attached and sold during the surety s lifetime for the recovery of the penalty—Nanhe v Emp 16 A L J 503 19 Cr L J 711

293A Minor —In the case of a minor the bond shall be executed only by his sureties See proviso 3 The reason for this proviso is no doubt the incapacity of the minor to contract—K E v Mspyn 4 L B R 1? 6 Cr L J 1 3

294 Revision by High Court —The power to demand security from suspected persons is a power that is almost as much of an executive as of a judicial nature and the jurisdiction with which the Magistrate is invested with regard to suspected persons is a very large one It would be going counter to the spirit of the Code to give persons ordered to fur nish security a remedy in the nature of an appeal to the High Court which has not been granted to them by the Legislature Therefore the High Court will interfere with the orders passed by a Magistrate only on the very clearest and strongest grounds which demonstrate that there has been in the particular case a gross miscarriage of justice—Balmukund v Emp 1889 P R 73

The High Court will interfere in revision where the order is based on no evidence on the record—Sher Singh v Hari Singh 1912 P L R 195 13 Cr L J 720 Emp v Sukhdeo 14 A L J 715 17 Cr L J 157 or where the materials on which the order was passed are clearly insuffi cient to support the order—Nafar Chandra v Emp 38 C L J 198 or where there is nothing on the record to show that an inquiry as required by section 117 was held—Mul Chand v K E 37 All 30 12 A L J 1?62 Emp v Sukhdeo 14 A L J 215 It will also interfere where the judgment of the District Judge deciding an appeal under sec tion 110 is a very short one and does not show that evidence was all examined and carefully weighed—Saraan v Emp 14 A L J 279 17 Cr L J 167 Babu Pershad v Emp 13 Cr L J 9 (All) or where the Magistrate disbelieved the evidence produced by the accused without any substansial reason—Mtharban v Emp 16 Cr L J 805 13 A L J 1046 Hakim Singh v Emp 13 A L J 1055 16 Cr L J 810 or where the Magistrate has not given due effect to the evidence for the defence—Gayani v Emp 17 Cr L J 461 (All) or where the Lower Appellate Court in hearing the appeal has not taken the trouble to rehear the case—Ibid

The High Court has the power to interfere in revision where the exercise of discretion being required by law the lower Court exercised no discretion at all or exercised its discretion in a wholly unreasonable and improper manner e g where the Magistrate ordered security to be furnished in an unreasonably large sum out of all proportion to the means of the accused—In re Juggut 2 Cal 110 The High Court may interfere in revision if there is a material error in any judicial proceeding, i e an error resulting in an unjust order for security—Ibid

Appeal :—See sec 406

119 If, on an inquiry under section 117, it is not proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, the Magistrate shall make an entry on the record to that effect, and if such person is in custody only for the purposes of the inquiry, shall release him, or, if such person is not in custody, shall discharge him.

Discharge of person informed against

295. Further inquiry —The word discharge' means merely a permission to depart It does not mean the discharge of an 'accused' person as contemplated by Section 437 (now 436) so as to enable further proceedings being instituted under that section against the person discharged under this section—Velu v Chidambara 33 Mad 85 Section 437 (now 436) does not enable a Court to direct further inquiry in a case of discharge of a person against whom security proceedings were instituted under Chapter VIII because such a person is not an 'accused within the meaning of that section—Q E v Imam Mandal 27 Cal 662, Dayanath v Emp, 33 Cal 8 Muhammad Khan v Emp 1905 P R 42 Emp v Roshan Singh 46 All 235 22 A L J 129 Narain v Durga, 1911 P R 6 12 Cr L J 232 Ismail v Nollan, 1914 U B R 1st Qr 3 15 Cr L J 531 (But the contrary view has been taken in Fyazuddin, 24 All 148 Kharga 36 All 147 Manna v Emp 1903 P R 24, Mona Puna 16 Bom 661 Baba Yeshwanta 35 Bom 401 and Mutsaddi Lal, 21 All 107 where it is held that the person proceeded against under this chapter may be said to be an accused person and further inquiry may therefore be directed)

Section 436 as now amended in 1923 clearly applies only to the case of a person accused of an offence further inquiry cannot therefore be directed against a person discharged under sec 119 because the person proceeded against under this chapter is not accused of an offence The rulings cited above within brackets are no longer good law See Note 1180 under sec 436

C.—Proceedings in all Cases subsequent to Order to furnish Security.

120. (1) If any person, in respect of whom an order requiring security is made under section 106 or section 118, is, at the time such order is made,

Commencement of period for which security is required.

sentenced to, or undergoing a sentence of, imprisonment, the period for which such security is required shall commence on the expiration of such sentence

(2) In other cases such period shall commence on the date of such order, unless the Magistrate, for sufficient reason, fixes a later date

296 "On the expiration of the sentence" —Under this section a convict undergoing a sentence of imprisonment cannot be obliged to give security until the imprisonment ends nor can an order for imprisonment (under section 123) in default be made till then—Q E v Appa Ratanlal 765 Emp v Raigya 4 Bom L R 934 Q E v Pandu Ratanlal 774 Kva Ba v K E 5 L B R 34 10 Cr L J 69 Emp v Jhapdes 22 Cr L J 95 (All) If in the meantime he is convicted of another offence and sentenced to a fresh term of imprisonment the order for security should not be passed until after the expiry of both imprisonments If before such expiry the prisoner gives the required security, the Magistrate cannot pass an order of imprisonment under sec 123—Q E v Pandu Ratanlal 774

The accused was convicted under sec 147 I P C but was released on bail pending an appeal against the conviction While he was on bail proceedings were taken against him under sec 110 of this Code and he was ordered to furnish security or in default to undergo imprisonment His appeal was afterwards dismissed and the Magistrate ordered that as he was undergoing imprisonment in default of furnishing security, the sentence under section 147 I P C would commence after the expiry of the sentence under section 110 Cr P C Held that the order was illegal being in contravention of sub section (1) of this section—Emp v Jhabdes 22 Cr L J 95 (All)

Sub-section (2 —Fixing later date —The object of this sub-section is to allow a Magistrate to grant time to the accused instead of at once proceeding to order imprisonment as if in default This is shown by Section 123 which provides that the security may be given on or before the date on which the period for such security commences—Md Abdul Bari v Emp 4 C W N 121 The Magistrate has power under this section to postpone the date from which the security should take effect i e to give the accused time within which to furnish it and if the accused absconds during the extended time the sureties who were responsible for the accused s attendance would be made liable—Mustaqimuddin v Emp 24 A L J 327 27 Cr L J 377 (378)

Where an order is passed on the accused under section 118 and then on the request of the accused the Magistrate grants him 12 days time to furnish the required security and during this 12 days time he is convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for an offence committed prior to the date of the order under sec 118 it is not competent to the Magis trate to fix the date of the expiry of such sentence as the date for computing the period from which such security is to be furnished. The case falls neither under clause (1) nor under clause (2) of this section, and the Magistrate is bound to proceed at once under section 123 and order imprisonment of the accused—Emp v Ahmed, 20 S L R 163 (F. B), 27 Cr L J 865, Emp v Aba Farid, 29 Bom L R 700, 28 Cr L. J. 652

The provisions of the two clauses of this section may be thus explained If on the date of the order passed under section 118 the suspect is undergoing imprisonment for a substantive offence, the provisions of clause (1) come into operation, and the period of security does not commence till the suspect has served out his substantive sentence of imprisonment The proper procedure under the circumstances would be that the Magistrate should not pass the order for detention of the suspect under section 123 at once but postpone further proceedings under that section till the suspect has served out the period of sentence for the substantive offence If on the date of the order under section 118, the suspect is not undergoing imprisonment for a substantive offence, his case does not fall within the purview of clause (1) of section 120 If, on that date, the suspect asks for time to furnish the required security, it is open to the Magistrate to refuse to grant time and to take immediate action under section 123 If however he grants time and before the expiry of the time the suspect is convicted of a substantive offence, and sentenced to imprisonment the Magistrate should proceed at once to pass an order under sec 123 which provides for immediate detention in prison of the suspect till he furnishes the required security This detention should ipso facto run concurrently with the substantive sentence which the accused is undergoing—Emp v Saidu 28 Cr L J 431 (Sind)

Fresh security —A second order requiring further security from the same person to commence on the expiration of the term of security already given, passed during the continuance of the first one is not a proper order. If at the end of the period the act involving a breach of the peace is still continued a further security can be demanded on fresh proceedings being properly taken—Md Abdul Bari v. Emp, 4 C W N 121

121 The bond to be executed by any such person shall bind him to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, as the case may be, and in the latter case the commission or attempt to commit, or the abetment of, any offence punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond.

Contents of bond

297. Breach of bond for keeping peace:—A bond for keeping the peace will not be forfeited by the commission of any offence. It can be forfeited only by the commission of offences likely in their consequences to cause a breach of the peace Thus, a conviction for theft

(In re Haren Chunder, 18 W. R 63), wrongful confinement or extortion (In re Zearuddin, 19 W R 48) or for abduction (Browne v Chandra, 1906 P R 6 4 Cr L J 78) or for a secret attempt to poison a person (Ahmad Gul v Crown, 1914 P R 22, 15 Cr L J 605) will not entail a forfeiture of the bond

In Ananthachari v Ananthachari 2 Mad 169, however it has been held that it is not necessary that some actually punishable offence should be committed All that is necessary to show is that some act was done which was likely in its consequence to provoke a breach of the peace

A bond to keep the peace may be forfeited on the commission of any act involving a breach of the peace, no matter whether the act is committed against the person at whose charge the original order was framed or against any other person—Jaha Box, 15 W R 14 It is also immaterial whether the accused committed the act with his own hands or instigated other persons to do it In either case the bond is forfeited—Ananthachari, 2 Mad 169 Q v Kally 11 W R 52

If some persons (Hindus) are bound down under section 107 owing to an apprehension of a breach of the peace on account of their interference with the slaughter of cows by the Mahomedans at a particular place, such persons are not debarred from instituting a civil suit to prevent the Mahomedans from slaughtering cows at that place, and the institution of the suit will not amount to a breach of the bond which they were required to furnish The filing of the civil suit may be extremely provocative to the Mahomedans and may lead to further quarrel and breach of the peace, but it cannot by any stretch of language be called a wrongful act which would entail forfeiture of the bond The bringing of the civil suit is a perfectly legal action, and the Hindus were acting within their rights in doing so It is clearly not the intention of the legislature to prevent persons, even though bound down by a security bond, from seeking to enforce their rights in Civil Courts; otherwise, the result will be that no person so bound over would be able to institute a civil or criminal proceeding without endangering the forfeiture of his bond—Sital v. Crown, 1 Lah 310 21 Cr L J 702

298. Breach of bond for good behaviour :—A bond for good behaviour will be forfeited by the commission of any offence Thus, a conviction for causing grievous hurt (Crown v Sher Singh, 1915 P R 10, 16 Cr L J 549) or a conviction under Sec. 13 of the Gambling Act, III of 1867 (Emp v Abdul Hai, 1906 A W. N. 13) would amount to a breach of the bond

But an actual commission of the offence is necessary for the forfeiture of the bond Where a person bound down under Section 109 was found to be in possession of costly clothes, for which he could not satisfactorily account, it was held that the bond should not be forfeited, since there was no proof that he had actually stolen those clothes—In re Venkataratnam, 2 Weir 57 The bond is forfeited by the commission of any offence no matter wherever the offence may be committed If the bond is entered into in one district and the accused is convicted of committing an assault in another district the bond is forfeited and the Magistrate of the former district can proceed against the accused under this section—Q v Sham Sundar 2 B L R A C 11

The words commission of an offence do not necessarily imply a conviction for an offence Although it is true that a conviction is considered necessary to establish that an offence has been committed there is no authority for the extreme view that the commission of an offence cannot be proved otherwise than by a conviction—Mansur v Emp 24 Cr L J 588

An offence committed in a Native State would amount to a breach of the bond—Crown v Dewa Singh 1910 P R 28 but see Bahadur Singh v Crown 1918 P R 76

299 Procedure on breach of bond —When a person forfeits a bond by being convicted of an offence the amount of the forfeited bond may be recovered but he cannot be forthwith imprisoned for the unexpired portion of the term for which security was taken The Magistrate s remedy is to take fresh proceedings under this Chapter—Emp v Jag Deo 28 All 629

A Magistrate is not justified in forfeiting a recognisance under this section without giving the party charged with the breach an opportunity to cross examine the witnesses upon whose evidence the rule to show cause has been issued—Emp v Nobin 4 Cal 865

It should be noted that in order to make the surety liable the conviction of the principal must be for an offence similar to that for which security was given When men stand sureties in respect of section 110 it is to be understood that they undertake liability for only such good conduct on the part of the principal as is indicated by the circumstances under which the security was demanded it is unjust to hold that they should be compelled to undergo liability for any conceivable form of offence committed by the person for whom they stood as sureties Thus where a person was required to give security for being suspected as a thief and a habitual receiver of stolen property and a resident of another village was accepted as his surety and the principal offender was subsequently convicted under sec 326 I P C it was held that the surety should always be treated in a considerate manner and he should not be held liable for sudden acts of violence committed by the principal especially when the surety was a resident of another village and had no possible opportunity of controlling the everyday life of the offender—Udham Singh v K E 1913 P R 15 14 Cr L J 575 In Crown v Sher Singh 1915 P R 10 16 Cr L J 549 under similar circumstances the sureties were not altogether exempted but were ordered to pay a reduced penalty i.e., Rs 500 instead of Rs 1000

A person was put on security for Rs 1000 for one year and two other persons stood sureties for him The person was afterwards convicted under section 323 I P C in which offence he was found to have taken only a minor part Held, under the circumstances, that the order of forfeiture of a reasonable sum of Rs 50 against the sureties was sufficient, and that they need not be burdened—Fatta v Crown 1915 P R 6 16 Cr L J 287

122 A Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered under this Chapter on the ground that for reasons to be recorded by the Magistrate such surety is an unfit person

Power to reject sureties

122 (1) A Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered, or may reject any surety previously accepted by him or his predecessor under this Chapter on the ground that such surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond

Power to reject sureties

Provided that, before so refusing to accept or rejecting any such surety, he shall either himself hold an inquiry on oath into the fitness of the surety or cause such inquiry to be held and a report to be made thereon by a Magistrate subordinate to him

(2) Such Magistrate shall before holding the inquiry give reasonable notice to the surety and to the person by whom the surety was offered and shall in making the inquiry record the substance of the evidence adduced before him.

(3) If the Magistrate is satisfied after considering the evidence so adduced either before him or before a Magistrate deputed under sub section (1), and the report of such Magistrate (if any), that the surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond, he shall make an order refusing to accept or rejecting, as the case may be, such surety and recording his reasons for so doing:

Provided that before making an order rejecting any surety who has previously been accepted, the Magistrate shall issue his summons or warrant as he thinks fit and cause the person for whom the surety is bound to appear or to be brought before him.

Change:—The whole section has been newly drafted by Sec 20 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

The main changes introduced by this new section are —(1) rejection of a surety previously accepted (2) inquiry into the fitness of a surety, and (3) delegation of such inquiry to a subordinate Magistrate The reasons have been stated below in their proper places

301 Rejection of sureties —The question as to whether a particular person is fit to stand as surety or not, is a matter for the decision of the Magistrate The question in every case is one of discretion and the Magistrate s discretion in this matter is not fettered in any way—In re Jalil, 13 C W N 80 Bhawani v K E 12 A L J 1004, 16 Cr L J 54, Abdul Karim v K E 44 Cal 737 21 C W N 925 But this discretion to accept or reject a surety must be exercised only after a satisfactory inquiry in accordance with law—Bhawani v K E, 12 A L J 1004 Akbar Ali v Emp 42 Cal 706 19 C W N 220, Rayan v Emp, 43 Cal 1021 20 C W N 1133 The Magistrate can refuse or accept any surety only on valid and reasonable grounds and not on mere conjectures and surmises—Abdul Khan 10 C W N 1027, Asiruddi v Emp 41 Cal 761 In re Narain 22 W R 37 So long as the sureties are of a satisfactory class and the security offered is good and sufficient the Magistrate is not justified in rejecting them—Q v Ganni, 7 N W P 249

After an order is passed under section 118 demanding sureties, the Magistrate cannot introduce any new qualifications while deciding on the suitability of the sureties and cannot reject them because they do not answer to those qualifications—Alladitto v Emp, 26 Cr L J 1041, A I. R. 1925 Sind 321

Sureties ought not to be rejected merely on the strength of reports of the Police (Jai Govind v K E 15 O C 263 13 Cr L J 760, Abdul Khan 10 C W N 1027 Emp v Tota 25 All 272 Panchoo v Emp, 29 Cal 465 Munshi v Emp 18 A L J 324 21 Cr L J 365, Gopi v Emperor 20 A L J 760 K E v Karim Khan 1906 P R 18, Zorawar v Emp, 13 A L J 469 16 Cr L J 445 Bhawani 12 A L J 1004, Imp v Mahio 2 S L R 11 Crown v Kamal, 2 S L R 15 Md Ibrahim v Crown 16 Cr L J 100 8 S L R 173) witho[illegible] them an op[illegible]tunity of meeting any all[e]gations that may be [illegible]st them—[illegible] Emp, 15 Cr L J 727 (All) The im[illegible] [illegible] of th[illegible]ns expressed in police reports without con[illegible] upon opinions are based, would place all pers[illegible] the mercy of the poli[illegible] re Abdul K[illegible] Magistrate bases his [illegible] poli[illegible] imposed on him by [illegible]s the

the police If he asks the police to report it should be with a view merely of enabling them to collect and call evidence But in every case his order must proceed on a consideration of the evidence and not of the police report—Imp v Mahro 2 S I R 11 10 Cr L J 225 Jai Gobind v K E 15 O C 63 13 Cr L J 760 The practice of calling in a police officer for a report on the character of the surety is illegal and the police officer should if his evidence is necessary be examined as a witness — K E v Karm Khan 1906 P R 18 Where a surety tendered by the accused is reported by the police to be an unreliable person it is not for the surety to prove that he is of good character but for the Magistrate, if he doubts it to decide the matter upon evidence—Munshi Singh v Emp 18 A L J 374 Even a Magistrate cannot rely on his own personal knowledge in rejecting a surety and dispense with an inquiry—Crown v Piru 7 S L R 94 15 Cr L J 378 When a Magistrate receives private information that the sureties are bad characters he ought not to reject them on that information alone He should bring the information to the notice of the sureties and give them an opportunity of controverting it—Ela Buksh v Emp 14 C W N 709

Before the amendment of this section it was held that when a person had been once accepted as a surety he could not be rejected subsequently as an unfit person—Emp v Ram Lal 1 C W N 391 Emp v Priya Lal 1905 P R 16 2 Cr L J 278 But these decisions are now rendered obsolete by reason of the addition of the words may reject any surety previously accepted We have adopted the suggestion that the provisions of the new section 122 should be elaborated so as to enable a Magistrate to reject a surety previously accepted by him or his predecessor " —Report of the Joint Committee (1922) The proviso to sub section (3) prescribes a procedure to be followed in such a case

If the Magistrate is not satisfied with the sureties tendered he should reject them within a reasonable time so as to give the accused an opportunity of offering fresh sureties—Maung Tun v Emp, 4 Bur L J 17 27 Cr L J 318 (319)

302 Test as to fitness —According to the Allahabad High Court the primary test is whether the surety can exercise proper control over the person who has been bound over—Sheikh Zikri v K E Emp 8 A L J 785 Mere pecuniary fitness is not the only test of fitness The object of requiring security for good behaviour is not obtain money for the Crown by the forfeiture of recognisances b to ensure that the accused should be of good behaviour It is therefo reasonable to expect that the sureties should not be men residing at su a distance as would make it unlikely that they could exercise any contr over the accused—Q E v Rahim Baksh 20 All 206 Emp v Teri 18 A W N 143 Emp v Babu 1898 A W N 199 Mansa v Emp, A I J 848 18 Cr L J 1039 And this seems to be the intention of t legislature by reason of the addition of the words for the purpose the bond "

In Burma it is laid down that the sureties must be persons w a position to influence the accused and likely to be able to restrain him —Aga Hein v K E 8 Bur L T 53

In Sind it has been held that it is not in itself a disqualification that a person cannot exercise active physical control over the accused, it is no doubt an advantage in a surety to be in a position to send for the accused from time to time to question and warn him and to put physical restraint on him but a man may be a satisfactory surety if he is in a position to watch the movements of the accused and to ascertain from time to time how he is behaving—Md Ibrahim v Crown 8 S L R 173 16 Cr L J 100 But mere solvency of the surety is not the only test of his fitness The Magistrate has also to consider the question of the ability of the surety to enforce the good conduct of the accused as relevant to his fitness—Imp v Md Pahor 1 S L R 46 In another Sind case however it is held that sureties cannot be rejected on the ground that they will not be able to influence the accused The most that a Magistrate can reasonably demand is that they should be respectable men, neighbours of the accused and solvent up to the amount of the security required —Crown v Ahmed 1 S L R 14

In Oudh it has been held that a surety should not be rejected on the mere ground that he lives at a distance from the accused but inability to control is a good ground—Emp v Md Bakhsh 6 O C 381 If the sureties undertake to keep the accused within the area of their observation or to adopt other suitable measures for securing the supervision and control needed to keep him in good behaviour there can be no inherent objection to their being accepted as sufficient though they reside at a place 18 miles distant from that of the accused—K E v Rameshwar 10 O L J 299 24 Cr L J 795

According to the Bombay High Court the condition attached to a surety for good behaviour demanded under sec 11 that he should be able to control the accused is not a desirable condition—Emp v Jina natha 16 Bom L R 138 15 Cr L J 68 It is sufficient if the sureties are solvent and respectable Therefore where the sureties offered were solvent and respectable the mere fact that they lived at some distance from the persons bound over and were not in a position to exercise control over those persons was not a good ground for their non acceptance—In re Jesha Bhatha 44 Bom 385 21 Cr L J 377 2 Bom L R 190

In Calcutta however there is a conflict of decisions as to whether the pecuniary or moral fitness is the primary test In Ram Pershad v K E 6 C W N 593 and Adari Sheikh v Emp 35 Cal 400 it has been held that the primary test is whether the surety is a person of sufficient substance to warrant his being accepted and the fact that he cannot supervise or control the person bound down or that he is not a resident of the same village (Suresh v Emp, 3 C L J 575) is not material So also in Kalu Mirza v Emp 37 Cal 91 and Rajan v Emp 43 Cal 1024 a failure by the sureties to show that they could exercise proper control over the accused was held to be not a proper ground for their rejection In Jafar Ali v Emp, 37 Cal 116 it has been held that the pecuniary test is the primary test but there may be other objections to be considered and any such objection must be dealt with in each case as it arises But in Israddi v Emp 41 Cal 764 and Abdul Karim v Emp 44 Cal 737 the fact that the sureties would not be able to exercise proper control over the accused (who was a notorious dacoit) was held to be a proper ground of unfitness of the sureties

[In the Amendment Bill of 1914 it was expressly provided that the Magistrate would be able to reject a surety on any one of the following grounds viz (a) that he was not of good moral character or (b) that he was not of sufficient means to enable him to fulfil his pecuniary liability under the bond or (c) that he was unable to control the movements or actions of the person by whom the bond was executed But the Select Committee of 1916 did not accept this amendment and observed We think that it would be a mistake to attempt any definition of unfitness for the purpose of acceptance of a surety and we recommend that sec 122 should be left unaffected The Joint Committee of 1922 however again added those clauses but during the debate in the Legislative Assembly (23rd January 1923) they were again deleted]

What are not disqualifications —The fact that the sureties offered are the relations of the accused far from being a disqualification is a circumstance which would be an additional qualification if the sureties are in other respects suitable A relation is more likely than any other person to keep an eye on the accused—Emp v Shib Singh 25 All 131, In re Abdul Khan 10 C W N 1027 Mahali v Crown 1914 P R 6, Suresh v Emp 3 C L J 575 Emp v Miro, 1 S L R 3, Md Wasi v Emp 22 Cr L J 22 (All)

A Magistrate should not refuse to accept a surety on the ground that he has already stood surety for another man—Ghisa v Emp 24 Cr L J 517 A I R 1924 Oudh 137 So also a Magistrate cannot reject a surety simply because he is a Wunthanu member As long as the security is ample the Court is bound to accept the same without inquiring into the politics of the person standing surety—Maung Tun v Emp, 4 Bur L J 172 27 Cr L J 318

Previous conviction not a disqualification —The proposed surety is not to be considered as unfit merely by reason of the fact that he was on one occasion convicted of offences—Emp v Raghunath 20 All 189, Budhu Ahir v K L 25 C W N 130, or that he was once challaned in a theft case—Munshi Sing v Emp, 18 A L J 324

Witness not disqualified —The fact that the proposed surety has given evidence in favour of the accused in the proceeding which resulted in the order for furnishing security does not disqualify him from standing as a surety for the accused—Bairagi v Emp, 15 Cr L J 727 (All), Md Wasi v Emp, 22 Cr L J 22 (All) So also, the fact that the persons offered as sureties helped the accused in his defence is no ground for rejecting them—Gobardhan v Emp 16 A L J 263

See also Note 280 (d) under sec 112

303 Inquiry into the fitness of sureties —Before the amendment of 1923 this section did not expressly provide for holding an inquiry into the fitness of a surety before accepting or rejecting him But still in a large number of cases such an inquiry was considered as essential See Akbar Ali v Emp 42 Cal 706 Rajan v Emp 43 Cal 1024 Bhawani v K E 12 A L J 1004 Crown v Piru 7 S L R 94 Manna v Emp 15 A L J 848

Under the present section the Magistrate can delegate the inquiry to a subordinate Magistrate But under the old law it was consistently held in a number of decisions that the Magistrate ought himself to make the inquiry into the sufficiency or otherwise of the sureties he could not delegate the task to a subordinate officer—Emp v Balwant 27 All 293 Emp v Tota 25 All 272 K E v Kaim Khan 1906 P R 18 Mahala v Crown 1914 P R 6 Emp v Prithi Pal 1898 A W N 154 These cases should no longer be taken as authoritative But the Magistrate cannot delegate this task to a Police Officer and act upon the report of that officer see Note 301 ante and Kanwal v Emp 25 Cr L J 91 A I R 1924 Lah 672

A Magistrate of one district has no jurisdiction to make an inquiry into the sufficiency of a surety taken under sec 109 from a vagrant by a Magistrate of another district even if the latter authorises the former to do so as a Magistrate of one district has no power to delegate his powers to a Magistrate of another district—Khuda Bux v Crown 1916 P W R 52 18 Cr L J 130

Evidence —The Magistrate can refuse or accept any surety only on tangible evidence recorded and considered by him—Munshi v Emp 18 A L J 324 He should examine the sureties as to their fitness and take such evidence as the accused may give and base his decision on the evidence so recorded—Crown v Piru 7 S L R 94 Emp v Mahro 2 S L R 11 The inquiry is to be conducted judicially and the Magistrate has power to call for and record evidence upon oath or affirmation—Emp v Ghulam Mustafa 26 All 371 Emp v Allahdino 5 S L R 87 This is now expressly provided in the proviso to sub section (1)

304 Recording reasons —The Magistrate in rejecting a surety must record his reasons for doing so in his own writing—Ela Baksh v Emp 14 C W N 709 Kali Misra v Emp 37 Cal 91 In re Jesha Bhatha 22 Bom L R 190 44 Bom 385 The intention of the Legislature in insisting that a Magistrate should record his reasons in refusing to accept a surety on the ground of unfitness is that the Magistrate should exercise his independent judgment and should not be guided by the opinions expressed in Police reports without considering the facts upon which such opinions are based—In re Abdul Khan 10 C W N 1027 When a Magistrate failed to record the reasons and in his explanation to the High Court stated that he did not remember the exact circumstances the order rejecting the sureties was set aside—Hor Ali v K E 13 C W N xxvii

Appeal —See section 406 A

305 Interference by High Court —The question whether a particular person is or is not a fit person to stand as surety is one for the decision of the Magistrate and is left to his discretion which is not fettered in any way—Jalil v Emp 13 C W N 80 (81) and the High Court will not lightly interfere—Bhawani v K E 12 A L J 1004 Bairagi v Emp 15 Cr L J 72 (All) But if the discretion has not been judicially exercised as for instance where no reasons are given why a surety was rejected (Hor Ali 13 C W N xxvii) the High Court will interfere

Imprisonment in default of security

123 (1) If any person ordered to give security under section 106 or section 118 does not give such security on or before the date on which the period for which such security is to be given commences, he shall, except in the case next hereinafter mentioned, be committed to prison, or if he is already in prison, be detained in prison until such period expires or until within such period he gives the security to the Court or Magistrate who made the order requiring it

Proceedings when to be laid before High Court or Court of Session

(2) When such person has been ordered by a Magistrate to give security for a period exceeding one year, such Magistrate shall, if such person does not give such security as aforesaid, issue a warrant directing him to be detained in prison pending the orders of the Sessions Judge or, if such Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, pending the orders of the High Court, and the proceedings shall be laid, as soon as conveniently may be, before such Court

(3) Such Court, after examining such proceedings and requiring from the Magistrate any further information or evidence which it thinks necessary, may pass such order on the case as it thinks fit

Provided that the period (if any) for which any person is imprisoned for failure to give security shall not exceed three years

(3A) If security has been required in the course of the same proceedings from two or more persons in respect of any one of whom the proceedings are referred to the Sessions Judge or the High Court under sub section (2), such reference shall also include the case of any other of such persons who has been ordered to give security, and the provisions of sub sections (2) and (3) shall, in that event, apply to the case of such other person also, except that the period (if any) for which he may be imprisoned shall not exceed the period for which he was ordered to give security

(3B) A Sessions Judge may in his discretion transfer any proceedings laid before him under sub section (2) or sub section (3A) to an Additional Sessions Judge or Assistant Sessions Judge and upon such transfer such Additional Sessions Judge or Assistant Sessions Judge may exercise the powers of a Sessions Judge under this section in respect of such proceedings

(4) If the security is tendered to the officer in charge of the jail, he shall forthwith refer the matter to the Court or Magistrate who made the order, and shall await the orders of such Court or Magistrate

Kind of Imprisonment (5) Imprisonment for failure to give security for keeping the peace shall be simple

(6) Imprisonment for failure to give security for good behaviour may be rigorous or simple as the Court or Magistrate in each case directs	(6) Imprisonment for failure to give security for good behaviour shall, where the proceedings have been taken under Section 108, be simple, and where the proceedings have been taken under Section 109 or Section 110 be rigorous or simple as the Court or Magistrate in each case directs

Change —Sub sections (3A) and (3B) and the italicised words in sub-section (6) have been added by sec 71 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) Sub section 6 has been further amended by the Cr P Code Second Amendment Act X of 1926 The reasons are stated below

306 Imprisonment in default of security —There must be actual failure to give security in order to enable the Magistrate to pass an order under this section So an order for imprisonment passed in anticipation of default in giving security was bad—Q I v Lalu Ratanlal 408, High Court Registrar's Letter Ratanlal 511 Q E v

Shivaya Ratanlal 395 Imprisonment should follow the failure to furnish adequate security and should not precede a finding that the security is inadequate It is illegal for the Magistrate to send a person to jail pending the receipt of the report from the Revenue and police officers as regards the adequacy of the security—K E v Kaim Khan 1906 P R 18

Where a Magistrate passes an order under sec 118 no discretion is allowed to him under Section 123 and he is bound to imprison forthwith a person who cannot give security on the date the order is made If from any cause the accused has not had a reasonable opportunity of furnishing sureties the only legal method of giving him time is to postpone for such period as may be deemed necessary the making of the order under section 123 awarding imprisonment in default of security—P n j Circ Ch XLIX p 168

A person was ordered to execute a bond for good behaviour for one year and find sureties on 17 12 07 but when he failed to do so he was instead of being committed to prison at once given time to find sureties and finally on 24 1 09 he was sentenced to imprisonment for his failure to find sureties held that as the one year had already elapsed from the date of the first order the order for imprisonment under sec 123 was illegal—In re Muthu Gounden 6 M L T 308 10 Cr L J 481

Person already under imprisonment —If the person against whom an order under this section is passed is already under imprisonment as a substantive punishment for some offence the order under this section should not be passed until after the expiry of the term of imprisonment —Q E v Appa Ratanlal 65 Imp v Rangya 4 Bom L R 934 A sentence under this section cannot run concurrently with any other sentence of imprisonment which the person is undergoing—In re Chinnasamy 16 Cr L J 272 (Mad) See section 120

If a person already imprisoned is sentenced under this section he is simply ordered to be detained in prison See sub section (1) No warrant for such detention is necessary —Anon Ratanlal 511

Subsequent imprisonment —If the accused while undergoing an imprisonment under this section is convicted of an offence and sentenced to a term of imprisonment the sentence for the substantive offence must commence at once and should not be postponed to take effect after the expiration of the imprisonment awarded under this section—Q I v [illegible] n 27 Mad 525 In re Joghi [illegible] 13 Cr L J 849 Q E v [illegible] 5 Bom L R 2[illegible] Emp v Durga 6 Bom L R 1098 See Note 1083 under sec 397

Period of Imprisonment —The person failing to give security shall be committed to prison 'until such period expires' i e the period of imprisonment in default of security should be the same as the period for which security was demanded under section 118 It should be neither for a longer nor for a shorter term Thus, an order requiring security for good behaviour for a period of six months and in default awarding rigorous imprisonment for three months is wrong and bad in form—Q E v Garm

Ratanlal 584. K E. v. Karimuddin, 23 All 422. If the Magistrate thinks that the term of imprisonment should be shorter, the proper course is to report the matter to the District Magistrate for taking action under section 124 (2)—Q E v Moti Ratanlal 668 So also an order awarding imprisonment in default of security for a period longer than that for which the accused was called upon to give security is illegal—Syed Ahmed, 2 Weir 57

The period of imprisonment must be definite, an order directing the accused to be imprisoned until he gives security is bad—Matlamdi v Tarip ulla 8 Cal 644

307. Sub-section (2) —This sub section has reference only to the case where default is made in finding security. If the security is given, the section does not apply and no reference to the Court of Session is necessary even though the term of security exceeds one year—Rai Ishr. Pershad v Q E, 23 Cal 621 (627) Ram Kishen v Emp, 15 A L J 822, 40 All 39, 19 Cr L J 2

When a Magistrate passes an order for furnishing security for a period exceeding one year and default is made, imprisonment for default cannot be awarded by the Magistrate All that he is empowered to do is to detain the accused pending the order of the Sessions Judge—K E v Myat Aung, 4 L B R 135, 7 Cr L J 412, Mahala v Crown, 1914 P. R 6, Sundar v Emp, 21 Cr L J 623 (Lah) If the Magistrate passes an order for imprisonment it will be bad and will not be cured by the District Magistrate reducing on appeal the period of security as well as the term of imprisonment to one year—Syed Ahmed, 2 Weir 57 Even a Magistrate cannot pass an order of imprisonment, and then send his order for confirmation to the Sessions Judge—Emp v Jafar, 1899 A W N 151, because the proceedings are sent to the Sessions Judge under this section not for the purpose of confirming the order of the Magistrate but for passing his own order—Q E v Myat Aung, 4 L B R 135, Emp v Rewa Ahir, 6 C P L R 27

'Exceeding one year' —A Magistrate cannot legally amalgamate secs. 109 and 110, and require the execution of two bonds for good behaviour for an aggregate period of 18 months, and in default of the same being furnished, commit the accused to prison for 18 months rigorous imprisonment At any rate in such case the proceedings should be referred to the Sessions Judge under the provisions of section 123 (2)—Q E v Balya, Ratanlal 946

Reference by Magistrate to High Court —If the Sessions Judge, on a reference made under this section refuses to confirm the order of the District Magistrate passed under section 118 and discharges the person called upon to furnish security, the Magistrate cannot refer the case to the High Court under section 348 It would be contrary to every principle to allow the District Magistrate to report against an order of the Sessions Court to which he is subordinate If the Magistrate, as the officer responsible for the peace of his district, is dissatisfied with the order of the Sessions Judge, his proper course is to ask the Public Prosecutor to move

the High Court for revision—Q E v Jahandi 23 Cal 249 Emp v Jamna Bai 28 All 91

308 Sub-section (3) —Procedure on reference —On a reference made to him under sub section (2) the Sessions Judge should give notice to the accused—Emp v Giranl 25 All 375 Nakhi Lal v Q E, 27 Cal 656 and allow him to be defended by a pleader—Jhojha v Q E 23 Cal 493 Nakhi Lal 27 Cal 656 Abinash v Emp 4 C W N 797 Emp v Giranl 25 All 375 Although the Code has made no provision for giving notice to the accused before disposing of references under this section still it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to give such notice where it was not given the High Court condemned the procedure as amounting to a denial of justice—Emp v Giranl 25 All 375

This section gives power to the Sessions Judge to deal with the case on the merits and to pass such orders as the circumstances of the case may require—E v Amir Bali 35 Bom 271 13 Bom L R 203 12 Cr L J 257 It is his duty to consider the evidence and to pass an order after doing so and not as mere matter of course—Nahu v Crown 1910 P R 29 11 Cr L J 637 Where there are several prisoners the Judge in writing his order should show that he has considered the case of each individual prisoner Though the order need not contain all the details required by section 367 still each prisoner has a right to have his case considered on its own merits and the order must show that this has not been lost sight of—Kalu Mirza v Emp 37 Cal 91 The Judge must pass his own order (i e a definite order binding over the accused) and not merely confirm the order passed by the Magistrate—Emp v Jafir 1899 A W N 151 Bahadur v Emp 1 O W N 773 26 Cr L J 656 Where the order is in reference to section 110 the Sessions Judge, before he confirms the order of the Magistrate is bound to find a special ground on which the order is passed and it is not sufficient if he merely finds in general terms that it is for the interests of the community at large that the accused should be bound over to be of good behaviour—Nakhi Lal v Q E 27 Cal 656

This section does not authorise a Sessions Judge to order the rehearing of a case He can call for further information if he desires it or he can consider the evidence on the record and pass such order as he thinks fit—Narayan v Emp 25 Cr L J 1113 A I R 1925 Cal 191

An order under this sub section is an original order and not an order confirming the order of the Magistrate Therefore the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to decide on the fitness of sureties on a bond ordered by the Sessions Court When the order is of the latter Court the adequacy of the security should be decided by that Court—Emp v Allahdino 5 S L R 87

Bail —The Sessions Judge can admit the accused to bail The provisions of section 498 regarding admission to bail are particularly wide, and the Court of Session may in any case direct any person to be admitted to bail There are no words in section 123 (2) controlling the very wide provisions of section 498 The Sessions Judge has under sec 123 (2) power to revise the order of the Magistrate passed under sec 118, and he may grant bail just as in the analogous case of an appeal the Appellate Court can release the accused on bail—Ahmed Ali v Emp, 50 Cal 969 37 C L J 592 24 Cr L J 953

Remand —In Jhojha Singh v Q E 24 Cal 155 (which was decided when the 1882 Code was in force) it was held that the Sessions Judge was not competent to remand a case to the Magistrate to take further evidence But now the words requiring from the Magistrate (newly added in the 1898 Code) show that the Sessions Judge is competent to do so

Imprisonment —Although a Sessions Judge is competent to direct under sub section (3) that the person be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years yet it is advisable that the term should always be the same as the period for which security was ordered to be given—K E v Karimuddin 23 All 4— K E v Myat Aung 4 L B R 135

The imprisonment ordered by the Sessions Judge should begin from the date of the Magistrate s order Where the Sessions Judge directed that the period of imprisonment ordered by him should commence from the date of his order and not from the date of the Magistrate s order, held that the order in fact amounted to an enhancement of sentence and that it was undesirable that the Court should do so without special reasons though it had the power—Allahdad v Crown 17 S L R 160 A I R 1924 Sind 120 26 Cr L J 179

Sub-section (3A) '— We think that where security has been demanded from two or more persons some or one of whom may be ordered to give security for more than a year all the parties from whom security is demanded should be dealt with by the Sessions Judge —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

The object of the new sub section (3A) is to avoid differences of opinion in a single case between the Magistrate and the Sessions Judge in as much as in a single case one accused person may appeal to the District Magistrate while the case of another accused person will be referred to the Sessions Judge The Bombay Government have suggested that where the case of one accused has to be referred to the Sessions Judge under section 123 the case of all should be referred whether they have given security or not We have adopted this suggestion —Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

It should be noted in this connection that the provisions of section 406 (which provides for appeals against orders requiring security) have been made inapplicable to a case where proceedings have been laid before a Sessions Judge under this sub section See section 406 2nd proviso newly enacted in 1923

309. Sub-section (3B) .—' This sub-section definitely provides for the exercise of powers under sec 123 by an Additional Sessions Judge in proceedings transferred to him —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

It was held in the case of Q E v Dayaram, Ratanlal 830 (see this case cited under sec 193) that where a reference was made under sec 123 (2), the Sessions Judge had no power to transfer the proceedings to the Additional Sessions Judge and that even sec 193 (2) did not confer on him that power because the word "cases" in that section did not include a reference under section 123 (2) The Calcutta High Court however held that sec 193 must be interpreted in a liberal sense and that the word "cases" would include a reference under sec 193 (2)—Benode Behari v Emp 50 Cal 229 39 C L J 75 25 Cr L J 573 This conflict has now been set at rest by the present amendment which empowers the Sessions Judges to make over references under this section to the Additional and Assistant Sessions Judges

310 Sub-section (6) :—Kind of imprisonment —Before the amendment of this sub section in 1923 imprisonment under all good behaviour cases could be simple or rigorous according to the discretion of the Magistrate The Amendment Act of 1923 had made a slight alteration by drawing a distinction between cases under sections 108 and 109 on the one side (under which the sentence should always be simple), and cases under sec 110 on the other (under which it may be simple or rigorous)

This clause has been further amended by the Cr P C Second Amendment Act X of 1926 the effect of which is to give a discretion to Magistrates to award either simple or rigorous imprisonment in the case of proceedings under sec 109 "Several Local Governments have represented that the change (i e the amendment made by Act XVIII of 1923) has worked injuriously as most of the persons against whom proceedings are taken under section 109 are men for whom simple imprisonment is quite unsuitable"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1925 Part V p 214)

Although the imprisonment in default of furnishing security under sec 110 may be simple or rigorous still as that section is essentially a preventive rather than a punitive provision the imprisonment awarded in ordinary cases should be simple Imprisonment of a rigorous character should not be awarded automatically as a general practice, but the Magistrate has to exercise his discretion and to decide whether on the facts of each case the imprisonment should be simple or rigorous—Girdharp Singh v Emp 42 All 563 In passing a sentence of rigorous imprisonment, the Magistrate should give reason why the imprisonment should be of the severer kind In the case of a man who has never been convicted of any offence, an order of rigorous imprisonment is unreasonable—In re Umbica 1 C L R 268

Where a person who has been asked to furnish security for good behaviour fails to do so, the Magistrate has no power to order solitary confinement—Kundan v Emp, 36 All 495, 12 A L J 823 15 Cr L J 616

It is illegal for a Magistrate to pass a sentence of rigorous imprisonment in a case under sec 107—Uttam Chand v K E, 26 Cr L J 4 (All)

124 (1) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter * * * may be released without hazard to the community or to any other person he may order such person to be discharged

Power to release persons imprisoned for failing to give security

(2) Whenever any person has been imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may (unless the order has been made by some Court superior to his own) make an order reducing the amount of the security or the number of sureties or the time for which security has been required

(3) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter as ordered by the Court of Session or High Court may be released without hazard to the community, such Magistrate shall make an immediate report of the case for the orders of the Court of Session or High Court as the case may be and such Court may if it thinks fit order such person to be discharged

(3) An order under sub section (1) may direct the discharge of such person either without conditions or upon any conditions which such person accepts

Provided that any condition imposed shall cease to be operative when the period for which such person was ordered to give security has expired

(4) The Local Government may prescribe the conditions upon which a conditional discharge may be made

(5) If any condition upon which any such person has been discharged is in the opinion of the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate by whom the order of discharge was made or of his successor, not fulfilled he may cancel the same

(6) When a conditional order of discharge has been cancelled under sub section (5), such person may be arrested by any police officer without warrant and shall thereupon be produced before the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate

Unless such person then gives security in accordance with the terms of the original order for the unexpired portion of the term for which he was in the first instance committed or ordered to be detained (such portion being deemed to be a period equal to the period between the date of the breach of the conditions of discharge and the date on which, except for such conditional discharge, he would have been entitled to release) the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate may remand such person to prison to undergo such unexpired portion

A person remanded to prison under this sub section shall, subject to the provisions of section 122, be released at any time on giving security in accordance with the terms of the original order for the unexpired portion aforesaid to the Court or Magistrate by whom such order was made, or to its or his successor

Change —In sub section (1) the words whether by the order of such Magistrate or that of his predecessor in office or of some subordinate Magistrate which occurred after the words under this chapter have been omitted sub section (3) has been omitted and replaced by a new sub section and sub sections (4) to (6) have been newly added by sec -- of the Cr P C Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

This amendment is mainly intended to enable persons committed to prison under Chapter VIII of the Code to be sent to Industrial Homes and Settlements of the Salvation Army or to other similar Homes or Settlements where it may be possible to reform them and make them accustomed to regular work of a kind which may be useful to them after the expiry of their period of detention It is proposed to give a District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate absolute power to release with or without conditions a person imprisoned for failure to give security, without the intervention of the Court of Session or High Court —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1921)

311 It is entirely within the discretion of the District Magistrate, who as the head of the district is responsible for the peace thereof to determine when and under what circumstances he should act under this section—Emp v Chhotu 1883 A W N 183

The order passed by a District Magistrate under this section may be of an original or of a revisional character that is the Magistrate may release a person either on the ground that by reason of something occurring after the order for security, there is no longer any apprehension of a breach of the peace and the person may be safely released, or on the ground that on the evidence taken by the Subordinate Magistrate there was no apprehension of a breach of the peace and no order for security should have been made—Re Mare Goud, 37 Mad 125 (141) (F B), 25 M L J 459, 14 Cr L J 546

125. The Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may, at any time, for sufficient reasons to be recorded in writing, cancel any bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour executed under this Chapter by order of any Court in his district not superior to his Court.

Power of District Magistrate to cancel any bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour

312. Scope.—This section empowers the District Magistrate to cancel a bond but does not authorise him to order that the person whose bond is so cancelled should be imprisoned until a fresh security bond is given—Baldeo Singh v Jugal Kishore 33 All 624, Panchu v Emp, 29 Cal 455

313 Cancellation of bond—Ground of cancellation—The Allahabad High Court (as well as the Oudh Court) has held that a bond can be cancelled only on the ground that it is no longer necessary—Banarsi v Partab Singh 35 All 103 Emp v Shankar 41 All 651; and that the District Magistrate in cancelling a bond is entitled to look only to the circumstances subsequent to the execution of a bond He can cancel a bond only on the ground that something has supervened since the date of the first Court's order which satisfies the District Magistrate that in view of the facts since come to light there is no longer any necessity to keep the accused person under bond—Nizamuddin v Md Ziaul 44 All 614, 20 A L J 521 he can cancel a bond for keeping the peace if there is no ground for thinking that there is any likelihood of a breach of the peace—Ibdur 1905 A W N 143 But the District Magistrate is not entitled to look to the circumstances existing at the time of the bond, thus, the fitness or unfitness of the sureties is a matter which can be decided in reference to the circumstances existing at the time of execution of the bond, and the District Magistrate has no power to look to those circumstances and cannot therefore cancel a bond on the ground of unfitness of sureties—Mahabir, 8 O C 245, 2 Cr L J 507 In other words, the power conferred by this section to cancel a bond is not to be exercised as in appeal against an order of security to keep the peace—Sita Ram v Emp, 39 All 166, Nizamuddin v Md Ziaul, 44 All 614, 23 Cr L J. 398, Ram Din v. Emp, 24 Cr L J. 201 (Oudh); Emp v. Balwant, 24 Cr L J. 616 (Oudh) This section cannot be used by the Magistrate as if he were sitting in appeal and going into the merits of the case If he thinks that the order is not maintainable on the evidence on record, his duty is not to pass an order under section 125 but to refer the case to the High Court in its revisional side—Nizamuddin v Md Ziaul 44 All 614 Banarsi v Partab 35 All 103 Emp v Shankar 41 All 651 Two other Allahabad cases however do not support this view Thus in Baldeo Singh v Jugal Kishore 33 All 6 4 (625) it has been held that a District Magistrate can cancel a bond of the accused on the ground that the surety who stood for him was an unfit person In another Allahabad case Emp v Lalji 40 All 140 (virtually dissenting from 35 All 103) it is laid down that there is nothing in the words of sec 125 to prevent the District Magistrate from cancelling the bond for reasons other than that it is no longer necessary to keep the accused under their bonds that the District Magistrate can cancel a bond under section 125 on the ground that the accused should not have been bound over and that the District Magistrate can deal with a case under section 125 as in revision and no reference to the High Court is necessary

The Patna High Court holds that the only order which a District Magistrate can pass under this section is an order cancelling the bond directed to be executed by a subordinate Magistrate on the ground that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace The District Magistrate is not an appellate or revisional authority and he has no power to vacate the order of the subordinate Magistrate as ultra vires or to quash the proceedings—Durga Singh v Amar Dayal 3 P L T 103 23 Cr L J 281

But the Calcutta High Court is of opinion that the District Magistrate can cancel the bond on any sufficient ground and he is not restricted to the grounds which may have arisen subsequent to the date of execution of the bond The jurisdiction of the District Magistrate under this section is not merely an original jurisdiction but may be exercised as in appeal or revision He can cancel the bond on the ground that it should never have been required—Nabu Sardar v Emp 34 Cal 1 F B (overruling 3 Cal 918) This decision has been followed by the Punjab Madras and C P Courts Thus in Iriditta v Crown 1908 P W R 12 7 Cr L J 348 it has been held that the District Magistrate has full discretion to consider the evidence and can set aside the order of security on the merits The Madras High Court also holds that the order under sec 125 may be either of an original or of a revisional character and the District Magistrate may cancel a bond on any sufficient grounds' There is no reason to qualify or restrict the ordinary meaning of the words used This section was intended to give the District Magistrate the right to review the evidence and the District Magistrate can cancel a bond on the ground that the evidence before the Subordinate Magistrate was not sufficient to justify the passing of the order for security The words at any time show that the District Magistrate can cancel the bond at any time however early If the District Magistrate may within a few minutes of a Subordinate Magistrate exacting the execution of a bond cancel it it could hardly be in consequence of anything that occurred after the execution of the bond that is the District Magistrate is not bound to look only to the events that have happened subsequent to the execution of the bond but is entitled to cancel it on the ground that on the evidence before the Subordinate Magistrate the bond ought never to have been required—Re Mare Goud 37 Mad 125 (F B) The same view has been taken in C P—Emp v Dalli 11 N L R 98 16 Cr L J 555

The words at any time show that the District Magistrate may cancel the bond at any time however late even when there is only one day left for the expiration of the period for which the bond has been executed the delay in obtaining the material on which the bond is cancelled does not invalidate the order of cancellation—Re Mare Goud 37 Mad 125 (145 146) F B But an order for the cancellation of the bond cannot be passed before it has been executed—Barka v Janmejoy 32 Cal 948

CHAPTER IX.

Unlawful Assemblies.

Assembly to disperse on command of Magistrate or police officer

127. (1) Any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police station may command any unlawful assembly, or any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, to disperse, and it shall thereupon be the duty of the members of such assembly to disperse accordingly.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta

316. "Officer in charge" —An order directing the dispersal of an assembly passed by an officer (e g Deputy Commissioner of Police) superior in rank to the Police Officer is an order by a lawful authority within the meaning of this section—Emp v Tucker 7 Bom 42

In all cases of an unlawful assembly a riot or a disturbance of the peace having occurred or being apprehended the police will take the initiative but if they find themselves not strong enough for the occasion, immediate application is to be made to the nearest Magistrate, which under the terms of Act V of 1861 means all persons within the Police District exercising all or any of the powers of a Magistrate and therefore includes the Tahsildars who are bound on requisition from the Police Inspector to appoint from the residents of the neighbourhood as many Police officers as the said Inspector may deem necessary All revenue chaprasis and messengers of all kinds may legally be appointed special Police officers Thus, the whole resources of the Civil Government are at once on a special occasion brought to the assistance of the Police for the purpose of restoring public order —Punj Pol Cir, Ch XXVII, p 318 See Punj Cir 320

317. Unlawful assembly :—An assembly may be for lawful purposes e g a religious procession, but it may excite such opposition as to be likely to cause a breach of the peace If so it may be called upon to disperse—Emp v Tucker, 7 Bom 42 Murlidhar v Emp, 1887 P R 22

If an order is promulgated by the Superintendent of Police under sec. 30 of the Police Act (V of 1861) prohibiting persons from organising or promoting processions without a license, and that order is disobeyed, the procedure to be adopted is as provided by sec 127 of the Cr P Code, viz to order the procession to disperse—Harekrishna v Emp, 8 P L T 215, 28 Cr L J 443

Punishment :—See Secs 145, 151 I P. C.

128 If upon being so commanded, any such assembly does not disperse, or if without being so commanded, it conducts itself in such a manner as to show a determination not to disperse, any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police station, whether within or without the presidency towns may proceed to disperse such assembly by force and may require the assistance of any male person not being an officer or soldier in Her Majesty's Army or a volunteer enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869 and acting as such for the purpose of dispersing such assembly and if necessary arresting and confining the persons who form part of it, in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law

Use of civil force to disperse

318 Use of fire arms — Where a Magistrate or officer in charge of a Police station engaged in dispersing an unlawful assembly is compelled in the last resort to direct the Police to use fire arms he shall give the rioters the fullest warning of his intention warning them beforehand that the fire will be effective that the ball or buckshot will be used at the first round and that blank cartridges will not be used Firing shall cease the instant it is not necessary Care should be taken not to fire upon persons separated from the crowd nor to fire over the heads of crowds as thereby innocent persons may be injured Blank cartridges should never be served out to Police employed to suppress a riot —Bom Pol Man p 70

On being requisitioned a squad of Police properly armed and accoutred and carrying ten rounds of buckshot ammunition per man in command of a responsible officer will proceed with all despatch to the scene The Magistrate or superior Police Officer or other subordinate officer as circumstances may permit supported by a file (who will duly come to the charge on being halted) will proceed to within speaking distance of the mob and command it to disperse and distinctly warn it that the fire will be effective and that blank cartridges will not be used If the mob shows itself aggressive and determined not to disperse the officer and file aforesaid will fall back and the squad will on due command to that effect load after which another warning to the rioters to disperse will be given and if not obeyed within a reasonable time fire will be opened on distinct word of command by the officer in charge of the squad either by specified number of files or by ranks of sub sections or sections or he may order a volley according to the requirements of the situation The fire should be so directed as to inflict as little bodily harm as possible aim in the first instance being taken at the feet of the nearest rioters, and due care being observed to avoid firing on persons

separated from the rioters Firing must cease the moment it is no longer necessary, i e, on the mob showing the slightest indication of retiring or dispersing * * * After the order ' cease fire' and should no further apprehension exist the wounded would be sent to the nearest hospital, and the senior Police officer will take account of the ammunition used and if no Magistrate is present will draw up an accurate account of all that transpired —C P Pol Man page 16

The power of using fire arms to disperse an unlawful assembly cannot be exercised by any person below the rank of an officer in charge of a police station An officer in charge of a patrol boat whose powers are no higher than those of an officer in charge of an outpost, cannot use fire arms under this section—Muhammad Yunus v Emp, 50 Cal 318 (323), A I R 1923 Cal 517 25 Cr L J 167

Use of military force

129 If any such assembly cannot be otherwise dispersed and if it is necessary for the public security that it should be dispersed, the Magistrate of the highest rank who is present may cause it to be dispersed by military force.

Duty of officer commanding troops required by Magistrate to disperse assembly

130 (1) When a Magistrate determines to disperse any such assembly by military force, he may require any commissioned or non-commissioned officer in command of any soldiers in Her Majesty's Army or of any volunteers enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, to disperse such assembly by military force and to arrest and confine such persons forming part of it as the Magistrate may direct, or as it may be necessary to arrest and confine in order to disperse the assembly or to have them punished according to law

(2) Every such officer shall obey such requisition in such manner as he thinks fit, but in so doing he shall use as little force, and do as little injury to person and property, as may be consistent with dispersing the assembly and arresting and detaining such persons.

Power of commissioned military officers to disperse assembly.

131. When the public security is manifestly endangered by any such assembly, and when no Magistrate can be communicated with, any commissioned officer of Her Majesty's Army may disperse such assembly by military force, and may arrest and confine any persons forming part of it, in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law but if while he is acting under this section it becomes practicable for him to communicate with a Magistrate, he shall do so, and shall thenceforward obey the instructions of the Magistrate as to whether he shall or shall not continue such action

Protection against prosecution for acts done under this Chapter

132. No prosecution against any person for any act purporting to be done under this Chapter shall be instituted in any Criminal Court except with the sanction of the Local Government; and—

(a) no [illegible] under this [illegible]

(b) no [illegible] in good faith,

(c) no person doing any act in good faith, in compliance with a requisition under Section 128 or Section 130, and,

(d) no inferior officer, or soldier, or volunteer doing any act in obedience to any order which he was bound to obey,

shall be deemed to have thereby committed an offence:

Provided that no such prosecution shall be instituted in any Criminal Court against any officer or soldier in His Majesty's army except with the sanction of the Governor General in Council.

129 If any such assembly cannot be otherwise dispersed and if it is necessary for the public security that it should be dispersed the Magistrate of the highest rank who is present may cause it to be dispersed by military force

130 (1) When a Magistrate determines to disperse any such assembly by military force, he may require any commissioned or non commissioned officer in command of any soldiers in Her Majesty's Army or of any volunteers enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, to disperse such assembly by military force and to arrest and confine such persons forming part of it as the Magistrate may direct or as it may be necessary to arrest and confine in order to disperse the assembly or to have them punished according to law

Duty of officer commanding troops required by Magistrate to disperse assembly

(2) Every such officer shall obey such requisition in such manner as he thinks fit, but in so doing he shall use as little force and do as little injury to person and property as may be consistent with dispersing the assembly and arresting and detaining such persons

131 When the public security is manifestly endangered by any such assembly, and when no Magistrate can be communicated with any commissioned officer of Her Majesty's Army may disperse such assembly by military force and may arrest

132. No prosecution against any person for any act purporting to be done under this Chapter shall be instituted in any Criminal Court except with the sanction of the Local Government, and—

(a) no Magistrate or police officer acting under this Chapter in good faith,

(b) no officer acting under Section 131 in good faith,

(c) no person doing any act in good faith, in compliance with a requisition under Section 128 or Section 130 and,

(d) no inferior officer, or soldier, or volunteer doing any act in obedience to any order which he was bound to obey,

shall be deemed to have thereby committed an offence:

CHAPTER X

PUBLIC NUISANCES

Conditional order for removal of nuisance

133. (1) Whenever a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or * * * a Magistrate of the first class considers, on receiving a police-report or other information and on taking such evidence (if any) as he thinks fit, that any unlawful obstruction or nuisance should be removed from any way, river or channel which is or may be lawfully used by the public or from any public place, or that the conduct of any trade or occupation, or the keeping of any goods or merchandise, is injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community, and that in consequence such trade or occupation should be prohibited or regulated or such goods or merchandise should be removed or the keeping thereof regulated or that the construction of any building or the disposal of any substance, as likely to occasion conflagration or explosion, should be prevented or stopped, or,

that any building, tent or structure or any tree is in such a condition that it is likely to fall and thereby cause injury to persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood or passing by, and that in consequence the removal, repair or support of such building, tent or structure, or the removal or support of such tree, is necessary, or that any tank, well or excavation adjacent to any such way or public place should be fenced in such manner as to prevent danger arising to the public, or that any dangerous animal should be destroyed, confined or otherwise disposed of such Magistrate may make a conditional order requiring the person causing such obstruction or nuisance, or carrying on such trade or occupation or keeping any such goods or merchandise or owning possessing or controlling such building tent structure substance, tank, well or excavation or owning or possessing such animal or tree, within a time to be fixed in the order to remove such obstruction or nuisance or to desist from carrying on, or to remove or regulate in such manner as may be directed such trade or occupation or to remove such goods or merchandise, or to regulate the keeping thereof in such manner as may be directed, or to prevent or stop the erection of or to remove, repair or support such building tent or structure, or to remove or support such tree, or to alter the disposal of such substance or to fence such tank well or excavation, as the case may be or to destroy, confine or dispose of such dangerous animal in the manner provided in the said order, or if he objects so to do, to ap [illegible]

the first [illegible]
the orde [illegible] modified in the manner hereinafter provided

(2) No order duly made by a Magistrate under this section shall be called in question in any Civil Court

Explanation —A public place' includes also property belonging to the State camping grounds and grounds left unoccupied for sanitary or recreative purposes

Change —The entire section has been newly drafted by section 24 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) But the actual changes introduced by the re-drafting are the following —(a) In sub section (1) the words when empowered by the Local Gc

in this behalf have been omitted under the previous law, an ordinary Magistrate of the first class could take proceedings under this section only when he was specially empowered by the Local Government under the present law all Magistrates of the first class are competent to deal with the case and no special empowering is necessary (b) the word regulated and the keeping of goods should be regulated have been newly added in para 3 (c) the words tent or structure or any tree have been added in para 5 and (d para (relating to the disposal of dangerous animals) has been newly added Certain consequential changes have also been made in the subsequent paras of this section

320 Application of this Chapter —The provisions of this Chapter should be so worked as not to become themselves a nuisance to the community at large Although every person is bound to so use his property that it may not work legal damage or harm to his neighbour yet on the other hand no one has a right to interfere with the free and full enjoyment by such person of his property except on clear and absolute proof that such use of it by him is producing such legal damage or harm and therefore a lawful and necessary trade (e g tanning) ought not to be interfered with unless it is proved to be injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community—Shadi v Emp 1898 P R 17

This section deals with the condition of things at the time when the order is made It is not meant to apply to what may happen at some indefinite time in the future or under quite abnormal circumstances Therefore a Magistrate is not competent to order an occupation to be prohibited or a tree to be cut down or a building to be demolished merely because at some future time the occupation may become injurious to the health of the neighbourhood or the tree may cause an obstruction to public thoroughfare or the building may become dangerous to passers by—Gokal Chand v Emp 1 Lah 163 21 Cr L J 462 Gokul v Emp 22 A I J 436 26 Cr L J 104 Rajaxan v Emp 1890 P R 5

In all criminal proceedings initiated under this section the Magistrate should bear in mind that he is supposed to be acting purely in the interests of the public and should be on his guard against any tendency to use the section as a substitute for litigation in the Civil Courts in order to obtain settlement of private disputes—Farzand Ali v Hakim Ali 37 All 26 (28) Where the alleged obstruction to a public road has been existing for 15 or 16 years the matter is one to be decided by a Civil Court and sec 133 is not intended to be applied in such cases to avoid the necessity of filing a civil suit—Ghurahu v Sakalraj 24 A L J 112 27 Cr L J 27 (29)

321 Secs 133 and 144 —Section 144 is more general and sec 133 is more specific therefore nuisances specially provided for in this section are taken out of the general provisions of section 144 of the Code—Anonymous 2 Weir 58 Hurs Mohun 10 W R 53 But where an order prohibiting a nuisance cannot be made under this section e g an order prohibiting burial in certain places on sanitary grounds it should be made under the more general sections (143 or 144)—Anonymous 2 Weir 64

If proceedings are taken under sec 133 the procedure laid down in the present chapter must be obeyed and the matter cannot be disposed of summarily under sec 144 of the Code—Q v Pithi 8 W R 37

But the essential difference between the two sections is that sec 133 expressly directs that the injunctional order should be an order nisi, i e, it is an order accompanied by a condition that it is not to operate if the party shows cause while section 144 speaks only of an absolute order—Hari Mohun 10 W R 53

322 Sections 133 and 147 —Section 133 is not a bar to a proceeding under sec 147 The fact that Sec 133 expressly provides for an order by the Magistrate directing the removal of an obstruction to a pathway does not necessarily imply that a similar order cannot be passed under Sec 147 of the Code—Karuppana v Kandasami 26 M L J 223 15 Cr L J 362 But when proceedings have been taken under section 133 no order can be passed under Sec 147—Abdool Rackman v Safar Ali 15 C W N 667 12 Cr L J 43

323 Nature of proceedings —Proceedings under this section are more of the nature of civil than of criminal proceedings and the person against whom proceedings are taken under this section is not an accused person within the meaning of Sec 342 He can give evidence on his own behalf and may be examined on oath—Hiranauda v Emp, 9 C W N 983 Proceedings under this chapter are not proceedings in respect of offences and further inquiry cannot be ordered under Sec 436 if the proceedings are dropped by the Magistrate—Srinath v Ainaddi, 24 Cal 395 But orders passed on proceedings under this chapter are orders passed in a criminal trial for the purpose of section 15 of the Letters Patent and no appeal lies against an order passed by a single Judge of the High Court under sec 439 revising an order of the Magistrate—Subbayya v Ramayya 39 Mad 537 16 Cr L J 319

Magistrates empowered :—It has already been pointed out above (under heading Change supra) that all first class Magistrates are now authorised to take action under this section and it is no longer necessary that they should be specially empowered by the Local Government In the United Provinces and in C P the Local Government may invest Municipal Boards with the powers of a District Magistrate to institute proceedings under this section See Sec 57 of N W P Municipalities Act XV of 1883 and sec 86 of the C P Municipal Act XVIII of 1889

In Presidency towns, the Presidency Magistrates are not empowered to act under this chapter In nuisance cases they act under the Penal Code, the Police Acts the Municipal Acts and other Local enactments, dealing with special kinds of nuisances

324 Unlawful obstruction .—Obstruction to a public road is a nuisance though no practical inconvenience is caused—Q E v * Unrao*, 23 All 84 And it is absolutely irrelevant with what motive an obstruction upon the public highway is caused—Q E v Kedar Nath 23 All 150

A dam constructed across a public river which amounts to an obstruction to the river and causes damage to the lower riparian owners may be ordered to be removed under this section—Jagannath v Chandika, 6 O L J 616, 21 Cr L J 55

Where a cattle market is situated in a congested part of the town, so that owing to the cattle having to be driven through narrow and congested lanes obstruction and inconvenience are caused to the public, it may be suppressed by an order under this section—Mahendra v Emp, 22 Cr L J 582 (Cal)

The obstruction must be permanent and not temporary—Emp v Deurao, 6 Bom L R 358 and it must be an existing obstruction, a Magistrate cannot make any order as to what should be done in case of future obstructions—Kashi v Yar Md 21 W R 10 Thus, where a solid and vigorous branch of a tree is 15 feet above the level of a road in a village it cannot be said that at such a height it causes an obstruction, having regard to the normal traffic, and it cannot be ordered to be cut down merely because it is likely at some future time and under abnormal circumstances to prove an obstruction—Gokul v Emp, 22 A L J 436 26 Cr L J 104

Where a proceeding under this section is instituted against a number of persons for various acts of unlawful obstruction to a public way, it is essential that the order should state accurately with regard to each person the specific obstruction made by him which he is required to remove, unless it is alleged that all the persons are jointly responsible for all the obstructions complained of—Ramohan v Emp, 44 Cal 61 (65), 20 C. W. N 1171, 17 Cr L J 409

Where on a complaint being made to a Magistrate that a certain person had erected a platform on a public thoroughfare and had thereby obstructed it, the Magistrate ordered that such portion of the platform as might be obstructing the highway should be removed, held that the order was vague, the Magistrate ought to have definitely pointed out and marked off how much of the platform should be removed—Jhau Lal v Emp, 23 A L J 43, 26 Cr L J 731, A I R 1925 All 310

Under this section it is only the power to order the removal of an obstruction (e g a bund) which is given to a Magistrate There is no provision for the reconstruction of a bund which has once been removed under this section—Rahimuddi v Sher Ali 40 C L J 597, 26 Cr L J 517 (518)

The word channel is not defined in the Code, but it is quite wide enough to include a water course carrying water to a public urani Where there was a catchment area in the centre of which there was a watercourse which was obstructed, and the water which flowed into the watercourse was attempted to be carried away by the petitioners to their own village tank by building a bund and cutting a new channel and by cutting down a new portion of the old bund of the catchment area thus making the water run away in a direction different to that of the watercourse and preventing it from falling into the urani, held that this was an obstruction to the watercourse—Ramasami v Ramanathan, 22 L W 470, 27 Cr. L. J 105

325 Public —"Public place" —The provisions of this section apply to those cases where the obstruction is caused to a public thoroughfare—Petamber v Nasaruddy 25 W R 4 In re Chundernath 5 Cal 875 Jagannath v Parmeshuar 36 All 209 In re Maharana 22 Bom 988 In re Beclaram 15 W R 67 It is not necessary that the way should be one which is generally used by the public it is sufficient if the way is one which is or may be lawfully used by the public—Hiralal v Sjib Chandra 10 Cr L J 210 (Cal) Churaman v Emp 12 A L J 1024 Teni Prasad v Sarjoo 20 Cr L J 556 (Pat) Pargi v B N R Ry 4 P L T 402 But the fact that the residents of a particular village have a right to take cattle across a field is not sufficient to constitute a public right of way—Jummu v Emp 1906 A W N 190 A rail way land is not necessarily a public place—Rangi v B N R Ry 4 P L T 402

An obstruction to a private path (In re Balaji 4 Bom L R 882, Gouri Shankar v Bhagalu 11 O L J 659 25 Cr L J 1118 Q v Janokenath 2 W R 36) or to a private drain (Shoodun 5 W R 58) or to a private channel (Jagannath v Parameshuar 36 All 209) does not come within the purview of this section In such cases the parties must go to a Civil Court

If a private right is set up by the defendant the procedure of the new section 139A will apply

326 Nuisance —As to nuisances under the Penal Code see Secs 268 to 294A I P C

Keeping a gaming house is a nuisance if crowds of disorderly persons flock there and cause annoyance to the public—Q E v Thandavarayudu 14 Mad 364 but if no annoyance is caused it is not a nuisance—Reg v Hari Nagji 7 B H C R 74 So also a burning ghat may not itself be a nuisance but if the ghat or ground is in such an offensive state or if cremation is performed upon it in such a way as to be a source of injury annoyance or danger to the neighbouring people it will become a nuisance—Indra Nath v Q E 25 Cal 425 So also if a privy is allowed to remain in such a condition as to be a nuisance to passers by lawfully using a public place or way, proceedings to cause the nuisance to be abated may be instituted under this section—In re Balaji, 4 Bom L R 882 But this section does not empower a Magistrate to order a privy to be removed merely because it has been only recently made in any locality —Ibid

Slaughtering cattle though it might be offensive to the prejudice and sentiments of a community, is not a nuisance—Hadgee Mokhur Ali, 25 W R 72

Selling fish on the roadside is not a public nuisance unless annoyance has been caused to the public—1 Bur L T 94

The act of a manager of a bonemill in permitting a large stock of bones to remain uncovered in the open air for a long time so as to become rotten and to emit a smell noxious to the people living in or passing by the vicinity constitutes a public nuisance—Emp v Berchefield, 34 Cal 73

A noise which is injurious to the physical comfort of the community is a nuisance—Krishna Mohan v A K Guha 32 C L J 4? ?1 Cr L J 669

A private owner may be guilty of acts done on his private property if it gives rise to a public nuisance to those living in the neighbourhood Therefore the owner of a cremation ground may fairly be held to create a nuisance if he allows the cremation of bodies upon that ground to be so performed as to annoy or endanger the lives and properties of persons living in the vicinity—Indra Nath v Q E 25 Cal 425

A nuisance is not legalised by long enjoyment No prescriptive right can be acquired to commit maintain or continue a public nuisance involving actual danger to the health of the community —In re Sheil Mohidi 2 Weir 59 Municipal Commissioners v Mahomed Ali 16 W R 6 7 B L R 499 In re Balaji 4 Bom L R 882 Jagroshen v Madan Pande 6 Pat 428 Thus an old slaughter house can be removed if it becomes offensive to the health of the neighbourhood—Municipal Commissioners v Mahomed Ali 7 B L R 409

But although no length of enjoyment can legalise a public nuisance yet such fact may tend to show that the dispute was a bona fide dispute of title such as would have the effect of ousting the Magistrate of his jurisdiction (under section 139A) Therefore the Magistrate is bound to see whether the fact of such long possession and enjoyment of the nuisance has not given to the objection of the person so enjoying it the character of a bona fide dispute as to title—Preonath v Gobordhone 25 Cal 278

Should be removed —These words show that the nuisance must be something which is capable of being removed If it is not capable of being removed (e g some objectionable accompaniments to a religious ceremony practised by the members of a religious sect) this section does not apply—K E v Faz al Hussain 1901 A W N 126

327 Offensive trade or occupation —The proprietor of a cremation ground who puts his land at the disposal of any one who wishes to cremate a dead body cannot be said to be carrying on any trade or occupation merely because he makes his profit by charging a high rent from a tenant who sells wood to the persons coming to cremate a dead body—Indra Nath v Q E 25 Cal 425

Para 3 deals only with trades which are in themselves injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community and not with those which are in themselves innocent but in the course of which the manager or plier commits a public nuisance—Barlro v Emp 1888 P R 47 Thus keeping a house of public entertainment is not by itself an offensive trade —Ibid

This section relates to an existing state of affairs and not to the possibility of future results Where an occupation is perfectly innocent at present the mere fact that it may in future become offensive to the neighbours is no ground for issuing an order under this section Where there is no evidence that the occupation of manufacturing bricks is in itself injurious to the health or that the petitioners were so working it that the health of any one was being injured no order under this section can be made in anticipation of the occupation being injurious to the health of the community in future—Gokal Chand v Emp 1 Lah 163 21 Cr L J 462

In order to bring a trade or occupation within the operation of this section it must be shown that the interference with the public comfort was considerable and a large section of the public was affected injuriously —Fazal Din v Crown 1911 P L R 117 12 Cr L J 146 The working of rice husking machines throughout the whole night in a residential quarter is a public nuisance being injurious to the comfort of the whole neighbourhood—Phiraya v K E 1904 P R 9 A lawful and necessary occupation such as tanning ought not to be interfered with unless it is proved that it is injurious to the health of the community—Shadi v. Emp 1888 P R 17 Cultivation of maize jowars or bajree within a short distance from the town is not an injurious occupation—Moti Shah v Crown 1889 P R 39 A person who opens a new market close to an existing market in the village cannot be held to be carrying on a trade or occupation that is injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community nor does the fact that the people in one market are sometimes forcibly dragged from it to the rival one giving rise to mutual recrimination and abuse justify an order under this section—In re Moidin 2 Weir 62, Moidin v Abdulla 14 M L J 207

The discharge into a river of an effluent which might be injurious to the health of the community which has rights to the use of the water in such stream can be prohibited by an order under this section It is of the utmost importance that sources of public water supply must be maintained pure and free from pollution by industrial factories but such pollution must be convincingly proved against a wrong doer before any order can be passed against him The question whether the water of a river has been contaminated by the effluents of an industrial concern is one which calls for scientific inquiry and cannot be decided merely upon the opinion of the neighbouring villagers—Deshi Sugar Mill v Topsi Kahar, 8 P L T 302 28 Cr L J 317

A prostitute who behaves orderly and quietly and creates no open scandal by riotous living and causes no actual discomfort to the neighbourhood cannot be removed from her house merely on the ground of her bad character—Nando Kumaree v Anund Mohan 24 W R 68 So also the mere existence of houses of prostitutes by the roadside or the fact that they ply their trade in their houses cannot affect the physical comfort of the passers by—Basanta v Emp 5 C W N 566 But where they are on the public road soliciting passers by their occupation is certainly injurious to the comfort of the community and may be stopped by an order in this section—Nur Jan v Emp, 1900 P R 2 though for the purposes of the Penal Code such an act does not amount to a public nuisance within the meaning of Sec 268 of that Code—Q E v Nanni 23 All 113

Under the old law, if a trade or occupation was found to be offensive, the Magistrate had to pass an order totally prohibiting it under the present law, it may be ordered to be regulated instead of being totally suppressed

328 Building likely to fall :—There must be proof that the state of the building is dangerous in praesenti and not in futuro That the building might become dangerous by another man altering the adjoining premises in future or undermining the building in question is not a ground of action under this section—Rajawan v Empress 1890 P R 5

Persons living etc in the neighbourhood —This section is limited to injuries likely to be caused to passers by or "to persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood" These words do not refer to the persons who are living actually in the alleged dangerous building or in the servant s houses in the compound belonging to it, but those unascertained members of the public whose ordinary avocations may take them to the neighbourhood of the building complained of Therefore, a Magistrate cannot, under this section, order the owner to repair his house which is standing in its own compound at a distance from the public road—Q E v Jasodanand 20 All 501

329. Filling up excavations :—An order to fill up and bring in to one level with the adjacent land excavations made for taking mud for the manufacture of bricks is illegal as the Magistrate can only order them to be fenced even if they are by the side of a public way—In re Sulemanji, 22 Bom 714

Fencing a tank :—Where a tank is used as a reservoir for water, the Magistrate can order to have it fenced to prevent accidents; but where it is proved to be injurious to the health and comfort of the community, he may treat it as a public nuisance and cause it to be filled up —In re Bisloo, 10 W R 27

330. Procedure to be strictly followed :—Where a Magistrate commences proceedings under section 133 he is not at liberty to proceed otherwise than in conformity with the rules laid down in this chapter —Q v Pith Singh, 8 W R 37 "Cases have come before the Judicial Commissioner in which proceedings under Chapter X have been instituted on a vernacular order merely initialled by the Magistrate In proceedings thus laxly instituted other irregularities have naturally followed The accused has not received proper notice of what he was required to do, and has not been given an opportunity of appearing to show cause against the conditional order made by the Magistrate The Judicial Commissioner would impress upon every Magistrate exercising powers under Chapter X the necessity of recording in each case a formal order in his own hand, stating the information he has received and the order he proposes to issue, and of seeing that a proper notice is issued to the accused giving him full information of what he is required to do and opportunity of appearing to show cause against the order, if he wishes to do so"—C P Cr Cir, Part II, No 8

Taking evidence —Before passing a conditional order under this section a Magistrate is not bound to take evidence, because the proceedings under this section are entirely ex parte, but he should do so before making the order absolute under sec 137—Srinath v Aminaddi, 24 Cal 395

331. Nature of order :—An order under this section is ex parte—Srinath v Aminaddi, 24 Cal 395

The order shall be a written one, if no written order is passed, the procedure is faulty, and a person cannot be convicted of disobeying such an order—Govt v Choonee Lal, 2 Agra 1

The order should be directed to particular individuals and not be general except in cases of emergency to which Chapter XI applies, when they can be addressed to the public generally—Q E v Jokhu, 8 All 99 A person disobeying a general order passed under this section (e g an order prohibiting the establishment of cotton ginning yards in several villages of a taluk) cannot be convicted under section 188 I P Code—Q E v Manek Chand Ratanlal 342 The disobedience of a general order passed under this section prohibiting the public in general from frequenting the roads and paths of a certain village between certain hours, is not punishable under sec 188 I P C—In re Komul Kisto, 12 C L R 231

The order under this section must not be vague it must be such that the persons to whom it is directed will be able to learn from its contents what they are ordered to do for the purpose of complying with it—Kali Mohan v Nakari 11 C L J 114 If the order is ambiguous and open to two interpretations the one most favourable to the accused will be adopted—Parbutty v Q. E 16 Cal 9

The order must be conditional and not absolute Every order should state the time within which and the place where the person to whom it is issued may appear and move to have it set aside—Emp v Brajo Kanta, 9 Cal 637 Disobedience of an order which fixes no time or place is not an offence under sec 188 I P C—Shwe Pe v Emp, 1 Bur S R 363

And lastly the order must be confined to the removal of the nuisance only and should not direct the removal of the whole thing for instance in the case of a tank the order should be to fence the tank and not to fill up the tank—In re Bisto 10 W R 27 If the Magistrate finds a burning ghat to be a nuisance he cannot order the removal of the ghat itself but can order the removal of the nuisance i e he can take such steps as would result in the cremation ceasing to be a nuisance—Indra Nath v Q E 25 Cal 425 In a case where sparks from a forge might set fire to a cotton stored in an adjoining building the Magistrate cannot order the removal of the forge but should order its construction in such a way that sparks shall not issue out of it into the open air—In re Lakanu, Ratanlal 872 If the branch of a tree is likely to fall on passers by, the Magistrate should not order the tree to be cut down but may secure the safety of the public by ordering proper support to be given so as to prevent the branch from falling—Gokul v Emp, 22 A L J 436, 26 Cr L J 104

332. Dropping of proceedings:—If a Magistrate is satisfied that there are no sufficient grounds for taking action under this section he can drop the proceedings—Issur Churn v Kali Churn, 8 Cal 553, Sorat v Jogendra, 1 C L R 486 Thus where the Magistrate before making a final order, comes to know that the road is not a public one, he can drop the proceedings and abstain from carrying out the order for the removal of the obstruction—In re Becharam, 15 W R 67 In such cases the High Court will not interfere in revision with the order of the Magistrate dropping the proceedings—Sorat v Jogendra 1 C L R 486

Proceedings once dropped can be revived if sufficient cause is shown —Ishan Chandra v Prasanna 5 C W N 173

Further inquiry —Section 437 (now 436) enables a superior Court to direct further inquiry in case of offences But proceedings under this chapter are not proceedings in respect of offences and therefore sec 437 (now 436) cannot apply So if a Magistrate drops proceedings under this section neither the District Magistrate nor the Sessions Judge can order further inquiry under sec 437 (now 436)—Srinath v Aimuddi 24 Cal 395 The proper procedure for the District Magistrate in such a case is to refer the matter to the High Court—Indra Nath v Q E 25 Cal 425 Prithipal v K E A I R 1925 Oudh 736

333 Orders not under this section —A Magistrate has no jurisdiction under this section to pass the following orders —

(1) An order regarding the custody and guardianship of children—Anon 2 Weir 66 (67)

(2) An order directing the construction of a new drain—Bishu Nath v Emp 1900 A W N 138

(3) An order to build a pigsty at a certain distance from the abadi—Q E v Jodhi O S C 60

(4) An order on a person to lop off branches of a tree of his which overhung a certain house and were thus dangerous in affording facility to thieves—Emp v Hiralal 1883 A W N 22

(5) An order to close a graveyard—Sheo Saran v Lal Md 12 C W N 70

(6) An order prohibiting persons to drink the water of a certain well —Emp v Sheoambar 1893 A W N 145

(7) A general order prohibiting the public to frequent the roads and places of a certain village between certain hours—In re Komul Kisto 12 C L R 231

(8) An order calling upon the inhabitants of a town to keep themselves well supplied with pots filled with water upon their roofs and also with hooked sticks for use in beating out fires—Shue Pe v Emp 1 Bur S R 363

(9) An order directing a person to repair a well is a valid and proper order but an order directing him to pay a fine for non repair of the well wherefrom the Magistrate directed the well to be repaired is an illegal order—Reg v Tatya Ratanlal 50

(10) An order directing a person to so use his own property as not to cause injury to the property of another—In re Jaswant Singhji Ratanlal 516

(11) An order directing a person not to cultivate his land—Dhan Singh v K E 1 A L J 615

334 Civil Suits —No suit will lie in a Civil Court to set aside an order passed under this section and the Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to question or set aside such order—Chander Seekur 12 W R (F B) 18 (overruling 7 W R 95) Rooke v Peare Lal Coal Co 11 W R 434 (civil) Ujalamoyi v Chandra 4 B L R 24 Thus a Civil Court has no jurisdiction to order a road which has been declared by the Magistrate

as a public road to be closed—Rooke 11 W R 434 (civil) But in spite of an order under this section a suit will lie for a declaration under sec 42 of the Specific Relief Act against any one of the public who claims to use the road as a public road—Chuni Lal v Ram Kishen 15 Cal 460 Gooroo v Probhoo 19 W R 426 (civil) Muttee Ram v Mohi Lal 6 Cal 291 Nilkanthappa v Magistrate 6 Bom 670

Since a Magistrate s order under this section is not a conclusive determination of the question of title it is competent to a Civil Court to try the question whether a land is private property or a public place—Muttee Ram v Mohi Lal 6 Cal 291

The suit will lie as regards a public road not against the Magistrate but against the Secretary of State—Nilkanthappa 6 Bom 670 but of course it is open to the party to bring a declaratory suit against any member of the public who may use the road as a public one and in such cases it is unnecessary to make the Secretary of State a party—Chuni Lal v Ram Kishen 15 Cal 460

335 Revision —The High Court can interfere when the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction or in excess of his jurisdiction or when there was an error in law Where the Magistrate came to a finding after considering all the evidence before him the High Court cannot interfere on the ground that the finding was erroneous—Angels v Cargill 9 B L R 417 But the High Court can interfere when there is no evidence or no reasonable evidence on record to justify the Magistrate s finding or where the finding arrived at is perverse or such as no reasonable man could have arrived at on the evidence produced—Abdul Wahid v Abdullah 45 All 656 (661) Municipal Commissioners v Inayat Ali 7 B L R 516 The High Court will interfere where an attempt has been made to abuse the powers of the Court that is where the Magistrate has given a decision regarding matters which properly lie within the cognizance of Civil Courts (as for instance in a case when a bona fide claim of right to a way or road has been set up by a party)—Abdul Wahid v Abdullah 45 All 656 (657) 21 A L J 5-9

Further it is not the practice of the High Court to entertain an application in revision against an order made by a Magistrate in a proceeding under this section unless the party aggrieved had first moved the Sessions Judge under Secs 435 and 438 of the Code—Rash Behari v Piari Bhushan 48 Cal 531 22 Cr L J 650

336 Review —A proceeding under this section being a judicial proceeding is open to review by the High Court—Garprasad 9 B H C R A C 160 Collector v Tarak Nath [illegible] B L R 449

Service or notification of order

134 (1) The order shall, if practicable, be served on the person against whom it is made in manner herein provided for service of a summons

(2) If such order cannot be so served it shall be notified by proclamation, published in such manner as the Local Government may by rule direct, and a copy thereof shall be stuck up at such place or places as may be fittest for conveying the information to such person

337 Non-service of notice —The terms of this section are directory and ought to be followed but an omission to follow its provisions is a mere irregularity and does not nullify the order—Parbutty v Q E 16 Cal 9 Thus the non service of notice does not invalidate the order if the parties admit that they knew of the existence of the notice—Hochan v Elliot 5 W R 4 Where the parties had information of the order it is immaterial that the mode in which it was brought to their notice was not in strict accordance with the provisions of this section—Nur Jan v Emp 1900 P R 2 Khushi Ram v Crown 4 Lah 224 (229) Thus where the persons against whom the order was made were residents of a Mohalla and the order instead of being served on them personally was stuck up in some conspicuous place of the Mohalla and the parties came to know of the order held that the service of the order though irregular did not affect its validity—Khushi Ram v Crown 4 Lah 224 (229) 24 Cr L J 457, 5 Lah L J 150

Proclamation —In Bengal the proclamation is to be made by beat of drum—Calcutta Gazette 1883 Part III p 715 In Bombay it is to be made by beat of drum and by publication in the Bombay Gazette and such local newspapers as the Magistrate directs—Bombay Gazette 1901 Part I p 779

135 The person against whom such order is made shall—(a) perform within the time and in the manner specified in the order, the act directed thereby, or

Person to whom order is addressed to obey or shew cause or claim jury

(b) appear in accordance with such order and either show cause against the same, or apply to the Magistrate by whom it was made, to appoint a jury to try whether the same is reasonable and proper

Change —The italicised words have been added by section 25 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

338 Application to show cause for jury —Since the proceeding under section 133 is in the first instance entirely ex parte and since the report or other information whereon the Magistrate has taken action before making the conditional order under section 133 is no evidence against the opposite party it is consequently desirable that reasonable opportunity should be given to the opposite party to show cause as contemplated by this section and to adduce evidence as prescribed by section 137—Ramchan v Emp 44 Cal 61 (64) 20 C W N 1171

Under this section a party cannot both show cause and apply for a jury at the same time he has the right to adopt only one of the alternatives —Kishori Lal 13 C W N 367

The application for the appointment of a jury must be made to the Magistrate by whom the conditional order under section 133 was made Where the defendant appears and demands a jury under section 135, the matter must be disposed of by the Magistrate issuing the conditional order, and not by any other Magistrate to whom the case might have been referred for inquiry If the defendant does not demand a jury, the case may be disposed of under sec 137 by any other Magistrate to whom it may be made over for disposal—Jagreshan v Madan Pande 6 Pat 428 8 P L T 452

339. Bona fide claim.—If the person against whom an order under sec 133 is made claims a private right of way, the question as to whether the claim set up by the defendant is a bona fide one is to be decided by the Magistrate himself and not to be left to the jury—Kylash v. Ram Lal, 26 Cal 869 See Note 355 under sec 139A, sub sec (3) A case can be referred to the jury only after the Magistrate has decided that the claim set up by the petitioner is not a bona fide claim, and that the way alleged to be obstructed is one which is or may be lawfully used by the public The jury is not competent to decide the question whether there is a public right of way What the jury has to consider is whether the order passed by the Magistrate under sec 133 is a reasonable and proper order—Nasaruddi v Akiluddi 3 C W N 345 Kylash v Ram Lal, 26 Cal 869 Dulalram v Baishnab 10 C W N 845 Matukdhari v Harimadhab 31 Cal 979, Md Ashrafuddin v Sh Karim Baksh 18 C W N. 1148, 15 Cr L J 515 Therefore a Magistrate is not competent to make a reference to the jury without first determining whether the way is a public thoroughfare or not or without determining whether the claim set up by [illegible] Dulalram v Baishnab Charan, 10 C [illegible] 1 Cal 979 Kylash v Ram Lal, 2[illegible] Ali, 2 P L J 67, 18 Cr L J 152 Khushi Ram v Crown, 4 Lah 224 (226) If however the Magistrate through a mistaken view of the law, makes a reference to the jury, without finding whether the way is a public way or not, the jury would be met by a bona fide objection that the way is private property, which would render them powerless to proceed the Magistrate will then have to take up the matter himself again, and if the claim is bona fide, will have to refer the parties to a Civil Court—In re Chundernath, 5 Cal 875

When a person has applied for a jury and a jury has been appointed, the party cannot set up the plea that he caused the obstruction under a bona fide claim of private right to the way—In re Lachman, 22 All 267; Imp v Ram Bilas, 30 All 364 The application for a jury will operate as a waiver of the plea of bona fide claim Once a jury is appointed on the application of the person against whom an order has been made under sec 133 it is not open to him at a later stage to set up a claim of right to the subject of contention a[illegible]e his claim determined by the Magistrate before the jury proceed [illegible]e matter—Ah[illegible] v Ma Gyi, 7 Bur L T. 23, 15 Cr L J [illegible]

135 The person against whom such order is made shall—(a) perform within the time and in the manner specified in the order, the act directed thereby, or

Person to whom order is addressed to obey or shew cause or claim jury

Change —The italicised words have been added by section 25 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

338 Application to show cause for jury .—Since the proceeding under section 133 is in the first instance entirely ex parte and since the report or other information whereon the Magistrate has taken action before making the conditional order under section 133 is no evidence against the opposite party it is consequently desirable that reasonable opportunity should be given to the opposite party to show cause as contemplated by this section and to adduce evidence as prescribed by section 137—Raimohan v Emp 44 Cal 61 (64) 20 C W N 1171

Under this section a party cannot both show cause and apply for a jury at the same time he has the right to adopt only one of the alternatives —Kishori Lal 13 C W N 367

The application for the appointment of a jury must be made to the Magistrate by whom the conditional order under section 133 was made Where the defendant appears and demands a jury under section 135, the matter must be disposed of by the Magistrate issuing the conditional order, and not by any other Magistrate to whom the case might have been referred for inquiry If the defendant does not demand a jury the case may be disposed of under sec 137 by any other Magistrate to whom it may be made over for disposal—Jagroshan v Madan Pande 6 Pat 4?8 8 P L T 452

339 Bona fide claim —If the person against whom an order under sec 133 is made claims a private right of way the question as to whether the claim set up by the defendant is a bona fide one is to be decided by the Magistrate himself and not to be left to the jury—Kylash v Ram Lal 6 Cal 86, See Note 35? under sec 139A sub sec (3) A case can be referred to the jury only after the Magistrate has decided that the claim set up by the petitioner is not a bona fide claim and that the way alleged to be obstructed is one which is or may be lawfully used by the public The jury is not competent to decide the question whether there is a public right of way What the jury has to consider is whether the order passed by the Magistrate under sec 133 is a reasonable and proper order—Vasaruddi v Akiluddi 3 C W N 345 Kylash v Ram Lal, 26 Cal 869 Dulalram v Baishnab 10 C W N 845 Matukdhari v Harimadhab 31 Cal 979 Md Ashrafuddin v Sk Karim Baksh 18 C W N 1148 15 Cr L J 515 Therefore a Magistrate is not competent to make a reference to the jury without first determining whether the way is a public thoroughfare or not or without determining whether the claim set up by the opposite party is bona fide or not—Dulalram v Baishnab Charan, 10 C W N 845 Matukdhari v Harimadhab 31 Cal 979 Kylash v Ram Lal 26 Cal 869 Sk Imrat Ali v Sk Amjad Ali 2 P L J 67 18 Cr L J 452 Khushi Ram v Crown 4 Lah 224 (226) If however the Magistrate through a mistaken view of the law makes a reference to the jury without finding whether the way is a public way or not the jury would be met by a bona fide objection that the way is private property which would render them powerless to proceed the Magistrate will then have to take up the matter himself again and if the claim is bona fide, will have to refer the parties to a Civil Court—In re Chundernath 5 Cal 875

When a person has applied for a jury and a jury has been appointed, the party cannot set up the plea that he caused the obstruction under a bona fide claim of private right to the way—In re Lachman 22 All 267, Imp v Ram Bilas 30 All 36? The application for a jury will operate as a waiver of the plea of bona fide claim Once a jury is appointed on the application of the person against whom an order has been made under sec 133 it is not open to him at a later stage to set up a claim of right to the subject of contention and to have his claim determined by the Magistrate before the jury proceed with the matter—Ah Yuay v Ma Gyi, 7 Bur L T, 23 15 Cr L J 269

136 If such person does not perform such act or appear and show cause or apply for the appointment of a jury as required by section 135, he shall be liable to the penalty prescribed in that behalf in Section 188 of the Indian Penal Code, and the order shall be made absolute

Consequence of his failing to do so

340 Object of section —The provisions of this section are stringent because the intention is to create facilities for conditional orders which Magistrates are authorised to pass under this chapter becoming final without needless delay and thereby promptly to ensure public safety —Q E v Narayana 12 Mad 475 Therefore an order under this section must be passed without delay Where a conditional order passed under section 133 was made absolute 4 years later the High Court treated the final order as resting on no conditional order and reversed it—In re Rangabai 23 Bom L R 844 22 Cr L J 605

341 Order absolute —This section conclusively presumes that the conditional order under Sec 133 was correctly made—Narayana 12 Mad 475 Where an order has become absolute under this section it cannot be questioned in any subsequent proceeding even if its legality were not fully established—Nur Jan 1900 P R 2 It is not competent to the party to go behind the order and question its validity in any way—Q E v Bishambar 13 All 577 But where the Magistrate makes an order which he had no jurisdiction to pass the party affected by it can go behind the order—Jasodai and o All 501

Even though an order has been made absolute under this section by reason of the party not being able to attend on the date fixed the Magistrate can set aside the ex parte order on the appearance of the party In such a case the Magistrate must proceed to record evidence as provided by Sec 137 and shall then either make the order absolute again or shall drop the proceedings as the case may be—Ram aran v Ram Lagan 19 Cr L J 214 (Pat)

342 No further notice necessary —Whenever the time fixed in the order under section 133 has been allowed by the defendant to pass without compliance with the order or without protest the liability to punishment attaches at once and no further notice is necessary under sec 140—Aluvala Guruviah 31 Mad 280

137 (1) If he appears and shows cause against the order, the Magistrate shall take evidence in the matter as in a summons case

Procedure where he appears to show cause

(2) If the Magistrate is satisfied that the order is not reasonable and proper, no further proceedings shall be taken in the case

(3) If the Magistrate is not so satisfied the order shall be made absolute

343 'Magistrate'—The power to issue a conditional order belongs only to the Magistrate mentioned in the beginning of section 133 The power to appoint a jury also belongs to the Magistrate who made the conditional order (see section 135) But the Magistrate who is to hold the inquiry under section 137 need not be the Magistrate who made the order under section 133 the Magistrate in section 137 is the Magistrate before whom the party is ordered to appear (see sec 133) he may be either the Magistrate himself who issued the conditional order or a Magistrate of the first or second class mentioned in the last para of section 133 (1) This seems to be the meaning of sections 133 and 137 read together Therefore where a Magistrate issuing a conditional order under section 133 required certain persons to appear before a 2nd class Magistrate the latter can exercise his powers under section 137 and can take evidence confirm the conditional order or stay further proceedings See In re Narasimha 9 Mad 701 Preonath v Gobordhone 25 Cal 278 Venkanna, 2 Weir 61, Jagroshan v Madan 6 Pat 478 8 P L T 452

344 Taking evidence—When a party appears to show cause the Magistrate is bound to take evidence as in a summons case He cannot make the order absolute without taking evidence—Jassi v Emp 20 A L J 697 25 Cr L J 766 Q E v Ramchandra 1 Bom L R 783 Mahadaji, Ratanlal 320 Mohar Mandar 8 C L R 431 In re Mahadaji 11 Bom 375 Bechan v Emp 47 All 341 A I R 1925 All 614 26 Cr L J 905 Sant Sahai v Lachman Singh 9 O L J 64 23 Cr L J 250 Ittar Singh v Hari Singh 27 P L R 764 28 Cr L J 60 Even if the party appears after the time fixed in the order but before the case is taken up the Magistrate is bound to hear his objection and take evidence for the order he has to make—In re Bistoo 10 W R 27 The absence of the objector at an adjourned hearing after he has once appeared to show cause will not absolve the Magistrate of his duty of taking some evidence at least before making the order absolute—In re Ram Singh 2 Bom L R 818 Bechan v Emp (supra) The Magistrate cannot act solely on his own opinion he is bound to take evidence as the basis of his order which he is to make—Doraisami v Sudarsana 17 M L T 142 16 Cr L J 207, In re Mahadaji 11 Bom 375 Kolanda elu 2 Weir 62 It is illegal for him to make the order absolute solely on the report of a Tahsildar He must go into the evidence adduced by the defendant and record his findings —Ismail v Banda 20 A L J 657 Ran Bahadur v Bhagwati 3 O W N 844 Abdul Karim v Emp 25 A L J 124 28 Cr L J 294 The report or information received by the Magistrate before passing the conditional order under section 133 is no evidence against the other party (the proceeding under sec 133 being entirely ex parte) and the Magistrate cannot act upon it but is bound to take evidence in the presence of the opposite party—Srinath v Amadh 24 Cal 395 Raimohan v Emp, 44 Cal 61 He also cannot, even with the consent of the parties refer the matter to a subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and report and then, the final order on the basis of that report he must take the evidence himself—In re Kariyappa Ningappa 47 Bom 89 he cannot base his decision upon the information gathered from a personal local inspection instead of taking evidence even though the parties agree to abide by his decision—Upendra v Rampal 10 C L J 482 Doraiswami v Sudarsana 17 M L T 142 Raimohan v Emp 44 Cal 61 (64) Kalisaday v Sidheswar 23 C W N 1054 20 Cr L J 372 Biru v Gokul 20 Cr L J 717 (Pat) K E v Kanhaiya Lal 24 O C 267 Balbhadra 1 P L W 292 18 Cr L J 448 Tirkha v Nanak 25 A L J 377 28 Cr L J 791 This section does not authorise a Magistrate to assume the role of an arbitrator even though the parties agree to his being so and to pass an order after a local inquiry without recording evidence—Chandra Mandal v Ram Mandal 21 C W N 926 18 Cr L J 738 Upendra v Rampal 10 C L J 482 Bhoora v Tara Singh 49 All 770 25 A L J 155 28 Cr L J 159 Such action on the part of the Magistrate in ignoring the clear provisions of section 137 amounts to a substantial error of law (and not a mere error of procedure) and cannot be cured by section 537—Bhoora v Tara Singh (supra)

A conditional order under sec 133 cannot be made absolute without the first party being called upon to adduce evidence in support of his claim even though the second party does not after showing cause under sec 135 appear to give evidence in support of the denial of the right claimed by the first party—Akhoy v Lalchand 31 C W N 963

345 Dropping of proceedings —See Note 332 under section 133 The Magistrate cannot make an order dropping the proceedings under sub section (2) of this section without taking evidence in the matter as directed by sub section (1)—Sheu Kelaon v Narayan 7 Cr L J 739 (Cal) Where in a proceeding in respect of an alleged obstruction to a public way the Magistrate made a conditional order but dropped the proceedings on the opposite party taking the objection in showing cause that the Court had no jurisdiction to proceed with the inquiry on the ground that the identical way had previously been the subject matter of an inquiry under sec 133 by a Court of competent jurisdiction held that the Magistrate was bound to take evidence as prescribed by sub section (1) of this section it was open to the Magistrate after taking evidence to consider whether there was a complete answer to the case against the opposite party or whether the case was one where the parties should be referred to the civil Court for the determination of a matter which the Magistrate considered he could not decide—Sarojebashini v Sripati Charan 42 Cal 707 16 Cr L J 415 19 C W N 332

346 Procedure —As in a summons case the complainant shall first begin by calling his witness who may be cross examined by the other party After the complainant has finished the other party shall let in his evidence—Hingu v K E 31 All 453 6 A L J 685 (686) The opposite party is not bound to produce evidence until the party who has set the law in motion has produced his evidence—Indar v K E 11 A L J 931 15 Cr L J 23 In re Dakshinamurthi, 18 Cr L J 848 (Mad)

Where a Magistrate passed a conditional order under section 133 and on the day fixed the accused put in a written statement to the effect that no obstruction to the public thoroughfare had been caused and produced a number of witnesses who deposed to the same effect but the Magistrate without recording any evidence for the prosecution made the order absolute under this section it was held that the Magistrate s order was illegal since he should have proceeded as in a summons case—Crown v Sita Ram 1917 P R 3 Jassi v Emp 20 A L J 692

The Court is bound at the party s request to compel the attendance of witnesses—Bhobar v Digambar 6 C W N 548

Reference to Jury —Reference to a jury is entirely optional with the party against whom the order is made but if he applies for a jury he is bound by their verdict If no reference is made the order made by the Magistrate under this section will become final—Khodabuksh v Monglai 14 Cal 60

347 Illegal order —Where a conditional order under section 133 was passed without jurisdiction the subsequent order under this section confirming the conditional order is also illegal—In re Jaswant Singh Ratanlal 516

Illegality of procedure cannot be cured —Where a Magistrate instead of taking the evidence himself as provided by this section sent the case to a subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and report and then made the order absolute on the basis of that report held that there was a complete disregard of the imperative provisions of this section It is not a mere irregularity of procedure but a grave illegality which cannot be cured under Sec 53 even by the consent of the parties—In re Kariyappa 47 Bom 89

Procedure where he claims jury

138 (1) On receiving an application under Section 135 to appoint a jury, the Magistrate shall—

(a) forthwith appoint a jury consisting of an uneven number of persons not less than five, of whom the foreman and one-half of the remaining members shall be nominated by such Magistrate, and the other members by the applicant ,

(b) summon such foreman and members to attend at such place and time as the Magistrate thinks fit , and

(c) fix a time within which they are to return their verdict

(2) The time so fixed may, for good cause shown be extended by the Magistrate

348. Section imperative :—This section leaves no discretion to the Magistrate, and he is bound to appoint a jury, when he is asked to do so—Anon, 2 Weir 63 Kishori Lal, 13 C W N 367 If he refuses to do so, he acts illegally—Gainde Rai, 1887 P R 19 In re Mothoor, 2 C L R 509

349. Appointment of jury :—The Magistrate to whom an application to appoint a jury is made cannot delegate that duty to another Magistrate—Q E v Vithu, Ratanlal 460

The word 'forthwith' must be interpreted in a reasonable way, it merely means that the Magistrate shall appoint the jury as soon as he reasonably can Therefore, where the Magistrate appointed the jury 2 days after the parties applied for a jury held that the terms of this section were substantially complied with and there was no unreasonable delay—Khushi Ram v Crown, 4 Lah 224 (229)

The appointment or the cancelment of appointment of a jury must be made in the presence of the parties and not behind their back—In re Chundernath, 5 Cal 875

The following persons should not be appointed as jurors —(a) Complainant and his witnesses because it is plainly against the principles of right and equity that a person should be compelled to submit his case to the arbitration of his adversary—Brindabun v Dwarka 22 W. R 47, (b) Friends and supporters of the complainant—Farjand Ali v Hakim Ali, 37 All 26, Mir Imam v Q E, 1897 P R 4 (c) Nominees of the party interested in upholding the Magistrate s order (i e nominees of the complainant)—Rajah Shatyananda v Camperdown Pressing Co 21 W R 43 Kylash v Ram Lal, 26 Cal 869, Upendra v Khitish 23 Cal 49)

A Magistrate has no power to veto the appointment of a person nominated by the applicant—Mir Imam v Q E., 1897 P R 4

The summons to jury should specify the time and place when and where the jurors should attend—Emp v Ram Saran 5 All 7

350. Jury improperly constituted :—If the Magistrate appoints the foreman of the jury alone, the jury is not a properly constituted one—Dino Nath v Hur Gobind, 16 W R 23. Where one of the five jurors remains absent and the foreman substitutes a juror in the place of the absent one, he acts illegally because he has no such power, and the jury is not legally constituted—Bhyrub, 10 C L R 193 If one of the jurors declines to act or remains absent, the Magistrate cannot proceed with the inquiry unless he appoints another juror in his place—Uma Churn v Joshein 11 Cal 84

A jury consisting of less than five persons is not a properly constituted one, and an order based on the verdict of such a jury is invalid—Ajit v Jamatulla, 22 Cr L J. 511 (Cal)

351. Procedure :—This chapter does not lay down any rules as to the procedure which a jury appointed under this section should adopt in inquiring into a matter submitted to them—Emp v Ram Bilas, 30 All 364

The jury is bound to hear the parties and their witnesses. They cannot decide a matter referred to them merely on local inspection without taking evidence—Kylash v Ram Lal 26 Cal 869 Adhay Chandra v Ambika 6 C W N 886

351 Verdict after time fixed.—Where a jury appointed under this section had considered the matter referred to them and the individual members of the jury had given in their opinion to the foreman but he sent in his report after the time fixed but before a final order was made by the Magistrate it was held that the Magistrate should act on the verdict of the jury and should not appoint a second jury—Sk Naimuddy v Hasim Khan 21 W R 54

Extension of time —The power conferred by sub section (2) for the extension of time for delivery of verdict can be exercised by the Magistrate only and cannot be delegated to the foreman of the jury—Q E v Kedar Nath 23 All 159

353. Reference to arbitration —As the dispute under this chapter is of a public nature in which public interests are involved the case cannot be referred to arbitrators by agreement of parties—Rajabalam v Vadlak 2 P L T 6 22 Cr L J 377 Ajit Shaikh v Jamatulla 22 Cr L J 511 (Cal)

139 (1) If the jury or a majority of the jurors find that the order of the Magistrate is reasonable and proper as originally made or subject to a modification which the Magistrate accepts, the Magistrate shall make the order absolute subject to such modification (if any)

Procedure where jury finds Magistrate s order to be reasonable

(2) In other cases no further proceedings shall be taken under this Chapter

354 Verdict of the jury —The jurors are not to give their individual and separate opinions to the Magistrate but they are to consult together and then express their collective opinion through their foreman—Q E v Khushali Ram 18 All 158

The findings of all the jurors need not agree in every detail but if all the members agree that the order of the Magistrate taken as a whole is improper such jurors shall be counted together as unanimously objecting to the order—Q v Nabari 25 W R 31

Where one of the five jurors declined to act and the remaining four being equally divided in opinion the Magistrate declined to pass any order under section 139 and struck off the case held that the course adopted by the Magistrate was irregular he should have summoned a fresh jury and commenced the inquiry afresh—Uma Churn v Joshein 11 Cal 84

The only thing which the jury is to consider is whether the conditional order passed by the Magistrate under section 133 is reasonable and proper They cannot enter into the question of rights of parties—In re Chundernath 5 Cal 875, Matukdhari v Harimadhab 31 Cal 9 9, Dulal v Baishnab 10 C W N 845 Nasaruddi v Aklluddi, 3 C W N 3

They cannot decide the question of bona fides of the claim set up by the opposite party—See Notes 339 and 359 under Secs 135 and 139A

Verdict of majority —The majority means a majority of the persons appointed and not a majority of the persons attending—Durga Charan v Sashi 13 Cal 275 Moreover all the persons appointed as jurors must act and the verdict of the majority must be the verdict of the majority of the persons appointed Therefore where one juror out of five was all along absent the Magistrate cannot acept the verdict of the four persons who attended treating it as the verdic of the majority—Promotha v Basanta 11 Cr L J 40 (Cal) So also a decision by three out of five in the absence of the other two is invalid—Q E v Kedar Nath 23 All 159 So again a verdict is defective when four out of five jurors were present at the time of the local investigation and one was absent Such a verdict is illegal and cannot be acted upon and a fresh jury should be appointed—Srimati Dasya v Nibaran 24 C W N 928 21 Cr L J 448

The finding of the jury should be arrived at after each juror exercises his own discretion in the matter A verdict given by jurors some of whom blindly follow the opinion of others is not proper Where out of five jurors two only saw the place and the third never visited it but passed his opinion solely on what had been told him by the other two it was held that the opinion of the so-called majority was not that of a legal majority—Pelamlar v Nasaruddi 25 W R 4

Objection to verdict —The party objecting to the verdict must show prima facie that either the jury did not apply a judicial discretion to the case or that they could not have arrived at that verdict by a proper exercise of their discretion on the materials before them—Bindraban v Dwarka 23 W R 13

355 Magistrate bound by verdict —A Magistrate is not at liberty to take only a part of the verdict he is bound to be guided by their whole decision If any part of their verdict is ambiguous he can ask them to express their opinion clearly—Q v Pokolee 12 W R 78

If the jury finds the Magistrate s order to be wrong he is bound by the verdict and must stop further proceedings It is only when the jury finds the Magistrate s order to be reasonable and proper that he can proceed to enforce the order—Ibid

The Magistrate must accept the verdict in its entirety If one part of the verdict is erroneous (e g if the verdict provides for the reconstruction of an obstruction) the whole verdict must be rejected The Magistrate cannot split up the verdict and accept that part of the verdict which is correct rejecting the portion which is erroneous—Rahimaddi v Sher Ali 40 C L J 597 26 Cr L J 517 (518)

Remitting the case to another Magistrate —On receipt of the verdict of the jury the Magistrate is not competent to remit the case for disposal to a second class Magistrate The 1st class Magistrate is alone competent to deal with the case further and must dispose of the case himself—Angapa v Perumal 43 Mad 316

356. Reference to High Court —The decision of the jury appointed under section 138 is not a proceeding in a Criminal Court which the District Magistrate can call for and examine and refer to the High Court under Sec 435—4 › Ratanlal 336

139A (1) Where an order is made under Section 133 for the purpose of preventing obstruction, nuisance or danger to the public in the use of any way, river, channel or place, the Magistrate shall on the appearance before him of the person against whom the order was made, question him as to whether he denies the existence of any public right in respect of the way, river, channel or place and, if he does so, the Magistrate shall, before proceeding under Section 137 or Section 138, inquire into the matter

Procedure where existence of public right is denied

(2) If in such inquiry the Magistrate finds that there [illegible] f such denial, he shall [illegible] f the existence of such [illegible] nt Civil Court, and, [illegible] nce, he shall proceed as laid down in Section 137 or Section 138, as the case may require

(3) A person who has on being questioned by the Magistrate under sub section (1), failed to deny the existence of a public right of the nature therein referred to or who, having made such denial, has failed to adduce reliable evidence in support thereof, shall not in the subsequent proceedings be permitted to make any such denial, nor shall any question in respect of the existence of any such public right be inquired into by any jury appointed under Section 138

This section has been newly added by section 26 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

The procedure which ought to be followed by the Magistrate in case a bona fide claim of right is set up by the petitioner was not laid down in any section of this chapter under the previous law But a large volume of caselaw had gathered round this point which the Legislature has now thought fit to crystallize into a new section

The principal question in connection with this clause is whether as provided in the Bill questions of title in relation to rights of way and the like should for the purposes of the Chapter, be finally decided by the Magistrate or whether the almost uniform decisions of the High Courts which lay down that the Magistrate must stay proceedings if he is satisfied that the question has been raised bona fide should be follow

We prefer to accept the latter view as laid down in Manipur Dey v Bidhu Bhusan Sirkar, I L R 42 Cal 158 and we have provided for it as a special case in a new section 139-A'—Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

The leading case on this subject is Manipur Dey v Bidhu Bhusan Sirkar 42 Cal 158 18 C W N 1086 15 Cr L J 698 (referred to in the above Report of the Joint Committee) which has laid down the following important propositions of law —If the party against whom the order is contemplated to be passed under section 133 raises a question that the pathway is not a public property in the sense of the provisions of this section, the Magistrate trying the case should be careful not only to decide as to whether the pathway in question is situate on a private land or is for public use but he should even when the claim of the objector is not substantiated find whether the claim is bona fide or is set up only to oust the jurisdiction of the Court If the Magistrate finds that the claim which is set up is a mere pretence he should then proceed to pass a final order and make the rule issued by him absolute If however he finds that the claim, although not substantiated is not a mere pretence and is not raised to oust the jurisdiction of the Court but that it is raised bona fide he should stay his hand and refer the party to the Civil Court And if the party within a reasonable time does not have recourse to the Civil Court, the Magistrate may then proceed to make the rule absolute

Where the defendant does not deny the existence of a public road at the place alleged to have been encroached but merely denies that he has encroached upon it this section has no application—Ghirahu v Shakal Raj 24 A L J 112 27 Cr L J 27 (20)

357. Bona fide claim —If there is a bona fide dispute as to the existence of a public right the powers under sections 133 137 as regards obstruction to public ways cannot be exercised by the Magistrate—In re Narayan 4 Bom L R 687 In re Dnyanoba 15 Bom L R 57 14 Cr L J 74 In re Maharana Jaswatsangji, 22 Bom 988 Basaruddin v Baharali 11 Cal 8 Nando v Kusum 1 C L J 434 Venkanna 2 Weir 61 But the claim in order to have this effect must be bona fide and not a mere pretence to oust jurisdiction The mere assertion of a claim made without reasonable ground or honest belief in it or honest intention to support it will not oust a Criminal Court of its jurisdiction under these sections—Luckhee v Ram Kumar, 15 Cal 504 Preonath v Gobordhone 25 Cal 278 Durlabh v Bhuban, 22 Cr L J 450 (Cal), Sudhansudhar v Rahim 22 Cr L J 577 (Cal) It is not open to any person illegally causing obstruction to a public property to set up a bogus question of title to such property for the purpose of ousting the jurisdiction of a Magistrate, and notwithstanding the raising of such a question the Magistrate is entitled to hear the case sufficiently to enable him to make up his mind whether or not a bona fide question of title is raised—Emp. v Dost Muhammad, 28 All 98 (99) A claim set up to annoy an enemy of the claimant cannot be said to be a bona fide claim—Nandoo v Kusum, 1 C L J 434

Therefore, when a person against whom an order is made under section 133 to remove an obstruction from a public way, claims it as a private way the Magistrate should first determine whether the claim is bona fide or not—Kylash v Ram Lal 26 Cal 869 31 Cal 979 Manipur Dey v Bidhu Bhusan 42 Cal 158, Upendra v Kshitish 23 Cal 499; Nasaruddi v Akiludd n 3 C W N 545 Rakhal v Kailash, 7 C W N 117; Dulalram v Baishi ab 10 C W N 845 Sk Imrat v Amjad, 2 P L J 67; Lakshman v Bilash 22 Cr L J 351 (Cal) Thakur Sao v Abdul Aziz, 4 Pat 783 27 Cr L J 9 In the absence of a finding as to the bona fides of the claim set up by the petitioners to the subject matter of the dispute, the judgment is liable to be set aside—Chandra v Ram Mandal, 21 C W N 926, 18 Cr L J 738 Bhagat v Ramrup, 21 C L J 116, 16 Cr. L J 160 The question of bona fides of a claim is a question of fact, and has to be enquired into like any other question of fact—Nundo Gopal v Kusum 1 C L J 434 Teni Prasad v Sarjoo, 20 Cr L J 556 (Pat)

If however the encroachment complained of is made on a way which is admittedly public the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is not ousted, and it is not necessary, in order to give jurisdiction to the Magistrate, that there should be a finding as to the bona fide character of any claim that might be made by the accused to any particular piece of ground on which the encroachment is made—Adhore v Ambika 6 C W N 886 Similarly, if upon inquiry the Magistrate finds that the channel in question is a public channel the Magistrate is not bound to inquire whether the accused has a bona fide claim of right to the channel or to refer the matter to the Civil Court, but has jurisdiction to proceed with the case—Fakir Mullick v Emp 28 C L J 211

A bona fide claim should be set up at or before the hearing, but not afterwards, and the Magistrate who finds the claim not to be bona fide should state the reasons for his decision which is subject to revision by the High Court—Luckhee v Ram Kumar, 15 Cal 564 Rakhal v Kailash, 7 C W N 117

In Emp v Dost Muhammad 28 All 98, the Allahabad High Court seems to have laid down that the moment a bona fide dispute as to title is raised by the defendant the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is ousted and the Magistrate is bound to stop the proceeding and to refer the parties to a civil suit That ruling has been dissented from in a recent case of the same High Court in which it has been held that the Magistrate's jurisdiction is not ousted merly by reason of the defendant raising a bona fide dispute as to title, but he is entitled to decide whether the way obstructed by the defendant is a public way—Abdul Wahid v Abdullah, 45 All 656 (660), 21 A L J 529

357A. Procedure :—The provisions of this section are imperative, and as soon as the accused denies a public right, the Magistrate ought to inquire into the matter and find whether the place obstructed is a public one or not If, instead of doing so, he at once proceeds under section 137 to take evidence from the complainant, the trial is vitiated by wrong procedure and the final order is liable to be set aside—Raghunath v Emp., 23 A L J 187, 26 Cr L J 873 A I R 1925 All 311, Munna Lal v. Emp,

24 A L J 361, 27 Cr L J 473 Where there is a denial of the existence of a public right, it is the duty of a Magistrate to inquire into this matter and come to a conclusion under the provisions of section 139A and on the result of this conclusion would depend the question whether he should stay proceedings or should proceed under section 137 or 138—Rahanaddy v Hasatali 30 C W N 648 27 Cr L J 878

As soon as the accused appears before him the Magistrate is bound to question him as to whether he denies the existence of any public right in respect of the way river etc and if he does so the Magistrate shall before proceeding under section 137 or 138 inquire into the matter It is the duty of the Magistrate to follow the above procedure without waiting for the objection to be raised by the accused and the Magistrate cannot refuse to inquire into the matter because the objection was not taken until a late stage of the case—Sk Sadir v Sabara 29 C W N 649 26 Cr L J 1168 A I R 29 3 Cal 736

Dispute between Government and private individual —In case of a dispute between the Government and a private individual as to the right to the ground on which an encroachment is alleged to have been made by the latter by building a wall a Magistrate should not proceed under this section, until the dispute is settled in a Civil Court—In re Jeysang Ratanlal 378 In re Ram Singh 2 Bom L R 818

358 Sub-section ( ) —The law requires first of all that the party shall appear before the Magistrate and deny the existence of the public right in question secondly that he shall produce some reliable evidence and thirdly that such evidence shall be legal evidence and shall support the denial If these three conditions are satisfied then the Magistrate s juri d ction c a es o ex 1—T ak r Sao v Abd l 1 1 4 Pat 783 27 Cr L J 9

If the Magistrate finds that the claim is bona fide he should abstain from further action and should allow the party to substantiate his claim in a Civil Court—Luckhee v Ram Kumar 15 Cal 564 Q E v Bissessur 1 Cal 56 Nasaruddi v Waluddi 3 C W N 345 Belat Ali v Alda Rahim 8 C W N 143 Manipur Dey v Bidhu Bhushan 42 Cal 158 Khushi Ram v Crown 4 Lah 24 (231) Preonath v Gobordhone 25 Cal 278 Nunda v Kusum 1 C I J 434 Lakshman v Bilash 22 Cr L J 351 (Cal) Debendra v Chairman, 25 Cr L J 1080 (Cal) Q E v Tara Ali 1900 A W N 204 Dost Muhammad 28 All 98 Murad v Emp 1903 P R 2 Muse Bagas 10 Bom L R 563 Rangi v B N W Ry Co 4 P L T 402 Thakur Sao v Abdul Aziz 4 Pat 783 Emp v Saligram 4 C P L R 14 So also where the question as to whether the way is private or public is seriously disputed and its decision becomes a difficult matter of mixed fact and law the Magistrate should decline to decide it and should send the parties to a Civil Court—Abdul Wahid v Abdulla 45 All 656 (666) 21 A L J 529 When a bona fide question of title is raised the Magistrate cannot proceed any further in the matter he cannot decide whether the title exists or not—Emp v Dost Muhammad 28 All 98 he is not competent to decide whether the title is barred by limitation or not—Kamini Kumar v Emp 35 Cal 283

When proceedings are stayed under this section, the Magistrate's jurisdiction ceases and he is not even entitled to say which party is to file the civil suit—Hari Chand v. Durga, 28 Cr L J 363 (Lah) In Ram Sagar v. Alek Naskar, 49 Cal 682 (F B) 26 C W N 442, the Calcutta High Court considered all the above cases and held that even though the Magistrate found that the claim of right set up by the defendant was bona fide, his jurisdiction was not thereby ousted, but he was entitled to proceed with the case and was not bound to refer the parties to a Civil Court But this ruling is superseded by the present section

If the Magistrate finds that the claim is made bona fide he should allow the defendant a reasonable time within which to establish his rights in a Civil Court and in the meantime proceedings may be stayed If the defendant does not assert his right in a Civil Court within a reasonable time the Magistrate should proceed with the case—Belat Ali v. Abdur Rahim 8 C W N 143 Ram Sagar v. Alek Naskar, 49 Cal 682 (F. B) at p 693 Lakshman Chandra v. Bilas, 22 Cr L J 351 (Cal), Mampur Dey v. Bidhu Bhusan 42 Cal 158

The Magistrate is not entitled to demand that the evidence shall be sufficient to satisfy him that no public right exists This section only requires evidence and not proof and the only condition is that upon the materials before him the Magistrate has no reason to think the evidence false The Magistrate has no jurisdiction to weigh the evidence and to determine on which side the balance leans He has no jurisdiction to inquire into the actual existence of the public right claimed by the petitioners—Thakur Sao v. Abdul Aziz, 4 Pat 783 27 Cr L J 9 This section does not authorise a Magistrate to look into the question of title and decide for himself whether the accused s case is or is not true All that the Magistrate is to see is whether there is any reliable evidence in support of the denial of the existence of a public right If there is some reliable evidence in support of such denial, then the proceedings under the Code have to be stayed until the matter of the existence of such right has been decided by a competent Civil Court—Munna Lal v. Emp, 24 A L J 361, 27 Cr L J 473

359. Sub-section (3) :—Question shall not be inquired into by jury :—The question as to whether the claim set up by the defendant is a bona fide one or whether the place is a public way or not, is to be decided by the Magistrate himself and not to be left to the jury The jury is not competent to decide the question whether there is or is not a public right of way They can merely find whether the Magistrate s order as originally made is reasonable and proper —Kylash v. Ram Lal, 26 Cal 869, Dulalram v. Baishnab Charan, 10 C. W N 845, Nasiruddi v. Afiluddi, 3 C W N 345; Maluk Dhari v. Hari Madhab, 31 Cal 979, In re Chundernath, 5 Cal 875, Sheikh Imrat v. Sheikh Amjad, 2 P L J 67, Khushi Ram v. Crown, 4 Lah 224 (231), 24 Cr L J 457 Contra—Emp v. Ram Bilas, 30 All 364, where it has been held that it is within the competence of the jury to decide as to the validity of an objection that the way alleged to have been obstructed not a public way But the Allahabad ruling had been disapproved of the Legislature and is rendered obsolete by this section We think that the only question to be left to the jury should be whether the measures directed by the Magistrate to be taken are reasonable and proper and in view of the decision in 30 All 364 we think it desirable that this should be made clear"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

140 (1) When an order has been made absolute under Section 136, Section 137 or Section 139 the Magistrate shall give notice of the same to the person against whom the order was made, and shall further require him to perform the act directed by the order within a time to be fixed in the notice, and inform him that in case of disobedience he will be liable to the penalty provided by Section 188 of the Indian Penal Code

Procedure on order being made absolute

(2) If such act is not performed within the time fixed, the Magistrate may cause it to be performed, and may recover the costs of performing it, either by the sale of any building, goods or other property removed by the order, or by the distress and sale of any other moveable property of such person within or without the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction If such other property is without such limits the order shall authorize its attachment and sale when endorsed by the Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property to be attached is found

Consequence of disobedience to order

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith under this section

360 A person who neither complies with the order passed under Sec 133 nor protests against it within the time fixed can be prosecuted under section 136 without further notice being given under this section—Hunala Gurniah 31 Mad 280 (cited in Note 342 under Sec 136) Q E v Bishambar 13 All 577

Cancellation of order by succeeding Magistrate —If a final order is passed by a Magistrate under this chapter, a succeeding Magistrate cannot go behind the order and question its legality as if he were sitting in judgment over it as a Court of Appeal Therefore if an application is made under this section to the succeeding Magistrate for the enforcement of an order passed by a preceding Magistrate the former cannot reject the application on the ground that the order passed by his predecessor was an illegal order—Kiran Chandra v Ramesh Chandra 27 C W N 159 24 Cr L J 317

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to cancel an order passed by his predecessor for removal of a nuisance under section 133 on the ground that one of the parties to the proceedings had not been properly served with notice or on the ground that the nuisance was in existence for a long time—Shahabuddin v Abdul Kadir 31 C W N 530 44 C L J 211 28 Cr L J 30

Costs —The question as to from which party or parties the costs for the removal of a nuisance should be recovered has to be determined upon a consideration of the question as to the parties upon whom the notices in connection with the proceedings were served it is unjust to make an order for recovery of costs from a party who was not actually served with any notice of the said proceedings—Shahabuddin v Abdul Kader, (supra)

Procedure on failure to appoint jury or omission to return verdict

141 If the applicant by neglect or otherwise, prevents the appointment of the jury, or if from any cause the jury appointed do not return their verdict within the time fixed or within such further time as the Magistrate may in his discretion allow, the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit, and such order shall be executed in the manner provided by Section 140

361 Jury failing to return verdict —If the jury fails to return a verdict within the time allowed by law the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit Therefore where on the failure of the jury to return a verdict the Magistrate inspected the spot and called for a report from the police and thereafter confirmed his original order held that the final order was perfectly legal—Shyamsundar v Emp 24 A L J 165 27 Cr L J 981 When the majority of the jurors perversely refuse to return a verdict for fear of displeasing either party the Magistrate can discharge them and appoint a new jury—Girwar Lal v Bansidhar 44 All 5 5 Where upon failure of the jury to return their verdict the petitioners appeared before the Magistrate and prayed for appointment of a fresh jury it was held that the Magistrate ought to have appointed a new jury and not made the original order absolute—Shib Chandra v Hriday 12 C W N 1047 Under this section the Magistrate upon failure of the jury to return a verdict has a discretion to pass such order as he thinks fit Therefore where the foreman of the jury simply returned the papers without a verdict the Magistrate had jurisdiction to make the order absolute—Jiblal v Gena Sahu 4 P L T 15 24 Cr L J 492 But it is desirable that under such circumstances the Magistrate should inquire into the case and should give the party an opportunity of showing cause and procuring evidence before he makes the order absolute under this section —Jiblal v Gena 4 P L T 15 Ijodhya Tewari v Emp 4 P L T 13 24 Cr L J 583 But if upon the failure of the jury to return their verdict,

the Legislature and is rendered obsolete by this section "We think that the only question to be left to the jury should be whether the measures directed by the Magistrate to be taken are reasonable and proper and in view of the decision in 30 All 364 we think it desirable that this should be made clear"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

140 (1) When an order has been made absolute under Section 136, Section 137 or Section 139, the Magistrate shall give notice of the same to the person against whom the order was made, and shall further require him to perform the act directed by the order within a time to be fixed in the notice, and inform him that in case of disobedience he will be liable to the penalty provided by Section 188 of the Indian Penal Code

(2) If such act is not performed within the time fixed, the Magistrate may cause it to be performed, and may recover the costs of performing it, either by the sale of any building, goods or other property removed by the order, or by the distress and sale of any other moveable property of such person within or without the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction. If such other property is without such limits, the order shall authorize its attachment and sale when endorsed by the Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property to be attached is found

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith under this section

360 A person who neither complies with the order passed under Sec 133 nor protests against it within the time fixed can be prosecuted under section 136 without further notice being given under this section—Itinala Guruiah 31 Mad 280 (cited in Note 342 under Sec 136), Q E v Bishamlar 13 All 577

Cancellation of order by succeeding Magistrate —If a final order is passed by a Magistrate under this chapter a succeeding Magistrate cannot go behind the order and question its legality as if he were sitting in judgment over it as a Court of Appeal Therefore if an application is made under this section to the succeeding Magistrate for the enforcement of an order passed by a preceding Magistrate, the former cannot reject the application on the ground that the order passed by his predecessor was an illegal order—Kiran Chandra v Ramesh Chandra, 27 C W N 459 24 Cr L J 317

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to cancel an order passed by his predecessor for removal of a nuisance under section 133 on the ground that one of the parties to the proceedings had not been properly served with notice or on the ground that the nuisance was in existence for a long time—Shahabuddin v Abdul Kadir 31 C W N 530 44 C L J 211 28 Cr L J 30

Costs —The question as to from which party or parties the costs for the removal of a nuisance should be recovered has to be determined upon a consideration of the question as to the parties upon whom the notices in connection with the proceedings were served it is unjust to make an order for recovery of costs from a party who was not actually served with any notice of the said proceedings—Shahabuddin v Abdul Kader (supra)

141 If the applicant, by neglect or otherwise, prevents the appointment of the jury, or if from any cause the jury appointed do not return their verdict within the time fixed or within such further time as the Magistrate may in his discretion allow, the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit and such order shall be executed in the manner provided by Section 140

Procedure on failure to appoint jury or omission to return verdict

361 Jury failing to return verdict —If the jury fails to return a verdict within the time allowed by law the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit Therefore where on the failure of the jury to return a verdict the Magistrate inspected the spot and called for a report from the police and thereafter confirmed his original order held that the final order was perfectly legal—Shyamsundar v Emp 4 N L J 165 27 Cr L J 081 When the majority of the jurors perversely refuse to return a verdict for fear of displeasing either party the Magistrate can discharge them and appoint a new jury—Gunesh Lal v Bansidhar 44 All 572 Where upon failure of the jury to return their verdict the petitioners appeared before the Magistrate and prayed for appointment of a fresh jury it was held that the Magistrate ought to have appointed a new jury and not made the original order absolute—Shib Chandra v Hridoy 12 C W N 1044 Under this section the Magistrate upon failure of the jury to return a verdict has a discretion to pass such order as he thinks fit Therefore where the foreman of the jury simply returned the papers without a verdict the Magistrate had jurisdiction to make the order absolute—Jiblal v Gena Sahu 4 P L T 15 24 Cr L J 49 But it is desirable that under such circumstances the Magistrate should inquire into the case and should give the party an opportunity of showing cause and procuring evidence before he makes the order absolute under this section —Jiblal v Gena 4 P L T 15 Ajodhya Tewari v Lup 4 P L T 13 24 Cr L J 581 But if upon the failure of the jury to return their verdict,

They cannot decide the question of bona fides of the claim set up by the opposite party—See Notes 339 and 359 under Secs 135 and 139A

Verdict of majority —The majority means a majority of the persons appointed and not a majority of the persons attending—Durga Charan v Sashi 13 Cal 25 Moreover all the persons appointed as jurors must act, and the verdict of the majority must be the verdict of the majority of the persons appointed Therefore where one juror out of five was all along absent the Magistrate cannot acept the verdict of the four persons who attended treating it as the verdict of the majority—Promotha v Basanta 11 Cr L J 43 (Cal) So also a decision by three out of five in the absence of the other two is invalid—Q E v Kedar Nath 23 All 159 So again a verdict is defective when four out of five jurors were present at the time of the local investigation and one was absent Such a verdict is illegal and cannot be acted upon and a fresh jury should be appointed—Srimati Dasya v Nibaran 24 C W N 978 21 Cr L J 448

The finding of the jury should be arrived at after each juror exercises his own discretion in the matter A verdict given by jurors some of whom blindly follow the opinion of others is not proper Where out of five jurors two only saw the place and the third never visited it but passed his opinion solely on what had been told him by the other two, it was held that the opinion of the so-called majority was not that of a legal majority—Petambar v Nagaruddin 15 W R 4

Objection to verdict —The party objecting to the verdict must show prima facie that either the jury did not apply a judicial discretion to the case or that they could not have arrived at that verdict by a proper exercise of their discretion on the materials before them—Bindaban v Dwarka 23 W R 17

355 Magistrate bound by verdict —A Magistrate is not at liberty to take only a part of the verdict, he is bound to be guided by their whole decision If any part of their verdict is ambiguous he can ask them to express their opinion clearly—Q v Poholee 10 W R 28

If the jury finds the Magistrate s order to be wrong he is bound by the verdict and must stop further proceedings It is only when the jury finds the Magistrate s order to be reasonable and proper that he can proceed to enforce the order—Ibid

The Magistrate must accept the verdict in its entirety If one part of the verdict is erroneous (e g if the verdict provides for the reconstruction of an obstruction the whole verdict must be rejected The Magistrate cannot split up the verdict and accept that part of the verdict which is correct, rejecting the portion which is erroneous—Rahimadi v Sher Ali 40 C L J 507 26 Cr L J 517 (518)

Remitting the case to another Magistrate —On receipt of the verdict of the jury, the Magistrate is not competent to remit the case for disposal to a second class Magistrate The 1st class Magistrate is alone competent to deal with the case further and must dispose of the case himself—Angapa v Perumal 43 Mad 316

356. Reference to High Court :—The decision of the jury appointed under section 138 is not a proceeding in a Criminal Court which the District Magistrate can call for and examine and refer to the High Court under Sec 435—[illegible] Ratanlal 336

139A (1) Where an order is made under Section 133 for the purpose of preventing obstruction, nuisance or danger to the public in the use of any way, river channel or place, the Magistrate shall on the appearance before him of the person against whom the order was made, question him as to whether he denies the existence of any public right in respect of the way, river, channel or place, and, if he does so, the Magistrate shall, before proceeding under Section 137 or Section 138, inquire into the matter

Procedure where existence of public right is denied

(2) If in such inquiry the Magistrate finds that there [illegible] such denial, he shall [illegible] the existence of such [illegible] Civil Court , and, [illegible] ce, he shall proceed as laid down in Section 137 or Section 138, as the case may require

(3) A person who has on being questioned by the Magistrate under sub section (1), failed to deny the existence of a public right of the nature therein referred to or who, having made such denial, has failed to adduce reliable evidence in support thereof, shall not in the subsequent proceedings be permitted to make any such denial, nor shall any question in respect of the existence of any such public right be inquired into by any jury appointed under Section 138

This section has been newly added by section 26 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

The procedure which ought to be followed by the Magistrate in case a bona fide claim of right is set up by the petitioner was not laid down in any section of this chapter under the previous law But a large volume of caselaw had gathered round this point which the Legislature has now thought fit to crystallize into a new section

' The principal question in connection with this clause is whether as provided in the Bill questions of title in relation to rights of way and the like should for the purposes of the Chapter, be finally decided by the Magistrate or whether the almost uniform decisions of the High Courts which lay down that the Magistrate must stay proceedings if he is satisfied that the question has been raised bona fide should be followed

We prefer to accept the latter view as laid down in Manipur Dey v Bidhu Bhusan Sirkar, I L R 42 Cal 158, and we have provided for it as a special case in a new section 139-A "—Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

The leading case on this subject is Manipur Dey v Bidhu Bhusan Sirkar, 42 Cal 158, 18 C W N 1086, 15 Cr L J 698 (referred to in the above Report of the Joint Committee) which has laid down the following important propositions of law —If the party against whom the order is contemplated to be passed under section 133 raises a question that the pathway is not a public property in the sense of the provisions of this section, the Magistrate trying the case should be careful not only to decide as to whether the pathway in question is situate on a private land or is for public use, but he should even when the claim of the objector is not substantiated, find whether the claim is bona fide or is set up only to oust the jurisdiction of the Court If the Magistrate finds that the claim which is set up is a mere pretence he should then proceed to pass a final order and make the rule issued by him absolute If however he finds that the claim, although not substantiated is not a mere pretence and is not raised to oust the jurisdiction of the Court but that it is raised bona fide, he should stay his hand and refer the party to the Civil Court And if the party within a reasonable time does not have recourse to the Civil Court, the Magistrate may then proceed to make the rule absolute

Where the defendant does not deny the existence of a public road at the place alleged to have been encroached, but merely denies that he has encroached upon it this section has no application—Ghurahu v Shakal Raj, 24 A I J 112 27 Cr L J 27 (29)

357. Bona fide claim .—If there is a bona fide dispute as to the existence of a public right the powers under sections 133 137 as regards obstruction to public ways cannot be exercised by the Magistrate—In re Narayan 4 Bom L R 687 In re Dnyanoba 15 Bom L R 57, 14 Cr L J 74 In re Maharana Jasuatsangji, 22 Bom 988 Basaruddin v Baharali 11 Cal 8 Nando v Kusum, 1 C L J 434 Venkanna, 2 Weir 61 But the claim in order to have this effect must be bona fide and not a mere pretence to oust jurisdiction The mere assertion of a claim made without reasonable ground or honest belief in it or honest intention to support it, will not oust a Criminal Court of its jurisdiction under these sections—Luckhee v Ram Kumar, 15 Cal 504 Preonath v Gobordhone, 25 Cal 278, Durlabh v Bhuban, 22 Cr L J 450 (Cal), Sudhansudhar v Rahim, 22 Cr L J 577 (Cal) It is not open to any person illegally causing obstruction to a public property to set up a bogus question of title to such property for the purpose of ousting the jurisdiction of a Magistrate, and notwithstanding the raising of such a question the Magistrate is entitled to hear the case sufficiently to enable him to make up his mind whether or not a bona fide question of title is raised—Emp. v. Dost Muhammad, 28 All 98 (99) A claim set up to annoy an enemy of the claimant, cannot be said to be a bona fide claim—Nandoo v Kusum, 1 C. L. J. 434

Therefore when a person against whom an order is made under section 133 to remove an obstruction from a public way, claims it as a private way the Magistrate should first determine whether the claim is bona fide or not—Kailash v Ram Lal 26 Cal 869 31 Cal 979, Mampur Dey v Bidhu Bhusan 42 Cal 158 Upendra v Kshitish 23 Cal 499, Nasaruddin v Akhiluddin 5 C W N 345 Rakhal v Kailash 7 C W N 117, Dulalram v Baishnab 10 C W N 845 Sk Imrat v Amjad 2 P L J 67, Lakshman v Bilash 22 Cr L J 351 (Cal) Thakur Sao v Abdul Aziz, 4 Pat 783 27 Cr L J 9 In the absence of a finding as to the bona fides of the claim set up by the petitioners to the subject matter of the dispute the judgment is liable to be set aside—Chandra v Ram Mandal 21 C W N 026 18 Cr L J 738 Bhagat v Ramrup 21 C L J 116 16 Cr L J 160 The question of bona fides of a claim is a question of fact and has to be enquired into like any other question of fact—Nundo Gopal v Kusum 1 C L J 454 Tent Prasad v Sarjoo 20 Cr L J 556 (Pat)

If however the encroachment complained of is made on a way which is admittedly public the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is not ousted and it is not necessary in order to give jurisdiction to the Magistrate, that there should be a finding as to the bona fide character of any claim that might be made by the accused to any particular piece of ground on which the encroachment is made—Adhore v Tribika 6 C W N 886 Similarly, if upon inquiry the Magistrate finds that the channel in question is a public channel the Magistrate is not bound to inquire whether the accused has a bona fide claim of right to the channel or to refer the matter to the Civil Court but has jurisdiction to proceed with the case—Fakir Mullick v Emp 28 C L J 211

A bona fide claim should be set up at or before the hearing but not afterwards and the Magistrate who finds the claim not to be bona fide should state the reasons for his decision which is subject to revision by the High Court—Luckhee v Ram Kumar 15 Cal 564 Rakhal v Kailash, 7 C W N 117

In Emp v Dost Muhammad 28 All 98, the Allahabad High Court seems to have laid down that the moment a bona fide dispute as to title is raised by the defendant the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is ousted and the Magistrate is bound to stop the proceeding and to refer the parties to a civil suit That ruling has been dissented from in a recent case of the same High Court in which it has been held that the Magistrate's jurisdiction is not ousted merly by reason of the defendant raising a bona fide dispute as to title but he is entitled to decide whether the way obstructed by the defendant is a public way—Abdul Wahid v Abdullah 15 All 656 (660), 21 A L J 529

357A Procedure.—The provisions of this section are imperative and as soon as the accused denies a public right, the Magistrate ought to inquire into the matter and find whether the place obstructed is a public one or not If instead of doing so, he at once proceeds under section 1 to take evidence from the complainant the trial is vitiated by wrong procedure and the final order is liable to be set aside—Raghunath v 23 A L J 187, 26 Cr L J 873 A I R 1925 All 311, Munna La

We prefer to accept the latter view as laid down in Manipur Dey v Bidhu Bhusan Sirkar, I L R 42 Cal. 158, and we have provided for it as a special case in a new section 139-A"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

The leading case on this subject is Manipur Dey v Bidhu Bhusan Sirkar, 42 Cal 158, 18 C W N 1086 15 Cr L J 698 (referred to in the above Report of the Joint Committee) which has laid down the following important propositions of law —If the party against whom the order is contemplated to be passed under section 133 raises a question that the pathway is not a public property in the sense of the provisions of this section, the Magistrate trying the case should be careful not only to decide as to whether the pathway in question is situate on a private land or is for public use but he should even when the claim of the objector is not substantiated, find whether the claim is bona fide or is set up only to oust the jurisdiction of the Court If the Magistrate finds that the claim which is set up is a mere pretence he should then proceed to pass a final order and make the rule issued by him absolute If however, he finds that the claim, although not substantiated is not a mere pretence and is not raised to oust the jurisdiction of the Court but that it is raised bona fide, he should stay his hand and refer the party to the Civil Court And if the party within a reasonable time does not have recourse to the Civil Court, the Magistrate may then proceed to make the rule absolute

When proceedings are stayed under this section, the Magistrate's jurisdiction ceases and he is not even entitled to say which party is to file the civil suit—Hari Chand v Durga, 28 Cr L J 363 (Lah) In Ram Sagar v Alek Naskar 49 Cal 682 (F B) 26 C W N 442 the Calcutta High Court considered all the above cases and held that even though the Magistrate found that the claim of right set up by the defendant was bona fide, his jurisdiction was not thereby ousted but he was entitled to proceed with the case and was not bound to refer the parties to a Civil Court But this ruling is superseded by the present section

If the Magistrate finds that the claim is made bona fide he should allow the defendant a reasonable time within which to establish his rights in a Civil Court and in the meantime proceedings may be stayed If the defendant does not assert his right in a Civil Court within a reasonable time the Magistrate should proceed with the case—Belat Ali v Abdur Rahim 8 C W N 143 Ram Sagar v Alek Naskar, 49 Cal 682 (F B) at p 693 Lakshman Chandra v Bilas Cr L J 351 (Cal) Manipur Dey v Bidhu Bhusan 4 Cal 158

The Magistrate is not entitled to demand that the evidence shall be sufficient to satisfy him that no public right exists This section only requires evidence and not proof and the only condition is that upon the materials before him the Magistrate has no reason to think the evidence false The Magistrate has no jurisdiction to weigh the evidence and to determine on which side the balance leans He has no jurisdiction to inquire into the actual existence of the public right claimed by the petitioners—Thakur Sao v Abdul Aziz 4 Pat 783 27 Cr L J 9 This section does not authorise a Magistrate to look into the question of title and decide for himself whether the accused's case is or is not true All that the Magistrate is to see is whether there is any reliable evidence in support of the denial of the existence of a public right If there is some reliable evidence in support of such denial then the proceedings under the Code have to be stayed until the matter of the existence of such right has been decided by a competent Civil Court—Munna Lal v Emp, 24 A L J 361 27 Cr L J 473

350. Sub-section (3)—Question shall not be inquired into by jury —The question as to whether the claim set up by the defendant is a bona fide one or whether the place is a public way or not, is to be decided by the Magistrate himself and not to be left to the jury The jury is not competent to decide the question whether there is or is not a public right of way They can merely find whether the Magistrate's order as originally made is reasonable and proper —Kylash v Ram Lal, 26 Cal 869 Dulalram v Baishnab Charan 10 C W N 845 Nasiruddi v Akiluddi, 3 C W N 345 Maluk Dhari v Hari Madhab 31 Cal 979, In re Chundernath, 5 Cal 875 Sheikh Imrat v Sheikh Amjad, 2 P L J 67, Khushi Ram v Crown, 4 Lah 224 (231) 24 Cr L J 457 Contra—Emp v Ram Bilas 30 All 364 where it has been held that it is within the competence of the jury to decide as to the validity of an objection that the way alleged to have been obstructed is not a public way But the Allahabad ruling had been disapproved of by the Legislature and is rendered obsolete by this section We think that the only question to be left to the jury should be whether the measures directed by the Magistrate to be taken are reasonable and proper and in view of the decision in 30 All 364 we think it desirable that this should be made clear"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

140 (1) When an order has been made absolute under Section 136, Section 137 or Section 139 the Magistrate shall give notice of the same to the person against whom the order was made, and shall further require him to perform the act directed by the order within a time to be fixed in the notice, and inform him that in case of disobedience he will be liable to the penalty provided by Section 188 of the Indian Penal Code

(2) If such act is not performed within the time fixed, the Magistrate may cause it to be performed and may recover the costs of performing it, either by the sale of any building goods or other property removed by the order or by the distress and sale of any other moveable property of such person within or without the local limits of such Magistrate s jurisdiction If such other property is without such limits the order shall authorize its attachment and sale when endorsed by the Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property to be attached is found

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith under this section

360 A person who neither complies with the order passed under Sec 133 nor protests against it within the time fixed can be prosecuted under section 136 without further notice being given under this section—Thimmala Gurunnah 31 Mad 280 (cited in Note 31 under Sec 136) Q E v Bishambar 13 All 577

Cancellation of order by succeeding Magistrate—If a final order is passed by a Magistrate under this chapter a succeeding Magistrate cannot go behind the order and question its legality as if he were sitting in judgment over it as a Court of Appeal Therefore if an application is made under this section to the succeeding Magistrate for the enforcement of an order passed by a preceding Magistrate the former cannot reject the application on the ground that the order passed by his predecessor was an illegal order—Hiran Chandra v Ganesh Chandra 27 C W N 159 24 Cr L J 317

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to cancel an order passed by his predecessor for removal of a nuisance under section 133, on the ground that one of the parties to the proceedings had not been properly served with notice or on the ground that the nuisance was in existence for a long time—Shahabuddin v Abdul Kadir 31 C W N 530, 44 C L J 211, 28 Cr L J 30

Costs —The question as to from which party or parties the costs for the removal of a nuisance should be recovered has to be determined upon a consideration of the question as to the parties upon whom the notices in connection with the proceedings were served it is unjust to make an order for recovery of costs from a party who was not actually served with any notice of the said proceedings—Shahabuddin v Abdul Kader, (supra)

141 Procedure on failure to appoint jury or omission to return verdict

If the applicant by neglect or otherwise, prevents the appointment of the jury, or if from any cause the jury appointed do not return their verdict within the time fixed or within such further time as the Magistrate may in his discretion allow, the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit, and such order shall be executed in the manner provided by Section 140

361. Jury failing to return verdict —If the jury fails to return a verdict within the time allowed by law the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit Therefore where on the failure of the jury to return a verdict the Magistrate inspected the spot and called for a report from the police and thereafter confirmed his original order, held that the final order was perfectly legal—Shyamsundar v Emp 24 A L J 165 27 Cr L J 981 When the majority of the jurors perversely refuse to return a verdict for fear of displeasing either party, the Magistrate can discharge them and appoint a new jury—Girwar Lal v Bansidhar 44 All 575 Where upon failure of the jury to return their verdict, the petitioners appeared before the Magistrate and prayed for appointment of a fresh jury, it was held that the Magistrate ought to have appointed a new jury and not made the original order absolute—Shib Chandra v Hriday 12 C W N 1047 Under this section the Magistrate upon failure of the jury to return a verdict has a discretion to pass such order as he thinks fit Therefore where the foreman of the jury simply returned the papers without a verdict, the Magistrate had jurisdiction to make the order absolute—Jiblal v Gena Sahu 4 P L T 15 24 Cr L J 492 But it is desirable that under such circumstances the Magistrate should inquire into the case and should give the party an opportunity of showing cause and procuring evidence before he makes the order absolute under this section —Jiblal v Gena 4 P L T 15, Ajodhya Tewari v Emp, 4 P L T 13 Cr L J 583 But if upon the failure of the jury to return their ver

the petitioners did not take any action to move the Magistrate for taking evidence on their behalf the Magistrate was justified in making the order absolute—Kishori Lal v. Emp. 13 C W N 367

Fine —An order sentencing a man to a fine for the nuisance and an additional fine for each day he continues it after the conviction, is illegal—In re Sagar Dut 1 B L R O C 41

142 (1) If a Magistrate making an order under Section 133 considers that immediate measures should be taken to prevent imminent danger or injury of a serious kind to the public he may, whether a jury is to be, or has been appointed or not issue such an injunction to the person against whom the order was made, as is required to obviate or prevent such danger or injury pending the determination of the matter.

Injunction pending inquiry

(2) In default of such person forthwith obeying such injunction the Magistrate may himself use, or cause to be used, such measures as he thinks fit to obviate such danger or to prevent such injury

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith by a Magistrate under this section

362 Imminent danger —An injunction under this section can be issued only when there is imminent danger or fear of injury of a serious kind to the public—Q v Brojendra 21 W R 86 Where a Magistrate who makes an order under this section subsequently directs further inquiry to be made the Magistrate must be held to have abandoned the proceedings under this section and he should have proceeded under sections 136 and 137 instead of fining the party under section 188 I P C—Ibid

No injunction can be issued under this section when the danger has passed away—Q v Indoobhooshun 1 W R 8

143 A District Magistrate or Sub divisional Magistrate, or any other Magistrate empowered by the Local Government or the District Magistrate in this behalf, may order any person not to repeat or continue a public nuisance, as defined in the Indian Penal Code or any special or local law.

Magistrate may prohibit repetition or continuance of public nuisance

Secs. 143 and 144 —This section enables the Magistrate to prevent the continuing of public nuisance whereas section 144 enables him to prevent it for the first time—Q E v Sirunalla 13 Mad 161

363 Scope of section —A person will be bound by an order under this section only when the order is issued to him personally and not by a proclamation addressed generally to the public at large—Q E v Jokhi 8 All 99 Q v Sharoda W R 32

Revision —It was formerly held that orders under secs 143 and 144 were not open to revision because they were not proceedings within the meaning of sec 435—Emp v Bisheshwar 1892 A W N 102 But now by reason of the omission of sub section (3) of section 435 by the Amendment Act of 1923 orders under section 143 will henceforth be liable to revision

CHAPTER XI

TEMPORARY ORDERS IN URGENT CASES OF NUISANCE OR APPREHENDED DANGER

Power to issue order absolute at once in urgent cases of nuisance or apprehended danger

144 (1) In cases where in the opinion of a District Magistrate a Chief Presidency Magistrate Sub Divisional Magistrate or of any other Magistrate not being a Magistrate of the third class specially empowered by the Local Government or the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the District Magistrate to act under this section, there is sufficient ground for proceeding under this section and immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable, such Magistrate may by a written order stating the material facts of the case and served in manner provided by Section 134, direct any person to abstain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management, if such Magistrate considers that such direction is likely to prevent, or tends to prevent obstruction, annoyance or injury, or risk of obstruction, annoyance or injury to any person lawfully employed, or danger to human life, health or safety, or a disturbance of the public tranquility, or a riot, or an affray

(2) An order under this section may, in cases of emergency or in cases where the circumstances do not admit of the serving in due time of a notice upon the person against whom the order is directed, be passed ex parte

(3) An order under this section may be directed to a particular individual, or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place

(4) Any Magistrate may, either on his own motion or on the application of any person aggrieved, rescind or alter any order made under this section by himself or any Magistrate subordinate to him or by his predecessor in office

(5) Where such an application is received the Magistrate shall afford the applicant an early opportunity of appearing before him either in person or by pleader and showing cause against the order and if the Magistrate rejects the application wholly or in part, he shall record in writing his reasons for so doing

(6) No order under this section shall remain in force for more than two months from the making thereof, unless in cases of danger to human life health or safety or a likelihood of a riot or an affray the Local Government, by notification in the official Gazette otherwise directs

Change —The italicised words in sub sections (1) and (4) have been added sub section (5) has been newly enacted and the old sub section (5) has been renumbered as sub-section (6) by section 27 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) The reasons have been stated below in their proper places

364 Application of this section —The power conferred by this section upon a Magistrate is an extraordinary power and the Magistrate should resort to it only when he is satisfied that other powers with which he is entrusted are insufficient The authority of the Magistrate should be exercised in defence of rights rather than in their suppression in repression of illegal rather than in interference with lawful acts—Sundaram v Q 6 Mad 203 When a breach of the peace is anticipated action should be taken against the potential law breakers and not against peaceful citizens whom it is expected that the law breakers will molest—Khazan Chand v Emp 28 Cr L J 315 (Lah) It is the duty of the Magistrate to support all lawful acts as far as possible—Venkataramana v K E 22 M L T 323 19 Cr L J 56 His first duty is to secure to every person the enjoyment of his rights under the law and by measures of precaution to deter those who seek to invade the rights of others but if he apprehends that the lawful exercise of rights may lead to civil tumult and he doubts whether he has available a sufficient force to repress such tumult or to render it innocuous regard for the public welfare is allowed to override temporarily the private right and the Magistrate is authorised to interdict its exercise—Muthialu v Bapu M L 150 Tekait Kunj

Behari v Bhi 5 C W N 319 An order under section 144 may sometimes interfere with the legal rights of individuals but when such interference is necessary it is the duty of the Magistrate to limit it as much as possible and for that purpose he should afterwards hold an inquiry into the circumstances and determine whether as a matter of fact the act prohibited as likely to lead to a breach of the peace is within or in excess of the legal rights of the person forbidden to do it If it is found that a man is doing that which he is legally entitled to do and that his neighbour chooses to take offence thereat and to create a disturbance in consequence it is clear that the duty of the Magistrate is not to continue to deprive the first of the exercise of his legal rights but to restrain the second from illegally interfering with that exercise of legal rights—Abdool v Lucky Narain 9 Cal 132 (134 135) Blong v K E 25 Cr L J 1178 (Pat) O I v Kamal a Uddin Ratanlal 967. It is the obvious duty of the Executive to uphold the civil rights declared by its own Civil Courts No doubt the interests of the public peace are paramount but where the Magistrate must be aware that there will probably be a disturbance of the petitioner s civil rights at recurring seasons every year, it is his duty to exhaust every measure at his disposal to uphold the declared civil rights before he abandons the attempt and he should resort to sec 144 only if there is no time or opportunity for any other course If there is time or opportunity the Magistrate may bind over those persons who threaten to interfere with the petitioner s civil rights to keep the peace or may get down sufficient force to meet the crisis It is not a proper course to do nothing to meet the crisis and then call in section 144 to tide him over it—Venkatasubba v Emp 52 M L J 298, 28 Cr L J 325. Venkatasubbayya v Md Falauddin 52 M L J 651, 28 Cr L J 509 Where the Hindus of a place have obtained a decree declaring their rights as against the Muhammadans to take procession with music outside a mosque on certain conditions and they give reasonable notice to the authorities that they propose to take their procession it is the duty of the authorities to take such action as will protect the rights of the Hindus If the Muhammadans obstruct the procession they may have to be bound over to keep the peace or it may be necessary to introduce armed force to compel them to do so—Venkatasubbaya v Md. Falauddin (supra)

365 Magistrates empowered —Since the power to be exercised under this section is an extraordinary power, the law is careful to confer this power upon those Magistrates alone whose discretion is prominently guaranteed by their responsible position or by selection—Sundram v Q, 6 Mad 203

In the Punjab, all Magistrates of 1st and 2nd class have been empowered to act under this section—Punjab Gazette, 1883, Part I, p 52 So also in Upper Burma In Bombay, Assistant Superintendents of Police have been empowered to act under section 144 See Bombay Gazette, 1883 Part I page 396

When a Magistrate passes an order under this section the record should show in clear and unmistakable terms the authority under which

(3) An order under this section may be directed to a particular individual, or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place

(6) No order under this section shall remain in force for more than two months from the making thereof, unless in cases of danger to human life, health or safety or a likelihood of a riot or an affray the Local Government by notification in the official Gazette, otherwise directs

365 Magistrates empowered —Since the power to be exercised under this section is an extraordinary power, the law is careful to confer this power upon those Magistrates alone whose discretion is prominently guaranteed by their responsible position or by selection—Sundram v Q, 6 Mad 203

In the Punjab, all Magistrates of 1st and 2nd class have been empowered to act under this section—Punjab Gazette, 1883, Part I, p 52 So also in Upper Burma In Bombay, Assistant Superintendents of Police have been empowered to act under section 144 See Bombay Gazette, 1883 Part I, page 396

When a Magistrate passes an order under this section, should show in clear and unmistakable terms the authority

he professes to act—Thu In iauaia v Emp 1 Rang 49 = Bur L J 2 24 Cr L J 727

By the Amendment Act of 1923 third class Magistrates have been expressly prohibited from being empowered under this section We do not think that powers under section 144 should be granted to a Magistrate of the third class and we have provided for this by a small amendment —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

366 Conditions precedent —Proceedings under this section may be taken only in urgent case of nuisance or apprehended danger the existence of these circumstances is a condition precedent to an action under this section—In re Krishna M I ... R 58 This section is to be applied in cases of urgency and should not be allowed to take the place of any other provision of law (e g section 133) which might be more appropriate And before proceeding under this section the Magistrate should hold an inquiry and record the urgency of the matter—Kamini v Harendra 38 Cal 876 Where the complaint was that a person by closing a drain and obstructing the flow of the rain water of another house endangered the safety of the house but the owner could drain off the water in some other way held that it was not an urgent case of nuisance or apprehended danger and action under sec 144 was not justified—Haji Ali v Emp 26 Cr L J 560 A I R 1925 All 678 Before taking action under this section the Magistrate should be of opinion that immediate prevention or speedy remedy is necessary and he should state in the order the materials upon which his opinion is based—Karoolal v Shyam Lal 32 Cal 935 Jurisdiction under this section depends on the urgency of the case and the mere statement of the Magistrate that he considered the danger to be imminent is not sufficient to give him jurisdiction if the facts set out by him show that really there was no urgent necessity for taking action—Chandra Nath v I I Ev 3 C W N 145 19 Cr L J 931 The record of the Magistrate should disclose the existence of an emergency which called for an ex parte order under this section or that there was no sufficient time to serve notice on the party affected thereby But a Magistrate ought not to treat a case as a case of emergency merely because some people threaten to commit a breach of the peace unless he had no sufficient police or other force at his command to prevent an immediate breach of the peace and unless he is further unable to find out the persons threatening to commit a breach of the peace so as to bind them over to keep the peace—Venkataramana v K E 2 M L T 3 3 1917 M W N 774 19 Cr L J 56

'There is sufficient ground for proceeding' —These words have been added during the Debate in the Legislative Assembly on the same grounds on which a similar amendment has been made in section 107 See the Legislative Assembly Debates January 25 1923 pages 1495—1496

A Subordinate Magistrate passing an order under this section ought to use his own judicial mind on the report of the police and to come to his own conclusion whether a temporary and urgent order ought to be passed and should not be guided entirely by the instructions issued by the District Magistrate (which are not legally binding on him) though he ought to give due respect to the advice of the District Magistrate—Govindas v Perumal 38 Mad 489 (190)

An order under this section must be based upon proper evidence In the absence of such evidence the Magistrate cannot pass an order merely on the complaint of one party—Chandra Kanta v K E 20 C W N 981 17 Cr L J 464 So also the Magistrate cannot act upon mere surmise or assumption (Bayo 11 W R 46) or merely on the strength of a Police report (Radhaki Pree v Girdhare 13 W R 19 Bhyrov 11 W R 46) without hearing the petitioner or giving him an opprtunity of being heard—In ... Dyo 11 W R 46

367 Order—Nature and contents —(a) The order must be in writing the words in this section are written order There must be a written order directed to the accused and duly promulgated before he can be prosecuted for disobedience of the order—Mul Raj v K E 1905 P R 36

(b) The order must contain a statement of the material facts which the Magistrate considers to be the facts of the case and upon the footing of which he bases his order—Hurt Mohun 10 W R 53 Karoolal v Shyamlal 32 Cal 935 Hal v Malabir 1 Pat L R 223 Under this section something more is necessary to be stated in the order than a mere recital of the fact that in the opinion of the Magistrate there was sufficient ground for proceeding under this section the order should state the material facts relating to the case in order to show that there was justification for making the order—Blong v Emp 25 Cr L J 1178 A I R 1924 Pat 767 In the case of an ex parte order the material facts include the circumstances showing why the Magistrate was temporarily unable to prevent a breach of the peace by intending peace breakers—Venkataraya v K E 22 M L T 323 Where the order did not state the material facts it was set aside —Karoolal v Shyamlal 32 Cal 935 Govinda Chetty v Emp 27 M L J 6 8 14 Cr L J 658

(c) The order must be specific and definite in its terms An order that the petitioner should not go to a particular village and should not allow any of his servants or relatives or friends to go there is of the most indefinite character as to time and person—Golam Md v Bhuban 2 C W N 42 Similarly an order directing the petitioners not to commit any act which is likely to induce a breach of the peace and not to take forcible possession of a village not in their possession is indefinite and bad in law —Bibi Kulsum v Umatul 11 C W N 121

(d) The order must be confined to the particular act for which the danger is apprehended any order prohibiting a course of conduct or an occupation involving a series of acts done at certain intervals and spread over a period of time (e g an order prohibiting inoculation) is illegal and must be set aside—Anonymous 2 Weir 67

(e) The duration of the order must be co extensive with the emergency. It should not be wider than is necessary to prevent the emergency The Magistrate cannot issue an order intending to have effect for all time—Muthialu v Bapun 2 Mad 140 In re Peddi Chari 2 Weir 74 Thus the Magistrate is not competent to pass an order directing that all pro

sions should stop music when passing a certain place of worship at any time when it is not shown that assemblies are held in that place for the purpose of worship at all hours of the day—Muthialu v Bapun, 2 Mad 140 Pedda Chari 2 Weir 74

(f) The order must not be general and sweeping in its terms A Magistrate cannot in general terms forbid two parties to use any musical instrument in the neighbourhood of each other s house though he may forbid the use of musical instruments for the purpose of mutual annoyance —Ram Chandra 6 W R 40

(g) The order must not be in its nature irrevocable e g an order to cut down trees—Mohun v Obhoy 13 W R 72 or an order for division of crops—Umatal v Vemnu 32 Cal 134

368 Service of order —The order must be served in the manner provided by section 134 i e served personally If the order is not proved to have been served personally a conviction under section 188 I P C for disobedience of the order is illegal—Reg v Sukar Ratanlal 30

369 Abstain from certain act —The words certain act' means a definite act An order directing a person not to collect rents from the ryots generally without mentioning any particular ryots, is not an order to abstain from a certain act —Abayeswari v Siddheswari 16 Cal 80 Ananda v Carr Stephen 19 Cal 127 Prem Chand v Dharm Das 9 C W N 392 See also Golam v Bhuban 2 C W N 422 and Kulsum v Umatul 11 C W N 121 cited in Note 367 above But an order directing a person not to interfere with the managment of a particular temple or a particular mutt is a direction to abstain from a certain act and is a valid order under this section—Ramanadhan v Murugappa 24 Mad 45 Vanamamalai 3 Mad 334 Q E v Abbi Reddi 18 Mad 402 So also an order directing the trustee of a Vaishnavite temple to abstain from interfering with the conduct of Adhyapakam service is an order restraining a person from doing a certain act and is valid—In re Srinivasathatha chariar 19 Cr L J 933 (Mad)

370. "Take certain order with respect to property"— Property whether moveable or immoveable —It has been held in Q v. Goluck Chunder 12 W R 38 that the power conferred by this section refers only to and is retricted to immoveable property of the kind set forth in the next Chapter The Magistrate cannot make an order regarding the custody of money in respect of which a breach of the peace is likely to take place See also Ananda v Carr Stephen 19 Cal 127 (129) which lays down that this section relates to interference or dealing of some kind with the land itself or something erected or standing on the land But there is nothing in the section to justify this view

Property outside jurisdiction —No order can be made by a Magistrate under this section when the property in respect of which the order is made is situated outside the local limits of his jurisdiction—Roop Lal v Dalil, 2 C W N 572

371 Orders under this section —The following orders can be passed by a Magistrate under this section —

(a) An order prohibiting burials in certain places on sanitary ground —In re Khaja Bloy 2 Weir 64

(b) An order directing that two rival sects of Mhuammadans should enter and worship in a particular mosque only at particular hours—Q E v Abdulla 24 Mad 6

(c) An order to the priests of a temple to heighten and widen the doorway so as to prevent overcrowding of pilgrims—Reg v Ramchandra 6 B H C R 36

(d) An order that certain persons should abstain from interfering with the Badves in the performance of their daily puja of the god Vitloba is a valid order if the Magistrate is of opinion that the interference with the puja is likely to cause annoyance to the worshippers—In re Vasudeo Apaji 4 Bom L R 582

(e) An order prohibiting a procession on the ground that the Magistrate would not be able to prevent a breach of the peace with the force at his disposal—Arumuga v Perumal Sami 15 Cr L J 30 (Mad)

(f) An order prohibiting a meeting if owing to the prevalence of ill feeling between certain persons likely to attend the meeting a breach of the peace is to be apprehended—Nga Tt v Maung Kyaw 11 Bur L T 59 18 Cr L J 512

372 Improper orders under this section —A Magistrate is competent to issue an order directing a person to abstain from certain act or to take certain order with certain property and such an order can be passed under this section only when the object of the order is to prevent obstruction annoyance or injury to any person or danger to human life health or safety or a disturbance of the public tranquility or a riot or an affray and when immediate prevention or speedy remedy is necessary Therefore the following orders not being orders of the above description are not valid under this section —

(a) An order directing the ryots to refrain from reaping the crops they have sown unless they pay the Government rent—Isab v Fnp 8 C W N 373

(b) An order stopping the erection of an embankment on the ground that the erection may cause loss to the opposite party—Ram Autar v Krishnap it 13 C W N 188

(c) An order prohibiting a person to excavate a tank in his own land on the apprehension that the house of the opposite party would go down into the bed of the tank—Kamini v Harendra, 38 Cal 876 13 Cr L J 126

(d) An order directing the owners of cattle to take proper care of them and not to allow them to stray on the high road—In re Amiraddi 3 B L R A C 45 Q v Mozafer 9 B L R App 36

(e) An order that prostitutes who had built huts should remove their huts because people visiting them will endanger their lives by having to cross a railway line—In re Bireshwar 2 C W N 70

(f) An order directing a person to remove a wall erec nd alleged to belong to another, is inval d in the abs hat any dispute or riot or affray is likely to occur—Radha Kishore v Giridharee 13 W R 19

(g) An order directing the removal of an embankment whereby adjacent lands are in danger of being flooded—Anon 5 M H C R App 19

(h) An order directing the owner of a tank situated in the dry bed of a river to destroy the banks of the tank on the ground that they are an obstruction to the public using the river in the rainy season and that the banks interfere with the drainage of the country—Q v Sheik Golam 1 B L R S N 27

(i) An order directing the removal of a dam which obstructs the flood of water through an irrigation channel—Emp v Prayag 9 Cal 103

(j) An order in respect of collection of market dues—Q v Sulem Singh 23 W R 57

(k) An order directing the owner of a building which has fallen down on his own land to re erect the building—In re Rahmatulla 17 All 485

(l) An order regarding custody of children—Anonymous 7 Weir 66

(m) An order that a certain person should remove the roof drains on the eastern side of his house and should construct them in such a manner as not to injure or inconvenience any party—O v Sharoda 2 W R 37

(n) An order directing that certain hedges should be pruned—Reg v Bapuji Ratanlal 81

(o) An order regulating boat traffic at a certain landing place on the ground that the over crowding of boats was dangerous to the health of the residents of the town—O E v Pratap 25 Cal 852

(p) An order passed with the consent of parties that certain articles with respect to which there was a dispute should be removed to the custody of the Court—Leong Mow v Tchung 12 C W N 1044 or an order directing the village Munsiff to take possession of the disputed property —Baganathi v Talayee (1916) 2 M W N 88 17 Cr L J 190

(q) An order directing that certain person should continue to live in the haveli in which they were at the date of the order and that a police guard should keep watch on the outer door only allowing certain specified persons to enter the haveli—Faizulnissa v Faiz Md 1878 P R 33

(r) An order to the disputing landlords that no rents should be collected from the tenants until the rights of both parties have been established in a competent Court—Prosunno v Emp 8 C L R 231

(s) An order by a Magistrate holding that the first of two parties was in possession and directing that the second party should not interfere with the possession of the first party—Parkar v Ram Khelawan 11 C W N 771 or an order attaching immoveable property—Vazab Syed Mohiuddin v K F 13 C W N cxix In such cases the Magistrate should act under section 145

(t) An order directing division of crops between two rival landlords —Umatal v Nemai 37 Cal 154

(u) An order forbidding people of either party to read prayers in a mosque on account of an apprehension of a breach of the peace (there being at the time an ill feeling between the parties regarding the management of the mosque) is illegal—Haji Md Ismail v Barkat Ali, 26 C W N 904

373 Orders regarding hats or markets —A Magistrate may direct one of two rival hat holders to change the day of his hat so as not to interfere with the days of the hat of the other proprietor if the Magistrate is of opinion that the holding of two hats on the same day will lead to a breach of the peace—Abbas Ali v Illim Meah 14 W R 46 or he may direct that one of two rival hat holders should not hold his hat on the same day as another—Bykuntram 18 W R 47 Nagendra v Rakhal Das 23 C W N 141 Parameshwar v Emp 3 P L T 268 or where a new hat is established within half a mile of an old one the Magistrate may order the new hat holder to abstain from holding his hat on certain days—Millerjeet v Raj Kumar 18 W R 22 But the Magistrate cannot direct one of the two hat holders to hold his hat on particular days e g Saturdays and Tuesdays only for though the section empowers the Magistrate to make an order prohibiting a person from holding his hat on certain specified days (viz the days on which the rival hat is held) the law does not empower him to direct that hats shall be held only on certain days leaving the party no option to hold his hat on some other days on which his rival does not hold his hat—Shyamanand v Emp 31 Cal 990

A general order prohibiting the holding of hats for an indefinite period is illegal—Bidhu Ranjan v Ramesh 11 C W N 223 Md Bakar Ali v Hanuant 1897 A W N 59 Parameshwar v Emp 3 P L T 268 An order forbidding certain persons from establishing a hat at certain places and giving a vague direction not to interfere in any way with the trade of another hat is improper—Satish Chandra v Emp 11 C W N 79

The right to hold a hat is a man s lawful right and he has the right to establish the hat in the place and on the days most advantageous to him (Sheet Chunder v Suddut Ally 4 W R 12) provided that no breach of the peach is caused by any dispute between two hat holders Therefore, an order of a Magistrate directing that one of the two rival hat holders should not hold his hat opposite to that of the other but should hold it a mile away is illegal because such an order would render the hat of no use to him—Shurut Chunder v Bama Churn 4 C L R 410 A general order prohibiting a person absolutely from holding a hat within an extensive area is illegal for a person is entitled to exercise all rights of ownership on his property, and the holding of a hat on one s own property is not a wrongful act—Benowari v Pranab Krishna 26 C W N 663, Rakhal Das v Emp 19 C W N 248

An order can be passed under this section only on the grounds specified in the section viz grounds of apprehended danger etc Thus an order to close a hat can be passed on the ground that it was very near to another hat and a breach of the peace was apprehended—Bholanath v Komuruddin 20 W R 53 but an order prohibiting a party from holding a hat on a particular day cannot be passed merely on the ground that another party had long been used to hold a hat on the adjacent land on the following day—Banes Madhab v Wooma Nath, 21 W R 26 Even where ther is a likelihood of a breach of the peace the likelihood must be immanen

a Magistrate cannot restrain the holding of a hat merely because there is already a hat existing and the ulterior consequence of holding the new hat may be a breach of the peace—Rakhal Das v Emp 19 C W N 248 13 Cr L J 511 If disturbance is anticipated the proper procedure would be to act under section 107 of the Code—Benowari v Pranab Krishna 26 C W N 663

373A Effect of order under this section —An order under this section restraining a certain person from going upon the land of another should not be treated as a substantive evidence of possession of the latter in a case of rioting which subsequently takes place in respect of the possession of the land No importance should be attached to a temporary injunction under this section which is intended only for emergencies Having regard to the peculiar jurisdiction conferred by this section no inference can be drawn from it as to the possession of either party—Gita Prasad v K E 5 P L T 656 25 Cr L J 919 A I R 1925 Pat 17

374. Order contrary to Civil Court decree —The Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order the effect of which would be to interfere with the orders of a Civil Court—In re Rahmatulla 17 All 485 Umatul v Nemai 3? Cal 151 It is the duty of the Criminal Courts to respect the opinions of the Civil Courts and no order contrary to that of the Civil Court should be passed by a Magistrate under this section when the Civil Court has passed an order of temporary injunction against one party—Murari v Aiyasami 192- M W N 612 23 Cr L J 689 Where the landlords of a certain share in an estate had obtained a decree in a Civil Court for arrears of rent and for ejectment of their tenants and also obtained possession under the decree but the Magistrate at the instance of the tenants passed an order prohibiting the landlords from interfering with the possession of the tenants as the landlords were unable to point out the particular lands of which they had obtained possession under the decree held that the order was illegal being contrary to the Civil Court decree as its effect would be to deprive the landlords of the lands to which they were entitled under the decree held further that it was on the tenants to shew what lands they held from the landlords—Gobinda Sahai v Sims 6 C W N 466 Where a person purchasing some property at a sale in execution of a mortgage decree is put in possession of the same a Magistrate is not competent under this section to order the purchaser or any of his subordinates to refrain from entering upon the lands and the properties—Roop Lal v David Manook 2 C W N 57?

375 Question of title —A Magistrate acting under this section has no business to adjudicate upon rights and has no jurisdiction to decide upon any question of title or possession the only question before him is whether a breach of the peace is imminent and to make an order with the object of preventing a breach of the peace—Appala Narasimhulu v. Mahant, 11 M L J 122 Therefore a Magistrate s order directing the petitioner to take certain idols into the house of a certain person on the ground that the latter is entitled to them according to long usage, is illegal —Kamal v Jatindra 8 C W N 376

376. Notice to file statements —This section does not authorise a Magistrate to issue notice upon the parties for filing written statements before the Court on a fixed date The issue of such a notice is not within the contemplation of the section and is a clear innovation beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate Such a notice being in effect a notice contemplated by section 145 (1) (although professedly issued under section 144), the High Court under its powers of superintendence and control will prohibit the innovation and will order the Magistrate to convert the proceedings under section 144 into proceedings under Chapter XII and to complete the proceedings by following the procedure prescribed by Chapter XII—Kaniz Amina v K E 3 P L J 243 19 Cr L J 869

377. Sections 144, 145—Dispute relating to immoveable property —Section 144 is a larger and more general section than section 145 An order under section 144 can be made under various circumstances including a danger of a breach of the peace arising from disputes as regards possession sec 145 is of limited scope and applies only where there is a danger of a breach of the peace due to such dispute The former section is discretionary, the latter is mandatory Therefore where the special so that

irrespective of any order that he might have originally made under section 144—Sheobalak v Kamaruddin 2 Pat 94 107 (F B) 3 P L T 573 23 Cr L J 549

Where there is a dispute regarding possession of immoveable properties between the rival parties and a breach of the peace is likely to ensue the proper procedure to be adopted by the Magistrate is to pass an order in a proceeding under section 145 deciding the question of possession on evidence and not an order in a proceeding under this section —Parlar v Ram Khalawan 11 C W N 271 Kaniz Amina v K E, 3 P L J 243 Lachman v Dhiru 19 Cr L J 1002 (Pat) Tarapada v Emp 1 P L T 72 21 Cr L J 241 By adopting a procedure under sec 145 in such a case the Magistrate puts himself in a position to effectively and conclusively settle the dispute betwen the parties Otherwise the dispute might still exist at the end of two months—Jinath 27 Cal 785 Tarapada 1 P L T 72 Bhairo v Emp 1 P L T 377 Jhaman v Halim 1 P L T 369 21 Cr L J 625 Section 144 applies only where possession is either undisputed or clear beyond any shadow of doubt but where possession relating to immoveable propery is disputed, the proper procedure is to take proceedings under section 145 which will permanently settle the dispute so far as the Criminal Courts are concerned—Bhairo v Emp 1 P L T 377 21 Cr L J 646, Gouri Dutt v Govind 1 P L T 44, Tarapada v Emp, 1 P L T 72 Madan v Ful Chand, 2 P L T 484 22 Cr L J 685 In cases of apprehension of a breach of the peace the Magistrate may act under section 144 or 107 See Note 234 under section 107

Section 144 is of general application and contains nothing which oust

the Magistrate's jurisdiction in case of bona fide disputes as to possession of land Therefore where section 107 or 145 will meet with the requirements of the case, section 144 is not an appropriate remedy, and if it is found that the danger was not so imminent and that it could be otherwise averted an order under section 144 will be generally held to have been made without jurisdiction—Sheobalak v Kamaruddin 2 Pat 94 (F B) 3 P L T 573 23 Cr L J 549 Munni Lal v Galli 6 P L T 746 26 Cr L J 1229

The use of section 144 is a suitable method of avoiding a breach of the peace only if it is clear that the claim of the party creating the disturbance is not a claim made in good faith—Kani Amina v K E 3 P L J 143 19 Cr L J 869 Where it is clear upon the materials before the Magistrate that one of the parties is in possession and that another person whose claim to possession is a mere pretence is threatening to interfere with that possession the Magistrate is bound to maintain the party in possession and forbid the party who is not in possession by a summary order under section 144 of the Code, if immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable Sometimes it may even be necessary to take action against the party who is actually in possession but in every case it must be shown that the conditions required by sec 144 exist What the Court deprecates is the habitual and unjustified use of section 144 as a substitute for sections 107 and 145—per Mullick J in Sheobalak v Kamaruddin 2 Pat 94 101 (F B) 23 Cr L J 549 If on the expiry of the injunction under section 144 there is any further apprehension of a breach of the peace the appropriate procedure should be to take proceedings under section 145 (but not under section 107)—Abinash v Lokenath 19 Cr L J 367 (Cal)

The subsistence of an order under section 144 does not take away the power of the Court to take proceedings under section 145 Therefore where in a dispute between the trustees of a temple as to the possession and management of the temple and its properties an order under section 144 was passed and during the subsistence of that order proceedings under section 145 were initiated and pending final orders the properties were attached and a receiver was appointed held that the procedure was not illegal—Gopala v Krishnasuamy 27 M L T 234 21 Cr L J 73 So also when proceedings are initiated under section 144 with respect to land the possession with regard to which is honestly disputed the Magistarte would be acting properly in converting the proceedings into those under section 145 and making an order under the latter section—Nandkishore v Bikan Sing 3 P L T 570 23 Cr L J 200 Sheobalak v Kamaruddin 2 Pat 94 F B (per Jawala Prasad J)

But when a Magistrate while passing an order under section 144 in case of dispute relating to immoveable property makes an incidental observation as to possession of the property the observation cannot have the force of an order under section 145—Munni v Galli 6 P L T 746 26 Cr L J 1229

378 Clause (2)—Ex-parte order —An ex parte order can be made only in cases of emergency—Joyanti v Middleton, 27 Cal 785

Q v Bhyro Dayal 3 B L R A C 4 Mahammadi Molla v Emp 2 C W N 747 Ordinarily in proceedings under this section notice should be issued upon the person against whom the order is made and an opportunity afforded to him to show cause why it should not be passed—Hari Mohun 10 W R 53 Q E v Tirunarasimha 19 Mad 18 Muhammadi Molla v Emp 2 C W N 747

In the case of ex parte orders the record of the Magistrate should disclose the existence of emergency which called for such ex parte orders and should show that there was no sufficient time to serve notice on the party affected thereby—Venkataramana v K F 2 M L T 323 19 Cr L J 56 The record of the Magistrate should indicate with reasonable fulness the materials on which he concluded that there was an emergency to justify the passing of ex parte orders affecting the liberty of persons —Ibid

379 Clause (3)—Order to whom to be addressed —In an Allahabad case in which the Magistrate issued a proclamation forbidding any persons to spread night soil on his fields so as to cause disease it was held that the order was ultra vires and not within the scope of this section because the order issued by the Magistrate was not directed to the public generally frequenting or visiting a particular place but was directed to a portion of the community—Q E v Jokhu 8 All 99 This view of the law does not appear to be correct In an Oudh case it has been held and more correctly held that the words public generally are not restricted to the corporate body pursuing its public avocations but also mean the whole number of individuals who in the circumstances cannot be particularly addressed and an order duly promulgated will have the effect to control either the private or public actions of every such individual according to its tenor The proper interpretation of this section is that the order may be directed to a particular individual but when owing to the number of particular individuals it is impracticable for the Magistrate to address each of them individually an order under this section may be issued to the whole number of particular individuals designated as the public generally and such order in respect of each particular individual will have the same effect as a separate order served upon him provided of course that it has been so promulgated that it has come to his knowledge —Abdool Gaffur v Emp 18 O C 70 This is the plain meaning of this clause

Frequenting or visiting a particular place —These words have been interpreted in Q E v Lakhmidas 14 Bom 165 to mean that the order can be directed to the public generally only when frequenting or visiting a particular place Therefore where owing to the prevalence of cholera the District Magistrate issued a notification in the form of a proclamation forbidding the public in general to give caste-dinners in that city it was held that the order not being directed to a particular person nor to the public when frequenting a particular place (but to residents) was illegal in its manner of publication In another Bombay case also it has been similarly held that an order directing all persons in Surat City to abstain from interfering with the destruction of dogs is ultra vires as the Magistra has power only to direct an order to a particular person or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place—Emp v Bhagu bai 16 Bom L R 684 The Calcutta High Court likewise holds that an order which directs the public in general to abstain from attending hat is illegal since it is not until the public attends the hat that the order can be binding on them The order can only be issued to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place—Asutosh v Harish 29 C W N 411 25 Cr L J 874 But in Abdul Gaffur v Emp 18 O C 70 it has been held that the words frequenting place are intended to extend rather than to limit the scope of the order so as to include therein the residents of the locality as well as casual or frequent visitors from outside the limits of the locality

380 Clause (4)—Rescinding or altering an order —A Magistrate who passed an order under this section without taking evidence can afterwards cancel the order if after hearing the evidence he finds that there is no reason to apprehend a breach of the peace—Mohan Sadar v Obhoy 13 W R 72

Applications for rescinding or modifying ex parte orders under this section should be disposed of as quickly as possible but it is not illegal to put off an inquiry for a reasonable time within two months—Satish v Emp 11 C W N 79 4 Cr L J 433

An order passed under this section by a Joint Magistrate while acting as a District Magistrate can be rescinded or altered after his reversion to the post of Joint Magistrate by the next District Magistrate and the latter cannot transfer an application for rescission or alteration to the former—Sudarsanam v Sri Rasachsri 16 Cr L J 4 (Mad)

It was once held by the Patna High Court that a District Magistrate could rescind or alter an order of a subordinate Magistrate only on the ground that having regard to circumstances which had happened since the passing of the order the reason for its having been passed did no longer exist so that an alteration or rescission of the order was necessary as a corollary he could not reverse the order of a subordinate Magistrate on grounds existing at the date of the order i e he could not sitting as it were in appeal or revision reverse the order on grounds which interfered with the discretionary power of the Magistrate who originally made the order—Chedi Lal v Mahabir 2 P L T 650 23 Cr L J 27 But this decision has been overruled by a recent Full Bench case where it has been laid down that the powers given by this sub section need not be confined to cases where there has been a change of circumstances since the original order was made If the Magistrate has power to rescind an order previously made by a subordinate Magistrate because the circumstaces no longer require it to remain in force he would equally have power to rescind it if he is satisfied that it never ought to have been made—Sheobalak v Kamaruddin 2 Pat 94 (F B) 3 P L T 573

A District Magistrate in cancelling an order of the subordinate Magistrate is not competent to substitute an order of his own in the nature of an innovation Thus where in a case of dispute as regards immoveable property, the subordinate Magistrate started a proceeding under this section and considering the claims of the second party to be a mere pretence passed an order against such second party but the District Magistrate under clause (4) cancelled the Sub Magistrate's order and substituted an order of his own prohibiting the first party from cutting crop it was held that the order of the District Magistrate was in the nature of an innovation and therefore without jurisdiction and must be set aside—Ganpat v K E 3 P L J 287 19 Cr L J 880

Although a District Magistrate may rescind or alter an order made by a subordinate Magistrate still the District Magistrate cannot direct the subordinate Magistrate to initiate proceedings under section 145 instead of under sec 144 because it is the subordinate Magistrate who has to satisfy himself by the exercise of his own independent judgment and upon proper materials as to the existence of a reasonable apprehension of danger and the District Magistrate acts illegally in interfering with that discretion by directing him to substitute proceedings under section 145 in place of proceedings under sec 144—Kaila h v Kirja Bihari 24 Cal 391 Tiloki Lal v Emp 1 P L T 39 Cheddi Lal v Mahabir 2 P L T 650 23 Cr L J ?

Intermediate order —Except orders contemplated by sub section (4) (i e orders of rescission or alteration) no other intermediate order can be made while an order under sec 144 is still in force When the High Court has issued a rule in any case it takes full seisin of the case and it is the High Court alone that can pass ad interim orders in the case The Magistrate against whose order the rule is issued has no such jurisdiction —Satish Chandra v Emp 11 C W N 70

Revival of order —When a Magistrate set aside his order and struck the case off the file he had no power to revive it without a fresh proceeding —Bradley v Jameson 8 Cal 580

Clause (5) — It was suggested to us that section 144 should be elaborated so as to enable a person aggrieved by an order made under the section to require the Magistrate to make a judicial inquiry regarding the truth of the information on which he had acted and thereby to bring in the revisional powers of the High Court We think this proposal goes too far and that it is necessary to maintain the executive character of proceedings under section 144 We have not therefore accepted this suggestion. We are however prepared—and we have proposed an amendment to this effect—to lay down that a person aggrieved shall be entitled to apply to the Magistrate and show cause against the order and that the Magistrate shall give him an opportunity to be heard in person or by pleader and shall record an order in writing on the application giving his reasons where he rejects it —Report of the Joint Committee (10-2)

381. Clause (6)—Duration of order —An order under this section is temporary and is to remain in force for only two months An order for perpetual injunction passed under this section is beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate—Q E v Sheodin 10 All 115, Bradley v James , 8 Cal 580 Gopi Mohan v Taramoni 5 Cal 7, In re Meyiar Ammal 1914 M W N 169 15 Cr L J 115 Thus an order prohibitin

a landlord from e et holding hats on his land on certain days is illegal—Gopi Mohan v Taramoni 5 Cal 7 So also an order that a certain person should abstain from taking any part in the management till another is duly evicted from management is ultra vires—Ramanadhan v Murugappa 24 Mad 45 so also an order that no rents should be collected from the tenants by their contending landlords until their rights have been established by a Civil Court—Prosanna v Emp 8 C L R 231 or an order directing a party not to interfere with the land without the order of a competent Court—Runjit v Lachman 7 C W N 140

A temporary injunction can be passed under this section even though the dispute demands a permanent injunction for final settlement Thus where disputes were going on between the applicant and the opposite party, and the latter used to strike a bell continuously at night time in order to annoy the applicant who thereupon applied to the Magistrate for an injunction held that the Magistrate could pass a temporary order under this section—In re C J R 2 Bom L R 157 (per Hayward J) but Shah J held that the Magistrate could pass no order under this section because the applicant s application was for the prevention of a nuisance which was not temporary but permanent

Non specification of time —An order under this section is not bad merely because it does not state that its operation is confined to two months or some shorter period Under this sub-section it will be presumed in the absence of anything to the contrary that the direction of the order is limited to the full period of two months—Ram Nath v Emp 34 Cal 897 Ponnappa v Varamamalai 1919 M W N 872 20 Cr L J 733 In another case the Madras High Court has held that an order which is indefinite as to time is to that extent without jurisdiction—Muthukumara swami v Md Routher 42 M L J 531 23 Cr L J 404

Extension of time by successive orders —A Magistrate cannot by passing successive orders extend the operation of this section beyond the time limit prescribed by this section—Satish v Emp 11 C W N 9 Bisseswar v Emp 17 Cr L J 200 20 C W N 758 Gouri Dut v Govind 1 P L T 41 20 Cr L J 809 Murari v Ayyasami 1922 M W N 612 23 Cr L J 689 If there is really a very serious danger of a breach of the peace he can take action under section 107—Rash Behari v Jagnarain 3 P L J 130 Ganesh v Nader Ali 13 C W N cclxviii But he cannot under the shelter of this section assume a jurisdiction to prohibit persons by a permanent injunction by arbitrary and successive renewals of orders under this section—Govinda v Perumal 38 Mad 489 Govinda Chetty v Emp 27 M L J 628 Ranjit v Luchman 7 C W N 140 The period cannot be extended by drawing up the same order once more and merely adding a larger number of persons to whom it is directed Such a proceeding is an attempt to evade the provisions of this clause and is illegal—Ashutosh v Haris Chandra 29 C W N 411 26 Cr L J 874

Extension of time by Local Government —The last three lines of this section lay down that the Local Government may extend the order in cases of danger to human life etc and it can extend the order for any length of time The fact that the heading of this Chapter refers to tem porary orders does not support the contention that the Local Government has only power to extend the order for a definite and very limited time The Legislature has not seen fit to limit the time for which the force of the order may be extended by the Local Government and under the terms of this section it is competent to the Local Government to extend the order so long as the danger which is apprehended continues to exist Moreover in extending the order it is not necessary for the Local Government to state its reasons or even to state the fact of a likelihood of a riot or affray or other danger which it apprehends—Imp v Bhure Mal 15 All 326 (5 /) -4 Cr L J 689

382 Revision —Sub-section (3) of section 435 which disallowed the powers of revision of the High Court the Sessions Judge etc in respect of proceedings under section 144, has now been omitted by the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 and the effect of the omission is to overrule all the cases in which it was held that the High Court had no power under sections 435 and 439 of this Code to interfere in revision with orders under this section. Under the old law the High Court could revise an order passed under this section, not by virtue of sec 439 of the Code but by virtue of the powers conferred upon it by section 15 of the Chapter Act (Govinda v Perumal 38 Mad 489, Bradley v Jameson 8 Cal 580 Ibaswari v Shidleswari 16 Cal 80) and this power could be exercised only by the Chartered High Courts and not by the non-chartered ones e g the Chief Courts or the Judicial Commissioners Courts Under the old law the High Court could revise under sec 439 of this Code an order passed under sec 144 only when the order was ultra vires or without jurisdiction that is when the order was such that it could not be made under this section (even though it purported to be made under this section) and therefore did not fall within the purview of this section—Ananda v Carr Stephen 10 Cal 127 Roop Lal v David Marook C W N 5 - Lab v Emp 8 C W N 373 O I v Partap Chunder 25 Cal 85 Imp v Prayag 9 Cal 103 Palaniappa v Dorasamy 18 Mad 40 Gopi Mohan v Taramoni 5 Cal 7 Under the present law not only the High Court (both chartered and non-chartered) but also the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate can call for the record of a proceeding under this section and the order may be revised by the High Court on any ground whatsoever

But the High Court does not ordinarily interfere in revision with an order under this section when other remedies are open to the aggrieved party especially because the High Court is loth to reject the opinion of the Magistrate responsible for the peace of his locality that there is an emergency which justified an ex parte order—Venkataramana v K E, 22 M L T 323 19 Cr L J 56 The Magistrate is the sole Judge as to whether the material is sufficient or not to justify an order under this section—Bansi v Emp, 19 Cr L J 113 (Pat)

The High Court can set aside an order under this section even though two months had expired from the date thereof—Chandranath v E I Ry, 23 C W N 145 Bisheswar v Emp, 20 C W N 758 Chandrakanta v K E, 20 C W N 981, Dhanraj v Bharat 6 P L T 253 26 Cr L J 2

145 (1) Whenever a District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied from a police-report or other information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists concerning any land or water or the boundaries thereof, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he shall make an order in writing, stating the grounds of his being so satisfied, and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend his Court in person or by pleader, within a time to be fixed by such Magistrate, and to put in written statements of their respective claims as respects the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute

Procedure where dispute concerning land etc, is likely to cause breach of peace

(2) For the purposes of this section the expression "land or water" includes building, markets, fisheries, crops or other produce of land and the rents or profits of any such property

(3) A copy of the order shall be served in manner provided by this Code for the service of a summons upon

(4) The Magistrate shall then, without reference to the merits of the claims of any of such parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute, peruse the statements so put in, hear the parties, receive all such evidence as may be produced by them respectively, consider the effect of such evidence, take such further evidence (if any) as he thinks necessary, and, if possible, decide whether any and which of the parties was at the date of the order beforementioned in such possession of the said subject Inquiry as to possession

Provided that, if it appears to the Magistrate that any

sion at such date :

Provided also, that, if the Magistrate considers th case one of emergency, he may at any time attach the subject of dispute, pending his decision under this section

(5) Nothing in this section shall preclude any party so required to attend, or any other person interested, from showing that no such dispute as aforesaid exists or has

Magistrate under sub section (1) shall be final

Party in possession to retain possession until legally evicted

(6) If the Magistrate decides that one of the parties was or should under the first proviso to sub section (4) be treated as being in such possession of the said subject, he shall issue an order declaring such party to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law and forbidding all disturbance of possession until such eviction, and when he proceeds under the first proviso to sub section (4) may restore to possession the party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed

(7) When any party to any such proceeding dies, the Magistrate may cause the legal representative of the deceased party to be made a party to the proceeding and shall thereupon continue the inquiry, and if any question arises as to who the legal representative of a deceased party for the purpose of such proceeding is all persons claiming to be representatives of the deceased party shall be made parties thereto

(8) If the Magistrate is of opinion that any crop or other produce of the property, the subject of dispute in a proceeding under this section pending before him, is subject to speedy and natural decay, he may make an order for the proper custody or sale of such property, and, upon the completion of the inquiry, shall make such order for the disposal of such property or the sale proceeds thereof, as he thinks fit

(9) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, at any stage of the proceedings under this section, on the application of either party, issue summons to any witness directing him to attend or to produce any document or thing

(10) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to be in derogation of the powers of the Magistrate to proceed under Section 107

Change —The amendments as shown by the italicised words have been made by section 27 of the Crim Pro Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) The reasons have been stated below in their proper places

387 Object and scope of section —Section 145 is intended only to provide a speedy remedy for the prevention of breaches of peace arising out of disputes relating to immoveable property by maintaining one or other of the parties in possession—Debi Prasad v Sheodat 30 All 41 Tarapada v Nurul Haq 32 Cal 1093 Krishna Kamini v Abdul 30 Cal 155 Manindra v Barada Kanta 30 Cal 112 Ramchandra v Monohar 21 Cal 29 The object of this section is to enable a Magistrate to intervene and pass a temporary order in regard to the possession of property in dispute having effect until the actual right of one of the parties has been determined by a competent Civil Court—Daulat v Rameswari 26 Cal 625 Kunja Behari v Kletra 29 Cal 208

Litigants often resort to section 145 as an easy way of getting possession without the expense delay and trouble of a civil suit regarding the land in dispute and Courts should be on guard against an abuse of legal powers—Ma Ma Gyi v K E 2 Bur L J 295 25 Cr L J 1161 Sec 145 is freqently misapplied in practice and parties try to use the Criminal Courts for the settlement of what are really civil disputes in order to evade the Court fees of civil cases This fact should make Magistrates careful not to be induced by the pleaders before them into allowing what is really a civil case to be argued in a Criminal Court with a consequent waste of public time and to the detriment not only of other litigants but also of the Magistrate himself—In re Mallappa 28 Bom L R 488 27 Cr L J 731 (735) The object of this section is only to prevent a breach of the peace and not to protect or maintain anybody in possession Courts should take action under this section only if there is report or information of a breach of the peace and the same cannot be obviated without an order under this section—Phulanja v Emp 25 Cr L J 1109 (Nag) The scope of this section is merely a determination of actual possession for the purpose of preventing a breach of the peace pending a decision on the merits in a Civil Court This section does not provide for a decision by the Magistrate of any question affecting the rights of parties See Note 410 post

388. Sections 107, 144 and 145 —As to whether a Magistrate should proceed under section 107 or 144 or 145 in case of disputes relating to immoveable property between the rival parties likely to cause a breach of the peace see Notes 234 and 377 under secs 107 and 144 where the subject has been fully discussed

Where a Magistrate initiated proceedings under Sec 144 and at a later stage intimated to the parties who were present in Court his intention to draw up proceedings under sec 145 held that the Magistrate was not guilty of any irregularity—Chadhari v Raja Ramsingh 19 Cr L J 369 (Pat)

389 Nature of proceedings under this section —A proceeding under this section is taken for the prevention of crime it does not arise out of or deals with a crime already committed Therefore a proceeding under this section is not a criminal case within the meaning of Sec 526—In re Pandurang 25 Bom 179 Farid v Piru 8 S L R 215 16 Cr L J 249 An action taken under this section is a quasi executive action—Pandurang 25 Bom 179 A proceeding under this section is in reality a civil one—Sukh Lal v Tara Chand 33 Cal 68 Contra—In re Arumuga 26 Mad 188 Jaggu v Murli 34 All 533 Misri v Narasing 2 P L T 186 and Sardar Karam Singh v Hearsey 11 O C 61 7 Cr L J 423 where it is held that a case under this section is a criminal case and the High Court has power to transfer it under Section 526 of this Code or under clause 29 Letters Patent It should be noted however that the word criminal in section 526 has now been omitted so that the question as to whether a proceeding under this section is a criminal or civil one is immaterial for the purpose of sec 526 the High Court is competent to transfer the proceeding under the provision of that section

Though the Court dealing with a case under this section is a criminal Court yet an order under this section is not one made in a criminal trial within the meaning of sec 15 of the Letters Patent and therefore an appeal lies from an order of a single Judge of a Chartered High Court—Raja of Kalahasti v Narasimha 1 M L J 158 But see Subbayya v Ramayya 30 Mad 537 (cited in Note 373) in respect of a proceeding under sec 133

Competency of Magistrates —Bench of Magistrates —A Bench of Magistrates exercising first class powers may be invested by virtue of sec 15 (2) with powers to take proceedings under this section The decision in Sufferuddin v Ibrahim 3 Cal 754 under the old Code of 1872 is no longer good law

390 "Is satisfied" —Before taking proceedings under this section the Magistrate must satisfy himself that there is an existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace and he ought not to assume jurisdiction in those cases where the suggested apprehension of a breach of the peace is merely colorable and made to induce him to deal with matters properly cognisable by the Civil Courts—Obhoy Chandra v Md Sabir 10 Cal 78 (80) Unless the Magistrate is satisfied that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace he cannot proceed under this section—H V Low & Co v Manindra Chandra 3 Pat 809 (814) It is necessary that the Magistrate should himself inquire into the likelihood of a breach of the peace and should come to a judicial decision upon it It is that judicial decision which is the foundation of the subsequent investigation and without it the investigation is void and inoperative—Anund dee Koer v Sooraet Koer 9 W R 64 An order of the Magistrate merely on the complainant s petition without determining whether any breach of the peace was likely to occur or enquiring whether the accused had any evidence is bad in law, since the Magistrate has failed to find the facts that were necessary to constitute the foundation of his jurisdiction—Budhu v Emp, 1885 P R 6 The ground stated by the Magistrate must be such as to satisfy a Court of Revision before which such case may be brought by any of the parties concerned—Dhanput v Chatterput, 20 Cal 513

The fact that the Magistrate is satisfied as to the necessity of proceedings under this section and the ground of his being so satisfied must appear on the record—15 All 391 and in the first order directing the issue of notice—Pai Kabai v Jagannat, 6 C P L R 21 In re Pandurang 24 Bom 527 2 Bom L R 84 Jagomohan v Ramkumar 28 Cal 416 Posukha v Tandalagara 4 M L T 213 8 Cr L J 399

Power of High Court or Sessions Judge etc to direct proceedings —The Magistrate must satisfy himself and use his own discretion as to the necessity of proceedings Therefore neither the High Court nor the Sessions Judge has power to order a Magistrate to take proceedings under this chapter—In re Kali Prosonno 23 W R 58 Manindra v Barada 30 Cal 112 Q E v Govind Chandra 20 Cal 520 Anundee v Soonaet 9 W R 64 If the Magistrate is satisfied that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace the High Court cannot direct him to be satisfied as to such likelihood and to take proceedings under this section—H V Low & Co v Manindra Chandra 3 Pat 809 (814) So also the High Court has no power to direct the revival of proceedings after they have been stayed by the Magistrate—Manindra v Barada Kanta, 30 Cal 112

Where a Sub divisional Magistrate having regard to the circumstances of the case came to the conclusion that proceedings under sec 144 should be taken and made an order accordingly the District Magistrate had no authority to direct the Sub divisional Magistrate to institute proceedings under section 145—Kailash v Kunja Behari 24 Cal 391

But where a Sub divisional Magistrate refused to take proceedings under section 145 because in his opinion there was no sufficient ground for such proceedings the District Magistrate was competent to take such proceedings himself if he was of a different opinion and the refusal of the Sub divisional Magistrate could not operate as a bar to such proceedings—Baida Nath v Nibaran 29 Cal 242 Benoy Chandra v Kali Chand 43 C L J 586 27 Cr L J 1083

391 Police-report —A Police report upon which a Magistrate bases his initial order under this section should contain a statement of the facts from which the Magistrate may be satisfied as to the existence of a likelihood of a breach of the peace No rule can be laid down so as to specify the sufficiency of the materials upon which the Magistrate may take action but there is no inflexible rule that the police report must show that the disputing parties are actually assembling men or doing some other specific overt acts—Kuloda Kinkar v Danesh 33 Cal 33 A police report which sets out sufficiently substantial reasons for believing that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace relating to a certain land exists is a good foundation of proceedings under this section—Dhanput v Chatterput 20 Cal 513 But a police report which does not state that there was any apprehension of a breach of the peace is not sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction under this section—Radha Gobind v Gossain Mohendra, 6 C W N 340 But this is not an inflexible rule and the fact that the police report stated that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace would not by itself take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to proceed under this section if upon a consideration of the materials before him and by exercising his own independent judgment he came to the conclusion that there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace—Ganga Bishun v Rajo 5 P L T 252 26 Cr L J 133

A Magistrate is in no way bound to act on all that is stated in the police report before him—Laldhari v Sukdeo 27 Cal 892 He is to exercise his own independent judgment upon the materials placed before him and to arrive at a conclusion as to whether upon those materials there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace He would not be justified in acting merely upon an expression of opinion by the police—Ganga Bishun v Rajo 5 P L T 25 26 Cr L J 133 Thus where the police report showed that the parties disputing over a tank were big Zemindars and that although there was nothing to show that a breach of the peace was likely to happen yet such a breach was not impossible it was held that the Magistrate ought not to proceed upon such report which was merely an expression of opinion by the Police—Maharaj Bahadur v Ranjit Singh 11 C W N 835 Surjakanta v Jagodindra 11 C W N 198 Kuloda Kinkar v Danesh 33 Cal 33

The report must contain a definite statement by a responsible police officer to the effect that he apprehends that there will be a disturbance of the peace which is beyond his power to prevent and that he therefore desires the exercise of the higher powers of the Magistrate to prevent it When no such report is sent to the Magistrate the fact will be almost conclusive as an indication of the absence of any likelihood of a breach of the peace—Phutai ja v Emp 25 Cr L J 1109 (Nag)

Evidentiary value —A Police report is not itself evidence although it may be sufficient to justify a Magistrate in taking action under this section—In re Bhadreswari 16 W R 17 7 B L R 329 The police report and the evidence contained therein about the factum of possession is inadmissible in evidence in a proceeding under this section except for the purpose of initiating the proceeding—Kulbans v Ram Singh 1 P L T 501 21 Cr L J 735

392 Other information —The Code does not limit the materials on which the Magistrate may act He may act on any information and without any formal complaint being made before him He is not confined to evidence recorded on oath—In re Kishoree Mohun 19 W R 10

The word information does not refer to any particular way in which a Magistrate s attention should be drawn It is wide enough to cover the knowledge of the Magistrate derived by reading the petition filed by the parties in another proceeding which satisfies him that a breach of the peace was imminent—Jhaman v Thakuri 1 P L T 369 21 Cr L J 6*5

But a telegram is not a sufficient information—In re Hari Lal 22 Bom 949 (956) so also a statement made by a witness in the course of a trial that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists—Q E v Gobind Chandra 20 Cal 520 or a mere petition by an officer in the employ of a party interested in the dispute that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists is not a sufficient basis of proceedings under this section—Tirumalraja v Lodd Gobind Doss 29 Mad 561 Where there is no police report the statement of interested parties as regards the existence of a breach of the peace must be received with great caution but if a Magistrate has reason to believe such statement it cannot be said that he acts without jurisdiction in taking proceedings on the basis of that statement—Joymangal v Kanta Gope 24 Cr L J 304

393 Dispute —The essence and basis of the jurisdiction which a Magistrate can exercise under this section depends upon there being a dispute likely to create a breach of the peace and when the parties appear before the Magistrate if they are able to show or if it otherwise appears to the Magistrate that there is no dispute or no such dispute as is likely to induce a breach of the peace the Magistrate should hold his hands and not proceed further—Gobind v Abdul Sayad 6 Cal 835 Thus when the rights of the parties have been determined by a competent Court, the dispute is at an end and it is the duty of the Magistrate to maintain the right of the successful party and the defeated party will not be allowed to invoke the aid of the Magistrate and the police to neutralise the effect of the decree of the competent Civil Court—Cobind v Abdul 6 Cal 835, Daulat v Rameswari 26 Cal 625 Sims v Johurry 5 C W N 563 Kunja Behari v Khetra Pal 29 Cal 708 The proper course for a Magistrate to pursue if the defeated party does any act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace is to take action under sec 107 of the Code—Cobind v Abdul 6 Cal 835 Amriteshwari v Darpa Narain 7 C W N 558 Subba Nayak v Trincall 7 Mad 460 As to the effect of a prior decree of a Civil Court see Note 438 infra

The term dispute means a reasonable dispute a bona fide dispute a dispute between parties who have each some semblance of a right or supposed right—Gobind v Abdul Sayad 6 Cal 835 In every case in which a Magistrate finds that there is a bona fide dispute about land no matter how erroneous the contention of one or other of the parties may be he ought to adopt the procedure laid down in section 145 But if the Magistrate comes to the conclusion that the defendants are wrongfully and without any bona fide claim seeking to eject the other party by force and a breach of the peace is imminent he is not bound to act under this section but is justified in making an order under section 107—Emp v Ram Baran 28 All 406

394 Likelihood of breach of peace —The basis of the Magistrate s jurisdiction under this section is the likelihood of a breach of the peace Therefore where in his order directing the issue of a proceeding under this section the Magistrate was of opinion that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace but that as the dispute was one relating to possession section 145 was applicable held that the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction—Sib Narayan v Satish 24 C W N 642 21 Cr L J 593 Where the police report did not disclose that there was any apprehension of a breach of the peace the Magistrate s order under this section was without jurisdiction—Ram Sarup v Darsano 1 P L T 387, 21 Cr L J 748

The term likely in this section does not mean that the breach of the peace complained of must be imminent or likely to happen immediately but simply signifies that there is a probability or a likelihood of a breach of the peace—Balmukund v Crown 1 S L R 50 8 Cr L J 170 The Magistrate must decide in each case whether there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace and it is not enough on the one hand that the breach is merely probable nor is it necessary that it should be imminent as indicating a higher degree of chance of the event happening than is denoted by the likelihood of it—Kulada Kinkar v Danesh 33 Cal 33 But a mere probability that a breach of the peace may occur if no proceedings are taken will not justify the Magistrate in taking action under this section the Magistrate must be satisfied of the existence of a dispute likely to induce a breach of the peace rendering it necessary for him to take immediate steps for its prevention—Damodar v Syamanund 7 Cal 385 An order under this section will be justified if there is an immediate danger of a breach of the peace—Jamu v Moniruddin 8 C W N 590 If there be no present danger of a breach of the peace the fact that a breach may happen at a future time will not justify an order under this section—Uma Churn v Beni Madhub 7 C L R 357 A mere finding that the parties are in a contesting mood without any finding as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace is insufficient—Munnu Lal v Harde Ram 29 O C 23 12 O L J 256 26 Cr L J 944 When there is ample time to have the dispute settled in the Civil Court action under this section is not justified —Choley Lal v Emp 25 Cr L J 227 A I R 1924 Oudh 341

Where a party was acting properly and within his rights there is no reason to suppose that any breach of the peace was likely to be committed by him—Bejoy Singha v Emp 3 C W N 463

There must be a likelihood of a breach of the peace on the date on which the Magistrate draws up proceedings He cannot take proceeding on the strength of a Police report which is more than three months old when he has no information that a breach of the peace is likely to occur at the time of his taking action—Chhedi Lal v Mahabir 2 P L T 650 23 Cr L J 27 The mere fact that a person complains of being dispossessed of his land is no reason for the institution of proceedings under this section if the petition made by the complainant refers only to the commission of various offences none of which necessarily involves a breach of the peace—Kasu v Moti Molla 4 C W N 57

Where at the date of the initial order the materials before the Magistarte do not disclose the existence of such dispute as is likely to result in a breach of the peace, the order made by him would not be void if it appears from the evidence in the course of the trial that there was at the date of the initiation of the proceedings a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace—Kuloda Kinkar v Danesh 33 Cal 33 (dissenting from Kali Kissen v Anund 23 Cal 557)

The primary object of this section is the preservation of peace Therefore if it is found during the proceedings that there is no likelihood of the peace being disturbed there is no necessity for the Magistrate to continue the proceedings—Ramchandra v Monohur 21 Cal 29 If the Magistrate

after some inquiry comes to the conclusion that there is no danger of a breach of the peace he can refuse to draw up a preliminary order—Moolyamal v Ali Md 18 S L R 278 26 Cr L J 1333 The Magistrate has jurisdiction to decline to proceed with the inquiry, whenever it is shown to his satisfaction that the dispute no longer exists or that the danger has disappeared—Kamulammal v Vavu Rowther 4 L W 57 17 Cr L J 138 See notes under sub section (5)

Inquiry and Record —A Magistrate who purports to act under this section must himself enquire into the question whether a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists and must record a judicial decision thereon Where a preliminary order was made on the report of a Zaildar and the parties had had no opportunity of producing their evidence before the Zaildar held that in the absence of judicial evidence showing the likelihood of a breach of the peace the report of the Zaildar could not be invoked in support of an order under this section—Prem Singh v Crown 1917 P L R 115 18 Cr L J 565 Md Musaher v Kunji 2 Weir 117 The Magistrate must also record the ground of his belief as to the existence of such likelihood—In re Kumud Narain 4 Cal 650

The law does not require the Magistrate to record an express finding in his judgment (final order) that a breach of the peace was imminent Such a finding in respect of the existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace is a matter to be considered in relation to the preliminary order—Maqimunnissa v Ahmedunnissa 2 O W N 704 26 Cr L J 1581

395 Subject-matter of dispute —Land or water —The words in the 1882 Code were tangible immoveable property The section of the present Code does not limit the action of a Magistrate to disputes relating to the possession of tangible immoveable property, but it empowers him to take cognisance of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning any land or water or boundaries thereof and subsection (2) gives an explanation of the words land or water —Murbullabh v Luchmeshwar 26 Cal 188 See notes under sub section (2) infra

Proceedings under this section cannot be instituted with respect to movable properties—Hira Lal v Emp 11 O L J 59 25 Cr L J 440

Property must be specified —To bring a case under this section the property which is the subject of dispute must be capable of being accurately defined—Surb Narain v Birj Mohun 23 Cal 80 Therefore a Magistrate cannot proceed under this section in the case of a dispute about an undivided share of land or rent or profit issuing from such undivided share because the subject matter of the dispute is uncertain and the boundaries of the land are undefined—Mon Mohan v Rajendra 7 C W N 462

Before a proceeding is drawn up by the Magistrate the subject matter of dispute should be clearly determined—MaharajaSuryakanta v Maharaja Jagadindra 11 C W N 198, Sabid Mandul v Lakshmi 7 C W N 599 Absence of clear specification of the subject matter of dispute in the proceedings is a serious defect—Sib Narain v Satish 24 C W N 621 21 Cr L J 533 But where the parties are not at dispute upon the question as to what the disputed lands are the real question being which party was entitled to possession under a Civil Court decree the want of a proper specification of the boundaries of the property will not vitiate the proceedings—Sims v Johurry, 5 C W N 563 Jhaman v Thakuri 1 P L T 369 21 Cr L J 625

An order under this section which does not specify by metes and bounds the lands in dispute may be amended by the Magistrate himself—Baboo Reddi v Kullappa 2 Weir 107 But an order which gives no information as to the subject matter of dispute and which leaves the persons to whom notice is ordered to be issued quite in the dark as to the property in regard to which they have to put forward their respective claims is not merely defective but invalid and liable to be set aside in revision—In re Martin 27 All 296

396 "Within jurisdiction" —This section does not authorise a Magistrate to pass orders respecting lands situate outside the local limits of his jurisdiction—Goluck v Raj Mohun 17 W R 33 Therefore where a jalkar was situate partly within and partly without the local limits of his jurisdiction and proceedings were taken with regard to the jalkar as a whole the whole proceedings were set aside and the Magistrate was allowed an option to institute fresh proceedings with regard to such portion of the jalkar as came within his jurisdiction—Korban v Raja Srinath 1 C L J 329

Where it is undertain in which of two local areas the land in dispute is situated proceedings may be taken by a Magistrate having jurisdiction over any of such areas—Iklas v Raghuraj 12 O C 400, 11 Cr L J 69 See also Audendra v Daman Singh 16 Cr L J 5?7 (All)

A Magistrate of one district has jurisdiction to institute proceedings under Sec 145 on a report drawn up by a police officer of another district in respect of such portions of the land or water as lie within the limits of his jurisdiction—Ishan Chander v Garth 29 Cal 885

397 Preliminary Order —The making of a formal order under sub section (1) is absolutely necessary to the initiation of proceedings under this section—Nathu Ram v Emp 15 A L J ?70 18 Cr L J 557 Kaku v Harnaman 1917 P W R 28 and an omission to make such an order and to draw up a proceeding under sub section (1) will render all subsequent proceedings void—Bunwari v Hriday 3? L J 633 the omission to record a preliminary order in writing or to serve it on the parties did not invalidate the subsequent proceedings, where the parties appeared before the Magistrate who explained matters to them fully and they evidently understood everything that was requisite The Rangoon High Court also holds that the omission to draw up a preliminary order is a mere irregularity curable by section 537 where no objection was taken before the Magistrate and no party was prejudiced—Mg Po Lo v Mg Ba 3 Bur L J 256 26 Cr L J 324

It is essential that the provisions of this section must be strictly complied with otherwise the order must be deemed to have been made without jurisdiction Where no order was recorded no notice issued no written statements called for and no inquiry held the order must be deemed to be an order without jurisdiction and therefore void—Mahadeo v Bisu 25 All 537 Tara Chand v Behari Lal 1916 P R 22, 18 Cr L J 36 Budhan v Ram Rakha 1915 P L R 169 16 Cr L J 628 Banka Singh v Gokul 43 All 325 28 Cr L J 231

An order under this section must state all the particulars necessary to enable the Magistrate to act under this section otherwise the proceedings are without jurisdiction It is not sufficient that the Magistrate should have before him a police report that he should have given orders thereon and that a written order be drawn up according to the terms of this section It is his duty to draw up an order which in all respects satisfies the reqirements of law The written order should be correct and complete in its terms—Mohesh v Narain 27 Cal 981

The essential points to be kept in mind in connection with proceedings under this section are as follows —

(a) The Magistrate should in his order, which must be in writing, declare himself satisfied from a proper report or other information and for reasons given that a dispute exists concerning land within the local limits of his jurisdiction and that the dispute is one likely to cause a breach of the peace

(b) When land is in dispute the boundaries should be duly defined in the order, and care should be taken to include nothing beyond the subject of dispute

(c) The order should proceed to require the parties concerned in the dispute to attend the Magistrate s Court in person or by pleader on a certain date to file written statements of their respective claims as regards the fact of actual possession and to be prepared with their oral and documentary evidence there and then

(d) The date should be so fixed as to allow reasonable time for the due service and return of the notice promulgating the order and the production of evidence

(e) A copy of the order should be published and affixed at or near the subject of dispute

(f) The forms prescribed in Schedule V should be used such modifications being made therein as the circumstances of the case may require" —Cal G R & C O, pp 10 11

Where the Magistrate purported to pass an executive order but in the form of the order it was evident that it was a thinly disguised order under section 145, but no formalities of section 145 were observed (i.e., no preliminary order was made, no written statement called for), held that the order was passed without jurisdiction and must be set aside—Harbans v Md. Syad, 26 Cr L J. 1511, A I R 1926 Pat 51

398. Statement of grounds —A Magistrate's order in instituting proceedings under this section ought to set out the grounds on which he is satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists—Jagomohan v Ramkumar, 28 Cal 416 Dan Pershad v Ganesh, 11 A L J 696 14 Cr L J 493 Patkabai v Jagannath, 6 C P L R 21, In re Pandurang, 2 Bom L R 84 Khubi v Darbari, 2 P L T 267, 22 Cr L J 481 Even where the Magistrate acts upon a local inquiry held by himself, he is still bound to state the grounds upon which he is satisfied that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace—Nityanund v. Paresh Nath, 32 Cal 771

Omission to state grounds —The object of drawing up a proceeding prior to the issue of notice is to inform the parties of the grounds or information which satisfy the Magistrate that a dispute exists—Sabid Mundal v Lakshmi, 7 C W N 599 For it is the intention of the law, not only that the Magistrate should have sufficient grounds for proceedings under sec 145 but that he should inform the parties concerned of the grounds on which he is proceeding—Q E v Gobind Chandra 20 Cal 520 Therefore, where the Magistrate omits in the preliminary order to state the grounds for his being satisfied as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace, the final order is without jurisdiction and must be set aside—Nityanund v Paresh Nath 32 Cal 771 Nga Po Tin v Nga Po Saung 1 Rang 53, Ma Gyi v K E, 2 Bur L J 295 25 Cr L J 1161 But the other High Courts take a different view Thus, the Allahabad High Court holds that failure on the part of the Magistrate to set forth explicitly the grounds for his being satisfied that there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace will not vitiate the proceedings if there was otherwise a substantial compliance with the requirements of this section—Har Prasad v Pandurang, 1905 A W N 260, Har Piari v Nathe Lal, 18 A L J 1140, Babban v Baldeo, 4 A L J 91 In Bakhshullah v Latafatunnissa 1884 A W N 317 it has been held that the omission to state the grounds is a mere irregularity curable by Sec 537 Similar view is taken by the Oudh and Sind Courts—Parbhu Dayal v Emp, 25 Cr L J 1139 (Oudh), Md Mahdishah v Wahdalshah, 26 Cr L J 1292 (Sind) The Madras High Court also lays down that once the Magistrate is satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists, he has jurisdiction, and his subsequent action must be considered in relation to prcedure and not to jurisdiction The irregularity, if any, would be cured by section 537—Kamal Kutty v Udayavarma 36 Mad 275 23 M L J 499 13 Cr L J 753, and in In re Chennappudayan, 30 Mad 518 and Chockalingam v Ammalalchi, 2 Weir 98, the High Court refused to interfere in revision unless either of the parties had been prejudiced by the Magistrate's omission to record the grouds The Rangoon High Court has also recently held that although it is right and proper in order to avoid a hasty action that a Magistrate should be required to state

the grounds of his belief as to the necessity of an inquiry, still where the inquiry has been carried out by the Magistrate with considerable thoroughness, and no injustice has been done to any party as a result of the omission to state the grounds which caused him to take action under this section his order cannot be set aside merely because of such omission—Maung Pe v Maung Cit 5 Rang 129 28 Cr L J 623

But in his final order the Magistrate should sufficiently state his reasons so that the High Court in revision may determine whether or not the Magistrate has complied with the provisions of sub section (4) and directed his mind to the consideration of the evidence—Bhuban Chandra v Nibaran 49 Cal 187

Where neither the preliminary order nor the final order stated in writing that the Magistrate was satisfied that the dispute was likely to cause a breach of the peace the proceedings were set aside as illegal—Bakshullah v Latafatunnissa 1884 A W N 317

A mere omission by the Magistrate to record the source of information will not invalidate the proceedings where the Magistrate held the inquiry in the presence of the parties and they were aware of the fact in the course of the inquiry—Sabid Mondal v Lakshmi 7 C W N 599

Where the Magistrate omitted to state in detail the grounds of his satisfaction that a breach of the peace was likely to happen but referred to a petition which contained such grounds and also recorded that there was no denial of the same by the opposite party it was held that there was a substantial compliance with the provisions of this section and that the order was valid—Sayid Mahomed v Sayid Khadir 16 M L J 148

Reference to police report —An initial order made by the Magistrate under sub-section (1) is not defective merely because it is not self contained and does not state in express terms the grounds upon which he is satisfied, when such grounds appear in the police report upon which it is founded and to which it makes reference and which is incorporated in it—Khosh Mahomed v Nazir Mahomed 33 Cal 352 Golack Chandra v Kali Charan 13 Cal 175 Where the police report sets out sufficient grounds and is expressly referred to in the initial order by the Magistrate such an order sufficiently fulfils the requirements of the law—Khosh Md v Nazir Md, 33 Cal 352 If the Police report or other information shows that there is a dispute and the Magistrate believes it and issues the preliminary order basing his information on such report only, he acquires sufficient jurisdiction to act under this section and it is not necessary for him to set out any further reasons for his being satisfied as to the existence of such a dispute His order is final and the High Court will not scrutinize the said reasons—Krishnappa v Hamelu 5 L W 163 18 Cr L J -3 But it is remarked in Kali Krishna v Golam Ali 7 Cal 46 that it is the duty of the Magistrate to record distinctly what the law requires to be recorded and he performs his duty in an unsatisfactory manner if without stating the grounds he merely refers to a police report.

399 Parties concerned —The Magistrate should do his best to ascertain who are the parties concerned in the dispute in a case under sec 145 But his order cannot be pronounced to be vitiated by any erro of jurisdiction merely because such inquiry has not been made or carried far enough—Krishna Kamini v Abdul Jubbar, 30 Cal 155 (F B) at p 193 It is upon the basis of the information conveyed to him that the Magistrate is in the first instance to select the persons whom he will require to attend his Court for the purpose of laying their claims before him—Ibid (at p 196) It is the initial duty of a Magistrate in a proceeding under this section to find out what parties are concerned in the dispute that has arisen and he should also determine which parties are in actual possession Proceedings under this section are not without jurisdiction because some of the parties are concerned only with possession of a portion of the land in dispute—Narayan v Chandrabhaga 26 Cr L J 1289 (Nag)

The words parties concerned should not be so narrowly construed as to mean only the persons actually disputing but should be extended to persons who are concerned as claiming to be in possession Had it been intended to confine the proceeding to the actual disputants the Legislature would have used the words parties disputing instead of the words parties concerned —per Hill J in Krishna Kamini v Abdul Jubbar 30 Cal 155 (F B) at p 198 Proceedings under this section are not without jurisdiction merely because some of those persons (i e persons claiming to be in possession) are not likely to cause a breach of the peace—Abadi Begam v Mirza Ahmed 11 O L J 757 A I R 1925 Oudh 190 Although a person is not one of the parties to the dispute but is in possession of a part of the land he is a necessary party to the proceedings and should be asked to file a written statement—Ram Bhushan v Ram Lakshan A I R 1925 Oudh 484 26 Cr L J 630

It was held in several Calcutta cases that the words parties concerned in this section meant not only the persons who were actually disputing but also the persons interested in or claiming a right to the property in dispute and the Magistrate was bound to ascertain those persons and to give notice to them all so that the whole matter so far as his Court was concerned might be disposed of in one proceeding—Ram Chandra v Monohur 1 Cal 29 (32) Laldhari v Sukhdeo 27 Cal 892 (904) Ganesh Jalia v Aygbal 4 C W N 753 Mangal Halder v Naim uddi 6 C W N 101

But these cases must be deemed to have been overruled by the Full Bench case of Krishna Kamini v Abdul Jabbar 30 Cal 155 in which Prinsep C J referring to the above cases made the following remarks (at pp 183 184) — The reported cases seem to have proceeded on the ground that proceedings under sec 145 should be regulated on the same principles as if the Magistrate were trying a civil suit involving a right to possession and that unless all persons having any possible claim are made parties to those proceedings they are bad for want of jurisdiction But the law does not require this nor is it the object of proceedings under sec 145 that the Magistrate should deal with the matter before him as if he were acting as a Civil Court It may be very desirable that such parties (i e the parties who may be interested in or may have a claim to the property in dispute) should be heard so as to avoid a possible injustice by determining in their absence an issue which may affect their rights But the law nowhere declares that such person is entitled to come into the proceedings and that the refusal of the Magistrate to hear him amounts to a refusal to exercise jurisdiction under the law The object in view is to prevent a breach of the peace between certain parties found to be in dispute by determining the subject matter of that dispute not the determination of actual possession or a right to possession in regard to all persons who may possibly be concerned in such a matter In the same case Hill J observed (at pp 195 196) —' The object of a proceeding under sec 145 is the ascertainment of the persons actually in possession at the time of the initial order under sub section (1), and having regard to that object I should feel disposed to think that the words parties concerned in the dispute ' were intended to indicate all persons claiming to be then in possession and I think that the Magistrate should endeavour to bring all such persons into the proceeding But the scope of the inquiry under this section is confined to the fact of actual possession irrespective of the merits of the claims of the parties concerned A claim merely to a right to possession as distinguished from a claim to be in possession would be outside the scope of the inquiry I am therefore unable to agree in the view which has been taken in certain cases that all parties interested in or claiming a right to the property in dispute are entitled to be or should be made parties to the proceeding To require the Magistrate to ascertain who are the persons interested in or claiming a right to the property in dispute would be to impose on him in some cases an almost impossible task and would undoubtedly have the effect of unduly prolonging and greatly embarrassing his proceedings and of depriving them altogether in many instances of their summary character

The Madras High Court however is of opinion (following the old Calcutta cases) that the words 'parties concerned' include persons who are interested in or claim a right to the property in dispute—Q L v Kup payyar 18 Mad 51 Nagaya v Subbarayulu 5 L W 116 18 Cr L J 44

Owners, occupiers —This section concerns owners as well as occupiers When a Zeminder has let his lands in farm he and his farmers and their occupying ryots, are all in their degree concerned in the dispute as to possession and they ought to be maintained in the possession of the interests which they severally enjoy—Harak Narain v Luchmi 5 C L R 287

Landlords tenants —Where in a dispute concerning the ownership and possession of land between a Zemindar as well as his tenants on one side and another Zemindar as well as his tenants on the other (so that the dispute was of a dual character) the Zemindars were made parties but the tenants were not it was held that the presence of the tenants was essentially necessary for the proper and effectual decision of the case and the omission to join them as parties was illegal and without jurisdiction—Laldhari v Sukdeo 27 Cal 89. Where the dispute existed only among the tenants of the rival Zemindars and the Zeminders not bein concerned in the dispute did not move in the matter themselves t omission to add the Zeminders as parties to the dispute would not vitiate the proceedings—Manik v Govind, 6 C. W. N 206 Where the Zeminders on both side claim possession through their respective tenants, the presence of the rival tenants is necessary and they must be made parties The order passed in favour of one tenant as against the other, is a good and valid order—Gurudas v. Kedarnath, 38 Cal 889, 15 C. L. J. 184, 12 Cr L J 408

Where the disputed land consisted of several plots of land all held by tenants on a yearly rent of half the produce, and the parties to the pro ceedings were the lakhirajdar and the patnidar, the dispute betweenwhom was as to the right to collect rent and it appeared that as regards some of the plots there was a dispute as to what tenants were in possession, it was held that as regards the plots about which there was a dispute as to what tenants held the lands, the Magistrate should not have passed any order in those proceedings in the absence of the tenants, because they might be very seriously prejudiced by an order in favour of one or other of the parties to these proceedings—Hari Das v Abdul, 19 C W N 959 16 Cr L J. 590

Where the petitioners allege that the landlords have fraudulently attempted to dispute their possession by setting up false tenants as culti vators of the lands in dispute, the landlords are the real parties—Raj Kumar v Mahadeo, 4 C W N 748

Agent or Manager or Servant —Where the person in whose favour an order was made under this section regarding a dispute as to the right to dig coal in a certain mouza, was merely the manager of the coal company claiming the property held that the possession of such person was not one as contemplated by this section, and the order was bad as the parties really interested were not before the Court—Behary Lal v Darby, 21 Cal 915 The person in possession of land merely as agent or manager is not a party concerned within the meaning of this section—Brown v Prithiraj 23 Cal 423 Jhabbu v Rutherford, 7 C W N 208, Newaz v Rambullubh 21 Cal 916 (Note) An order passed against servants without their masters being on the record is one made without jurisdiction and is liable to be set aside in revision by the High Court—Nagoji v Subbarayulu, 5 L W. 118, 18 Cr L J 44 But if the actual proprietors are not residents within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate,an order under this section can be made in favour of the person who claims to be in possession as agent or manager of the proprietors—Dhondai v Follet, 31 Cal 48 (F B) If both the master and the servant are resident within the Magistrate s jurisdiction, the master must be made a party to the proceedings—Jitbahan v. Bansrup, 6 C. L. R. 193

In Bholanath v Wood, 32 Cal 287 and Chhakauri v Ishar, 6 P L T. 799, 27 Cr L J 142 (143), however, it was held that where the Magistrate made the manager a party to the proceedings instead of the proprietor, who was resident within the Magistrate's jurisdiction, the course adopted by the Magistrate was a mere irregularity or at most an error of law, which did not vitiate the proceedings

Receiver —Where the land in dispute is in the possession of a receiver appointed by a Civil Court his possession is the possession of the Court Such an officer cannot be described as a party interested in a dispute under section 145 Even if such officer can be so described there will be no jurisdiction in the Magistrate to make any order on him under this section without the sanction of the Court appointing him—Dunne v Chandra Kishore 30 Cal 593 In a dispute between the old and the new tenants of an estate the receiver who granted new leases to the new tenants and who himself was not in actual possession was not a proper party to the proceedings Chi ta Veeramma v Narayanaswamy 9 M L T 507 12 Cr L J 185

Reversioner —A person who is the next reversioner to the estate is not a person concerned in the dispute and is not a necessary party because he has no right to present possession—In re Behari Lal 24 All 443

Minor —A minor who is interested in the dispute is a proper party but he is not a necessary party as he is not a party likely to cause a breach of the peace Non service of notice on the minor does not invalidate the proceedings—Nandan v Siaram 7 P L T 156 26 Cr L J 1287

400 Non-joinder of parties —Questions of misjoinder or non joinder of parties do not ordinarily go to the jurisdiction Such questions as whether A ought to have been added as being a person likely to be affected by the proceeding or B omitted as not being concerned in it or whether C was added at too late a stage are questions of procedure by which the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is not affected—Krishna Kamini v Abdul 30 Cal 155 200 (F B) Nandan v Siaram 7 P L T 156 26 Cr L J 1287 A I R 1926 Pat 67 Therefore proceedings under this section are not without jurisdiction because some person claiming to have possession of portions of lands in dispute has not been made a party when he was not one of the parties in the dispute so far as appeared from the information on which the Magistrate acted and when such person does not appear and raise any objection And further proceedings under this section are not without jurisdiction merely because the parties that have been joined are concerned only with possession of portions of the land in dispute—Krishna Kamini v Abdul 30 Cal 155 (F B), Sajani Kanta v Shamsher Ali 24 Cr L J 235 Narayan v Chandrabhaga 26 Cr L J 1289 (Nag)

But non joinder of persons concerned in a dispute whose presence is essentially necessary for the purpose of a proper decision of the case involves a question of jurisdiction and the High Court has power to set aside an order made in a proceeding in which such persons are not made parties—Anesh Mollah v Ejaharudin 28 Cal 446

401 Addition of parties —It was held in Protap Narain v Rajendra Narayan 24 Cal 55 (F B) that a Magistrate had no power to add parties after the initiation of proceedings under this section and that if in the course of the proceedings it appeared to the Magistrate that it was absolutely necessary that other parties should be required to atten and he was satisfied that they were concerned in the dispute, the only course open to him was to initiate a new proceeding

But this case was decided under sec 145 of the old Code of 1882 in which sub section (3) regarding the service and publication of notice did not exist The opinion of the Full Bench in Protap v Rajendra 24 Cal 55 cannot in view of the alteration of law introduced by sub section (3) of section 145, as it now stands, be regarded as a binding authority on the construction of the section Sub-section (3) has been enacted not simply for the purpose of regulating the issue and service of notice generally under this section, but it is also intended to empower the Magistrate, after he has issued the order provided for by sub-section (1) to the persons claiming to be in possession, to bring in any other persons whom from subsequent information it may seem to him proper to have before him—Krishna Kamini v Abdul Jubbar 30 Cal 155 (F B) at pp 197 199 And the addition of those persons does not put an end to the original proceeding, and does not require the initiation of any fresh proceeding—Ibid (at pp 192, 193, 201)

The Magistrate has very wide powers with respect to the persons whom he will bring into the proceeding He may alter or add to the array of parties either of his own motion or on the application of any one claiming to be concerned in the dispute (i e, claiming to be in possession) But the Magistrate can add parties at any time up to the commencement of the inquiry under sub-section (4) He has no power to add fresh parties after the opening of the inquiry This section contains no provision for the addition of parties after the commencement of the inquiry, and it was no doubt considered that the power conferred on the Magistrate by sub-section (3) of summoning such persons as he deemed proper and the means prescribed by the same clause for giving publicity to the proceeding provided a sufficient guarantee that before the actual inquiry is entered upon, all parties really concerned will either have been summoned to attend the proceedings or will have had the opportunity of doing so afforded them if they care to avail themselves of it It would lead to much inconvenience and delay if it were held that any one claiming to be concerned in the dispute was entitled to come in and join in the proceedings after the commencement of the inquiry It would probably be necessary in such a case to start the inquiry afresh, as the party added would have a right to have the evidence taken in his presence, and if several claimants successively were to come in this way, it is evident that the proceeding might be indefinitely prolonged—per Hill J in Krishna Kamini v Abdul 30 Cal 155 (198 199) The same Judge again remarked in the same case (at p 201) :— "If parties are added after the inquiry has begun, I do not think that it would be necessary, in consequence, to initiate fresh proceedings, but evidence previously taken ought, if the parties so added require it, to be again taken in their presence "

402 'His Court' —This means the Court of the Magistrate who issued the preliminary order A preliminary order issued by a Magistrate directing the parties to appear before another Magistrate is illegal—Misri v Narasing, 2 P. L. T. 186, 22 Cr L J 483

403. Written statement —The statement made by a party in a written statement filed under this section ought to be proved like any other statement and therefore a Magistrate is not competent to pass an order in favour of a party merely on the strength of his written statement —Kefatulla v Ferozuddi, 5 C W N 71 An order based on the written statement of one of the parties and upon the failure of the other party to file his statement without some evidence on the part of the party filing the statement in support of it is without jurisdiction—Gobind v Nibaran, 8 C W N 642

Where the Magistrate has taken any evidence in a case, he is not justified in refusing to proceed with it merely because the parties neglected to file written statements on the day fixed for filing them The Magistrate is wrong in saying that he has nothing before him to decide He ought to proceed with the inquiry—In re Goluck Chunder 11 W R 9

When the Magistrate being satisfied on a police report made a preliminary order under this section calling for written statements the mere fact that a party did not put in a written statement would not take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to proceed with the case The proceeding being properly initiated, it was incumbent on the Magistrate to make the inquiry and to take such evidence as the parties offered, irrespective of the fact that one or other of the parties failed to put in a written statement The Magistrate would not be justified in refusing to proceed with the case because one of the parties neglected to file a written statement, he has to take evidence if offered by any of the parties and to decide the case upon such evidence The basis of a proceeding under this section is not the written statement but the police report or other information from which the Magistrate is satisfied about the fact of the likelihood of a breach of the peace—Ramjharia v Piar Koeri, 4 P L T 308, 24 Cr L J 557

The Magistrate should take written statements from all parties The object of this section is to put an end to disputes as to possession of immoveable properties so as to prevent a breach of the peace This object cannot be gained until all the contending parties are on the record and an opportunity is given to them to put forward their respective claims. If the written statements of some of the parties are rejected the effect would be that the Magistrate's decision under this section will not be binding upon them—Raghunath v Rajkishore, 5 P L T 458, 25 Cr L J 906

Granting time —Although a Magistrate has a discretion to refuse an application for time to file a written statement—Gobind v Nibaran 8 C. W N 642, still he ought to grant time to enable the party to file it Therefore where on the day appointed for hearing a case under Sec 145, the parties although present filed no written statement nor produced any evidence, and the Magistrate refusing to grant time heard the parties and being unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was in possession, attached the property under Sec. 146, it was held that the Magistrate had failed to exercise jurisdiction when he refused to grant time, and that he ought to have granted time to allow regular proceedings to be followed—Sk Mansar Ali v Matiullah, 12 C W. N 896

404 Actual possession —The possession contemplated by this section is the actual possession of the subject of dispute The power or competency of the Magistrate to interfere depends upon the very fact that the possession of the land is in dispute—Rajendra v Md Arzumand 9 C W N 887 The possession in regard to which the Magistrate s jurisdiction under this section should be exercised must be of a real and tangible character—Bejoy Nath v Bengal Coal Co Ltd 23 W R 45 (48)

By actual possession is meant not merely bodily possession but the possession of a master by his servant or the possession of a landlord by his immediate tenant or the possession of the person who has the property in the land by the usufructuary—Sutherland v Crowdy 18 W R 11 (13)

Whether the possession is on behalf of others or in one s own right is quite irrelevant This section is concerned solely with the fact of actual possession whether lawful or unlawful whether in contemplation of law enjoyed by the possessor in his own right or on behalf of others—Narayana v Kandasami 3 L W 164 16 Cr L J 525 Tarujan v Asamuddi 4 C W N 426

Possession of landlord by receiving rent from tenants is actual possession under this section—Narain Das v Emp 1884 P R 19 Nobin Chunder v Jogendranath 25 W R 18 Mohesh v K E 11 O L J 743 26 Cr L J 398 The fact that tenants attorn to strangers by payment of rent to them does not put an end to the tenancy so as to affect the possession of the landlord and deprive him of his right to have recourse to this section in case of a likelihood of a breach of the peace and to have his possession of the right to collect rent maintained—Sarbananda v Pransankar 15 Cal 527 A lambardar who is in management of a village for the benefit of the three co sharers of the village and who is himself a co sharer must be deemed to be in possession under this section—Ramdas v Parbati 1890 A W N 178

The possession contemplated by this section is absolute continuing and not occasional possession Where the petitioners claim possession of a market stall for only one day in the week this section is inapplicable —Nayan Manjari v Fazley Haq 49 Cal 871 So also where one of the parties to a proceeding under this section claimed only the right to worship on the disputed land on only one day in the year and the right to make due and proper preparations for the holding of that worship by erecting huts for the purpose of holding pujah held that the right of such party to be in possession for only one day in the year or to take such steps as were necessary to prepare for the pujah was in the nature of an easement and not in the nature of possession and proceedings under this section could not be taken as this section contemplates absolute continuing possession of either party—Manik Chandra v Preo Nath 17 C W N 205 13 Cr L J 789 But it is not intended that possession must be such as should be exercised every day of the year Continuity of possession should be understood with reference to the object over which it is exercised By continuous possession is meant such possession which a party in possession may have occasion to exercise and has exercised and exercises whenever he likes With respect to lands which are fallow and liable to be submerged possession must be presumed to be with the owner until the contrary is proved Occasional acts of user of such land by the owner constitute possession for the purpos s of this se tion—Loke Nath v Bazlal Gani 31 C W N 334 28 Cr L J 343

Wrongful possession —The possession referred to in this clause is a tual possession at the t me of the initiation of proceedin s and not possession at the date of the Magistrate s order Tl erefore pos ession tho igh obtained by wrongful means but complete at the time of inquiry is actual possession within the meaning of this section—Q E v Ga thar 1897 P R 5 So also possession obtained by fraud or trickery—In re Girdhar Ratanlal 27 The Magistrate s duty is to determine actual possession and not whether the possession is r ghtful or wrongf il—In re Sarganba awa 7 Bom L R 18 2 Cr L J 28

Origin of possession —A Magistrate ought to inquire into the question as to who is in actual possession of the property in dispute he has no concern as to how the party obtained possession provided that the possession dates more than two month prior to the date of the preliminary order—Ambler v Pushong 11 Cal 363 Dastur v Fell 6 B H C R 30

Actual possession what is not —Possession by tenant is not possession of landlord in cases where there is a dispute between the tenant and the landlord as to the fact of possession—Baboo Reddi v Kullappa 2 Weir 107 Also in case of dispute between two rival zemindars constructive possession through intermediate holders (e g ticcadars) to whom the ryots pay rents is not contemplated by this section—Emp v Thakoor Dayal 3 Cal 320 This section does not contemplate the possession of a superior landlord to whom the occupier of the land does not pay rent It contemplates the possession of a landlord by his immediate tenant i e the person who pays rent to h m—Sutherla d v Croudy 18 W P 11 (13)

The possession contemplated by this section is a real tangible possession therefore where a party claims under a document or agreement the right to do certain things over a large extent of terr tory the performance of acts under such alleged right in one portion of the ground over which the right extends (although it may be sufficient for the purpose of keeping alive that right so as to be an answer to a plea of limitation raised in a civil suit) is not of itself a sufficient possession on which the Magistrate s order under this section may be based for the purpose of forbidding in a distant locality acts necessarily not in conflict with such possession but at variance with the right—Beras Nath v Bengal Coal Co 23 W R 45 (48) So also the mere purchase at an execution sale witho it delivery of possession does not amount to possession of the property p irchased and the rights of the purchaser will not be protected by this section—Ragava Aiyanger v Krishnasamy 31 Mad 416

The possession given by Amin in butwara proceedings is simpl of ownership and not of occupancy an l is not contemplated by t tion—Macken ie v Shere Bahad ir 4 Cal 378 In re Juggodesh L R 91

A succession certificate only authorises the holder to collect

of the deceased and is no bar to the Magistrate maintaining another party in possession of the lands belonging to the deceased—Seetaram v Roy Sheo Golam 18 W R 34

Possession of forest land —In a dispute regarding forest land the right to possession of which was exercised by cutting timber from time to time and removing the timber upon a certain price being paid for it is necessary to inquire as to who was in undisturbed possession of the land in dispute by felling the trees and removing the same without objection on the occasion immediately preceding the time when the dispute arose and whichever party be found to have been in possession on that occasion should be presumed to have possession when the proceedings commenced—Jagatkishore v Ashanulla 16 Cal 781 Where it was found that certain jungle lands were in the khas possession of the Zemindar and the other party without claiming any easement or customary right cut a few trees and encroached upon a small portion of the jungle held that such intermittent encroachment did not oust the possession of the Zemindar —Bhola Nath v Wood 32 Cal 787

Permissive possession —Possession that can be pleaded in a proceeding under this section must be possession based on a claim of right to possession The possession of a person which is merely permissive cannot come within the purview of this section Thus the possession of an agent or servant which is permissive cannot give a party to a proceeding a locus standi as against his principal or master—Nritta Gopal v Chandi Charan 10 C W N 1088 4 Cr L J 215 Bajirao v Dadibai 27 Cr L J 212 (Nag)

405 Joint possession —Section 145 contemplates a dispute between two parties each of whom asserts the right to hold exclusive possession of the property as against the other (Bidhu Bhusan v Annoda 6 C W N 883) and not a dispute between a party claiming to hold joint possession with another and the latter contesting such right Such a dispute nearly always arises out of a claim to hold a specific share in the property and this obviously is a matter which no Criminal Court can properly deal with Therefore where two parties are in joint possession of the property in dispute and one of them tries to evict the other so as to endanger the public peace this section does not apply and an order allowing one of the parties to be in possession till evicted by law is bad—Tarvjan v Asaruddi 4 C W N 426 Krishna v Radhasyam 7 C W N 118 Dhani Ram v Bholanath 1902 P R 23 Nritya Gopal v Chandi Charan 10 C W N 1088 Makhan v Barada 11 C W N 512 5 Cr L J 296 Shamlal v Rajendra 1 P L T 594 21 Cr L J 790 Arjun v Chandan 24 O C. 167 22 Cr L J 625

This section is not intended to regulate the mode of enjoyment and when the parties are jointly entitled an order under section 145 should not be made—Surb Narain v Birj Mohun 23 Cal 80 This section clearly refers to exclusive possession and is not capable of being so construed as to authorise a Magistrate to take cognizance and dispose of disputes regarding joint possession—Dani Ram v Bhola Nath 1902 P R 23 So where the Magistrate passed an order to the effect that one party was in possession throughout the year while the other was entitled to possession jointly with the former for a portion of the year held that such an order was beyond the scope of s c. 145 and was made without jurisdiction The Magistrate was only authorised to decide which of the parties was in possession he had jurisdiction only to find possession but not the mode of possession or how the possession was to be exercised—Rahini Nandan v Jadunandan 30 C W N 873 The object aimed at by the Legislature is the prevention of a breach of the peace This can be secured by asking one of the parties to keep away from the property But where both parties have been in joint possession and are still prepared to commit a breach of the peace by trying to oust one another it will not be in the interests of the preventive remedy that both should be maintained in possession It will certainly not help to maintain order and peace That is the reason why Courts have declined to declare the joint possession of the contending parties—Mohammad Koolayappa v Sheikh Abdul 27 M L J 169 15 Cr L J 572 Even in such cases the Magistrate is not competent to put one of the parties in possession—Veerabhadra v Shanmugan 17 Cr L J 76 (Mad) Where it was found that the second party was in possession of the disputed land on behalf of the first party as also on behalf of himself both parties being members of the same family, and the Magistrate declared the second party to be in possession the order was held to be without jurisdiction—Kinu Mandal v Hari Baul 23 C W N 1031

Where the parties do not claim joint possession but each party claims exclusive possession it cannot be said that it is a claim for joint possession making this section inapplicable—Bidhu Bhusan v Annoda 6 C W N 883 Ramjharia v Piar Koeri 4 P L T 308 Malan v Makhan Singh 2 Lah 372 23 Cr L J 725 Basudeo v Mahadeo 6 P L T 451 26 Cr L J 1187 Thus where the case is one of exclusive possession claimed by each set of landlords through their respective tenants the Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order in favour of one tenant against the other persons setting up their tenancy—Gurudas v Kedar Nath 38 Cal 889 12 Cr L J 408 15 C L J 184 And the fact that there may be a joint title to land does not prevent the application of this section if the Magistrate finds that possession is with one party—Baijnath v Street 20 C W N 518 17 Cr L J 251 Malan v Makhan Singh 2 Lah 372 The only question for the Magistrate is whether either party has actual possession, and if he finds that one party has actual possession of a defined area and the other party has not, he can make an order under the section irrespective of the fact that the parties may have joint title to the land—Basanta Kumari v Mohesh 40 Cal 982 17 C W N 944 14 Cr L J 269

Where it has been declared by a Civil Court that the property is joint and partition has been ordered, no proceedings under this section can be taken until the partition has been effected—Dharari Kar v Girija Kanta 8 C W N 485

Debuttor property being by nature impartible and inalienable possession of such property by co shebaits must always be necessarily joint and as such beyond the scope of an order under this section Where one of several co shebaits had been entrusted with the sole management of the debuttor estate for convenience a dispute between him and the other co shebaits claiming to have joint management with him is not a fit subject for a proceeding under this section—Nritta Gopal v Chandi Charan 10 C W N 1088

406 Clause (2)—'Land or Water' —These words have been substituted for the words tangible immoveable property occurring in the Code of 1882 and this sub section gives an explanation of the expression

Building—Temple —A dispute relating to possession of a temple comes within the provisions of this section—Sundara v Vallinayaka 2 Weir 110 (111) whether the temple be wholly or partly private property or dedicated to purposes of public worship—Anon 2 Weir 99 (100) As regards dispute arising between two pujaries regarding the right to perform the puja in a temple see Note 466 under section 147

Fisheries —Under the Code of 1882 by reason of the word tangible occurring in the section incorporeal rights were excluded from the operation of this section—Pramatha v Durga 11 Cal 413 and therefore a dispute concerning the right of fishing in a jalkar was held to be not governed by this section—Krishna v Troilokia 12 Cal 539 Arundmoyi v Shurnomoyi 13 Cal 179 But these decisions are no longer good law in view of the express words fisheries occuring in this sub section Therefore where there is bona fide dispute about a fishery or jalkar right proceedings under this section may be properly instituted—Balaji v Bhoji 35 Cal 117

Where parties have joint rights in a certain fishery and neither of them can be considered as claiming exclusive possession and a dispute arises with regard to its possession this section is inapplicable because joint possession does not come within this section If what was in dispute was not a share in the fishery but a share in its profits (i e either the fish caught or their price when sold) it might have been dealt with under this sub-section—Bhabanath v Peary 11 C L J 41 11 Cr L J 370

Alluvial lands —In the case of alluvial lands (in Bengal) recently re formed where questions of breach of the peace arise it is open to the

Crops or other produce —The word land includes crops or other produce of land—2 Weir 108 But crops mean standing crops and not crops which have been severed from the land and stored on the thrashing floor—Ramjan v Janardhan 30 Cal 110 Srinivasa v Sathayappa 13 Cr L J 295 (Mad) Basudeo v Mahadeo 6 P L T 454 26 Cr L J 1187 Ganga Prosad v Narain 15 All 394 Chaurasi v Ram Shankar 28 All 66 Contra—In re Krishnasami 2 Weir 108 where it is held that the mere fact that the crops which are the subject of dispute have been removed from the land is not sufficient to oust the jurisdiction of the Magistrate under this section

Mines —A dispute as regards mines and minerals and the right to work mines falls under this section as mining rights must reasonably be regarded as falling within the definition of the term land which is intended to cover all profits derivable from land—Andrew Yule & Co v Skone 4 P L J 154 20 Cr L J 199 Mahadeo Dutt v Sarkar 24 Cr L J 263 Bimala Prosad v Tata Iron & Steel Co Ltd 35 C L J 456 24 Cr L J 103

Rents —A dispute as to collect rents is a dispute concerning land within the meaning of this section—Pramatha v Durga Churn 11 Cal 413 Sarbananda v Pran Sankar 15 Cal 527 Ihsan v Darakoti 12 Mad 88 In re Tirumalappa 18 Cr L J 156 (Mad) Ibhavessari v Sitheswari 16 Cal 513 Laldhari v Sukdeo 27 Cal 892 (903) Sri Mohan v Narsing 27 Cal 259 Haridas v Abdul Matleb 19 C W N 959 16 Cr L J 590 The decision in Durga v Phulmani 1885 A W N 299 (decided under the Code of 1882) is no longer good law.

Where there is no dispute as to the possession of or extent of share in a certain immoveable property, and the dispute is merely as to who is entitled to collect rents on behalf of all from the tenants this section does not apply—Md Fazil v Md Abdul Samad 10 O C 89 5 Cr L J 394 Ikaloo v Mohesh 36 Cal 986 Jamil Khan v Emp 36 All 143 12 A L J 162 i e where there is no dispute as to the possession or share of land a Magistrate cannot under this section determine the method by which the possession of the parties is to be exercised or the method by which the parties in possession are to collect the profits of land—Akaloo v Mohesh 36 Cal 986 11 Cr L J 28

This section applies where the dispute is as regards the collection of rents between joint owners governed by the Mitakshara Law as for instance where one of the joint owners dismisses the common manager and claims to collect the rents separately on his behalf—Sri Mohan v Narsing 27 Cal 259 (261)

Profits —The profits must arise out of or emanate from immoveable property therefore fees paid by pilgrims at Gaya at performing Sradh ceremonies cannot be said to arise out of land and proceedings under this section cannot be instituted in respect of a dispute regarding such fees—Narayan v Bhuguan 3 C L J 137 So also a right to the offerings given by worshippers for the worship of any deity cannot be said to be a right to profits issuing out of the temple but arising out of the deity irrespective of the temple building in which the deity may happen to dwell A dispute relating to the rights to the offerings only is a dispute relating to moveable property and is outside the scope of this section—Ram Saran v Raghunandan 38 Cal 387 13 C L J 445 12 Cr L J 3 Gutram v Lalbehari 37 Cal 578 14 C W N 611 11 Cr L J 29 Rao Sobhag Singh v Thakur Bakhtawar 3 N L R 84 So also a dispute concerning the right to take sandalwood paste when removed from an idol does not fall under this section—In re Pandurang 4 Bom L R 438 A dispute with respect to the collection of offerings at a karbala cannot be the subject matter of a proceeding under this section—Ghulam Sibtain v Kaniz Khaton 5 P L J 246 1 P L T 608 21 Cr L J 572

A dispute as to the right to collect fees (as mere remuneration for conducting the business of the market) from the sellers of a market the payment of such fees being purely voluntary on the part of the sellers and being in no way connected with the ordinary rents and profits of the market and not being a perquisite of the Zemindar is not a dispute as to the profits of a market within the meaning of this section—Pan Lodlan v Emp 36 All 143 12 A L J 162

Right of succession to a muth —A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to institute proceedings in case of a dispute arising out of a right of succession to a muth and its appurtenances—Q v Sreeputi 11 W R 23

Right to ferry —The right to a ferry i e the right to carry passengers and their goods to and fro in a boat across a river cannot be treated apart from the possession of lands used on either side of the stream for the purpose of landing them Therefore a dispute regarding a ferry including the land and the water upon which the right is exercised comes under this section—Murbullubh v Luchmeswar 26 Cal 188 But questions relating to rights to use a ferry come under section 147 and not under this section—Harbulla v Bajrang 3 C W N 148

Disputes as regards easements fall more appropriately under sec 147 than under this section—Kali Kumar v Bejoy 21 Cr L J 697 (Cal) Asaram v Chotu Lal 22 Cr L J 768 (Nag) e g a dispute as regards

407 Clause (3)—Service of Notice —A copy of the order stating the grounds of the Magistrate s satisfaction must be served on the parties, for it is the intention of the law, not only that the Magistrate should have sufficient grounds for proceeding under this section but that he should inform the parties concerned of the grounds on which the proceedings had been instituted—Q E v Gobind Chandra 20 Cal 520

A Magistrate, before proceeding under this section ought to satisfy himself that a notice of the proceeding and a copy of the order drawn up under clause (1) have been duly served on the parties alleging the non receipt of the notice and the Magistrate s omission to do so vitiates all subsequent proceedings—Sripati v Ram Kumar, 8 C W N 76

When the Court decides to take a tion all processes should be served at the expense of the Crown—Phulanja v Emp 25 Cr L J 1109 (Nag)

Local service of notice —This clause also provides for the publication of a copy of the order in a conspicuous place at or near the subject of dis pute and the publication of such notice is a condition precedent to the exercise of a Magistrate s jurisdiction in an inquiry under sub section (4)—Nawab Khaja Solemulla v Ishan Chandra 9 C W N 909

The provision regarding the local service of notice was made with the intention of guarding against collusive proceedings as well as to give to any one interested, who may, through an oversight or otherwise not have received a summons, an opportunity of coming in with his claim, and to notify generally to all persons in the locality that a proceeding under this section has been set on foot —Krishna Kamini v Abdul Jabbar, 30 Cal 155, 197 (F B) As regards the effect of clause (3) on the power of the Magistrate to add parties, see the same case (30 Cal 155) cited in Note 401 ante

Form of notice —Though the section prescribes no particular mode of giving notice, the language of this section indicates that the notice shall be to known individuals, and not in the form of a general citation or public proclamation—In re Kumud Narain, 4 Cal 650

Notice under section 107 or 147 not sufficient —Where notice was issued under section 107 to show cause why the accused should not execute a bond for keeping the peace, and the Magistrate when he tried the case recorded an order in the course of which he stated that on facts the case was one for the application of Sec 145, and not one under Sec 107, and proceeded at once to pass an order under clause (6) of this section, the order was held to be bad—Sukru v Ram Pergash, 30 Cal 443 Similarly, where a Magistrate gave notice under section 147 and started proceedings under that section, but on objection being taken, did not decide whether Sec 147 was applicable to the proceedings but passed an order purporting to be under section 145, without giving notice of his intention to act under sec 145, the Magistrate s order was made without jurisdiction—Subramania v Sanjasia, 19 M. L J. 18 In both these cases the Magistrate ought to have issued fresh notice under sec. 145

Service on whom to be made —The service of notice need not be made on all co sharers It is enough if notice is served upon persons concerned in the dispute—In re Gobinda 18 W R 54 A service of notice upon a mofussil naeb who takes no steps to consult his employer or act under his directions is not such service as is contemplated by this section—Ram rangınee v Goroo Das 17 W R 9

Proof of service —Where one of the parties denies the service of the order the written return of the serving peon is not sufficient proof of the service. The Magistrate should examine the serving peon and allow him to be cross examined on this point—Lowsen v. Kali Charan, 8 C W N 719

Non service of personal notice —Failure to serve the notice upon the parties concerned is a mere irregularity cured by section 537 if the party professing to be aggrieved has full knowledge of the proceedings—Mg Mauk v Mg Po 3 Rang 169 Bidhyadhar v Jagodish 7 O C 334 Bhure Khan v Fakira 25 Cr L J 159 (Nag) such omission will not render the proceedings void if the parties were present and no prejudice was caused—Debi Prosad v Sheodat 30 All 41 or if the parties appeared before the Magistrate who explained matters to them fully and they evidently understood everything that was requisite—Nur Bakhsh v Crown 1917 P W R 26 18 Cr L J 633 or if the person did not question the order—In re Chennapudayan 30 Mad 548 But if the party professing to be aggrieved had no knowledge of the proceedings the omission to serve notice on him vitiated the trial—Sego Patel v Parashram 28 Cr L J 418 (Nag) According to the Patna High Court non service of the notice is by itself a grave irregularity which vitiates the trial—Ram Sahai v D onandan, 19 Cr L J. 71 (Pat) Sheonandan v Wahidul 19 Cr L J 112 (Pat) but non service of notice on one member invalidates the proceedings only so far as that member is concerned, and does not invalidate the whole proceedings—Vandan v Siaram 7 P L T 156 26 Cr. L J 1287

Where service of the notice was not effected on the applicant and there was nothing to show that the Magistrate ordered or took steps to have a copy of the preliminary order affixed to a conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute the proceedings of the Magistrate were set aside—Sego Patel v Parashram, 28 Cr L J 418 (Nag) Where the Magistrate did not serve any notice upon any person nor did he affix a notice on the property in dispute, nor receive a written statement from either party, and passed the order in the absence of one party the proceedings of the Magistrate were exceedingly irregular and were bad for want of jurisdiction—Ahmed Choudhury v Parbati 35 Cal 774 Abdulla v Gunda, 1907 P R 7, Basauan v Tilak 4 P L T 723 24 Cr L J 345 If the proceedings are heard and order passed ex parte on account of the absence of a party and that party afterwards appears and alleges non service of notice and applies for rehearing of the case, the Magistrate cannot reject the application but is bound to re open the case after satis fying himself as to the truth of such allegation—Kali Charan v Abdul Laskar, 24 C W N 90 21 Cr. L J 848

Omission of publication of notice —The provision as to the publication of the order in some conspicuous place near the property in dispute is directory and a matter of procedure only Omission to publish the notice is not an illegality which deprives the Magistrate of his jurisdiction and unless it be shown that some one interested has been materially prejudiced by the omission the High Court will not interfere—Sukh Lal v Tara Chand 33 Cal 68 F B (overruling 8 C W N 590 and 9 C W N 909) Debi Prosad v Sheodat 30 All 41 Muhammad Sharif v Dhanpat 1914 P W R 15 Iklas v Raghuraj 17 O C 400 11 Cr L J 69 Bhure Khan v Fakira 25 Cr L J 159 (Nag) Maung Mauk v Maung Po Yon 3 Rang 169 27 Cr L J 660 Md Mahdishah v Wahdalshah 26 Cr L J 1292 (Sind)

Warrant to compel attendance of party —Under this section the matter in issue is not the commission of an offence but the settlement of a dispute and it is entirely optional with the parties to attend or not therefore the issue of a warrant to compel the attendance of any party is illegal—Kefatulla v Feruzuddin 5 C W N 71

408 Clause (4)—Inquiry —An inquiry as to possession is made not for the purpose of strengthening the possession of one party or the other in the dispute between them but because such an inquiry is necessary for the making of an order under sub section (6) declaring the party in possession to be entitled to retain it until eviction by a Civil Court—Manindra v Barada Kanta 30 Cal 112

Inquiry by subordinate Magistrate —The inquiry contemplated by this section is a personal inquiry to be made by the Magistrate who passed the preliminary order A Magistrate has no jurisdiction even with the consent of parties to make over an inquiry under this section to any other Magistrate Sub section (4) makes it clear that the section contemplates only an inquiry by the person directed by the Statute to hold it and by that person and no one else This section read as a whole does not give the person charged with the inquiry the power to delegate the duties which have been vested in him to any other person to hold an inquiry or to ascertain facts which the law requires the Magistrate to do himself—Hamdul Haque v Sk Itait 2 P L J 86 18 Cr L J 145

Therefore an order under this section based upon the report of a Subordinate Magistrate made after inquiry by such Magistrate is illegal—Anon 4 M H C R App 20 Though Sec 148 enables a Magistrate acting under this section to depute a Subordinate Magistrate to make a local investigation he ought not to depute to such Subordinate Magistrate the whole investigation under this section but on the receipt of the report of such Magistrate should himself take written statements from the parties and receive the evidence produced by them and conclude the investigation —Anon, 2 Weir 118

If a Magistrate omits to take evidence as required by clause (4) but refers it to a Subordinate Magistrate to report thereon his order based on such evidence alone is made without jurisdiction and must be set aside—Arumuga v Venkatasubbier 31 Mad 82 But in a later Madras case it has been held that the order based on the report of a Sub Magistrate is not without jurisdiction The essential requisite to give jurisdiction to a Magistrate is that he must be satisfied about the existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace His subsequent action is a matter of procedure and not of jurisdiction—Jagannatha v Venkatagopalakrishna 37 M L J 589 20 Cr L J 773 (dissenting from 31 Mad 82)

409 Procedure — It should be impressed upon Magistrates that the whole object of and only excuse for proceedings under Sec 145 is the prevention of a breach of the peace supposed to be imminent and that the procedure to be followed in disposing of such cases is that laid down in section 145 sub section (4) of the Code which must be strictly observed It should be the primary aim of the inquiry officer therefore to arrive at his decision with the utmost promptitude consistent with an adequate investigation into the dispute before him and he should be specially careful not to permit the proceedings to assume the complexion of a civil suit or in any way to countenance an endeavour on the part of either party to secure any advantage for the purposes of civil litigation

The trying Magistrate should be in a position to insist upon the taking up of the case on the date fixed for hearing and it should not be necessary to grant adjournment after adjournment simply because the parties are not given due notice of the proceedings or by reason of the proceedings themselves being inaccurate or incomplete Once the case is commenced the hearing should be continued de die in diem until the Magistrate is in a position to arrive at a decision but in doing so he must remember that the sole object of his inquiry is to determine if possible the fact of actual possession and that even in the case of an ex parte proceeding there must be some recorded evidence to justify the order passed by him —Cal G R & C O pp 10 11 Sastee Sahi v Nathuni 6 P L T 258 26 Cr L J 105

The sole procedure in an inquiry under section 145 by a Magistrate is as to who was in actual possession of the land in dispute and a Magistrate should not deal with such proceeding as if it were a civil suit by framing several issues and trying them—Kochai v Jogesh Chandra 35 Cal 795

It is incumbent on Magistrates to dispose of proceedings under this section as quickly as possible and therefore the procedure of a summons case is to be followed and not that of a warrant case—Moti Singh v Dhanukdhari 24 Cr L J 595 see also Biswanath v Shivanand 2 P L T 330 22 Cr L J 430 Hurendra v Bhobani 11 Cal 767 and Ram Chandra v Monohar, 21 Cal 29 where the procedure of a summons case has been recommended In another Calcutta case it has been remarked that in cases dealing with taking securities for keeping the peace or for good behaviour as also in cases of public nuisance the Legislature has expressly provided that in some specified instances the procedure of a summons case and in others the procedure of warrant cases shall be followed but in this section the Legislature has deliberately omitted to specify the procedure The conclusion therefore is that neither the procedure prescribed for a summons case nor that of a warrant case is to be followed as such a protracted investigation would defeat the very object in view viz an effective prevention of a breach of the peace The proceedings under section 145 are intended to be prompt and should be concluded without delay and the Magistrate may adopt a procedure which will best carry out the object of the Legislature—Tarapada v Nurul Huq 32 Cal 1093 2 C L J 280 The same view is taken in Surja Kanta v Hem Chandra 30 Cal 508 But from the Report of the Joint Committee cited in Notes 413 and 436 below (which speaks of the amendment of subs 4 and 9 as made by adopting the phraseology of section 244) it appears that the Legislature intends the procedure to be that of a summons case

Such parties—The words such parties must be interpreted with reference to the words parties concerned in such dispute in sub section (1) the effect being to restrict the inquiry to the parties concerned in the dispute notwithstanding that persons other than those may have been summoned by the Magistrate or may have come in of their own accord on the publication of the copy of the order in the locality—Krishna Kamini v Abdul Jabbar 30 Cal 155 (F B) at p 198

410 Question of title—In a case under this section the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to inquire into the rights of parties What he has got to look to is the fact of possession only—Arji Mea v Arman Mea 7 C L J 369 In re Pandurang 25 Bom 179 The whole scheme of Chapter XII contemplates an inquiry solely with reference to the fact of actual possession irrespective of title The crucial point to be decided in proceedings under this section is as to who is in actual possession of the subject in dispute and not who is entitled to such possession This section contemplates a determination of the question of possession without reference to the merits of the respective claims of the disputing parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute—Tarapada v Nurul Huq 32 Cal 1093 Amir Hassan v Qadir Baksh 28 P L R 107 28 Cr L J 338 Kaku v Hariraman 1917 P W R 28 Subda v Kushal 27 Cr L J 481 7 P L T 873, Subbarama v Mariya 16 M L T 57 15 Cr L J 559 Dariulla v Malarulla 27 Cal 915 Chelalugam v Immalach 2 Weir 98 Abdul Wahab v Lrip 27 Cr L J 44 (Oudh) Trip v Mai Kumari 25 Cr L J 1081 (Oudh) In re Mallappa 28 Bom L R 488 27 Cr L J 734 (735) Even a trespasser can be maintained in possession—Subda v Kushal Singh (supra) Where a Magistrate in deciding a case under this section refers to the claim of any of the parties to a right to possess the land in dispute he exceeds his jurisdiction and his order will be set aside—Lari Dayal v Kedarnath 6 C L J 182 Prayag Mahaton v Gobind 32 Cal 602 It is a misconception of the aim and the object of law to come up under this section to the Court with questions of title to possession of land which can only be settled by Civil Courts—Paresh Narain v Watson 17 W R 3

The Magistrate may if necessary take and consider evidence of title to enable him to decide the question of actual possession but proof of title is not proof of actual possession—Panaganti Parthasarathy v Pallikapu 34 Mad 138 Amirthnath v Ahmed Rea 6 W R 61 Where no sufficient evidence of possession is produced by the parties the Magistrate may use evidence of title merely to guide and assist his mind in coming to a decision upon the question of possession—Kali Kristo v Golam Ali 7 Cal 46 Raja Babu v Muddun Mohun 14 Cal 169 Ramesh Chandra v Mahim Chandra 35 C L J 156 22 Cr L J 350 Ram Sarup v Darsa 0 1 P L T 387 21 Cr L J 748 Adaikhan v Mallalaruppan 19 M W N 17 23 Cr L J 197

But if the Magistrate finds that the evidence of possession on both sides is equally unreliable he cannot rely on the presumption that possession follows title in such a case he should act under sec 146 If however he finds the evidence on both sides reliable and equally balanced and he is unable to conclude from such evidence which party in is possession then he is entitled to corroborate the evidence of possession given by one side by the presumption as to possession arising from the title which he finds in that side—Akshoy v Brojeswar 26 C W N 1000 24 Cr L J 141 But he must use the evidence of title for this limited purpose If instead of proceeding to decide as to the actual possession he virtually puts aside the consideration of this question and determines the question of the title alone he is doing that which the law has forbidden him to do—Kali Kristo v Golam Ali 7 Cal 46 And a decision under this section ought to be based upon evidence of possession and not of title—Ibid Where evidence of possession is available a Magistrate acts clearly without jurisdiction in deciding the claim of the parties to possession on documentary evidence of title—Juthen v Ram Narain 18 C W N 700 15 Cr L J 202 Srimat aredai v Parapraia 38 M L J 73 21 Cr L J 46

411 Perusal of statements —The Magistrate shall peruse the written statements of both parties An ex parte order made on the written statement of one of the parties and upon the failure of the other party to file one without some evidence on the side of the party filing the written statement in support of it is without jurisdiction—Gobind Chandra v Nibaran, 8 C W N 642 Najem v Jamalali 12 C W N 771 And the Magistrate fails to exercise jurisdiction if he refuses to grant further time to the parties to file written statements—Sk Mansar Ali v Mati llah 12 C W N 896 When the Magistrate has taken any evidence in a case he is not justified in refusing to proceed with the case merely because the parties neglected to file written statements on the day fixed for filing them—In re Goluck Charder 11 W R 9

412 "Hear the parties" —These words mean that the Magistrate must hear the arguments at the conclusion of the evidence on both sides just as it is the procedure prescribed in a summons trial and the refusal of the Magistrate to hear the arguments of the parties vitiates the final order—Dhatari v Gorakh Prosad 19 Cr L J 741 5 P L W 103 Ghulam Shittan v Kani 5 P L J 746 1 P L T 608 21 Cr L J 572

413 Receiving evidence —The Magistrate is bound to examine the parties and receive evidence—In re Dyawappa 17 Bom L R 382, 16 Cr L J 434 An order under this section without taking evidence is invalid and must be set aside—Manik v Azimuddi 6 C W N 93 Jleiger v Baijnath 11 A L J 586 14 Cr L J 277 Lowsen v Kali Charan 8 C W N 719 Tara Chand v Behari 1916 P R 2 18 Cr L J 36 Fateh Sher Khan v Crown 1916 P R 4 17 Cr L J 129 Palani v Kulaidaivel 43 M L J 716 Velayuda v Narayan L W 1208 Marudanayakam v Md Routhen 17 Cr L J 217 (Mad) Basawan v Tilak 4 P L T 723 A decision of a Magistrate based upon mere local inquiry and discarding the evidence altogether is bad as one made without jurisdiction—Lal Behari v Bejoy 10 C W N 181 Shahadut v Tajuddin 46 Cal 1056 Srimaiavedan v Pirapravan 38 M L J 73 Gazai v Karimuddi 25 C W N 100, 23 Cr L J 199 Govt v Kali Chundra 16 W R 13 A Magistrate will be acting illegally in the exercise of his jurisdiction if instead of taking the evidence tendered by the parties he proceeds to the spot and decides the case only on the statements of witnesses picked up by himself—Khubi v Darbari P L T 267 22 Cr L J 481 An order passed by a Magistrate on the basis of his own knowledge without recording any evidence and relying solely on the evidence in another case is invalid—Raza Husain v Mehdi Hasan 25 O C 148 23 Cr L J 684 So also an order passed merely on a consideration of the written statements and without taking any evidence is invalid and must be set saide—Kolla v Munesuar 34 Cal 840 Gobind Chandra v Nibaran 8 C W N 642 Similarly an order under this section without giving either party an opportunity of adducing oral evidence as to possession is illegal and liable to be set aside—Sakhayur v Alhadi 21 C W N 928 19 Cr L J 108 The Magistrate must consider both oral and documentary evidence in the case—Kailash v Jai Narain 1 P L T 291 21 Cr L J 601 Hanuman v Sheo Chandra 2 P L T 333

It is not open to a Magistrate to refuse the evidence tendered to him —Tirumalraja v Lodd Govind Doss 29 Mad 561 The Magistrate s act in preventing the objector from producing evidence to prove his case constitutes such a grave irregularity as to amount to an abuse of jurisdiction and the Magistrate s order is in consequence open to revision—Dani Ram v Bhola Nath 1907 P R 23 The Magistrate is bound to grant adjournment for the production of important evidence if he refuses to do so his order is liable to be set aside—Bisuambhar v Aminuddin 25 C W N 602 22 Cr L J 335 If the evidence rejected is a material document affecting possession of a party its rejection might furnish a good ground of grievance to that party—Udit Narayan v Sundarman 20 Cr L J 234 (Pat)

The record must show the ground of rejection of evidence A general remark in an order that the oral evidence is not reliable without referring to it and without giving any reason is not a proper disposal of the case on the evidence It amounts to a refusal to exercise the jurisdiction vest

in a Magistrate and is remediable by the High Court in revision—Lakhpat v Emp 4 P L T 579 4 Cr L J 482

The words "receive all such evidence as may be produced" have been substituted for the words "receive the evidence produced" "This shows that the Magistrate is now bound to receive all the evidence produced by the parties and has no discretion to refuse any evidence In order to meet certain difficulties which have arisen in connection with the words receive the evidence produced by them in Section 145 (4) we have made an amendment adopting the phraseology of section 244 (1)" —Report of the Joint Committee(1922)

Examination of witnesses —The Magistrate is bound to examine the witnesses tendered in support of the respective claims to possession of the land in dispute—Anon 6 M H C R App 4 Anurdee v Ranee Soonaet 9 W R 64 An order passed without examining the witnesses is without jurisdiction—Marudanayakam v Md Routhen 17 Cr L J 217 (Mad) Nojem v Jamalali 12 C W N 771

So also an order passed on the evidence of a person who was not a witness of any of the parties is bad—Lowsen v Kali Charan 8 C W N 719 Fateh Sher Khan v Crown 1916 P R 4

Under the old law a mere refusal by the Magistrate to examine a particular witness in a proceeding under this section was not necessarily a ground of interference by the High Court—Surya Kanta v Hem Chandra 30 Cal 508 A Magistrate was not bound to examine all the witnesses adduced by the parties but could limit the number for good and sufficient reasons He had a discretion in the matter of examining witnesses—Samir Sheikh v Jahed Sheikh 3 C L J 478 (explaining Manmatha v Baroda 31 Cal 085) Abhayessari v Shidhessari 16 Cal 513 Therefore where a Magistrate after examining ten of the witnesses produced by a party refused to examine any further witnesses on the ground that the evidence sought to be adduced was worthless it was held that the Magistrate had not acted without jurisdiction—In re Nathu Mal 24 All 315

The present Amendment of this sub section however makes it obligatory on the Magistrate to examine all the witnesses produced by the parties and leaves no discretion to him in this matter

But the Court has undoubted jurisdiction to curtail the number of unnecessary witnesses upon the ground that their examination will delay and possibly defeat the ends of justice though he cannot arbitrarily restrict the number of witnesses that a party wishes to examine—Biswanath v Shitarand 2 P L T 330 22 Cr L J 430 Bahidunnissa v Pichit Lal 24 Cr L J 954 (Pat)

Summons to witnesses —See sub-section (9) and notes thereunder

Admission by party —If one of the parties admits that the other is in possession the Judge is not bound to take any evidence—Gangadharam v Sankarappa 9 M L T 91 12 Cr L J 47 Although it is necessary ordinarily to record evidence in a case under this section before passing final orders it cannot be said that it is indispensable to do so when the case is completely given up by the opposite party An admission by the Mukhtear that his client had no actual possession is sufficient to dispense with the evidence—Haro Mohan v Gobind 7 C W N 351

Withdrawal of proceedings —Where after proceedings under this section had been properly instituted the first party examined some witnesses and then represented to the Court that he would conduct the case in the Civil Court and gave an undertaking not to enter upon the said land until the matter should have been settled by the Civil Court whereupon the Magistrate passed an order reciting the terms of the petition and declaring the second party to be in possession held that the omission by the Magistrate to take evidence on behalf of the second party or to record a formal finding as to possession did not vitiate the order—Yar Md v Hayat Md 18 Cr L J 10 4 (Cal)

415 Evidence recorded by predecessor —Since a proceeding under this section is an inquiry within the meaning of sec 4 (k) a Magistrate may act on evidence taken by his predecessor by virtue of sec 350 The decision in 23 W R 62 is no longer good law

416 Reference to arbitrators —This section requires the Magistrate himself to receive the evidence adduced by the parties and on a consideration thereof to come to a decision The procedure laid down by this section does not contemplate that the question as to who is in actual possession should be delegated even by consent of parties to arbitrators—Banwari v Hriday 32 Cal 552 Hamidul v Sheikh Atait 2 P L J 86 18 Cr L J 145 Jamuna Das v Hanuman 25 C W N 719 22 Cr L J 623 But where the parties themselves agreed that the question of possession should be decided by an arbitrator and the matter was thereupon referred to arbitration the Magistarte was bound to take into consideration the finding of fact by the arbitrators as to which party was in actual possess on—Taramoni v Gyanendra 7 C W N 461 So also where the dispute was referred to arbitration by consent of parties both of whom accepted the award that followed it was not open to the Magistrate to insist on the production of evidence—Haladhar v Bulaki 3 P L J 248 19 Cr L J 266

Where the parties themselves applied that the matter should be referred to arbitration and the Magistrate made an order in terms of the award the parties were not entitled afterwards to object to the course and the High Court declined to interfere in revision—Janki v Kalika Miser, 6 C W N cix

In Uttam Singh v Jodhan Rai 3 Pat 288 7 P L T 288 27 Cr L J 220 Foster J considered all the above cases and came to the conclusion that a distinction should be drawn between cases in which the reference to arbitration was made for the purpose of deciding existing and past possession and cases in which the reference was made for deciding future possession The scheme of an inquiry under sub section (4) of sec 145 is retrospective and not prospective, that is the Magistrate is to consider who was in possession at the date of the initiation of the proceeding or within two months prior thereto, and not who is entitled to possession and will henceforth be in possession of the property in dispute Therefore, if the reference to arbitration is made for the purpose of decidingthe question as to who was in possession at the date of the institution of the proceedings, such a reference is not improper and the Magistrate can pass an order on the basis of the award of the arbitrators But if the reference is made for the purpose of deciding future possession, and the arbitrators give an award to the effect that the disputed lands will be divided among the parties, the award is prospective, and the Magistrate cannot pass any order on the basis of that award

In the same case it has also been decided (at p 294) that if the parties refer the disputes to arbitration, and the arbitrators give an award, it shows that the parties have come to a settlement of their disputes, and that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace. In such a case the Magistrate should pass an order under sub section (5) dropping the proceedings, and cannot pass a final order (declaring the possession of the parties in terms of the award) under sub-section (6)

417. Decision as to possession —An order under this section merely declaring one of the parties to be in possession, without deciding and giving a finding as to who was in actual possession of the land in dispute on the date of the preliminary order, is one made entirely without jurisdiction and consequently void—Kochai v Romesh, 35 Cal 795, Peria Subba v Sinna Subbya 45 M L J 56 23 Cr L J 670

Where the Magistrate made an attempt to deal with the question of possession but made some general observation in regard to the ownership of the property, and declared the petitioner to be in possession, held that the order was an obvious infringement of the provisions of this section—Shululathi v Gulam Moideen, 1922 M W N 689, 16 L W 338

If it is difficult for a Magistrate trying a case under this section to come to a conclusion as to the fact of possession, the wise and proper course to be adopted is to pass an order under Sec 146 Where a Magistrate in such a case passes an order under section 145 the High Court in revision has the power to make the order which the lower Court ought to have made, and to alter the order under Section 145 into one under Section 146 of the Code—Reid v Richardson, 14 Cal 361 ; Kattras Coal Co v. Shibkristo, 22 Cal 297

As to the effect of a previous Civil Court decree as regards possession, see Notes 438 and 439 post

418 Possession at the date of the order —The question of possession has to be determined with reference to a specified point of time, viz, the date of the initial order, or in the case of forcible dispossession, a date within two months next preceding such order—Tarapada v. Nurul Haq 32 Cal 1093 The rulings in 11 Cal 365, 12 Cal 521, 12 Cal 539 20 W R 51, 15 Bom 152, 18 Mad 41, 13 All 362 are no longer good law.

The actual possession of the land in dispute is the only subject for inquiry. The fact of symbolical possession delivered under the C P Code has no bearing on the Magisterial inquiry—Ramalingam v. Raja of Ram-

1ad 16 Cr L J 736 (Mad) Promoda v Khetra 25 Cr L J 1104 (Cal) Where a party is given symbolical possession of certain lands and shortly afterwards proceedings under sec 145 are instituted in respect of the same land it is incumbent on the Magistrate to go into the fact of actual possession between the two dates and consider the evidence tendered on that question before passing the final order—Haran Khan v Nafar Chandra 22 C W N 479 18 Cr L J 718 Where it was found that notwithstanding the delivery of symbolical possession given to the auction purchasers (second party) the judgment debtor and his heirs and representatives (first party) had continued all along to be in possession and were in actual possession on the day on which proceedings under this section were instituted but the Magistrate made his final order in favour of the second party held that the order made in favour of the second party could not be supported as they were not in actual possession at the date of the order—Shahabaj v Bhajahari 49 Cal 177 (180) 24 Cr L J 875

A Magistrate should find as to who was in possession at the date of the order not at any date anterior to that although previous possession may be a guide to his finding as to peaceful and actual possession on the date of the order—T Hanpanna v Gangamma 16 Cr L J 239 (Mad)

Where the Magistrate found one party to have been in possession a few days before the date of the preliminary order and confirmed his possession without finding who was in possession on the date of the preliminary order itself but the interval between the two dates was very short (viz 5 days only) and there was nothing on the record to show that there was any change of possession in that short interval and the party confirmed in possession had a decree of Civil Court declaring him entitled to possession held that the order of the Magistrate was valid—M I Husain v Pachayappa 42 M L J 147 23 Cr L J 97 But where the Magistrate declared possession in favour of the opposite party as evidenced by certain documents of title relating to a period as old as 10 years prior to the proceeding without taking further evidence oral or documentary to see whether that possession continued up to the date of proceeding the High Court set aside the order as made without jurisdiction and contrary to the provisions of this sub section—Jutlan v Ram Narayan 18 C W N 700 15 Cr L J 202

Land under Water —Where the Magistrate made the final order in favour of one party finding that as there could not be any act of peaceful possession within two months of the date of the proceeding owing to the land being under water the possession in the current year was to be presumed in favour of the man who was in possession during the previous years it was held that the order was in direct contravention of this section and the Magistrate should have passed an order under Sec 146—Satyendra v Krishnadhan 20 C W N 1011 18 Cr L J 80

Joint possession—See Note 405 ante

419 Forcible and wrongful possession —The Magistrate s duty is to find peaceful possession Ouster of a person lawfully in possession by a trespasser does not confer on the latter any rights which can be recognised under this section The Magistrate must look to the possession which may be termed peaceful He must go back to the time when the present dispute originated and not to the result of the dispute itself—In re Mohesh Chandra 4 Cal 417 The recent occupation of a trespasser is not a possession which a Magistrate can direct the party to retain under this section The possession is still with the person ousted by the trespasser and an order directing him to have possession and the trespasser to be dispossessed is the proper order to be made—Ram Singh v Dalla 1876 P R 8 Where it appeared that one of the parties within two months prior to the proceedings obtained sanction from the Municipality and proceeded to dig a tank on the land in dispute to the exclusion of another party who was then found to be in possession it was held that it was forcible and wrongful dispossession within the meaning of this section and possession must be deemed to be in the party dispossessed—Manmatha Nath v Garga 20 C W N 978 17 Cr L J 449 But where the Magistrate finds that on the date when the proceedings under this section were instituted and for more than two months preceding that date the members of the first party have been and are in possession although the members of the second party obtained delivery of possession of the property through Court a year ago held that the Magistrate should pass his order in favour of the first party—Shalabaj v Bhajahari 49 Cal 177 (181) 24 Cr L J 875

If a person has been turned out of possession and submits to the ouster and the other party whether rightfully or wrongfully is in peaceful possession a Magistrate will not go behind the period when possession may be found to have become peaceable—In re Bunuari Lal 1 C L R 136 For the point for inquiry under this section is not whether any of the claimants has taken possession of the subject of dispute by force but whether the struggle for it has ceased leaving it in the hands of one of them If the struggle has ceased the party in whose hands it remains is in actual possession which the Magistrate is bound to recognise under this section—Q E v Gauhar 1897 P R 5 If however the struggle for possession is still proceeding between the party who has taken forcible possession and the rightful owner or if neither party can show his complete control over the subject at the time when the proceedings are taken neither party is to be regarded as in possession and the Magistrate is to take action under section 146—Ibid

It is not necessary that actual force or violence should have been used to some person before the dispossession can be said to be forcible when the dispossession of a person is effected by a show of criminal force that person is said to be forcibly dispossessed—Sita Nath v Harley 25 C W N 601 22 Cr L J 637

But the mere ouster of people having no title to the land by the rightful owner without using any physical violence and by removing things which had no right to be on the land cannot be said to be an unlawful and forcible entry on the land within the meaning of this section and the persons so ousted cannot be treated to have been in possession—

Collector of Howrah v Santak 44 C L J 593 28 Cr L J 210 Where a landlord resumes possession of an abandoned holding after compliance with the procedure laid down in section 87 Bengal Tenancy Act it cannot be said that he has taken forcible possession of the holding—Nikunja Behari v Usabati 31 C W N 242 28 Cr L J 245

This sub section contemplates that the dispossession should be forcible as well as wrongful the mere wrongful dispossession without any evidence to show that it was forcible as well does not come within the purview of this section The remedy of the party wrongfully dispossessed lies only in the Civil Court—H I Low & Co v Manindra Chandra 3 Pat 809 (813 814) 26 Cr L J 268 Ata Husain v Latif 28 Cr L J 437 (All)

The words wrongfully dispossessed mean dispossessed without due warrant of law or dispossessed otherwise than in due course of law even though the dispossessor be the rightful owner—Bai Jiba v Chandulal, 27 Bom L R 1353 A I R 1926 Bom 91 27 Cr L J 661

Date of forcible possession —It is not sufficient for the Magistrate to come to a general finding that certain fields are in the possession of one party and certain others in the possession of the other and that the latter has taken wrongful and forcible possession The date of such forcible possession must be determined and unless there is a finding that the forcible possession occurred in the case of all the fields at the time same there must be a finding as to the date of the possession with regard to each field separately—Kaku v Harnaman 1917 P W R 28

420 Attachment —See the 2nd proviso to clause (4) Power is given to a Magistrate under this section for the purpose of preserving the peace and it is only for that purpose that he may where a breach of the peace is imminent attach the disputed property An order of attachment of property cannot be passed under this section for the mere purpose of avoiding a future litigation in respect of the right to the present produce of the land in dispute—Atma Singh v Harnam 7 Lah 136 27 P L R 341 27 Cr L J 761

An order for attachment under the proviso to clause (4) would remain in force only pending the Magistrate s decision and not until a decree or order of the Civil Court is obtained—Farid v Piru 8 S L R 207 16 Cr L J 235

Where a land was attached under this section and the crops standing on the land were sold and the sale proceeds kept in deposit in the Court but the preliminary order was afterwards cancelled by the Magistrate on the ground that there was no immediate danger of a breach of the peace the Magistrate could order the sale proceeds to be restored to the persons who raised the crops—Suryanarayana v Ankineed 47 Mad 713 (715), 46 M L J 565 25 Cr L J 978, Mahalakshmi v Subbarayadu 17 L W 429 24 Cr L J 783 or he could order the money to be kept in deposit in the Court until one party or the other obtained an order in his favour—Suryanarayana v Ankineed 47 Mad 713 (716), Chenga Reddi v Rama sami, 16 Cr L J 104 (Mad)

Postponement of proceedings —A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order postponing sine die a proceeding under this section at the same time retaining under attachment the property covered by the proceeding on grounds extraneous to the proceeding—Abdul Rauf v Rahimuddin 13 C W N 104 9 Cr L J 35

421 Appointment of receiver —A Magistrate cannot appoint a receiver under proviso to clause (4) of this section before the commencement of the inquiry He can do so only under Section 146 and after the conclusion of the inquiry—Subhadramma v Satpam, 1910 M W N 821 11 Cr L J 536 Mewa Lal v Emp 3 P L J 147 19 Cr L J 249 Dasrath v Tarachand 21 N L R 191, 26 Cr L J 1378 Even if a Magistrate appoints a receiver under this section such receiver will only be an agent or servant of the Magistrate acting under his order The right to attach (under the second proviso to this clause) carries with it the right to take the necessary steps for the custody and management of the property and the Magistrate may appoint a receiver for that purpose—Srinivasa v Sathavappa 13 Cr L J 295 (Mad) but the power of such receiver will not be the same as that of a receiver appointed under sec 146 infra His duty will be simply to take and keep possession of the properties attached and to make an inventory thereof—Gopala v Krishnaswami 27 M L T 234 21 Cr L J 73

The amount of the receiver s remuneration should be reasonable and should not in any case exceed the amount of the nett income realised by the receiver—Yamunabai v Emp 27 Cr L J 22 8 N L J 167

A receiver can be appointed only by the Magistrate while the inquiry is proceeding and only when he is satisfied that a dispute likely to case a breach of the peace still exists The High Court in revision cannot appoint a receiver because the inquiry is already over and there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace as the Magistrate s order has put one party in possession of the property in dispute—Marudayya v Shanmugasundara 49 M L J 503 A I R 1926 Mad 139 27 Cr L J 126

422 Joint Inquiry —(1) One dispute as to several plots —When the dispute is one the fact that it embraces several distinct parcels of land does not necessitate an independent proceeding in respect of each To require the Magistrate to hold separate proceedings in respect of each plot of land claimed by each of the disputants would be to require him to undertake what would be almost impossible from the intricate character of such proceedings. His findings should naturally be directed to possession of particular plots but the fact that he did not take separate proceedings in respect to each plot would not invalidate his entire proceedings—Krishna Kamini v Abdul Jubbar 30 Cal 155 (F B) at pp 185 200, Sajani Kanta v Shamsher, 24 Cr L J 235 (Cal) Although it may be desirable under such circumstances to deal with each dispute relating to each of several plots separately it is impossible to extend to such proceedings the strict rule of procedure observed in civil actions—Manik Mandal v Gobinda 6 C W N 706 To draw up one proceeding with respect to several plots of land claimed to be in the possession of different persons would not be bad if it was shown that none of the parties had been precluded from giving any evidence and no party was prejudiced by the Magistrate s action in not taking separate proceedings—Ishwar Chandra v Ambica Charan 5 C W N 514 Gajadhar v Thakur Singh 26 Cr L J 424 (Pat)

(2) Different disputes as to different subjects —Where the parties are found to be in possession of different and separate pieces of land e g when the dispute is alleged to exist in 130 villages and each village stands on its own footing the Magistrate does not exercise proper jurisdiction if he clubs together 130 subjects of dispute and treats them as one The Magistrate should decide which party is in possession of this or that village instead of arbitrarily finding that one party was in possession of all the villages—Tirumalraja v Lodd Gobind Doss 9 Mad 561 Crown v Jamal 1 S L R 75 9 Cr L J 265 When there are independent disputes relating to distinct parcels of land they ought to be dealt with in separate proceedings—Krishna Kamini v Abdul 30 Cal 155 (F B) at p 200

(3) Different claims —In a dispute regarding possession of 708 bighas of land belonging to a Zemindari the parties to the dispute were persons interested as tenants under the Zemindari on the one side and on the other side persons claiming under the same Zemindar to be interested in various portions of the land as their maurasi jote in different quantities and under interests acquired at different times and the Magistrate tried the case together and passed an order in favour of the former directing that they as a body should remain in possession until evicted therefrom by order of a Civil Court it was held that the Magistrate ought not to have passed an order declaring one set of persons in possession as against another set but should have distinctly specified which persons were entitled as against which and to which portion of the land in dispute Otherwise it would render it necessary for the party out of possession to make as defendants in the civil suit a multitude of persons who were by terms of the order held to be in possession The proceedings were set aside—Autukul v Uma Singh 15 Cal 31

(4) Where parties in all cases are not the same —Where the parties in several cases under sec 145 are not the same the Magistrate is not competent to try all the cases together although the parties consent to the adoption of such a procedure Evidence already taken in one case may be accepted in the other cases but the cases must be tried separately—Joy Kumar Singh v Mahadeo 4 C W N 748

There should be separate and full inquiry in each case —Where two cases are inquired together the Magistrate must come to a separate finding after full inquiry into each case and the decision of one case should not be applied in coming to a decision in respect of the other Where two investigations were before the Magistrate who after conducting a regular inquiry in the first case and coming to a proper decision remarked in the other case that because the lands were adjacent he had taken the evidence in the two cases together and found it unnecessary to continue the inquiry further it was held that the parties in the second case were entitled to a full inquiry—Q v Issur Raut 8 W R 63

423 Sub section (5)—Addition of parties —This clause provides for interested parties coming in even if they have not been served with notice—Bhire Khan v Faltra 25 Cr L J 159 (Nag) Clause (5) does not enable a Magistrate to add parties to the proceeding It merely enables a stranger to come in and show that no such dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning any land etc existed He does not become nor can thereby be made a party to the dispute which he seeks to show has never existed—Jaraki Nath v Q E 3 C W N 3?9 The person interested who is empowered under clause (5) to show that no dispute exists or has existed does not come in for the purpose of joining in the proceeding but for the purpose of bringing it to an end—Krishna Kamini v Abdul Jubbar 30 Cal 155 (F B) at p 199 A third person is allowed to come in under clause (5) only for the purpose of showing that no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace really existed or exists but it is not clear whether such person can be made a party to the proceedings—Bani Singh v Umrao 5 C W N 900

Where a person applies on the ground that he is interested in the land in dispute as a tenant of a part of the property in dispute and there is nothing to show that that is not the case he should be allowed to come in and show under clause (5) that there is no dispute—Haran Mandal v Mohim Chandra 37 Cal 85 11 Cr L J 371

But as he does not become a party to the proceedings no order can be passed under sub-section (6) in favour of such person and the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to declare any land to be in the possession of such person—Radhamohan v Natiuddi 19 Cr L J 653 (Cal) Fasik v Jagalaidh 5 C W N 14 -2 Cr L J 502

For further notes on addition of parties see Note 401 ant

424 Cancellation of preliminary order —The apprehension of a breach of the peace is the first condition necessary to give the Magistrate jurisdiction under this section and if it is found that there is no longer any such apprehension the Magistrate's jurisdiction ceases He is then bound to cancel the initial order and stay all further proceedings under this clause—Md Khandu v Sadakali 38 C L J 284 A I R 1923 Cal 577 5 Cr L J ?1

The mere fact that in a prior criminal case between the parties a Magistrate expressed his opinion that one of the parties was in possession is not conclusive as to possession and can in no sense be said to have settled the dispute between the parties and on the basis of such a decision a Court cannot stay the proceedings started under this section—Abdul Shakur v Abu Sayeed 6 P L T 710 26 Cr L J 870 A I R 1925 Pat 593

A Magistrate can cancel his preliminary order only on facts being brought to his notice which are sufficient to satisfy him that no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists and therefore the cancellation of proceedings merely on the ground that one party admits that the other party was in actual possession of a land in dispute is without jurisdiction and should be set aside—Tara Charan v Bengal Coal Co Ld, 13 C W N 125 The Magistrate can cancel a preliminary order only when the parties are in a position to give positive evidence that there is no likelihood of a breach of the peace The mere absence of a finding by the Magistrate in respect of a likelihood of a breach of the peace is not sufficient—Ranada Ranjan v Bharat Chandra 25 C W N 215 22 Cr L J 481 The information that there is no likelihood of a breach of the peace need not be confined to what the parties give under sub-section (5) If the Magistrate is satisfied whatever the source of his information may be that the likelihood of a breach of peace does not exist he can cancel the order passed under sub section (1) and stay the proceedings—Manindra v Barada Kant 30 Cal 112 Kamalammal v Tanu Routler 4 L W 57 17 Cr L J 138 Santokh v Ram Singh 2 Lah 364 23 Cr L J 292 The Magistrate s power to drop the proceedings is not limited to the circumstances mentioned in clause (5) The existence of clause (5) does not take away the power of the Magistrate himself to drop the proceedings if he is satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace He is entitled to drop the proceedings on his own initiative whenever he is satisfied that there is no further likelihood of a breach of the peace without giving an opportunity to the parties to show by evidence that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace—Narasayya v Venkiah 49 Mad 232 49 M L J 784 27 Cr L J 95 A Magistrate will not be acting illegally if he drops the proceedings after being satisfied upon the information given by a third party that the dispute no longer exists—Suryanarayana v Ankineed 47 Mad 713 (715) 46 M L J 565 25 Cr L J 978 Krishna Kamini v Abdul 30 Cal 155 (161) And in so dropping the proceedings at the instance of a third party the Magistrate is not bound to record the evidence of the witnesses of one of the parties who might have shown by evidence that a dispute still existed If the Magistrate is able to act on a police report or other information in starting proceedings under this section there is no reason why he should not be able to stay further proceedings on similar information without being obliged to record such evidence as the parties may produce with the same formality as he would have done if he had gone on with his inquiry instead of dropping it—Suryanarayan v Ankineed 47 Mad 713 (715) 35 M L T 68 25 Cr L J 978

When a Magistrate cancels an order under this sub section he has no jurisdiction to allow one of the parties to reap the crops to the exclusion of the other—Karimuddi v Naimuddi 3 C L J 573 When the Magistrate has cancelled his preliminary order and dropped the proceedings he becomes functus officio and has no jurisdiction to direct the delivery of the property or of its sale proceeds (e g where the properis sold being perishable) to one of the contending parties The proper course under these circumstances is to retain the property or its sale proceeds in court, until one of the parties obtains an order of a Civil Court —Narasayya v Venkiah, 49 Mad 232, 49 M L J 784, 27 Cr L J 95, Chenga v Ramasamy, 16 Cr L J 104 (Mad), Dasrath v Tarachard 21 N L R 191, 26 Cr L J 1378

A Magistrate has jurisdiction to cancel the order of his predecessor—In re Krishnasami 2 Weir 108 Where a proceeding under section 145 has been drawn up by a Deputy Magistrate, the District Magistrate can cancel the proceeding after transferring the case to his own file, and on a consideration of the facts and after hearing the objections of the parties —Tara Charan v Bengal Coal Co Ld, 13 C W N 125

Effect of cancellation —An order striking off proceedings under this section does not amount to an adjudication of the question of possession for the purpose of sub section (6)—Manindra Chandra v Baroda, 30 Cal 112

Fresh proceedings —When proceedings under this section are struck off on the ground that there is no immediate apprehension of a breach of the peace the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to revive the proceedings He can only start fresh proceedings upon fresh materials which must be specific relating to the lands in dispute A general state of affairs in the locality is insufficient—Khubi v Darbari 2 P L T 267, 22 Cr L J 481 If it is intended to take fresh proceedings upon new materials it is necessary for the Magistrate to record such materials in his order renewing the proceedings—Manik v Azimuddi 6 C W N 923

425 Clause (6)—Final Order —

Contents —Whether sections 366 and 367 do or do not apply to proceedings under sec 145 the Magistrate in his final order must give reasons for his decision sufficient to enable the High Court to determine whether he has complied with the terms of sub-section (4) and directed his mind to the consideration of the evidence adduced before him, and whether he has acted with jurisdiction in making his final order A statement in the final order that the witnesses have been examined pleaders have been heard on both sides and oral and documentary evidence of both parties has been considered is of a stereotyped nature applicable to any and every case and does not enable the High Court to understand what in fact the evidence was or to say that the mind of the trying Magistrate had been properly and sufficiently directed to its consideration Such a final order is bad and the case must be retried—Bhuban Chandra v Altaran 49 Cal 187 (189) 25 C W N 887, 22 Cr L J 499, Persa Sulla v Sirra Subbaya, 31 M L T 312, 45 M L J 56, 23 Cr L J 670, Mothahar Ali v Ishaque 39 C L J 366, 25 Cr L J 1115, Ishan Chandra v Hriday 29 C W N 475 26 Cr L J 915 41 C L J 357

Signature —A Magistrate should sign his name in full to a judicial order under this section and should also note his official position—Nejem v Jamalali, 12 C W N 771

Who can pass order —The jurisdiction to make a final order under this section is not personal to the Magistrate who initiates the proceedings, and a District Magistrate may of his own motion transfer a case under this chapter to another Magistrate of the first class subordinate to him, and the latter can pass the final order—Hiranand v K E, 10 C W N 1095 Satish Chandra v Rajendra 22 Cal 898

But where a Magistrate who heard a case under this section handed over his charge to another Magistrate and was transferred to another district, and subsequently delivered the final order in the case, held that once he had handed over the charge and was transferred to another district he became functus officio and ceased to have any jurisdiction in the case He therefore acted without jurisdiction in delivering the final order —Jagatbandhu v Jagabandhu, 38 C L J 201, 25 Cr L J 192 (following Emp v Anand Sarup 3 All 563)

"Or should be treated as being" — We think that this sub-section should apply not only to the case of a party in actual possession but also to one who is to be treated as being in possession under the proviso to sub-section (4) and we have amended sub section (6) in this sense"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

426 "May restore to possession" etc — Power has been given to restore to possession a party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) We think that this is a logical carrying out of the provision contained in the first proviso to sub section (4) '—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

Prior to this amendment it was held in several cases that the only order which a Magistrate was competent to pass under this section was one declaring one of the parties to be entitled to possession, but he had no jurisdiction to deliver possession or to oust one person and place another in possession of the property—Tulshi Ram v Abrar Ahmed, 37 All 654 13 A L J 932, 16 Cr L J 714, Emp v Kameshar, 27 All 300, Sheorari v Baij Nath, 14 A. L J 26, Ram Ratton v Nettra Kally, 4 Cal 339 These cases are no longer of any authority

427 Order in respect of joint possession —Where in a proceeding under section 145 in respect of a dispute concerning some land, the Magistrate finds that one party has been in possession of a portion of the land in dispute, and the other party in possession of the rest, and the possession of the one is not likely to interfere with the enjoyment of the possession of the remaining portion by the other, the Magistrate can, in the exercise of jurisdiction vested in him under this section, maintain both parties in possession of their respective portions, and an order of attachment under sec 146 is unnecessary—Kangali Das v Muti Lal, 11 C W N 743 Thus, where the Magistrate finds that each party was in possession of separate rooms in the same building he is competent to pass an order that the separate possession of each party should tinue—Devaji v Gotha, 2 Weir 108 Where the component pa subject of dispute are quite divisible from each other, it is quit to make an order confirming the possession of one of the parties in regard to one of those parts and it is not competent for the Magistrate to make an order for attachment of the whole property—Sadar Ali v Abdul Karim, 5 C W N 710 If however, the subject matter of dispute is one and indivisible the proper order to make is an order of attachment under section 146 Thus in a proceeding under sec 145 regarding a dispute between two parties in respect of certain collieries it appeared that the first party were in possession of the building which contained the office where the business of the collieries was conducted and the cashbooks and the papers of the business were kept and the second party were in possession of the pits wharves and tramway of the colliery The Magistrate passed an order in favour of the second party considering that party to be in actual possession It was held that as the subject matter of dispute was indivisible and as the second party was not in possession of the whole of the colliery the order of the Magistrate was bad since its effect would be to place the second party in possession of that portion (viz the building) which was in the possession of the first party The proper order of the Magistrate was one under sec 146 attaching the whole property—Katras Jherria Coal Co v Sib Krishto Dau 22 Cal 297 Similarly where there was a dispute concerning certain immoveable and moveable property and the Magistrate took proceedings under this section and gave possession of the house to one party except two rooms in which the Magistrate locked up the moveables until the rights of the parties in respect of the moveables were determined by the Civil Court held that the order was illegal—Mahadei v Beni Prasad 42 All 214 18 A L J 171 21 Cr L J 242

428 Effect of order —An order under this section does not bar a suit for ejectment under the Agra Tenancy Act The expression eviction in the due course of law is equally applicable to ejectment proceedings under Ch X of the Agra Tenancy Act and to ejectment under a Civil Court decree—Iqbal Ahmed v Siraj Bakh A I R 1925 All 210 Although a Magistrate s order under this section confers no title the fact of possession remains and the person in possession can only be evicted by a person who can prove a better right to possession himself—Dinomoni v Brojo Mohini 9 Cal 187 (P C) The order throws upon the person contending its validity the burden of proving his title The onus is not upon the person in possession to show that the judgment in his favour is right it is for his opponent to show that it is wrong and where and why it is wrong—Ibid The onus is on the plaintiff to show that the person in possession under the order of the Magistrate has no right to possession —Manindra v Saradindu 23 C W N 593

Appointment of Receiver by Civil Court —The fact that there is an order under this section does not bar the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to appoint a Receiver under sec 503 of the C P Code 1882 (=O XL of the Code of 1908) The C P Code and the powers of the Civil Court under that Code are in no way fettered by an order that may be passed by a Magistrate under this section The Magistrate s order under this section is only intended to control any period up to the time when the Civil Court takes seizin of the matter—Barkatunnissa v Abdul Aziz 22 All 214

Mamlatdar s order as to possession —An order under this section does not take away the jurisdiction of the Mamlatdar or any other Civil Court to decide who was in actual possession before the date of the order—Nagappa v Syed Badruddin 26 Bom 353

Suit u der Sec 9 Specific Relief Act —An unsuccessful party in a proceeding under this section cannot be said to have been dispossessed and therefore he has no cause of action to bring a suit under sec 9 of the Specific Relief Act —Moore v Manoranjan 12 C W N 696 7 C L J 547 But where the plaintiff was forcibly dispossessed by the defendant before the institution of proceedings under this section and the trespasser s possession was maintained by the Magistrate the plaintiff is entitled to sue under sec 9 of the Specific Relief Act—Jwala v Ganga Prasad 30 All 331

Evidentiary value —Orders of Magistrates under this section are admissible in evidence to show the fact that such orders were made They are also evidence of the following facts all of which appear from the orders themselves viz who the parties in dispute were what the land in dispute was and who was declared entitled to retain possession For this purpose and to this extent such orders are admissible in evidence for and against every one when the fact of possession at the date of order has to be ascertained If the order refers to a map that map is admissible in evidence to render the order intelligible—Dinomoni v Brojo Mohini 29 Cal 187 (P C) 6 C W N 386

429 Orders which cannot be made under this section —The final order should declare which party is in possession and should state that he will continue in possession until evicted therefrom in due course of law and should forbid all disturbance of such possession An order in these terms I warn the opposite party not to interfere with the possession of the first party in any way is not one in sufficient compliance with the law—Khubi v Darbari 2 P L T 267 22 Cr L J 481 Where possession is found to be in one party the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to grant to the other party permission to cultivate the lands in dispute pending any necessary action that might be subsequently brought—18 W [illegible]

A Magistrate is not competent to pass an order directing the method by which the possession is to be exercised or the agency by which the person in possession is to collect the profits—Ikaloo v Mohesh Lal 36 Cal 986 11 Cr L J 78 He cannot pass an order to the effect that one of several joint owners should not use the land in such a manner as to cause annoyance to another—In re Rajcoomar 2 C L R 62

430 Supplementary order without notice —Proceedings under this section were drawn up in respect of certain premises consisting of dalan a hotel and a privy and the Magistrate made his final order with regard to the first two Subsequently the omission in respect of the privy being brought to his notice by one of the parties the Magistrate declared that party s possession of it without notice to the other party It was held that the order in respect of the privy should not have been made without hearing the other party—Natabar v Bireshwar 23 C W N 532 19 Cr L J 737

431 Order in respect of land not covered by proceedings —In a proceeding under this section the Magistrate is bound to ascertain and define the land in dispute and he has no jurisdiction to pass an order in respect of lands which were not covered by the initiatory proceeding —Atritesuari v Darpa Narain 7 C W N 558 Sukhbir v Ram Khelawan 4 P L T 3 24 Cr L J 309 Uttam Singh v Jullan Rai 3 Pat 88 (295) 2 Cr L J 2 0

A Magistrate would also be exceeding his jurisdiction if his final order covers plots of land not included in the preliminary order passed under sub section (1)—Chattar Singh v Cook 11 C W N xliii

432 Alteration of proceedings —If a Magistrate after having initiated proceedings under section 145 afterwards finds that the dispute is as regards a right of way over a land rather than regarding the possession of the land he can alter the proceedings under section 145 into proceedings under sec 147 and pass an order under the latter section—In re Amarsang 48 Bom 512 (515) 6 Bom L R 436 Anath Bandhu v Wahid Ali 26 Cr L J 558 (Cal)

433 Persons bound by the order —Judicial proceedings cannot bind a person who is not a party to them—Jadoki Nath v Q E 3 C W N 3 9 A final order under section 145 is not binding on a party on whom no preliminary order was served and who was not given an opportunity to prove his possession over the subject of the dispute—Muqimunnissa v Ahmedunnissa 7 O W N 704 6 Cr L J 1581 An order under this section is binding only on the actual parties to the proceedings Where an order was made between A on the one side and B and his three tenants on the other the subsequent tenants of B would not be bound by such order and would not be punished for disobeying such order—In re Gopal Burnawar 3 B L R A C 13 A person who is not a party either to the proceedings or to an order under this section is certainly entitled to challenge the propriety of it He may even defy it though only by lawful act and is clearly entitled to show that the existing possession is not of the same nature as it was determined to be in the proceedings—Mahesh v K E 11 O L J 743 26 Cr L J 398 A I R 1925 Oudh 251

But in In re Nathubhai 11 Bom I R 277 it has been held that the parties whom the Magistrate has to deal with are not merely the actual parties to but all persons who may be concerned in the dispute the object being to prevent a breach of the peace Therefore it is not only the actual parties but all parties who may have notice of the proceedings that are bound by the order

An order under this section binds not only the actual parties but their representatives also It is binding on a purchaser from the person against whom it was made and with knowledge of such order—Goluck v Kali Charan 13 Cal 175 It is binding upon all persons who may claim the property through the parties to the proceedings under a title derived subsequent to the order—Jogendra v Brojendra 23 Cal 731

But a person who was merely examined as a witness in the proceeding is not a party bound by an order under this section—Q E v Kuppayyar 18 Mad 51

434 Duration of the order —An order of the Magistrate is meant to be a temporary order and is to be in operation until one or other of the parties applies for and obtains a determination of his rights in a Civil Court—Amritesuari v Darpa Narain 7 C W N 558 Kunja Behari v Khetra Pal 29 Cal 208 It is intended to control only the period up to the time when the Civil Court takes seisin of the matter and passes such order as may be necessary for the protection of the property—Barkatunnissa v Abdul Aziz 22 All 214 This section does not empower a Magistrate to make an order permanently settling the difference of the parties—Mad High Court Pro 23 6 1883

435 Sub-section (7)—Continuation of proceedings —Before the amendment of 1923 this sub section stood as follows —

"Proceedings under this section shall not abate by reason only of the death of any of the parties thereto

The sub section has now been expanded The Magistrate has been authorised on the death of a party, to make his legal representative a party to the proceedings and if necessary to decide who such legal representative is" —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

This clause supersedes the decision in Beeliu v Debkumari 21 Cal 404 where it was held that a son could not be made a party in place of his deceased father

The words "may cause" show that the Magistrate is not bound to continue the proceedings on the death of a party The provision in clause (7) is intended to keep alive the jurisdiction of the Court where the danger to the peace still exists inspite of the death of any party to the proceedings If, however, the dispute no longer exists and the danger has disappeared, the Magistrate has jurisdiction to discontinue the proceedings —Kamalammal v Vavu Rowther, 4 L W 57, 17 Cr L J 138

Death of petitioner before High Court —The death of the petitioner (who applied for revision of an order of a District Magistrate) during the pendency of the application for revision in the High Court, causes the application to abate This sub section only applies to proceedings before a Magistrate—Krishen Deo v Hari Singh, 1919 P R 23 20 Cr L J 720, Subbaraju v Ramachandra, 4 L W 440, 17 Cr L J 389

Sub-section (8) —"The Magistrate has been empowered to pass necessary orders for the custody or sale of the property in dispute which is subject to speedy and natural decay"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) Thus, if the subject matter of dispute is a crop growing on the land, the Magistrate can cause the crop to be sold by auction and the price placed in deposit, as was done in Mir Singh v Makkhan, 45 All 404

436 Sub-section (9) —"We have added this sub section on the lines of section 244 (2)"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922) Even prior to this amendment there has been a large number of decisions empowering the Magistrate to issue summons to witnesses, which are given below

Summons to witnesses —If the parties cannot procure the attendance of witnesses, it is the Magistrate s duty to issue summonses for their attendance, even though the Code contains no provisions for the issue of summonses in this case—Shamasunkur v Anundmoyee, 18 W R 64, Ram Chandra v Monohur, 21 Cal 29 When an application for the issue of summonses to witnesses is made at a proper time, the Magistrate should not arbitrarily refuse his assistance merely on the ground that the number of witnesses mentioned is large—Hurendra v Bhowani, 11 Cal 762, or on the ground that the application for the issue of summonses is vexatious—Gajuddi v Asnuddi, 18 C W N 94, 15 Cr L J. 79 This section enjoins on the Magistrate to receive the evidence produced by the parties and to take such further evidence as he thinks necessary But this does not mean that the parties shall produce their own evidence, nor does it absolve the Magistrate from the duty of assisting the parties in procuring the attendance of material witnesses, when it is shewn that their attendance cannot be enforced without such assistance—Surya Kanta v Hem Chandra, 30 Cal 508 But it is not obligatory on a Magistrate to assist the parties in producing their witnesses, and they cannot claim as a matter of right that processes should be issued by the Court to enable them to bring forward their evidence—Tarapada v Nurul Haq, 32 Cal 1093, Harendra v Girish Chandra, 38 Cal 24, 11 Cr L J 530, Arjun v Juggar Nath, 3 P. L T 433, 23 Cr L J. 275 A Magistrate is not bound to exhaust the processes of the Court in order to enforce the attendance of witnesses that do not appear or cannot be found—Haripada v Sanyasi 17 C W N 144 14 Cr L J 40 Cf the words may if he thinks fit in the sub section

437 Sub-section (10)—Power to proceed under Sec 107 — In Balajit v Bhoju 45 Cal 117 it has been held that the word shall' in sub section (1) (i e shall make an order in writing etc) is mandatory and therefore where there is a bona fide dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace the Magistrate is bound to proceed under this section and he has no discretion to act under section 107 It was proposed by the Amending Bill of 1914 to substitute the word may for shall so as to give the Magistrate a discretion to proceed either under Section 107 or under Section 145 The Select Committee of 1916 instead of making the verbal alteration added the present sub sect on

There may be cases in which it would be necessary to bind parties over under section 107 in order to prevent a breach of the peace even though proceedings under section 145 had been taken An order under section 145 is no bar to the passing of an order under section 107—In re Muthia 36 Mad 315 14 Cr L J 559 K F v Bardi 24 O C 21 22 Cr L J 384

438 Effect of prior decree on a proceeding under this section —Where there is a decree of a Civil Court for possession in respect of the disputed land the duty of a Criminal Court proceeding under this section is to find which party held such Civil Court decree and then to maintain that party in possession—Sinss v Johurry 5 C W N 563 Atul Haray v Uma Cheran 20 C W N 796 17 Cr L J 18. Md Husain v Pachayappa 42 M L J 147 Ram Krishna v Emp 3 P L T 335 23 Cr L J 321 Keder Nath v Jalesuar 4 P L T 248 Gobind Chunder v Abdul 6 Cal 835 Kunja Behari v Khetra Pal 29 Cal 208 It is the duty of the Magistrate to maintain any order which has been passed by the Civil Court and therefore to take proceedings which must necessarily have the effect of modifying or cancelling such order or of interfering with the rights of parties determined by a Civil Court is to assume a jurisdiction that the law does not contemplate—26 Cal 625 In re Pandurang 24 Bom 527 Baldeo v Raj Ballam 2 A L J 274 Brahmanath v Sundarnath 17 A L J 434 20 Cr L J 410 Behari Gir v Bhubanesuari 1 P L T 9 5 P L J 104 21 Cr L J 700 Abhoy Mandal v Basu Rai 27 C W N 267, 37 C L J 256 Durganand v Hiranand 25 Cr L J 88 (Pat)

Thus where a Nazir acting under the authority of the Civil Court puts the auction purchaser in possession of a haut as appurtenant to a certain mouza sold in execution of a decree, the Magistrate is not competent to direct the judgment debtor, who raises the plea that the property is debuttor, to be retained in possession until ousted by a Civil Court but should see that the possession as given by the Nazir is maintained leaving it to the judgment debtor to substantiate his claim as shebait in a Civil

Where a dispute between the parties had been terminated by an order under the provisions of secs 40 and 41 of the Bengal Survey Act and there had also been an entry in the Record of Rights in accordance with that order the Magistrate should, in determining the question of possession between the parties in a proceeding under this section presume that the possession of the land was with the person who had title as determined by the decision under the Survey Act and which title was further to be presumed from the entry in the Record of Rights—Prafulla v Hodding 21 C W N 1059 26 C L J 39 18 Cr L J 988 An order under sec 41 of the Bengal Survey Act has the same effect as the decree of a Civil Court and must be maintained by a Magistrate acting under this section—Srinath v Prasat Chandra 18 Cr L J 301 (Cal) A summary decision under the Land Registration Act is entitled to the same respect as a Civil Court decree on the question of possession in a proceeding under this section—Kulbans v Ramsidh 1 P L T 501 21 Cr L J 735

Babu Lal v Manager Bettia Estate 1 P L T 588 21 Cr L J 785 But if in the land registration proceedings there was no adjudication of possession by the Revenue Courts and they refused to register the name of a particular party the Magistrate in a proceeding under this section is bound to determine as to which of the parties is in actual and physical possession of the property in dispute—Babu Lal v Manager Bettia Estate 1 P L T 588

If a Magistrate fails to decide the effect of a Civil Court decree between the parties on the question of possession he fails to decide an important issue and thereby fails to exercise jurisdiction—Gopal Chandra v Uma Charan 11 Cr L J 184 (Cal)

Again the Magistrate in giving effect to a decree of the Civil Court is not entitled to go behind it or to put his own interpretation or construction upon it—In re Raja Leelanund 1 C L R 273 Abhoy Mondal v Basu Rai 27 C W N 267 Thus where in execution of a Civil Court decree in a suit in which only one of the members of a Mitakshara family was a party the whole of the family property was delivered over to the purchaser it was not competent to a Magistrate acting under this section to declare that the purchaser should be put into possession of a fractional share and that the shares of those persons who were not made parties to the suit ought not to have been included in the decree—Madholal v Jaglal 6 C W N 841

But every previous decree of a Civil Court or order of a Criminal Court is not necessarily conclusive the evidentiary value to be attached to such decree or order must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case—Kuloda Kinkar v Danish 33 Cal 33 No hard and fast rule can be laid down to the effect that a Magistrate in a proceeding under this section must give effect to a prior decision or order of a Civil or Criminal Court The Magistrate is not bound to maintain the decision blindly If he finds that after the passing of the decree the possession of the party to whom possession was delivered by the Civil Court has been disturbed or that the property has changed hands he has jurisdiction to pass orders irrespective of the Civil Court decree—Parmesuar v Kailaspati 1 P L J 336 17 Cr L J 369 Bhulan v Kumari 5 P L T 69 25 Cr L J 951 Kedar Nath v Jaleswar, 4 P L T 248 24 Cr L J 467, Ram Baran v Sagina 4 P L T 333 24 Cr L J 939 So also it is open to a Magistrate to go behind the order passed in favour of a party under the Survey and Settlement Act and the Bengal Tenancy Act It is also open to the Magistrate to hold that on the evidence the presumption arising from an entry in the Record of Rights has been rebutted—Syed Sadek Raza v Sachindra 37 C L J 128 24 Cr L J 569

439 In order that the decree of the Civil Court may be binding on the Magistrate three things are necessary namely —

(1) First the decree must be recent —It is the duty of the Magistrate to maintain the rights of the parties when such rights have been declared by a competent Court within a time not remote from that of his taking proceedings under this section—Doulat v Rameshwari 26 Cal 625, Prata

v Sundarbai s 24 Cr L J 270 3 P L T 608 Parameshwar v Kailash pati 1 P L J 336 Kedarnath v Jaleswar 4 P L T 248 Rambaran v Sagina 4 P L T 333 Thus it is the duty of the Magistrate to have found possession in accordance with the decree of the Civil Court when a party had been put into possession by that Court eight days prior to the institution of proceedings under this section—Gulraj v Sheikh Bhatoo 32 Cal 796 or within three months or so—Kunja Behari v Khetra Lal 29 Cal 208 6 C W N 38 Durganand v Hiranand 25 Cr L J 88 (Pat)

But if the decree of the Civil Court is not recent but several years old it would be unsafe to act on that documentary evidence alone—Q v Boohee Khan 5 W R 79 A decree which is 23 years old is not conclusive as to the question of possession because it is not absolutely impossible that the party who obtained the decree 23 years ago should have been subsequently dispossessed—Louse i v Kali Charan 8 C W N 719 So also with the case of a decree 17 years old—Kuloda Kinkar v Danesh 33 Cal 33 Even a decree four years old is not sufficiently conclusive and the Magistrate in disregarding that decree would not be acting without jurisdiction—Matangi Charan v Lalkhan 11 C W N ccx

(2) Secondly the decree must have been passed between the same parties A decree passed ex parte under which only symbolical possession was delivered or one which was not inter partes is not binding on a criminal court in proceedings under this section—Promoda v Khetra 25 Cr L J 1104 (Cal) Atul v Srinath 23 C W N 982 20 Cr L J 840

(3) Thirdly the decree or order of the Court must give possession —Possession must have been given to one of the parties either by the decree itself or by an order of the Court in execution of the decree (e g to an auction purchaser)

Where the Civil Court deals only with the question of proprietorship of land the decree of such Court will not bar a Magistrate from deciding the question of possession under this section—Baldeo v Raj Ballam 2 A L J 274 2 Cr L J 236 So also where the suit in which the decree was passed was merely one for damages in which the determination of title was incidentally necessary but the suit was neither for possession nor for declaration of title the decree in such suit was not conclusive as to possession and the Magistrate was competent to take proceedings under this section see Subbarama v Mariya 1914 M W N 798 1 L W 493 15 Cr L J 559 So also where the question of possession was raised by the parties but was neither fought out between them nor decided by the Court the decree would not bar a proceeding under this section—Annasuamy v Muthu Kumara 15 Cr L J 663 (Mad)

There must be actual delivery of possession under the decree or order of the Civil Court Where merely the sale was confirmed and the sale certificate issued but there was no delivery of possession actual or symbolical to the petitioners their rights were not protected from proceedings under this section—Ragava v Krishnasami 31 Mad 416 Symbolical possession given to the purchaser would raise the presumption that the purchaser had possession although it may be that slight evidence would suffice to rebut that presumption—Raja Babu v Muddun Mohan, 14 Cal 169

Where an order (of a Criminal Court) under section 522 of this Code was passed directing restoration of immoveable property but possession as a fact was never delivered to the petitioners such infructuous order would not bar the jurisdiction of the Magistrate in taking proceedings under this section in respect of the same property—Probhat v Prosanna, 18 C W N 1088 15 Cr L J 700

Effect of previous decree on third party —Where in a proceeding under this section it appeared that the first party had previously brought a suit for rent against some persons (tenants) not parties to the proceeding and purchased the disputed properties at a sale held in execution of an ex parte decree obtained therein and had been put in possession without the knowledge of the second party and the Magistrate found that the rent suit brought by the landlord against the tenants in possession was not a bona fide one and declared the second party to be in possession of the disputed land it was held that under the circumstances of the case the order of the Magistrate was not erroneous and was not liable to be set aside A previous decree of the Civil Court relating to the proceedings in dispute may throw light upon the evidence on the matter but the evidentiary value to be attached to such a piece of evidence must depend upon the particular circumstances of the individual case Decrees of Courts so far as third parties are concerned may have different value in different cases Where for instance there has been a real contest between the parties to a suit and upon an adjudication regarding title or possession a party has been awarded a decree and has been put in possession in execution of such a decree it would be conclusive upon any person even though he was not a party to the decree But cases of money decrees followed by sale of property would stand on a different footing In these cases the sale in execution only passes the right title and interest of the judgment debtor consequently there is no adjudication regarding title to property and therefore it is not conclusive upon a third person as regards possession or title—Atul v Srinath 23 C W N 981 (985) 30 C L J 123 20 Cr L J 840

In estimating the value of delivery of possession against third parties it is also material to see what is the true nature of the possession said to have been delivered—Atul v Srinath 23 C W N 981 (985)

440 Effect of previous decision of Criminal Court as to possession —In proceedings under section 145 the Magistrates have always upheld the possession given by Civil Courts. But possession given by Criminal Courts cannot be treated in the same manner as possession given by the Civil Courts is treated in cases under this section—Kedar v Lalit 2 C L J 147 A Magistrate does not act without jurisdiction merely because he does not accept the decision in a previous case of rioting as to possession—Bhulan v Kumari 5 P L T 69 25 Cr L J 951 A judgment of a Criminal Court in which a person was acquitted and in which it was incidentally found that he was in possession can only be evidence of the fact that there was such a case and that it ended in such acquittal but the finding on the question of possession which is a ground of such acquittal can hardly be any evidence in subsequent proceedings between the parties with regard to the property in dispute—Shashimukhi v Sarat Chandra 31 C W N 310 28 Cr L J 329 (331)

But when proceedings had once been taken under section 145 in which the Magistrate had decided the second party to be in possession of the property until the decision of a Civil Court was obtained but the parties instead of going to the Civil Court continued to dispute among themselves whereupon fresh proceedings were taken under section 145 held that the Magistrate in deciding the second case was concluded by the previous decision of the Criminal Court as to possession and was not entitled to take any action contrary to that decision unless he found that there had been a change of possession since the decision of the first case—Jagat Singh v Sunder Singh 27 P L R 630 27 Cr L J 815

441 Suit for damages for improper proceedings —Where proceedings are initiated under this section by a party who is eventually unsuccessful it is not open to the successful party to sue for damages The damages in such a case are remote and are sufficiently compensated by any order for costs that might be made in the proceedings—Ram Das v Md Faqir 20 A L J 205 A I R 1922 All 143

442 Effect of order under this section on a subsequent civil suit —An order under this section does not decide any question of title Therefore where a case under section 145 was compromised by the parties and the Magistrate passed an order in terms of that compromise it was held that the order simply settled the question of possession but did not determine the question of title and the parties were not therefore precluded by the order from having recourse to the Civil Court for the determination of that question—Gopi Das v Madho Lal 45 All 162 20 A L J 932

Limitation for subsequent civil suit —See Art 47 of the Indian Limitation Act

443 Striking off proceedings —Where proceedings under this section have once been started the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to strike them off He must pass an order either under sub section (5) or (6) of sec 145 or under sec 146—Trilochan v Jogeswar 20 Cr L J 464 (Pat) Sastee v Nathuni 6 P L T 258 26 Cr L J 105

444 Fresh proceedings —When an order under clause (6) has been passed the proceedings terminate and a Magistrate cannot institute fresh proceedings so long as such order is in force—Sadhu v Mahammad Ali 15 C W N 568 12 Cr L J 32 When a final order has been passed and one of the parties has been declared to be in possession the order of the Magistrate is binding on all the parties and the unsuccessful party cannot be allowed to disturb the possession of the other party without having recourse to a civil suit It is not proper for a Magistrate to initiate fresh proceedings at his instance—Aran Sardar v Hara Sundar

27 C W N 171 24 Cr L J 97 But where the parties compromised and filed a petition of compromise and according to the terms thereof the Magistrate ordered the land to be in the possession of both sides as stated in the petition of compromise such an order was one falling under clause (5) showing that no dispute existed and not an order under clause (6) and the Magistrate could therefore institute fresh proceedings—Sadhu v Mahammad Ali 15 C W N 568 12 Cr L J 32

When a party has been declared to be in possession as a result of proceedings under section 145 fresh proceedings under the same section cannot be started against him unless it can be shown that the previous order has been duly vacated or possession has been amicably surrendered But subsequent proceeding can be started and fresh order made in respect of properties other than the one comprised in the first order—Bani Lal v Harakh Singh 1 P L T 557 21 Cr L J 753

During pendency of High Court rule —During the pendency of a rule issued upon the District Magistrate to show cause why his order under section 145 should not be set aside it is irregular and highly improper for a Subordinate Magistrate to institute fresh proceedings as the proceedings in the Lower Court with reference to the matter in dispute must be considered to have been stayed When a rule is issued by the High Court on the District Magistrate staying further proceedings all Subordinate Magistrates are bound by it and would not be justified in instituting fresh proceedings during the pendency of the rule—Pran Ballabh v Rash Behari 4 C L J 418 4 Cr L J 397

were not liable to revision by any Court whether by the High Court or by the Sessions Judge or by the District Magistrate so that the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction under section 439 of this Code was not competent to revise an order passed under this Chapter—Laldhari v Sukdeo 27 Cal 89 In re Pandurang 25 Bom 179 Kamal Kutty v Udayvarma 36 Mad 275 Pulani v Rathna 26 M L J 208 Krishnappa v Alamelu 5 L W 165 Vaidyanatha v Sippalu 1914 M W N 705 Maharaj Tewari v Har Charan 26 All 144 Jhingai v Ram Partap 31 All 150 Syeda v Lal Singh 36 All 233 Babban v Baldeo 4 A L J 91 Nathu Ram v Emp 15 A L J 270 Har Hari v Natha Lal 18 A L J 1140 Ibadulla v Rahatulla 18 O C 69 16 Cr L J 541 Nga Hpay v Nga Aung U B R (1917) 35 Balmukund v Crown 1 S L R 50 Farid v Piru 8 S L R 207 Murat Singh v Patka 17 C P L R 133

In order to exercise its revisional power in respect of orders passed under this Chapter the High Court had to invoke the aid of sec 15 of the Charter Act—Murballabh v Luchmeswar 26 Cal 188 Laldhari v Sukdeo 27 Cal 892 Sukhlal v Tarachand 33 Cal 68 Sri Mohan v Narasingh 27 Cal 259 Jagomohan v Ram Kumar 28 Cal 416 In re Nathu Lal 24 All 315 or sec 107 of the Government of India Act—Nathu Ram v Emp 15A L J 270 Parameshwari v Kailashpati 1 P L J 336 Thylaee v Srirangaraya 43 M L J 624 Motiram v Brijan 47 Cal 438 Ali Md v Piggott 48 Cal 522 But this power could be exercised only by the Chartered High Courts and not by the non chartered High Courts e g the Chief Courts and the Judicial Commissioners Courts

And the only cases in which the High Court could exercise its powers of revision were those in which the proceedings though purporting to be proceedings under this Chapter were not really so as for instance where there was an initial want of jurisdiction by reason of there being no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace or by reason of the Magistrate not being a first class Magistrate or where the Magistrate exceeded his jurisdiction by exercising powers not conferred by this section—In re Pandurang 24 Bom 527 Nga Shit v Nga Ya U B R (1917) 33 19 Cr L J 389 Nga Hpay v Nga Aung 19 Cr L J 381 In re Pandurang 25 Bom 179 Mahadeo v Basu 25 All 537 Thylaee v Srirangaraya 43 M L J 624 Wajid Ali v Abdul 5 O C 1 Udai Bhan v Ram Saruph 19 O C 136 18 Cr L J 100 And unless there was want of jurisdiction on the part of the Magistrate the High Court could not exercise its power of revision even though the decision of the Magistrate was wrong—Chintamani v Jagannath 19 C W N 123 (124) Iklas v Raghurai 12 O C 400 11 Cr L J 69

Now by the Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 sub section (3) of section 435 has been omitted and the effect of this amendment is to confer on the High Court the power of revision under this Code in respect of orders under this Chapter These orders can now be revised by the High Court not only on the question of jurisdiction but also on the question of illegality—Chhaka ri v Isher Singh 6 P L T 709 27 Cr L J 142 A I R 1926 Pat 196

But though the High Court is invested with powers of revision still orders under this section should not be lightly disturbed it is only in very exceptional cases that the High Court will interfere—In re Lingaraja 17 Cr L J 143 (Mad) Hardeo v Ram Charitar 17 Cr L J 286 (Pat). Orders passed by a competent Magistrate are not to be lightly interfered with by the High Court first because the object of such orders is to preserve peace and secondly because the aggrieved party has his remedy by a civil suit—Krishnappier v Alamelu 5 L W 165 18 Cr L J 23 Proceedings under this chapter are of a special nature and are such that the Magistrates may be allowed greater liberty in carrying out those provisions than they are allowed in trying ordinary crime The provisions of this chapter are concerned with disputes relating to immovable property which are likely to cause a breach of the peace and give Magistrates power to deal with matters of quasi civil nature because upon the Magistracy and the police is thrown the burden of maintaining the public peace In this view it is undesirable that such orders should be interfered with in revision unless they are made without jurisdiction and are obviously unreasonable or unjust—Sudalaimuthu v Gnan 16 Cr L J 767 (Mad) Where a Magistrate duly empowered to act under this Chapter takes proper proceedings and passes an order the High Court has no power to revise the proceedings either under this Code or under section 15 of the Charter Act—Jhingai v Ram Pratap 31 All 150 or under section 107 of the Government of India Act—Matukdhari v Jaisari 39 All 61? 15 A L J 576 Sundar Nath v Emp, 40 All 364 Sakhawat v Emp 17 A L J 3 1 41 All 302 Thus the High Court as a Court of Revision cannot interfere with the decision of a trial Court on the factum of possession so long as there is evidence in support of the finding—Abdul Satar v Udha Lal 8 Lah L J 47 -7 P L R 10? 27 Cr L J 471 Where the evidence had been fully discussed by the Trial Court any attempt on the part of the High Court to review the evidence and interfere with the decision of the Magistrate would be to convert an application for revision into an appeal—Abdul Satar v Udha Lal (supra)

The District Magistrate cannot himself set aside the decision of the lower Court passed under section 145 he must refer the case to the High Court under section 438—Eserudli v Otarulli ? Cr L J 1166 A I R 1925 Cal 1-34 Hiralal v Emp 11 O L J 50 -5 Cr L J 440 A I R 1924 Oudh 331

448 Grounds of interference —The High Court has the power to interfere where in a proceeding under this section necessary parties were left out or wrong persons were made parties—Laldhari v Sukdeo 27 Cal 892 or where the Magistrate refused to receive the evidence tendered to him—Tirumalraja v Lodd Gobind Doss 9 Mad 561 Jhengar v Baijnath 11 A L J 586 Radha Koer v Muneswar 34 Cal 840 Parvati v Ganapati 19 Cr L J 5 9 (Pat) or where the Magistrate's finding of fact as regards possession was perverse and contrary to a mass of unrebutted evidence—Emp v Sarju Prasad ? or where no order in writing such as is required by sub section (1) was recorded by the Magistrate—Hakam v Ralia Ram 4 Lah 66 Kahu v Harnaman 1917 P W R 28 Md Haskam v Md Jhani 20 Cr L J 124 Bihari v Chajju 1907 A W N 49 Budhan v Ram Rakha 1915 P L R 169 16 Cr L J 628 or where the Magistrate adopted none of the procedure required under this section and passed an order without any reference thereto—Dewan Chand v Emp 1899 P R 2 Dhani Ram v Bhola Nath 1902 P R 23 Abdulla v Gunda 1907 P R 7 Budhan v Ram Rakha 1915 P L R 169 16 Cr L J 628 Tara Chand v Behari 1916 P R 27 18 Cr L J 36 or where the order of the Magistrate was far too wide of the mark and opposed to law and justice—Sri Ram v Fou dar 1912 P L R 193 13 Cr L J 719 or where the Magistrate refused to issue process for the attendance of material witnesses—Surya Kanta v Hem Chunder 30 Cal 508 Madhab Chandra v Martin 30 Cal 508 (Note) or where no opportunity was given by the Magistrate to the applicant to produce his evidence—2 C L J 286n or where the Magistrate dis carded the evidence altogether and based his decision merely upon his local inquiry—Lal Behari v Bejoy Sankar 10 C W N 181 or where the proceedings were initiated by the Magistrate on a vague Police report—Suryakanta v Jagadindra 11 C W N 198 or where the Magistrate declared possession with a party who had long been out of possession—Shankar v Bhayaji 20 Cr L J 445 (Nag) or where the Magistrate passed an order in respect of a property which was not in dispute and declared the property to be in the possession of a person who was not a party to the proceedings—Radhamohan v Naimuddi 19 Cr L J 653 (Cal)

449 What the High Court can do in revision —The High Court in the exercise of its power of revision is competent to consider the whole evidence—Reid v Richardson 14 Cal 361 and to find out whether there was evidence on which the Magistrate could come to the con clusion which he arrived at—Raja Babu v Muddun Mohun 14 Cal 169 and can pass the proper order which the Lower Court ought to have made Thus where it is difficult to come to a conclusion as to the fact of posses sion the wise and proper course is to pass an order of attachment under section 146 and if in such a case the Magistrate has passed an order under section 145 the High Court in revision can alter the order under section 145 into one under section 146 of the Code—Reid v Richardson 14 Cal 361 Katras Jherria Coal Co v Sibkristo 22 Cal 297 Satyendra v Krishnodhone 20 C W N 1014 18 Cr L J 80 The High Court in revision can alter an order of the Magistrate under section 145 into an order under section 147—In re Amarsang 48 Bom 512 (515) The High Court has inherent power to give directions as to the disposal of pro perty which was attached and has been dealt with by a subordinate Magis trate in the course of proceedings instituted without jurisdiction under this section—Ali Muhammad v Piggott 48 Cal 522 (F B) 32 C L J 270 22 Cr L J 213

Costs in revision :—See note 478 under sec 148

146 (1) If the Magistrate decides that none of the parties was then in such possession, or is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was then in such possession of the subject of dispute, he may attach it until a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties thereto, or the person entitled to possession thereof

Power to attach subject of dispute

Provided that the District Magistrate or the Magistrate who has attached the subject of dispute may withdraw the attachment at any time if he is satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace in regard to the subject of dispute

(2) When the Magistrate attaches the subject of dispute, he may, if he thinks fit, and if no receiver of the property, the subject matter in dispute, has been appointed by any Civil Court, appoint a receiver thereof, who, subject to the control of the Magistrate, shall have all the powers of a receiver appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure

Provided that in the event of a receiver of the property, the subject matter in dispute, being subsequently appointed by any Civil Court, possession shall be made over to him by the receiver appointed by the Magistrate, who shall thereupon be discharged

Change —The two provisos and the italicised words in sub section (2) have been added by sec 29 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) For reasons see below

450 Conditions precedent —In order to give jurisdiction for an order under section 146 it is necessary that there should be jurisdiction over the proceedings under section 145 which again presuppose a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace If there was no dispute concerning any land there would be no jurisdiction of a Magistrate to proceed under sections 145 and 146—Ballam v Lal Babu 19 Cr L J, 105

under this section without following the procedure prescribed by sec 145 and without making an order in writing and that there was nothing to show that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace existed the attachment was set aside by the High Court—[illegible] v Emp [illegible] A L J 149

The legality of an order under sec 146 depends upon its having been preceded by legal proceedings under sec 145 and where the whole proceedings under section 145 are illegal (e g by reason of the Magistrate's failure to comply with the requirements of clause 4 of sec 145) an order made in the case under section 146 cannot stand on a better footing—Subbarama v Mariya Pillai 1 L W 493 15 Cr L J 559

451 Magistrate's duty to make inquiry and take evidence — It is the duty of the Magistrate before taking proceedings under this section to take evidence and make inquiry (see clause 4 of section 145) in order to ascertain if possible who was in possession—Parsuram v Shivajatan 3 P L T 434 23 Cr L J 277 In re Ram Soondaree 1 C L R 86 An order passed under this section without examining any witnesses although a number of them were present in Court is invalid —Siba Nath v Ramkishore 35 C L J 291, 23 Cr L J 688 Unless and until a Magistrate has made the inquiry contemplated by section 145 that is to say unless he has received and considered the evidence produced by the parties the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to proceed under section 146—Inayatulla v Amanat 1 O L J 217 15 Cr L J 470 Khedan v Hussaini 7 P L T 15 Ambika v Wazedali 23 C W N 910 When section 146 (1) speaks of the Magistrate being unable to satisfy himself as to which of the parties was in actual possession it contemplates that the Magistrate has considered the evidence fairly and judicially for the purpose of arriving at a decision—Khedan v Hussaini 7 P L T 15 7 Cr L J 323 Where a Magistrate in a proceeding under section 145 made an order under sec 146 on the ground that it was doubtful which of the parties was in actual possession without judicially considering the important documentary evidence of possession placed before him it was held that the order must be set aside and the case re heard by another Magistrate—Ambica v Wazedali 23 C W N 910 20 Cr L J 342

Where the Magistrate did not make the slightest attempt to satisfy himself as to the factum of possession and attached the land without taking any evidence and making any local inquiry—Sheo Balak v Bhagwat 40 Cal 105 16 C W N 1057 or where the order of attachment was passed without examining the witnesses cited by the petitioner—Neelamegam v Murugappa 2 Weir 110 or where the Magistrate discarded and rejected practically every piece of evidence that might have led to a correct finding as to possession—Prafulla v Hodding 21 C W N 1059 26 C L J 39 or where the Magistrate omitted to receive the evidence produced by a party and passed his order merely on a consideration of the written statements of the parties—Kolha v Muteswar 34 Cal 840 his order was without jurisdiction So also where in a proceeding under sec 145 the parties appeared on the day of hearing but did not file any written statement nor produced any evidence and the Magistrate without granting time to the parties for the production of evidence or for filing written statements found it impossible to come to a conclusion as to the fact of possession and passed an order under this section the order was made without jurisdiction and therefore invalid—Sk Mansar Ali v Mati

ulla 12 C W N 896 But where the parties failed to adduce evidence even though sufficient time was allowed to them to do so the Magistrate could proceed under this section—Ronendra v Kishori Lal 14 C W N 80 11 Cr L J 26

But it is not incumbent on the Magistrate to make a local investigation as contemplated by section 148 A Magistrate who attaches the property without such an investigation does not commit an error in procedure—Upendra v Prasanna 20 Cr L J 17 (Cal)

Effect of prior decree of Civil Court —If the matter which is in dispute under section 147 has already been adjudicated upon by a Civil Court the Magistrate will have no jurisdiction to enquire into a claim which is entirely contrary to that Court s decree—In re Intifa Shidya 29 Bom L R 715 Where the petitioner had been put into possession of certain lands in execution of a decree obtained by him in a Civil Court establishing his right to them the Magistrate was not competent to attach the lands under section 146 It was his duty to have found possession in accordance with the decree—Gulrai v Sk Bhaloo 37 Cal 796 Even though the petitioner has not obtained possession of the property in accordance with the Civil Court decree still when the Civil Court has determined the rights of the parties and has also determined the possession so far as it was in its power to do so it is not competent for the Magistrate to say that he is unable to determine the question of possession and to attach the property under section 146 The order of attachment is unjustifiable—Parabhans v Sheo Kishan 48 All 397 24 A L J 399 27 Cr L J 559 See Note 438 under section 145

452 Inability to decide the fact of possession —The doubt upon which a Magistrate can act under this section must be the result of his inability to determine the question of possession upon the evidence offered by both parties and not a doubt in his mind entertained without receiving evidence and without inquiry—In re Raja Leelanund 1 C L R 273 Khedan v Hissaini 2 P L T 15 Sheobalak v Bhagwat 40 Cal 105 Ambica v Wazedali 13 C W N 910 The Magistrate would not be justified in saying that it was not possible to ascertain who was in possession and in attaching the property, merely because the parties did not appear He ought to have made some inquiry into the question of possession—Parasuram v Shibjatan 3 P L T 434 In order to show the Magistrate s inability to decide the question of possession he ought to discuss the evidence in the case and give reasons for his inability—Khedan v Hussaini 2 P L T 15 22 Cr L J 323 Where the order under this section did not show that it was not possible on the evidence to decide as to the fact of possession but would rather seem to indicate that the Magistrate could not or would not decide whether the witnesses on either side were to be believed the order was set aside This section is not meant to relieve the Magistrate from the duty of deciding the case on the merits but allows an order of attachment to made only when it is not possible to decide which party is in pos —Neelamegan v Murugappa - Weir 110 A Magistrate sho

extremely reluctant to attach the property in dispute In cases where the land is jungle or waste it is quite possible that the Magistrate may be unable to satisfy himself as to the possession of the parties But where the land is admittedly subject to cultivation year by year and season by season the Magistrate will be only admitting his own weakness if he states that he cannot come to a decision It is his duty to collect information and sift it and decide the fact of possession—Ram Bahal v Rang Bahadur 5 P L T 589 25 Cr L J 1295 A I R 1924 Pat 804 The Magistrate ought to make a reasonable effort to decide the question as to possession and ought not to attach the property so long as it is possible for him to decide which of the contesting parties was really in possession of the property and if he can decide that question in favour of one of the parties he should give effect to that decision by passing an order under section 145 (6)—Wazul v Shobrati 4 P L T 441 24 Cr L J 754

Nature of possession —In a dispute between the wife of a lunatic and the manager of his estate as to the possession of certain property there was no doubt that the wife was in actual possession of the property but the only doubt existed as to the nature of the possession that is whether her possession was on her own behalf or on behalf of her lunatic husband it was held that such a doubt as to the nature of the possession would not justify a Magistrate in taking action under this section—In re Juggo deshary 3 C. L R 94

Portion of subject of dispute —Where there is a dispute as regards the possession of a fishery extending over several miles in length and the Magistrate is unable to satisfy himself as to the possession of the whole length in question he should ascertain so far as he can the possession of some portion or portions thereof As regards the portion as to which he is able to say that so and so is in possession he should proceed under section 145 and only as to the remainder should he proceed under section 146—Upendra v Prasanna 20 Cr L J 17 (Cal)

Rights of parties —The Magistrate can attach the property only when he decides that none of the parties is in possession or when he cannot satisfy himself as to which of the parties is in possession but he cannot take action under this section merely because he is unable to satisfy himself as to which of the parties is entitled to possession or has a right to the property Inability to decide the right to the property cannot justify an order of attachment of the property—In re Somnath 6 Bom L R 723

453 When attachment can be made —When it is difficult for a Magistrate trying a case under section 145 to come to a conclusion as to the fact of possession the wise and proper course to be adopted is to pass an order of attachment under this section and not to pass any order under section 145—Reid v Richardson 14 Cal 361 To entitle a Magistrate to make an order of attachment he must either decide that none of the parties are in actual possession or that he is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them is in possession—Nathu Ram v

Emperor 15 A L J 270 18 Cr L J 557 This section was intended to apply to a case in which on the evidence before him a Magistrate could not find possession with either of the parties—Jayanti v Middleton 27 Cal 785

Where the Magistrate finds neither the first party nor the second party in possession but finds that actual possession is with a stranger who does not claim a right to be in possession the Magistrate should proceed to attach the property—Bhagjogin v Emp 20 Cr L J 215 (Cal)

When both parties are in possession of the disputed property no order under this section can be made—Md Koolayappa v Shaik Abdul Khadir 27 M L J 169 15 Cr L J 572 Where the Magistrate found that both parties were at the time of the order collecting rents from the raiyats this amounted to a finding that both parties were in possession and consequently the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to order attachment under this section—Rajendra v Mahomed Arzumand 9 C W N 887

454 Order of attachment —An order under this section can not be made in the absence of the parties or ex parte the proper course is to pass the order in the presence of both parties—Luchmee v Bhusi, 19 Cr L J 225 (Pat)

A Magistrate in passing an order under this section must give reasons for making the order—Khedan v Hussaini 2 P L T 15 But no hard and fast rule can be laid down as to when the High Court will interfere with the judgment of a Magistrate under this section on the ground that the order is brief and does not state reasons at length If the High Court is satisfied that the Magistrate has given full consideration to the evidence on the record it will not interfere merely on the ground that the order is a brief one—Kanai v Hyder Ali 37 C L J 107 24 Cr L J 575

Signature of Magistrate —Where in a proceeding under this section the Magistrate initialled the order instead of signing it it was held to be a mere irregularity not affecting the order—In re Deo Sarun 12 C L R 221

455 What property can be attached —In order that an order might be passed under section 145 or 146 the subject matter of the dispute must be clearly determined—Suryakanta v Jagadindra 11 C W N 198

The subject of dispute referred to in secs 145 and 146 must be read as referring to the whole or to any component part or parts of the property in dispute If the component part in respect of which the dispute exists is distinct and separable from the rest the Magistrate is not bound to attach the whole property but may attach that part only If however the subject matter in dispute is indivisible and must be dealt with as a whole it must be dealt with in such a way as to make in regard to it one order under this section—Sadar Ali v Abdul 5 C W N 710 see also Katras Jherria Coal Co v Shibkisto 22 Cal 297 cited in Note 427 under sec 145

Where the dispute is as regards a narrow strip of land at present occupied by a hedge forming the boundary of contiguous lands belonging to the rival disputants the Magistrate should instead of attaching land, come to a decision on the evidence submitted to him with reference to the point of possession—Harry v Brice, 4 W R 26

Temple —To attach a temple does not necessarily mean that the temple must be closed altogether When third parties or the general community are interested in it, it is the duty of the Magistrate, when assuming charge of it in order to preserve the public peace, to make the best arrangements possible to preserve the rights of such third parties or the public, and to have the puja of the temple performed—Sundara v Vallinayaka, 2 Weir 110 In re Muttusami, 2 Weir 112

Crops —The Magistrate has no jurisdiction to attach crops cut and stored, the word 'crops' occurring in sec 145 refers to standing crops alone —Ramzan v Janardhan, 30 Cal 110.

In a dispute between the rival landlords as to the possession of land, the Magistrate is not competent to attach the crops on the land belonging to the tenants—Denomoni v Mazafar Ali, 5 C W N 105

Moveables —The Magistrate ordering attachment of immoveable property can take charge of all moveables found inside the immoveable property, although he cannot attach the moveable property by itself under this section Therefore, where the Magistrate attached a muth and took charge of all the moveables (e g cattle jewellery) that were found by him in the muth at the time of attachment, it was held that the Magistrate acted legally—Bharat Das v Ram Charitar, 1 P L J 356, 18 Cr L J 287, Gokul Nath v Baram Nath, 24 A L J 383 27 Cr L J 429

Cultivation of attached land —A person who cultivates immoveable property which has been attached by a Magistrate under this section commits the offence of criminal trespass, and he is liable to be punished under section 447 I P C —Nagoji v Q E 8 M L J 253 No suit for damages for the loss of profits resulting from the non cultivation of land owing to an attachment under this section lies against any party—Ammani v Sellayi Ammal, 6 Mad 426

456 Powers of Magistrate —A Magistrate attaching a property under this section has the power to make any order regarding the management of the property The High Court will not interfere with such order —Lokenath v Nedu, 29 Cal 382 He can lease the land attached—Greesh Chunder, 17 W R 38 or after cancelling a lease already granted, can grant a fresh lease—Lokenath v Nedu, 29 Cal 382

A Magistrate passing an order under this section is entitled to refuse to hand over the value of the produce of the property to any of the parties to the dispute, but he has no power to treat the profits as derelict and as the property of the Government—Mohar Singh v. Crown, 1911 P L R, 123, 12 Cr L J 403

A Magistrate attaching a property under this section cannot hand over possession of the property to one of the contending parties on failure of the other to institute a suit for possession in the Civil Court—Ram Kumar v Thakur Ojha, 3 P L T 648, 23 Cr L J 562.

457. Possession by Magistrate: —When a Magistrate attaches lands under this section, the possession of the Magistrate must be taken to be a possession on behalf of such of the rival parties as might establish a right to possession by a civil suit—Beni Prasad v Shahzada 32 Cal 856 That is the Magistrate s possession is not adverse to the true owner The legal possession of the property is said to be in the true owner during the period of attachment—Raja of Venkatagiri v Isakapalli 26 Mad 410 Panna Lal v Panchu 49 Cal 544 Brojendra v Sarojini 20 C W N 481 Sarat Chandra v Bibhabati 34 C L J 302

458 Decision of a competent Court —The attachment is to continue until a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties, and therefore it is the duty of a Magistrate to withdraw the attachment and release the property as soon as it is brought to his notice that a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties or of the person entitled to possession—Maharaja of Venkatagiri v Srinivasa 17 M L T 392 16 Cr L J 481 The Magistrate is bound to abide by the subsequent decision of a competent Civil Court and to withdraw the attachment even though the suit in the Civil Court was not inter partes (as for instance where the suit was instituted by a third party and the first party and some members of the second party were not made parties to it)—Asesh Kumar v Kishori Mohan 39 C L J 353 25 Cr L J 937 The fact that an appeal has been preferred against the decision of the Civil Court and is pending is no good reason for the Magistrate to keep the property any longer in attachment—Crown v Abdul Aziz 1917 P W R 46 19 Cr L J 261, Ram Sri v Sri Kishan 46 All 879 22 A L J 803 Maung Tha Zan v Maung Ba Gale 7 Bur L T 293 15 Cr L J 500

It is not necessary that there should be a decree in favour of all of the parties to enable the Magistrate to withdraw an attachment made under this section and if there is an adjudication by a Civil Court in favour of some at least of the parties that is sufficient for the purpose of enabling the Magistrate to walk out of the property—Vithoba v Narasinga 20 M L T 247 4 L W 53 17 Cr L J 331

A Magistrate is not entitled after the decision of the Civil Court, to retain in his hands the profits derived from the attached property during the period of attachment—In re Avadh Narain 1893 A W N 100

The expression competent Court means not only a Civil Court but includes a Survey Court—Ambler v Sami Ahmed 37 Cal 331 11 Cr L J 372

Under the Code of 1882 the words were Civil Court and therefore it was held in Ganga Prasad v Narain 15 All 394 that this section did not authorise a Magistrate to pass an order of attachment in a dispute between parties whose rights would have to be determined by a Revenue Court But this ruling is no longer good law and the Magistrate can release the property attached and hand it over to one of the parties as soon as the Revenue Court has given a decision in favour of that party—Ram Sri v Sri Kishan, 46 All 879 (881) 22 A L J 803 25 Cr L J 1242 Surendra Bikram v K E, 25 O C 242

But an entry in the Record of Rights cannot be regarded as constituting an adjudication by a competent Court of the rights of parties—Kutiswar v Jitendra 30 C W N 646 20 Cr L J 1055

459 Persons bound by order of attachment —Judicial proceedings cannot bind a person who is not a party to them A final order under this section cannot be made against persons who were neither made parties to the proceedings under section 145 nor were regarded as such by the Magistrate (though notices had been issued upon them to file written statements and they entered appearance but did nothing else)—Janoki Nath v Q E 3 C W N 329

460 Proviso—withdrawal of attachment — 'We have introduced a new clause which by an amendment of section 146 will enable a District Magistrate to withdraw the attachment of property at any time when he is satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

Once an order under section 146 has been passed by a Court it can come to an end only under one of two circumstances the first being that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace in regard to the subject matter of the dispute in which case the Magistrate would be competent to withdraw the order of attachment and he can do so at any time at which if he is satisfied that there is no further any likelihood and secondly it is competent for a Magistrate to release the subject matter of the dispute from attachment if a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties to the proceedings or the person entitled to possession of the subject matter of the dispute—Kutiswar v Jitendra 26 Cr L J 1055 30 C W N 646

Where the petitioner presented an application to the Magistrate praying for the release of the attached house on the ground that the other claimant had died and that he (the petitioner) was his heir and Magistrate refused the application as no judgment of a competent Court declaring the rights of parties was produced held that the Magistrate ought to have granted the application and released the property from attachment because by the death of the other claimant all likelihood of a breach of the peace had disappeared—Khushi Ram v Crown 1 Lah 451 This proviso now expressly provides for the case

But the Magistrate can cancel the order of attachment under the proviso only on the ground that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace He cannot cancel the attachment on any other ground e g on the ground that the attachment is not practicable—Ram Dulare v Ajudhya 16 O C 192 14 Cr L J 605

Where the property attached under sec 146 is released by the Magistrate on being satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace the Magistrate should not simply direct the Receiver to abandon the property without making over the possession or the books of account to any body and leave the parties to scramble for the estate This is not the intention of the Legislature Under this proviso it is open to the Magistrate to make over the possession to any person he thinks fit and he must of course exercise a judicial discretion in deciding to whom the possession is to be given There may also be cases in which it is sufficient for him to make an order withdrawing the attachment and leave some person to take possession without handing over the possession of the property to anybody—Ali Bahadur v Tirip O W N 868 6 Cr L J 1609

461 Sub-section (2)—Appointment of Receiver —A Magistrate is entitled to appoint a receiver under this sub section only after the termination of the inquiry as to possession conducted under section 145 (1) The appointment of a receiver before the completion of the inquiry is without jurisdiction—Lakshmi arayana v Gnanaprakasa 13 Cr L J 536 (Mad)

The passing of an order of attachment does not by itself justify the appointment of a receiver unless on a subsequent inquiry the appointment of a receiver is found necessary—Raza Hussain v Mehdi Hasan 15 O C 148 23 Cr L J 684

A receiver appointed under this section is entitled unless some special circumstance is established not only to the subject matter of the proceedings but also to all accretions to the property and can give good title to a tenant under him—Madhu v Sabar Ali 14 C W N 681 11 Cr L J 288

Proviso — We recommend the addition of a proviso to section 146 (2) to meet the case of an overlapping appointment of a receiver by the Civil Court —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

462 Revision —By reason of the omission of sub section (3) of section 435 by the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act of 1923 orders passed under this section are now liable to revision under this Code See Note 447 under sec 145

463 Review —An order under this section is in the nature of a judgment and cannot be reviewed by the same Court—Induram v Bhu 19 Cr L J 205 (Pat) Raj Kumar v Thakur Ojha 3 P L T 648 Ram Dulare v Ajudhya 16 O C 192 see section 369 When a property is attached under this section the Magistrate has jurisdiction to release it from attachment but he has no jurisdiction to review his own order releasing the attached property—Ballam v Lal Babu 19 Cr L J 105 (Pat)

(4) An order under this section shall be subject to any subsequent decision of a Civil Court of competent jurisdiction

Change —This section has been redrafted by section 30 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) and the substantial changes introduced by this redrafting have been shown by the italicised passages

The principal changes are — (1) The definition of the subject matter in dispute has been modified so as to avoid the difficulties which have been created by decisions raising doubts as to the applicability of the section to rights not resembling easements or to rights acquired by contract (2) the specific reference to rights of way has been omitted as it has been questioned whether it might not by implication exclude negative easements from the scope of this section (3) the nature of the orders which a Magistrate may pass (see sub sections 2 and 3) and their continuance pending the order of a competent Civil Court to the contrary (see sub section 4) have been clearly defined —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) (4) The words ' make an order in writing respective claims have been added in order to bring this section into a line with section 145 Doubts have been expressed as to the procedure to be followed in cases under section 147, and we have introduced amendments here to make it clear that the procedure is to be that laid down by section 145 —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

464 Dispute —In order to establish the jurisdiction of a Magistrate to proceed under this section, it is necessary that a dispute exist between two persons concerning the right to the use of any land or —Rosik Lal v Kartik, 22 W R 48 The dispute contemplated by section must at any rate be some substantial dispute necessitating the interference, in some way or other, of the criminal authorities. It would not be sufficient that there should be a mere discussion or verbal altercation between persons claiming rights of the kind described. There must be an actual dispute—Maharaja of Burdwan v. Chairman Darjeeling Municipality, 5 Cal. 194. See Note 393 under sec. 145.

If on entering on an inquiry a Magistrate finds that the rights of parties have been judicially ascertained by a decree of Civil Court, he should not enter into any investigation, as he cannot assume that a dispute would be continued on a question which has been set at rest by a judicial decision on the rights of parties—In re Balkrishna, 11 Bom. 584.

465. Likelihood of breach of peace.—An order cannot be passed under this section unless the Magistrate is of opinion that the dispute is likely to cause a breach of the peace—Kolardai v. Kalabudda, 6 M. L. J. 193; Parashram v. Gopal, 25 Cr. L. J. 353 (Nag.). In order to give jurisdiction to a Magistrate under this section, he must be satisfied from Police reports or other materials that there is an imminent danger of a breach of the peace resulting from a dispute between the parties concerned. Where the materials before the Magistrate did not disclose the fact that there was an imminent danger of a breach of the peace, any evidence that he might have taken later on in the course of the trial, could not give him a jurisdiction which he did not otherwise possess—Kali Kissen v. Anund, 23 Cal. 557. But see Kiloda Kinkar v. Danesh, 33 Cal. 33 cited at p. 293 ante.

466. Right to use land or water.—This section applies to disputes as to the right to use any land or water as distinct from disputes as to title to or possession of the land itself, for which provision is made by sec. 145—Ram Dulare v. Ajudhya, 16 O. C. 102, 14 Cr. L. J. 605.

In a Madras case it was held that the words "land or water" used in this section should be taken in their ordinary significance without the extended meaning given to them by section 145—Palaniyandi v. Palaniappa, 17 Cr. L. J. 235 (Mad.). In a Calcutta case also it was held that the word 'land' in this section did not include crop or produce as in section 145—Ali Mohammad v. Fakiruddin, 24 C. W. N. 1039, 22 Cr. L. J. 131. The present amendment, however, expressly lays down that those words are to have the same meaning as in sec. 145.

Since this section as now amended includes rights claimed as an easement, it therefore applies to rights to the use of land or water belonging to others. See also Emp. v. Ganpat, 4 C. W. N. 779. The contrary view taken in Arunachalam v. Chidambaram, 29 Mad. 97 is no longer correct.

Right to tola from a 'hat'.—A dispute as regards the right to collect 'tolas' (small perquisites) from a hat on one day every year, is one concerning the right of use of any land within the meaning of this section—Sarat v. Mabarak, 21 C. W. N. 439, 24 C. L. J. 137, 18 Cr. L. J. 113.

Rights arising out of contract.—Prior to the present amendment of this section, it was held that a dispute between a landlord and his tenant regarding the right of the latter to reconstruct a gola which had fallen down was not a matter properly coming within the operation of section 147.

The settlement of such a dispute involved issues of right which could properly be determined by a Civil Court The right of use of land contemplated by sec 147 was one of an entirely different description resembling a right of easement and not one arising from the terms of a contract between landlord and tenant—Emp v Ganpat 4 C W N 779 See also Arunachalam v Chidambaram 9 Mad 97 But this is no longer the law By reason of the present amendment the rights arising out of a contract will also fall under this section See notes under Change above Before the present amendment the words of the section were the right of use of any land and water (including any right of way or other easement over the same) The words of the present section are more general

Right to use of water —A Magistrate can take action under this section if he is satisfied that a dispute regarding the right to irrigate from a tank is likely to cause a breach of the peace—Q E v Bechan O S C 64 Where it was found that the plaintiff had a right to the flow of water for purposes of irrigation from a certain channel passing through a village of the defendant who obstructed such flow by erecting bunds it was held that the Magistrate was competent under this section to direct the removal of the obstruction—Pasupati v Nandalal 5 C W N 67 Dalmir v Khoda dad 36 Cal 923 14 C W N 179 Q v Madho Churn 13 W R 51

Where Christians were prevented by Hindus from the lawful exercise of their right to take water from a well it was held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction under this section to pass an order prohibiting the Hindus from interfering with the exercise of that right—Hindus v Christians, 21 M L J 486 11 Cr L J 721

Right to let off water —The right to let off water by the natural course in which it has always flowed and would always flow so as to prevent inundation of one s own land is a natural right of every land holder to the use and enjoyment of his own land Where the second party erected a bund on the boundary of the first party s village to prevent the flow of such water the Magistrate had jurisdiction to direct the removal of the bund—Doulat v Sita Pershad 15 C L J 267 12 Cr L J 319

Right to fish —There is nothing in this section which limits its operation only to easements This section relates also to rights in the nature of easements for instance the right to fish in a bhil—Dulhi Molla v Halway 23 Cal 55 Kali Kissen v Inumul Chunder 23 Cal 557

Right to ferry —A dispute regarding right to use a ferry comes within the scope of this section—Harbullubh v Bajrang 3 C W N 148

Right to take sandal paste from idol —A right to take sandalwood paste removed from the person of the idol is not a right to the use of any land or water within the meaning of this section and therefore this section does not apply to a dispute regarding such right—In re Pandurang 4 Bom L R 438

Right to worship —A right to perform the duties of a Pujari in a temple is not a right to the use of any land It is the worship which is disputed and not the use of land Therefore a dispute regarding such a right cannot be the basis of a proceeding under this section—Gulam v Lal Behary, 37 Cal 578, Surendra v Sashi Bhusan 52 Cal 959 42

L J 127, 27 Cr. L J. 239 Where the matters in dispute cannot be adjudicated by a Civil Court (e g., disputes relating to performance of worship and other religious ceremonies), Magistrates have no jurisdiction to deal with those matters under section 147 In such matters, if the Magistrate apprehends that there will be a breach of the peace, he is to adopt the procedure prescribed by Chapter VIII, and to take security—In re Atmaram, 11 Bom 25 Surendra v. Shoshi Bhushan (supra) But in Md Musahar v Kunji 11 Mad 323 Kader Batcha v Kader Batcha 29 Mad 237 In re Draneshwar 3 Bom L R 416, Sinnasami v Palan, 48 M L J 528, 26 Cr L J 1057 and Chidambara v Sengoda, 27 M L J 587, 15 Cr L J 671, a right to worship in a mosque or to officiate as Kazi therein or to perform a puja has been held to come within the operation of this section

A dispute as regards the offerings made in a temple is a dispute as regards moveable property, and therefore does not fall under this section —Ram Saran v Raghunandan 38 Cal 387 13 C L J 445

Right of privacy —A right of privacy e g, a right to enter upon the premises of another and close the windows and doors to ensure privacy is not a right to prevent the doing of anything in or upon any tangible immoveable property within the meaning of this section The remedy of the person claiming such right is by civil suit and by injunction—In re Gordhandas, Ratanlal 357

Right to use a privy is not a right to the use of land and water, and is not therefore contemplated by this section—In re Shankar, 15 Bom L R 329 14 Cr L J 400 But it will now fall under this section

Right of way —A Magistrate is competent to order the removal of an obstruction to a right of way caused by the owner of the land, if there be a likelihood of a breach of the peace in consequence of such obstruction—Lalit Chandra v Tarini, 5 C W N 335 In a dispute as to the right of way the Magistrate should decide whether the complainant had been in use and occupation of the road and if so, for how long, and if he finds him to be in possession should retain him in it, leaving the owner of the land to refer the question of the right to the easement to the Civil Court The Magistrate should not decide against the complainant because he may have another right of way leading to the same place—Q v Toylucko Nath, 2 W R 64 Under the Muhammadan law, a Muhammadan cannot say his prayers on the property belonging to another without an express or implied permission of the owner of the property Therefore, a Muhammadan has no right to say his prayers at a grave situated in land belonging to another which is enclosed by a wall (which negatives any express or implied permission to say prayers on the land), and consequently, he cannot claim a right of way to go over a land belonging to another in order to worship at a grave situated in that land—Rampratab v Satif, 6 P L T 857, 27 Cr L J 14

Right to use public way —This section can be applied even when the right of way claimed is a right to a public path The terms of this section are wide enough to cover the cases of public as well as private right of way The Magistrate has therefore jurisdiction under this section to direct a person who has obstructed a public pathway by a fence not to obstruct such pathway—Karuppanna v Kandasami 26 M L J 223 15 Cr L J 362 A right to take a car in procession along a public road to a temple is a right of user of land falling under this section—In re Basappa 27 Bom L R 1058 26 Cr L J 1422 The Magistrate has jurisdiction under this section to pass order even against the right of passage through a public street But he ought not to pass such a prohibitory order unless it is clearly proved that there is a right by custom or by grant or by a Statute in one section of the public to prevent another section of the public from using the public street on particular occasions or for particular purposes when such use is ordinarily and prima facie lawful—Sudalaimuthu v Eiar 16 Cr L J 767 (Mad) When the subject of a dispute is a public highway a Magistrate has no power to object to the lawful use of it by any class of persons Except when danger to the public health is occasioned the conveyance of a corpse along a highway is not an unlawful use of the highway Therefore an order that the Hindus should not carry corpses through a street to which the Muhammadans object is illegal—In re Narayana 7 Mad 49 The right to use a public way for carrying corpses is a natural and ordinary right of citizens and it is open to question whether section 147 applies to cases of dispute concerning the exercise of such a right—Kolandai v Kalabudda 6 M L J 193

Right to prevent procession —A Magistrate is not authorised to pass an order prohibiting a religious procession under this section where he has not found that the right to prevent such a procession exists in the complaining party—Q E v Madhavdas Ratanlal 548

467 Easements —This section is not confined to easements acquired by uninterrupted enjoyment for 20 years provided by sec 26 of the Limitation Act—Srimanta v Indra Narayan 13 C W N 859 10 Cr L J 292 This term includes profits a prendre—Dikhi v Halway 23 Cal 55

This section is not limited in its operation only to easements but relates also to rights in the nature of easements e g a right to fish—Dikhi v Halway 23 Cal 55 or a right to moor boats and dry fishing nets on the land of another—Kalikumar v Bejoy 21 Cr L J 697 (Cal)

This section applies to positive as well as to negative easements See the Statement of Objects and Reasons cited under heading Change' supra

468 Preliminary order in writing —This section as now amended requires that the Magistrate must record as under section 145 a preliminary proceeding stating the ground of his being satisfied as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace The contrary rulings in Miller v Rajendra 2 C W N 670 and Chidambara v Sergoda 27 M L J 587 15 Cr L J 671 are hereby overruled

The preliminary order under section 147 just as in the case of an order under sec 145 directing the parties to appear for the inquiry must direct them to appear before the Magistrate himself who issued the preliminary order An order directing them to appear before another Magistrate is without jurisdiction and all proceedings on an inquiry so conducted invalid—Misri Chaudhury v Narasingh 2 P L T 156 I 47

469 Inquiry as under Sec. 145 —A case under this section is to be decided by the same procedure and on the same principles as a case under section 145—Ram Saran v Raghunandan, 38 Cal 387 Section 147 clearly says that the procedure under this section must be as under sec 145, which includes the filing of written statements, taking of evidence, and if necessary, local investigation Therefore, an order under section 147 passed on proceedings taken under sec 133, without any action in accordance with sec 145, is without jurisdiction—Abdool v Safar Ali, 15 C W N 667, 12 Cr L J 43 Where the petitioners set up a right of easement over a road which the opposite party attempted to close, and the Magistrate, instead of following the procedure laid down in this section, went over to the office of the opposite party examined certain documents and correspondences in respect of the road and then passed an order declaring the road to belong to the opposite party and forbidding the petitioners to enter upon the road held that the procedure was wholly unjustifiable, as he made inquiries in the absence of the petitioners, and without giving them an opportunity of adducing their own evidence and examining witnesses, and passed the order without coming to a distinct finding as to the alleged right of easement set up by the petitioners—Narendra v. E I Ry, 5 P L T 419 25 Cr L J 455 A I R 1924 Pat 717.

When proceedings are started under sec 145 on the basis of a police report, but during the trial the Court finds it is a matter falling under sec 147, he can convert the proceedings into one under that section—Anath Bandhu v Wahid Ali 26 Cr L J 558 (Cal), In re Amarsang, 48 Bom 512 (515), 26 Bom L R 436

Long and protracted inquiry—Question of title —Where a case under this section is likely to involve a long and complicated inquiry and the presence of a large number of people the proper course for the Magistrate to follow is to bind down under sec 107 such of the persons as are likely to disturb the peace—Kali Kissen v Anund, 23 Cal 557 So also, where the settlement of a dispute involves issues of right which can only be determined by a Civil Court, the proper course for the Magistrate is to proceed under sec 107—Emp v Ganpat, 4 C W N 779, Arunachalam v Chidambaram, 29 Mad 97, Dalmir v Khodadad, 36 Cal 923 10 Cr L J 579 This section does not convert the Magistrate into a Civil Court, which is to determine the rights between the parties or to discuss and consider any proprietary damage done to individuals—Rosik Lal v Kartik, 22 W. R 48

Inquiry by subordinate Magistrate —Where a District Magistrate, on being satisfied that there exists a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace as regards the right to perform a religious ceremony, refers the case to a Magistrate for inquiry, the latter is bound under this section to inquire into the matter in the manner provided by Section 145—In re Dnyaneshuar, 13 Bom L R 416 But see Note 408 under section 145

470 Notice to parties —The inquiry contemplated by this section is a judicial inquiry and the opinion to be formed must be a judicial one formed upon evidence legally before the Magistrate The evidence before the Magistrate would not be legal, if it were taken behind the back of persons who claimed or denied the right, i e, if they had not been represented at the inquiry and had no notice of it—Bathoo Lal v Domi Lal 21 Cal 727 Where an order was passed under this section without giving notice to the party concerned the order was without jurisdiction and liable to be set aside—Crown v Bhana 1909 P R 12 11 Cr L J 61 Where the proceedings were originally started in respect of a portion of a pathway but subsequently the Court amended the proceedings by making them applicable to the whole pathway without notice to the party affected held that the final order was not binding on the party affected—Janaki v Manmohan, 25 Cr L J 674 A I R 1925 Cal 263

Actual notice should be given to all the persons claiming or denying the right notice to servants of such persons is not equivalent to notice to them—Bathoolal v Domilal 21 Cal 727 The inquiry presume not

471 Parties —In an inquiry under this section it is sufficient if persons who claim for themselves the right though that right be derived from others (e g right to fish in a bhil) are made parties It is not necessary that the proprietors (of the bhil) should be added as parties—Dukhi v Holway 23 Cal 57

A Magistrate is not competent to add parties to a proceeding under Sec 147 after making a preliminary order An order made after the addition of parties is null and void only as against the added party but is binding on those to whom it is properly directed—Pasupati v Nando Lal 5 C W N 67 The Nagpur J C Court holds that the addition of parties after making the preliminary order is a mere irregularity which does not vitiate the proceedings—Parashram v Gopal 25 Cr L J 353

472 Evidence —The inquiry contemplated by the section is a judicial inquiry and the opinion of the Magistrate must be a judicial one formed upon evidence legally before him—Bathoo Lal v Domi Lal 21 Cal 727 A party against whom proceedings are instituted is entitled to produce evidence to prove that the case does not fall within this section—Crown v Bhana 1909 P R 12 11 Cr L J 61

An order passed merely on a written statement without taking any evidence in proof of the allegation contained in the written statement is bad in law—Md Noor v Bibha 30 Cal 918 So also an order passed without giving the parties an opportunity of calling evidence is one without jurisdiction—Palaji v Darya 20 Cr L J 110 (Nag) See also Narendra v E I Ry 5 P L T 419 cited in Note 469 above

But where the allegation of one party is admitted by the other no evidence is necessary in addition to the written statement—Haremohan v Gobind 7 C W N 351

Local inspection —In a matter under this section the Magistrate is bound to hear the evidence tendered by the parties He cannot summarily deal with the case after local inspection—Emp v Ganpat 4 C W N 771 A decision of the Magistrate based substantially upon impressions obtained as a result of his local inspection is bad and liable to be set aside But a decision based on the evidence as well as local inspection (the one corroborating the other) is not illegal—Muhammad Musa v Shyam Sundar 2 P L T 681, 22 Cr L J 739 The Magistrate can make a local inspection even prior to taking evidence in the case But the finding must be based on evidence duly recorded and not merely upon the impressions formed on local inspection—Abdul Hamid v Hasan Raza 4 P L T 297 24 Cr L J 487

473 Proviso—User of right —In the absence of a finding that the right has been exercised within the periods specified by the proviso to sub section (2) the final order under this section cannot be maintained—Sirkauli v Bhija Singh 5 P L T 457 25 Cr L J 096 Where the right is exerciseable at all times of the year there must be a finding that the right was exercised within three months—Guru Prasad v Lachman 14 Cr L J 303 (Cal) Crown v Bhana 1909 P R 12 Grant v Padarath 2 P L T 364 22 Cr L J 463 Where it is proved that the first party have had an uninterrupted use of water of a nala for a period of 20 years which they have enjoyed as an easement and of right and the erection of a bund has led to a dispute there is then a sufficient finding that the right in dispute has been exercised within either of the periods mentioned in the proviso—Pasupati v Narda Lal 5 C W N 6 Where the non exercise of the right within the period specified in the proviso was due to circumstances beyond the control of the party claiming the right e g where the non exercise was due to obstructions caused by the opponents of such party the proviso to sub section (2) does not apply The proviso obviously contemplates a non exercise for reasons within the control of the person claiming the right—In re Basappa 27 Bom L R 1058 6 Cr L J 1427

Burden of proof —The right to restrain another from exercising the ordinary proprietary rights over his own land e g the right to restrain another from cutting a bund on his own land and thus getting a liberal supply of water on his own land is of the nature of an easement different from the ordinary rights of owners of land The burden of proof that such a right exists lies on the party alleging it—Hari Mohan v Kissen Sundari 11 Cal 52

Institution of the inquiry —The date of the institution of the inquiry within the meaning of the proviso does not refer to the date when the formal proceedings are drawn up under this section An inquiry is instituted within three months of the obstruction complained of within the meaning of the proviso where the Magistrate hears the pleaders of the parties and directs a local inquiry within three months of the date of the obstruction even though the formal order is drawn up after three months—Rama Nath v Saroda 44 C L J 214 28 Cr L J 1

The inquiry that is contemplated by the proviso is the inquiry by the Magistrate into the rights of parties and not an inquiry by the Police into the existence of the likelihood of a breach of the peace Where in the case of an alleged obstruction of a pathway proceedings under sec 147 are drawn up by the Magistrate more than three months after the date of the obstruction complained of the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to proceed under this section The fact that he ordered a police inquiry within three months of the obstruction cannot give him jurisdiction—Ram Chandra v. Aditya, 53 Cal 8,1 30 C W N 863, 27 Cr L J. 1089

474 Nature of order —The order under this section is one permitting a thing to be done or directing that a thing shall not be done This section does not enable the Magistrate to make a purely declaratory order It only enables him to prevent arbitrary interruption by any person of rights actually enjoyed which have been exercised by the public or by a person or class of persons—Maharaja of Burdwan v Chairman, Darjeeling Municipality, 5 Cal 19(This section is not intended to provide a substitute for a civil suit to declare the rights of parties but only empowers the Magistrate to order that possession shall not be taken by any party to the exclusion of the public until that party establishes his right in a Civil Court—Moonshee Hurukh Lal 6 W R 74

The words of sub section (.) do not give the Magistrate any power of directing one of the parties to do a positive act by way of mandatory injunction The power given by this clause is analogous to the power of a Civil Court to grant a temporary injunction by issuing a prohibitory order restraining any person from doing any act which interferes with the right of another Therefore where the second party raised a wall on her own land blocking the windows in the house of the first party and thereby shut out light and air from a room in that house the Magistrate had no power to order the second party to demolish the wall—Hari Mati v Hari Dasi, 41 C L J 568 26 Cr L J 1265 30 C W N 218 But prior to the amendment of this section a Magistrate was competent to make an order for the removal of an obstruction to a right of way if there was likelihood of a breach of the peace in consequence of such obstruction—Lalit Chandra v Tarini 5 C W N 335 or an order for the removal of an obstruction to the right to the flow of water caused by the erection of bunds—Pasupati v Nandalal, 5 C W N 67 Dalmir v Khodadad, 36 Cal 923 Manzur Hussain v Gouri Lal 20 Cr L J 209 (Pat) If the obstruction is caused to a public way or thoroughfare the Magistrate has no power to order for the removal of such obstruction under this section but should proceed under Chapter X (Sec 133)—In re Lutchmiah, 1 Weir 143, Baroda Persad v. Muloo Soodun 5 W R 5 In re Alfred Lindsay 4 Mad 121 In Karuppanna v Kandasami 26 M L J 233 15 Cr L J 362, and Sudalaimuthu v Lnan, 16 Cr L J 767 (Mad) however, it has been held that section 147 can be applied whether the right of way claimed is a right to a public path or a private path the terms of the section are wide enough to cover both cases, and the fact that section 133 expressly provides for an order by the Magistrate directing the removal of obstruction to public pathways does not necessarily imply that a similar order cannot be passed in proceedings under sec 147

This section does not enable the Magistrate to order the Police to remove the obstruction There is no indication in the Code that the Legislature intended the Magistrate to carry out an order under th n through the agency of the Police This section clearly contemp directed to persons who are parties to the dispute—Dalmir 36 Cal 923, contra—Dowlat v Sita Prasad, 15 C L J 207, 1

where it was held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction to direct the complaining party to remove the obstruction with the assistance of the Police

Under sub section (3) a Magistrate has jurisdiction to make a prohibitive order (order directing that such thing shall not be done) against a party who is found not to have the right which he claims Where the 1st party claimed a right of passage over certain land which the other party denied and the Magistrate found that the right of easement did not exist the Magistrate had jurisdiction to pass an order directing that the first party should not use the right of passage until he obtained the decision of a competent Court adjudging his right—Pyari Mohan v Harish Chandra 23 C W N 956 20 Cr L J 251

Order must affect parties only —This section contemplates an order to be passed between parties to the proceedings only An order affecting persons who are not parties to the proceedings is not within the purview of this section and is therefore liable to be set aside as affecting jurisdiction —Pillaji v Darya 20 Cr L J 110 (Nag)

Effect of order on subsequent suit —The fact that in a dispute relating to a right of way a Magistrate has passed an order in favour of the party claiming that right does not relieve that party from the onus of proving the claim in a subsequent civil suit brought to establish that right—Obhoy Churn v Lukhy Monee 2 C L R 533

Duration of order —An order under this section is bad in form if it contains no restriction of time for which it is to operate—In re Atmaram 14 Bom 25

475 Revival of proceedings —Where during the pendency of proceedings under section 147 the parties referred the dispute to arbitration whereupon the Magistrate made an order to the effect that further proceedings were unnecessary and they were therefore stayed but after the arbitration proceedings (which remained pending for one year) became ineffectual the Magistrate continued the proceedings under sec 147 held that the Magistrate's order staying further proceedings ousted his jurisdiction to continue the proceedings Moreover the Magistrate could not revive the proceedings unless he had drawn up fresh proceedings and unless he was satisfied that there was a fresh dispute likely to cause a fresh breach of the peace after the arbitration proceedings ceased and he was not justified in assuming that the causes which originally existed still continued to exist—Kalanand v Ganeshwar 15 C W N 271 (273) 11 Cr L J 79

Revision —See Note 417 under sec 145

148 (1) Whenever a local inquiry is necessary for the purposes of this Chapter, any District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate may depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to make the inquiry, and may furnish him with such written instructions as may seem necessary for his guidance and may declare by whom the whole or any part of the necessary expenses of the inquiry shall be paid

(2) The report of the person so deputed may be read as evidence in the case

(3) When any costs have been incurred by any party to a proceeding under this Chapter for witnesses or pleader's fees or both, the Magistrate passing a decision under section 145 section 146 or section 147 may direct by whom such costs shall be paid, whether by such party or by any other party to the proceeding and whether in whole, or in part or proportion All costs so directed to be paid may be recovered as if they were fines	(3) When any costs have been incurred by any party to a proceeding under this Chapter, * * * the Magistrate passing a decision under section 145, section 146 or section 147 may direct by whom such costs shall be paid, whether by such party or by any other party to the proceeding, and whether in whole or in part or proportion Such costs may include any expenses incurred in respect of witnesses and of pleader's fees which the Court may consider reasonable

Order as to costs

Change —Sub section (3) has been amended by section 31 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) For reasons see Note 478 below

476 Local inquiry — Local investigation should only be ordered in cases where they are absolutely required by the Courts on subordinate points for a determination of the main issue in the case for instance in cases in which it is necessary to ascertain by measurement the disputed areas of land or to ascertain whether particular lands are identical with the lands detailed in documents and in such cases only When however any fact can be elicited by evidence that evidence should be heard by the Court itself —Cal H C Cir No 41 of 1866 The scope of local inquiry is extremely limited It should be restricted solely to some question relating to the feature of the property about which the dispute has arisen and should not be directed to any matter which can be proved before the Magistrate by oral evidence such as the question of actual possession —In re Baikunt 3 C L R 134 Lachi v Narain v Mukhram 24 Cr L J 507 take the place of legal evidence much less the result thereof can be used as a basis for the decision—Ram Ratan v Tarak Nath 25 Cr L J 41? A I R 1922 Pat 249 Thus in a case where the levels and the fall of water are concerned local inspection is imminently necessary—Dowlat v Sita Prasad 15 C L J 267 1? Cr L J 319 So also where rights of irrigation and rights of taking water through particular reservoirs are concerned a local inspection is immediately necessary—Abdul Hamid v Hasan 4 P L T 297 24 Cr L J 487

There is no hard and fast rule that in every case under tthis chapter a local investigation must be held whether the parties desire it or not—Upendra v Prasanno 20 Cr L J 17 (Cal) For instance it is not incumbent on the Magistrate to hold such an investigation whenever he is unable to ascertain as to which party is in possession—Ibid

The term local inquiry in this section contemplates delegation of judicial functions the mere making a survey of the disputed land and preparing a map thereof do not amount to a local inquiry under this section because they are not judicial but purely ministerial acts and such acts can be entrusted to a person other than a Magistrate e g to a pleader Commissioner (or even an amin) The report of such a person cannot be read as evidence under sub section (?) but he must be called as a witness and examined and cross examined as to his report—Chilat Mahto v Surendra 1 Pat 75 3 P L T 1?? ?3 Cr L J 152

Who can make the inquiry —The trying Magistrate can himself make the local inquiry Though as a rule it is better to have the local investigation carried out by some other person there is nothing in law to prevent the presiding Magistrate from conducting the inquiry himself provided he records what he saw and does not act upon hearsay evidence—Doulat v Sita Persad 15 C L J ?67 Abdul Hamid v Hasan 4 P L T 297

This section empowers the presiding Magistrate to depute a subordinate Magistrate to make the inquiry but the person deputed must be a Magistrate not a Kanungoe—In re Uma Churn 7 C L R 352 If however the trying Magistrate deputes a Kanungoe to make an inquiry his report cannot be taken as evidence in the case like the report of a sub Magistrate but the Kanungoe (like any other private person who has seen the place) must come into the witness box and depose on oath as to what he saw—Achambit v Sarada 12 Cr L J 480 (Cal)

The deputed Magistrate must make the inquiry himself he cannot delegate it to some body else—Jaswant v Rama Rao ?0 Cr L J 107 (Nag)

Recording evidence by the deputed Magistrate —The local inquiry authorised by this section is not merely a local inspection by the sub Magistrate but includes the act of recording evidence by such Magistrate in the course of the inquiry But the recording of evidence by the sub-Magistrate does not absolve the trying Magistrate from the duty imposed upon him by Sec 145 (4) of receiving any evidence produced before him by the parties and taking any further evidence he may think necessary Where a first class Magistrate recorded no evidence himself but acted solely upon the evidence taken by a sub Magistrate at a local inquiry the former must be d emed to have acted without jurisdiction but this defect or irregularity will be cured by section 537 and the High Court will not interfere—Mu l samy v Kalinga 33 M L J 78 18 Cr L J 715

477 Report of the deputed Magistrate —Sub section (2) provides that the report of the deputed Magistrate may be read as evidence in the case but it is not necessary to examine such Magistrate on oath as a witness—Aclambu v Sarada 12 Cr L J 180 (Cal)

When a local inquiry is institut d and the result reported such report becomes a part of the p oceedings in the case and the party affe ted by it is entitled to be acquainted with the result of it and to have an oppor tunity of rebutting the report if he thinks necessary so to do—Jaiwanti v Pai a Pao o Cr L J 10 (Nag) Mir Dhunoo v Brown 21 W R 25 If a Magistrate makes a local inquiry he must ma'e a note of what he saw and must place it on the record so that the pa ties may be in a po ition to know what impression the Magistrate has got by the local inquiry It is possible that the Magistrate may have formed a wrong impression and if the results of his inspection are recorded the parties would be in a position to know if there has been an error and to remove the wrong impression formed by the Magistrate—Abdul Hamid v Hasan 4 P L T 297 24 Cr L J 48-

Decision ba ed o r p rt —A Magistrate cannot base his decision merely on the report of the subordinate Magistrate without examining any witness—Pitambar v Saroda 10 A L J 465 13 Cr L J 777 Ram ratan v Taraki ali 25 Cr L J 412 (Pat) In Mu l isami v Kalinga 17 Cr L J 4-8 (Mad) and Pi ruddin v Totajet issa 14 Cr L J 50- (Cal) however the Magi trate deciding the case on the basis of the report of the inquiry was held to have acted withi his jur sdiction Where the trying Magistrate based his order on the report of the sub Magistrate and on the evidence recorded by him d ring the local inquiry and both parties were quite content to abide by the result of the sub Magistrate s inquiry, and no objections were advanced before the trying Magistrate against the sub Magistrate s finding it was held that the order of the trying Magis trate was not without jurisdiction and should not be interfered with in revision—Muthusami v Kali ga 33 M L J 78 18 Cr L J 715

478 Costs —Before this section was amended by the 1923 Amendment Act it was held that the only costs which a Magistrate could award under this section were those incurred for witnesses or pleaders fees or both He could not make an order for any other costs e g, costs on account of damage to crops—Prayag v Gobind 32 Cal 607 So also he could not include in the costs the penalty paid by one party on behalf of the other under section 44 (3) of the Stamp Act in respect of an improperly stampe l document produced in evidence in a proceeding under sec 145 of this Code—Popurs v Tun n al igeı la 13 M L T 224 13 Cr L J 297

Under the present section as amended the word include' shows that the Magistrate is able to award costs other than those incurred fo witnesses or pleaders fees

should not include additional costs incurred for extra fees and for travelling and other expenses of a like nature incurred for bringing pleaders or counsels from a distance—Rajendra v Md Ir ... nd 9 C W N 887

A Magistrate has jurisdiction to award only the actual costs incurred and the order must give particulars as to how the Magistrate arrived at the figure otherwise the order is bad—Udoy Narayan v Satish 14 C W N lxxui The order awarding costs is a judicial order and therefore must be based on proper materials there must be materials on the record to show that the Magistrate arrived at the figure as the result of the calculation of the costs incurred by the party An order arbitrarily awarding a round sum of Rs 50 or Rs 100 as costs without there being anything on the record to show that the said amount was actually incurred is bad in law and must be set aside —Jhauna v Thak' I I T 369 21 Cr L J 625 Hira Mahton v Raj Kumar 3 P L T 4 4 -3 Cr L J 308 Khuli v Darbari 2 P L T 76 So before making an order as to costs it is necessary and proper that the Magistrate should hold an inquiry as to what expenditure in costs was actually incurred—Nerdhari v Ram Tahal, 17 Cr L J 348 (Pat)

The Magistrate may direct that the costs of any party are to be paid by any other party to the proceeding but not by persons who are not parties to the proceeding—Emp v Chet Khan 27 Cr L J 21 (Oudh)

If the costs are such as would fall within the scope of this section the High Court will not consider whether they are excessive or deficient—Bansi v Syed Mohd Alba 15 C W N 811 12 Cr L J 376

The costs will be recoverable as fines See Sec 547 The words All costs ... fines have been omitted as unnecessary because a general provision to that effect has been made in sec 547

Costs in revision —The costs referred to in this section are the costs incurred in the magisterial proceedings Magistrates have power under this section to direct by whom any costs incurred by parties in proceedings before them under this Chapter are to be paid So also the High Court in revision can pass any order which the Magistrate himself could have passed i e the High Court can in revision direct the costs incurred before the Magistrate to be paid by one party to another But the High Court cannot in revision of proceedings under Ch XII direct the costs incurred before the High Court in revision to be paid by one party to another Even the award of costs cannot be treated as incidental or consequential to the disposal of a revision petition within the meaning of sec 423 (1) (d) for it does not necessarily follow from an order passed in revision—Veerappa v Irudayammal 48 Mad 262 (F B) 48 M L J 106 26 Cr L J 707

But the Bombay High Court is of opinion that the High Court can award the costs incurred in the hearing of the revision petition such power is given by sec 439 read with sec 423 (d)—Bai Jibi v Chandulal 27 Bom L R 1353 A I R 1926 Bom 91 27 Cr L J 661

Who can order costs —Only the Magistrate who passes the final order under Sec 145 146 or 147 can pass an order awarding costs though the actual assessment may be made by his successor This cannot be interpreted as authorising the successor of the Magistrate who passed the final order under sec 145 to award costs to the successful party Where the Magistrate making the final order declaring possession left the district and his successor made an order granting costs the order as to costs was set aside as made without jurisdiction—Iklas v Raja Raghuraj 13 O C 66, 11 Cr L J 335

The Magistrate passing the order as to costs must be the Magistrate passing the decision in the case—Nafar Chandra v Siddhartha 47 Cal 974 24 C W N 672 But he may or may not be the Magistrate who initiated the proceedings under this chapter Where the proceedings under this chapter are initiated by one Magistrate and the final order is passed by another it is the latter Magistrate who can award costs—Vythinadha v Mayandi 29 Mad 373

Time of awarding costs —An order for costs should ordinarily be made at the time of the original order and in the presence of parties—Q E v Tomijuddi 24 Cal 757 Iklas v Raja Raghuraj 13 O C 66 11 Cr L J 335 The award of costs under this section should be made by the Magistrate at the time of giving his decision unless for any reason the consideration of the matter is reserved for any future stage of the proceedings—Binoda Sundari v Kali Krishna 22 Cal 387 There is no hard and fast rule which lays down that an order for costs must necessarily be made at the time the judgment is delivered—Dowlat v Siva Prasad, 15 C L J 267 The order for costs may be made within a reasonable time after the passing of the judgment—Nafar v Siddhartha 47 Cal 974 24 C W N 672 In the usual course an award should almost invariably be contemporaneous with the decision of the main question and the order passed thereon But the fact that the award of costs has not been made at the very time of the decision of the case does not necessarily render the award invalid and when the circumstances of a case really require it the disposal of the question of costs may be postponed—Vythinatha v Mayandi 29 Mad 373

If the order awarding costs is not passed at the time of passing the decision in the case it must be passed within a reasonable time after the disposal of the case and in the presence of both parties—Vythinatha v Mayandi, 29 Mad 373 Nafar v Siddhartha 47 Cal 974 Doulat v Siva Pershad 15 C L J 267 What is reasonable time must depend upon the circumstances of each case—Nafar v Siddhartha 47 Cal 974 An order awarding costs made long (three months) after the original order and without giving notice to the parties affected and without allowing them an opportunity to appear and show cause is bad—Q E v Tomijuddi 24 Cal 757 Palaniandi v Sammandi 16 L W 613 But an order awarding costs made ten days after the passing of the order under section 145 (6) is not illegal by reason of the delay—Chathari v Ramsingh 19 Cr L J 390 (Pat)

478A Assessment of costs —Who can assess costs —Where the Magistrate who passed the decision under Sec 145 had already awarded the costs it is not necessary that the costs should be assessed by the same officer who decided the case—Giridhar v Ebadulla 22 Cal 384 Another Magistrate (e g his successor) has jurisdiction to assess the amount of costs—Md Ershad Ali v Saroda 23 Cal 37 (dissenting from

Bhojal v Nirban 21 Cal 609) Giridhar 22 Cal 384 Bansi v Syed Mohd 15 C W N 811 Subbiah v Chokkalinga 27 M L J 613 15 Cr L J 676 Though a Magistrate did not himself pass the order under sec 145, still he has jurisdiction to assess costs—Dilbasi v Desrati 10 C W N 1030

Time of assessing costs —An order awarding and assessing costs should be made at the time of the original order—Q E v Tomijuddi 24 Cal 757 This shows that the assessment of costs should be contemporaneous with the order awarding costs But there is no inflexible rule that the costs must be assessed at the time of passing the decision in the case—Giridhar v Ebadulla 22 Cal 384 Once an order as to costs is made the amount of costs may be subsequently assessed—Emp v Medapal 14 M L T 195 14 Cr L J 570 But the assessment must be made within a reasonable time after the award of costs An assessment of costs more than two years after the date of the order awarding the costs is bad in law—Bhojal v Nirban 21 Cal 609

Application by legal representative for assessment of costs —Where through the negligence of the Court s officers the amount of costs was not included in the final order directing payment of costs to the petitioner and nearly three years after the legal representative of the petitioner (the petitioner having died in the interval) applied to the Magistrate s successor in office for the costs being assessed held that the application was sustainable and the applicant was entitled to have the costs assessed Although this Code contains no special provision for bringing on record the representatives of the deceased parties still the Courts have power within reasonable limits to invent rules of procedure for that purpose unless the Legislature prohibits them from doing so Courts should always lean in favour of that view of the law which would enable a party who has got an order in his favour to obtain the fruits of that order and not in favour of highly technical objections which render the Court s order infructuous and a mere piece of waste paper—Subbia v Chockalinga 27 M L J 613 15 Cr L J 676

Notice to parties —An order awarding costs should be made in the presence of parties—Vythinatha v Mayandi 29 Mad 373 An order awarding and assessing costs without allowing all the parties affected an opportunity to appear and show cause is bad—Q E v Tomijuddi 24 Cal 757 A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order under this section making the party liable for a certain sum as costs without notice to him so that he may have an opportunity of contesting the same—Prokash v Ram Prasad 28 Cal 302 Bansi v Syed Mohd 15 C W N 811 Dwarka v Nath ini 19 Cr L J 761 (Pat)

Even an order setting aside a previous order as to costs cannot be passed without giving notice to the opposite party—Dilbasi v Deorati 10 C W N 1030

Revision —Orders under this section are now open to revision See Note 447 under section 145 The ruling in Rajendra v Md Arzumand 9 C W N 887 is no longer correct

CHAPTER XIII

Preventive Action of the Police

149 Every police officer may interpose for the purpose of preventing, and shall, to the best of his ability prevent, the commission of any cognizable offence

Police to prevent cognizable offences

478B Scope —This section provides for the prevention of cognizable offences only Section 23 of the Police Act (V of 1861) appears to give wider powers for the prevention of offences in general—K E v Aga Kala S L B R 3 9 1, Cr L J 347

The word interpose in this section connotes the idea of actively intervening and not merely a prohibition by word of mouth The word is not wide enough to cover all orders given by police officers It was not intended by the Legislature that the police officer would be empowered to order a certain thing to be done or not to be done with the consequence of the disobedience being punishable under section 188 I P Code To hold that under section 149 Cr P Code a police officer can pass any order he thinks desirable would be to hold that his word is law If his powers were to be so wide it would be unnecessary for the Magistrate or the police to take any precautionary measure in advance it would be quite sufficient to send down a Sub Inspector to the scene and let him pass all sorts of sweeping orders the disobedience of which would entail conviction Such wide powers vested in a police officer would interfere unreasonably with the ordinary liberty of private citizens and could not have been contemplated by this section—Emp v Raghunath 47 All 205 26 Cr L J 599 A I R 1925 All 165

150 Every police officer receiving information of a design to commit any cognizable offence shall communicate such information to the police officer to whom he is subordinate, and to any other officer whose duty it is to prevent or take cognizance of the commission of any such offence

Information of design to commit such offences

As to the powers and duties of a police-officer see secs 8 85

151 A police officer knowing of a design to commit any cognizable offence may arrest, without orders from a Magistrate and without a warrant, the person so designing, if it appears to such officer that the commission of the offence cannot be otherwise prevented.

Arrest to prevent such offences

By sec 151, a Police officer may arrest without warrant if it appears to him that the commission of an offence cannot otherwise be prevented Should he do so his subsequent procedure must be regulated by sec 60 —Bengal Police Manual 2nd Edition p 374

Prevention of injury to public property

152. A police-officer may, of his own authority, interpose to prevent any injury attempted to be committed in his view to any public property, moveable or immoveable, or the removal or injury of any public landmark or buoy or other mark used for navigation

Inspection of weights and measures

153. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, without a warrant, enter any place within the limits of such station for the purpose of inspecting or searching for any weights or measures or instruments for weighing, used or kept therein, whenever he has reason to believe that there are in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing which are false

(2) If he finds in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing which are false, he may seize the same, and shall forthwith give information of such seizure to a Magistrate having jurisdiction.

478C This section expressly authorises an inspection of the weights and measures by an officer in charge of a Police station In comparing the weights used in the bazar some reasonable allowance should be made for wear and tear and of the rough and ready methods of bazar shop keepers —Crown v Nanak Chand 1913 P R 20 15 Cr L J 11

This section does not apply to the Police in the towns of Calcutta Bombay and Madras because similar provisions have been made in Calcutta by secs 55 and 56 of the Calcutta Police Act (Bengal Act IV of 1866) in Bombay by section 4 of the Bombay City Police Act IV of 1902 and in Madras by sec 32 of the Madras City Police Act III of 1888

See Act XXXI of 1871 relating to weights and measures of capacity, and the rules framed under sec 11 of that Act. As to offences relating to weights and measures see Chapter XIII, I P Code

PART V.

INFORMATION TO THE POLICE AND THEIR POWERS TO INVESTIGATE.

CHAPTER XIV

This Chapter except section 155 does not apply to the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay Section 155 only applies to the Police of Calcutta and Bombay —Q E v Nilmadhab 15 Cal 595 Q E v Israil Babaji 21 Bom 495 (499) For Section 164 see Note 509 under that section

154 Every information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence, if given orally to an officer in charge of a police station, shall be reduced to writing by him or under his direction, and be read over to the informant, and every such information, whether given in writing or reduced to writing as aforesaid shall be signed by the person giving it and the substance thereof shall be entered in a book to be kept by such officer in such form as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf

Information in cognizable cases

479 Scope —This section enables a Station House Officer to receive and record the information of the commission of a cognizable offence outside his station limits though he has no power under Sec 157 to conduct an investigation in respect of such offence—Vardamuri v Emp 1914 M W N 382 15 Cr L J 627

480 First Information —The word information in this section means something in the nature of a complaint or accusation or at least information of a crime given with the object of putting the police in motion in order to investigate as distinguished from information obtained by the Police when already investigating a crime When the information which is first given to the police is of such a vague and indefinite character that it cannot be treated as coming under section 154 so as to make it incumbent upon the officer in charge of the police station to start an investigation and he may reasonably require more information before doing so any further information given to him in such circumstances may fall within section 154 In such a case such further information will not fall within section 162 The information referred to in section 154 may come from more than one source and more than one such informat

may be recorded at or about the same time under this section but once the police have taken active steps to investigate any written statements taken by them fall within section 162 and are inadmissible in evidence—Gansa Oraon v K E 2 Pat 517 4 P L T 46 24 Cr L J 641

The information referred to in this section is the first information of the offence by whomsoever given The first information is that information which is given to the police first in point of time and not that which the police may select and record as first information—K E v Bhutnath 7 C W N 345 Thus where upon information given by the Chowkidar of an offence which was duly recorded in the station diary the Sub-Inspector went to the Hospital to see the dying man and took down his dying statement and filed it as the first information it was held that the statement of the Chowkidar and not that of the dying man was the first information of the offence—K E v Daulat 6 C W N 9 1 Where a person reported to a police officer that he had seen a certain woman with her throat cut and the officer did not make a record of the fact but subsequently treated an information lodged by the woman s father as the first information in the case held that the unrecorded information and not the information given by the woman s father was in fact the first information—Chandrika v K E 1 Pat 401 3 P L T 771 A I R 1922 Pat 535 The information given by a Chowkidar to the effect that the mother of the accused had told him that the latter had assaulted his younger brother whilst under the influence of drink and that he (the Chowkidar) had seen blood stains on the younger brother s head was entered in the station diary but not signed by the Chowkidar and the police officer proceeded to the scene of occurrence and there took down the statement of the wife of the accused and took her thumb impression thereon held that the Chowkidar s information was the first information in the case and that the statement made by the wife of the accused to the investigating officer was not admissible in evidence (sec 162)—Gansa Oraon v K E 2 Pat 517

A statement made by a witness during investigation after the police officer has actually arrived at the scene and himself seen what has happened is not first information—Chittar Singh v Emp 47 All 280 23 A L J 14 26 Cr L J 554 A statement by a witness to the police officer in the course of an investigation under the chapter and recorded under sec 161 cannot be treated as first information given to the Police under sec 154—Sultan v Wellbourre 3 Rang 577 A I R 19 5 Rang 364 26 Cr L J 1532 The first information is the information given out immediately after the occurrence and reported to the Police and not the information which has been elicited in the course of the investigation The first information is the basis upon which an investigation under this chapter commences It is erroneously thought that the information on which an investigation is commenced is not the first information of the offence and that when in the course of investigation something has been elicited which shows that an offence has been committed a first information can be recorded This is certainly not what the law contemplates In nearly every trial it is important that it should be known to the judicial officer what were the facts given out immediately after the occurrence and reported to the police and the object of a first information is to render him so acquainted—K E v Bhut Nath 7 C W N 315, Peary Mohan v Weston 16 C W N 145 13 Cr L J 65, Autor Singh v Emp 17 C W N 1213 14 Cr L J 641 The first information is the basis of the case and whether it be true or false it at any rate usually represents what was intended by the informant to be the case set up by him at the time All Criminal Courts should bear in mind the importance of examining when there appears to be any necessity to do so the first information of an offence reduced to writing in accordance with this section In view of the notorious tendency in this country to improve upon the original statement of facts to strengthen the case as it proceeds and sometimes to add to the persons originally named as the offenders it is of great importance to know what was said at first This is specially the case where the Court has to deal with evidence of recognition or where the facts of the crime are established but the question whether all the persons charged with its commission actually participated in it appears to admit of doubt—C P Cr Cir Part II No 9

Where the first information was recorded by a police officer some hours after he had begun investigation of the case but there was no previous information recorded and reduced to writing by him the report falls under this section—Dargahi v Emp 5' Cal 499 26 Cr L J 1213 A I R 19 5 Cal 831 But a statement recorded several days after the commencement of the investigation and after there has been some development is not only not the first information but has very little or no value at all as the original story because it can be made to fit into the case as then developed—Emp v Kampu 11 C W N 554 Peary Mohan v Weston 16 C W N 145 13 Cr L J 65 (Midnapur Damage Suit)

An information given to a village Magistrate which it was his bounden duty to pass on to a Police Station House officer who recorded it must be considered as having been given to the latter and recorded as first information under this section and cannot be regarded as a statement recorded during the course of an investigation under sec 162—Emp v Venkatarayudu 28 Mad 565

A statement which is merely the reproduction by the person making it of the statement said to have been made by another person is not first information and not admissible in evidence as such and although the evidence given by that person who furnished the information to the informant could be contradicted by the evidence of the latter it could not under Sec 155 (3) Evidence Act be contradicted by what the police recorded as the first information—Emp v Dina Bandhu 8 C W N 218

481 Evidentiary value —The first information recorded by the police is of considerable value at the trial because it shows on what materials the investigation commenced and what was the story then told —Emp v Kampu Kuhi 11 C W N 554 In every trial it is important that it should be known to the judicial officer what are the facts given out immediately after the occurrence and reported to the police and the object of the first information is to render him so acquainted For that purpose

the diary in which the first information was recorded as well as the memorandum if any made by the police of what the informant said is admissible in evidence—K E v Bhutnath 7 C W N 343

But although the first information is a document of considerable importance which is in practice always and very rightly produced and proved in criminal trials yet it is not a piece of substantive evidence and can be used only as a previous statement admissible to corroborate or contradict a statement made subsequently in Court—Choghalti v Emp 27 Cr L J 121 (Lah) Autor Singh v Emp 17 C W N 1213 14 Cr L J 647 Chittar v Emp 47 All 280 23 A L J 14 26 Cr L J 554 A report of the commission of an offence made at a thana may be used in a criminal trial to corroborate or cross examine a witness though such reports are no evidence of the existence of facts therein mentioned—Q E v Ram Sukh 1897 A W N 47

As the first information report can only be used by the prosecution for the purpose of corroborating in the witness box the person who supplied the information contained in the document it follows that if the informant himself can only speak from hearsay the report cannot be used to corroborate such inadmissible evidence of the witness—Sajjan Singh v Emp 6 Lah 437 26 Cr L J 1489 A I R 1925 Lah 418

Information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence given orally to an officer in charge of a Police station and reduced to writing by him under this section becomes a public document under section 74 Evidence Act and its contents may be proved by a certified copy under Sec 77 of that Act—Abdul Rahman v Q E U B R (189 —1896) 24

"Officer in charge of a police station".—As to the powers of superior Police officers under this section see Sec 551 In the absence of the Sub-Inspector or Head constable a constable left in charge of a Police station cannot accept any complaint or prepare and submit the first information report of any crime reported to him unless the Local Government shall have given him powers under section 4 (p)

482 Shall be reduced to writing —The object of a first information being to show what was the manner in which the occurrence was related when the case was first started, it should always be carefully and accurately recorded—Pyary Mohan v Weston 16 C W N 145 The first information must be recorded at once and it is not proper to wait until it is certain that an offence has been committed See K E v Bhutnath 7 C W N 345 Emp v Kampu Kuki 11 C W N 554 If the information be given orally it must be recorded in plain and simple language, as nearly as possible in the informant s own words The use of technical or legal expressions or high flown language or of lengthy and involved sentences is forbidden—Ben Pol Code p 372 It is of the utmost importance in recording the first information that the actual words of the complainant should be used and not an Urdu translation of them The recorder should take down the complaint as it is made and not merely his own impression of what the complainant meant to say—Leg and Ord N W P p 268

Power to question the informant.—If the information whether given orally or presented in writing be not complete in itself the

Police officer should elicit by interrogation such further information as may be necessary—Beng Pol Code, p 372 See also C P Pol Man, p 147

483 "Shall be signed" —The informant's statement when complete should be read over to him and he must sign it The report should show that this has been done In ' heinous cases the statement should be read over to the informant in the presence of one or more respectable and uninterested witnesses who should also be asked to sign it—Beng Pol Code p 372

Procedure in the case of written informations —If the information be tendered in writing it will be endorsed with the date of presentation, and the person tendering should be required to sign it (if he has not already done so) If the written information relates to facts with which the person tendering it is acquainted and which he is able and willing to state orally, the mere incident that a written report is presented does not make it unnecessary to take down the information from the reporter's own lips If the person who brings the written information knows nothing of the facts to which it refers, he should be required to state the circumstances under which he brought it—C P Pol Man p 147

Diary —The substance of the information shall be entered in a book, which is called the Station or General Diary, in which are recorded the substance of the information the names of the complainants and of persons arrested, offences charged, property taken into possession and witnesses examined See section 44 of the Police Act (V of 1861). This Diary is different from the Special Diary mentioned in sec. 172

484. Punishment :—As to punishment for giving false information to the Police, see secs 182, 203, 211 I P C Even if the information is not reduced to writing under this section, the person giving the false information may be convicted for preferring a false charge under sec. 211 I P. C—Mallappa v Emp, 27 Mad 127

A police officer refusing to enter in the Diary a report made to him concerning the commission of an offence, and making instead an entry totally different from the information given, is punishable under sec 177 I P C—Q E v Md Ismail Khan, 20 All 151

As to punishment for refusal by the person giving information to sign the statement made by him, see sec. 180 I P C

155. (1) When information is given to an officer in charge of a police-station of the commission, within the limits of such station, of a non-cognizable offence, he shall enter in a book to be kept as aforesaid the substance of such information and refer the informant to the Magistrate.

Information in non-cognizable cases

(2) No police-officer shall investigate a non-cognizable case without the order of . Magistrate of the first or seco

Investigation into non cognizable cases class having power to try such case or commit the same for trial, or of a Presidency Magistrate.

(3) Any police-officer receiving such order may exercise the same powers in respect of the investigation (except the power to arrest without warrant) as an officer in charge of a police-station may exercise in a cognizable case.

484A. Scope —This section applies to the Police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay see Queen Emp v Nilmadhab, 15 Cal 595, Q E v. Visram Babaji, 21 Bom 495

485. Investigation into non-cognizable cases :—Under this section, a Police officer cannot investigate a non cognizable case and cannot submit a report with reference to it without the order of a Magistrate If he receives information relating to the commission of a non cognizable offence he should enter the substance of it in the diary and refer the informant to a Magistrate If a Police officer of his own motion as where he has seen the alleged offence committed makes a formal report or complaint in respect of a non cognizable offence it will amount to a complaint within the meaning of sec 4 (h) for there is no provision by which he can in such a case make a Police report—K E v Sada, 26 Bom 150.

A police officer is not competent to make an investigation into a non cognizance offence but the investigation of a non cognizable offence would not be illegal if it is made during the investigation of a cognizable offence—Emp v Shivaswami 29 Bom L R 742 A I R 1927 Bom 440 (441)

A Police officer who has been ordered by a Magistrate to investigate a non cognizable offence cannot legally delegate the duty of making the investigation to a chief constable—Q E v Kalidas Ratanlal 488

It is incumbent upon a police officer who investigates a non cognizable case under the orders of a Magistrate to keep the diary, for which provision is made in section 172 infra—Hira Lal v Crown, 1918 P R 16, P L R 63 19 Cr L J. 517

The power to arrest without warrant is expressly taken away by this section from the Police in the investigation of a non cognizable offence —Nga Po v Q E U B R (1897 1901) 31

After the investigation is over, it is the duty of the Police to submit a report to the Magistrate under sec 173 Where information was given to the Police of the commission of a non cognizable offence, and the Magistrate ordered the Police to investigate the case and report, and the Police without submitting any report instituted proceedings against the informants under sec 211 of the I P C for giving false information, and the accused were convicted, it was held that the conviction was illegal, the Police should not be allowed to prosecute without submitting the report of the original case to the Magistrate and without having that case disposed of by the Magistrate—Emp v Appa Ragho, 17 Bom L R 69 16 Cr L J 161.

486. Magistrate's power to direct investigation —In In re Janki-

das 12 Bom 16

port Magistrates can do so only under section 202 after taking cognizance of the case But this view is quite unintelligible and renders sub section (2) meaningless In Emp v Vishwanath 8 Bom L R 589 Cr L J 183 it has been correctly held that a Magistrate has jurisdiction under sub-section ( ) of this section to refer a matter to the police for investigation and report even without a complaint and without examining the complainant So also in In re Asadulla 6 M L T 259 11 Cr L J 156 the Magistrate was held competent to order an investigation without first taking cognizance of the offence under sec 190

156 (1) Any officer in charge of a police station may, without the order of a Magistrate, investigate any cognizable case which a Court having jurisdiction over the local area within the limits of such station would have power to inquire into or try under the provisions of Chapter XV relating to the place of inquiry or trial

Investigation into cognizable cases

(2) No proceeding of a police officer in any such case shall at any stage be called in question on the ground that the case was one which such officer was not empowered under this section to investigate

(3) Any Magistrate empowered under Section 190 may order such an investigation as above mentioned

487 Scope —The reference to Chap XV in this section does not limit the application of this section to offences only but the investigation may extend to cases within the scope of section 55—Emp v Bhajan 1893 A W N 124

This section only empowers the Magistrate to direct investigation and a Court of Session has no power to do so—K E v Ali 1910 P R 11

If there is a delay in the investigation by the Police it is the duty of the committing Magistrate and failing him of the Sessions Judge to inquire fully into the circumstances of the delay and to consider its bearing on the prosecution story—Q E v Majesty 2 Bom L R 109

Sub section (3) of this section does not empower a Magistrate after he has taken cognizance of a case to order a police investigation under sec 156 and to direct the police to submit a report Sec 156 (3) only empowers the Magistrate to order a police inquiry in a case where the Magistrate does not himself issue process at once When a Magistrate takes cognizance of a complaint under sec 200 and refers the case to the police for inquiry under section 202 it is for him to pass the necessary order on the police report either under section 203 or under section 204 He can not direct the police if they find the case to be established to submit a charge sheet In other words the Magistrate after he had acted under Ch XVI cannot proceed under Ch XIV—Isaf Nasya v Emp 54 Cal 303 28 Cr L J 577

Procedure where cognizable offence suspected

157 (1) If from information received or otherwise, an officer in charge of a police station has reason to suspect the commission of an offence which he is empowered under Section 156 to investigate, he shall forthwith send a report of the same to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of such offence upon a police report, and shall proceed in person, or shall depute one of his subordinate officers not being below such rank as the Local Government may by general or special order prescribe in this behalf to proceed to the spot, investigate the facts and circumstances of the case and, if necessary, to take measures for the discovery and arrest of the offender

Provided as follows —

Where local investigation dispensed with

(a) when any information as to the commission of any such offence is given against any person by name and the case is not of a serious nature, the officer in charge of a police station need not proceed in person or depute a subordinate officer to make an investigation on the spot,

Where police officer in charge sees no sufficient ground for investigation

(b) if it appear to the officer in charge of a police station that there is no sufficient ground for entering on an investigation he shall not investigate the case

(2) In each of the cases mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of the proviso to sub section (1), the officer in charge of the police station shall state in his said report his reasons for not fully complying with the requirements of that sub section, and in the case mentioned in clause (b) such officer shall also forthwith notify to the informant, if any, in such manner as may be prescribed by the Local Government, the fact that he will not investigate the case or cause it to be investigated

Change —The italicised words have been added by sec 3? of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

"Not below such ... behalf"—This provision did not exist in the Bill of 1914 but the Select Committee which sat on the Bill in 1916 added the words "not below the rank of a Sub Inspector". The amendment however did not meet with the approval of the Joint Committee and they made the present amendment. "In view of the general objection to the amendment which confines investigations to officers not below the rank of a Sub-Inspector we have made an amendment which enables Local Governments to specify a lower rank. We recognise that police work in some provinces might be severely hampered by the above restriction."—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

"And if necessary to take measures"—These words have been substituted for the words "and to take such measures as may be necessary". Under the old law the taking of measures necessary for the discovery and arrest of the offender was incumbent on the police officer; under the present law the police officer has an option to take measures for the arrest of the offender if necessary. "This amendment makes it clear that the Police have a discretion in arresting a person accused in a cognizable case."—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

"And in the case ... investigated"—"This amendment provides that if the Police do not investigate a complainant the complainant shall be informed to that effect."—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914). The words "in such manner as may be prescribed by the Local Government" have been added by the Select Committee of 1916.

Sections 154 and 157.—Whereas every information covered by the former section (154) must be reduced to writing as provided in that section it is only that information which raises a reasonable suspicion of the commission of a cognizable offence within the jurisdiction of the Police officer to whom it is given which compels action under the latter section (157) although of course a report would be sent to the Magistrate—Punj. Cir., Chap. XLV, page 171.

487A. "From information received".—These words refer to the information given in section 154—Jagdami v. Mahadeo 14 C W N 326; Nandarum v. Emp. 1914 M W N 382, 15 Cr L J 622.

488. Investigation of offence outside jurisdiction.—There is nothing in this section to prevent the police of one police station from conducting an investigation within the jurisdiction of another police circle. Therefore where the police Inspector of T circle during the investigation of a burglary sent some constables to the house of the accused situated in another police circle and the constables locked the house in question and kept guard of the house it was held that the Inspector of T circle did not act ultra vires—Natha Singh v. Crown 1915 P R 12, 16 Cr L J 551.

489. Report.—The report required by this section is the first report of the offence which an officer in charge of a Police station is required to make to a Magistrate as soon as he receives information of an offence and before entering on its investigation. It is to be made direct to the Magistrate in order that he may have an early information and be in a position to act, if necessary, under section 159—Bombay Police Manual, page 91

A report under this section is necessary for taking proceedings under sec 159—Mouli v Navrangi, 4 C W. N 351 The Police report under this section would give the Magistrate jurisdiction to enter upon an inquiry But he may determine as he thinks fit, either to take no further steps or to take cognizance of the offence under sec 190 (b) or to proceed under Sec 203—Anonymous, 2 Weir 119

Failure to send a report as required by this section is a serious breach of duty which may lead to failure of justice Such conduct on the part of the police would lead to a grave suspicion that the police were collecting false evidence—Crown v. Baloch Khan, 4 S L R 38 11 Cr L J. 498

Report, whether a complaint —A report submitted in the usual way under secs. 157 and 173 is not intended to be and could not be a complaint within the meaning of Sec 195—Mokham v K E, 6 O C 1

Report, whether public document—Right of accused to get copies before trial —The report made by a Police officer in compliance with this section is not a public document within the meaning of section 74 of the Evidence Act, and consequently an accused person is not entitled before trial to have a copy of such report—Arumugam v Karuppayi, 20 Mad. 189

Reports under S 157 how submitted

158. (1) Every report sent to a Magistrate under S. 157 shall, if the Local Government so directs, be submitted through such superior officer of police as the Local Government, by general or special order, appoints in that behalf.

(2) Such superior officer may give such instructions to the officer in charge of the Police station as he thinks fit, and shall, after recording such instructions on such report, transmit the same without delay to the Magistrate.

Power to hold investigation or preliminary inquiry.

159. Such Magistrate, on receiving such report, may direct an investigation or, if he thinks fit, at once proceed, or depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to proceed, to hold a preliminary inquiry into, or otherwise to dispose of, the case in manner provided in this Code.

490. Magistrate's power to hold investigation or inquiry :—An inquiry can be made under this section only on a police report submitted within the terms of section 157, i e, on a preliminary report made before the completion of the police investigation or inquiry, but if the report is submitted after investigation, the Magistrate is not empowered to act under this section. Thus, where information was laid before the police charging a person with criminal trespass into a house with intent to have improper intercourse with a female therein, and the police reported that they did not believe that the object was to commit the offence stated but that they were not disinclined to believe the charge of trespass, it was held that as the report was made after investigation into the offence, the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to act under this section—Mathi v. Naurangi, 4 C W N 351.

The inquiry which a Magistrate is competent to hold under this section is a preliminary inquiry Therefore where a report of the commission of an offence has been made by the police after full inquiry into the truth of the information given them as to the commission of the offence, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make any further inquiry into the same offence—In re Kandhiya Lal, 1899 A W N 87

An inquiry under this section can be made only on the submission of a police report if however a complaint is made to the Magistrate, he is bound to proceed under sec 200—Loke Nath v Sanyasi, 30 Cal 923

Where a case comes before a first class Magistrate under the provisions of secs 157 and 159 he can depute a sub Deputy Magistrate to hold an investigation or a preliminary inquiry The latter can also, under sec. 164 (1), record a statement of a witness made before him in the course of the police investigation—Harendra v Emp, 40 C L J 313, 26 Cr L J 307

491. When Magistrate cannot try the case :—Where a Magistrate took an active part in the capture of parties charged with the commission of an offence, and then tried them himself on that charge, it was held that he was bound to state to the accused, so far as he could, what were the facts he himself observed and to which he himself could bear testimony, and the prisoner in such a situation had a right to cross-examine the Magistrate whose evidence should be recorded and form part of the record in the case The proper course, however, for the Magistrate to have taken in such a case would have been to decline to try the case, and to ask that it should be taken up by some other Magistrate—In re Hurro Chunder 20 W R 76

160. Any police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter may, by order in writing, require the attendance before himself of any person being within the limits of his own or any adjoining station, who, from the information given or otherwise, appears to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case; and such person shall attend as so required.

Police officer's power to require attendance of witnesses

492. Order in writing :—The order to attend under this section must be in writing In the absence of an order in writing, a person required orally to appear before a police officer as a witness cannot be convicted under section 174 I P C for disobedience of such order—In re Veerasamy, 1 Weir 86 So also, where a Police Inspector sent a constable to bring two persons for inquiring of them about an offence, and the order was not in writing, the persons need not accompany the constable If t

persons accompanied the constable they could not be said to have been in lawful custody of the constable and any person inducing those two persons not to accompany the constable could not be held guilty of rescuing them from lawful custody—Q E v Purshotam Ratanlal 850

493 "Require the attendance" —An officer in charge of a police station may require the attendance of persons whose evidence is necessary and the persons summoned are bound to obey the order but in no case can the police compel a witness by force to attend before him—Q v Tarinee 7 W R 3 Q E v Purshotam Ratanlal 850 See also Bengal Police Manual 2nd Ed p 378

Detention —A police officer has no power to arrest or to detain even for a single moment any person whose evidence is required for the purpose of investigation—Q v Tarinee 7 W R 3

Security bond to appear —There is no provision in this Code authorising a police officer to take security bond for the production of any person before the police and the Magistrate has therefore no power to alter it and impose fresh conditions under it—In re Chandra Sekhar 11 Cal 77 But see Crown v Kanshi Ram 1913 P R 22 14 Cr L J 631, cited under secs 497 and 499

494 Who may be required to attend —Accused —This section applies only to the case of persons who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case i e witnesses or possible witnesses only an order under this section cannot be made requiring the attendance of an accused person with a view to his answering the charge made against him The intention of the legislature seems to have been only to provide a facility for obtaining evidence and not for procuring the attendance of the accused who may be arrested at any time if necessary —Q E v Saminada 7 Mad 274 Emp v Ratan 4 Bom L R 641 Emp v Nga Tha 4 Rang 72 27 Cr L J 881 Q E v Jadub Das 27 Cal 295 Therefore where the accused person refused to obey an order under this section and was therefore taken into custody by the police it was held that the Police was guilty of wrongful confinement although the police was justified in arresting without warrant upon the original charge made against the accused—Lakshmigadu 2 Weir 121

Woman —It is an unusual course for the Police to take a number of women away from their village to the police station on the pretext that they wished to examine them The examination should be properly conducted at the women s own houses—Haladhar v Sub-Inspector 9 C W N 199

"Shall attend" —If a person fails to attend before a police officer making an investigation under this chapter he is liable to be prosecuted for an offence under section 174 I P C—Q E v Jogendra 24 Cal 320

161 (1) Any police officer making an investigation under this Chapter or any police officer not below such rank as the local Government may, by general or special order prescribe in this behalf, acting on the requisition of such officer may examine orally any person supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case

Examination of witnesses by police

(2) Such person shall be bound to answer all questions relating to such case put to him by such officer, other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge or to a penalty or forfeiture

Change —The italicised words have been added by sec 33 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) This amendment is similar to that made in section 157 (1)

Scope —The provisions of this section should not be utilised in any but heinous cases Heinous cases include cases triable exclusively by a Court of Session and those cases in which special diaries are submitted through the Magistrate either to the Commissioner only or both to the Commissioner and to the Deputy Inspector General or Inspector General of Police—Beng Pol Code p 432

496 Examination of accused before arrest —When a police officer has evidence before him upon which he is bound to arrest a person he should not preliminary to his arrest obtain a statement from that person professedly under this section and reduce it to writing—Q E v Jadub Das 27 Cal 295

497. Statement of witnesses —Not privileged under section 172 —Where a Police officer making an investigation under this section took statements from the persons who were afterwards called as witnesses the accused person would be entitled to call for and inspect such documents and cross examine the witnesses thereon as such statements would not amount to a portion of the diary referred to in sec 172—Bikas v Q E 16 Cal 610 Sheru Sha v Q E 20 Cal 642 Emp v Rudra Singh 1896 A W N 193, Emp v Sadwa Teli 9 C P L R 33 Nga Po v Q E U B R (1897 1901) 29 Contra—Q E v Mannu 19 All 390 Q E v Nasiruddin 16 All 207 But under the amended section 162 these statements whether included in the diary or not can be used only under the circumstances mentioned in sec 162

Statements not the property of Police —There is no prohibition against any person present at the time when depositions are being taken or confessions made to take down in writing what either a prisoner or a witness says—In re Kristo Lal Nag 10 Cal 256

498 Recording of statements —Statements made by a witness to a police officer under this section during an investigation may be reduced to writing But it is not obligatory on the Police officer to reduce to writing any statement made to him He may do so only if he likes —Reg v Uttamchand 11 Bom H C R 120 The words and may reduce into writing any statement made by the person so examined which occurred in the Code of 1882 at the end of the first para have been omitted from the Code in 1898

It was held that the statements of witnesses should not be recorded in the special diary mentioned in sec 172—Dadan Gazi v Emp 33 Cal 1023 But it does not now matter whether these statements are recorded in the special diary or not their use being controlled solely by sec 162 (Woodroffe p 178)

It is not necessary that the statements of witnesses recorded under this section should be in the form of alternative question and answer It is enough if the statement so recorded is substantially an answer to the questions put to the witnesses—Q E v Bhagwanta 15 All 11 Q E v Abdur Rahaman 1896 P R 7

The statements need not be signed by the witnesses It is not illegal for a police officer obtaining the signature of witnesses to a statement under this section to authenticate his record of such statement but there is nothing to compel them to sign it—Q E v Bhagwanta 15 All 11

499 Privilege of witnesses —A statement made by a witness in answer to a question put to him by a police officer in the course of an investigation under this section is privileged and cannot be made the foundation of a charge of defamation—Q E v Govinda 16 Mad 235 nor can he be made liable in an action for damages for any words spoken during such investigation—Methuram v Jagannath 28 Cal 794

Witness not bound to speak the truth —Under the Code of 1882 a witness was bound to answer truly all questions put to him under this section but the effect of the omission of the word truly from the Code of 1898 has been to do away with the legal obligation to speak the truth—Nga Pyu v Emp 10 Bur L T 259 18 Cr L J 843 Therefore witnesses cannot be prosecuted for giving false evidence under this section—Q E v Sankaralinga 23 Mad 544 Nga Po v K E 9 Bur L T 203 18 Cr L J 98 The Select Committee (1898) observed — It seems to us unfair that a man should be liable to be convicted of giving false evidence on the strength or by the aid of a statement supposed to have been given to a Police officer but which is not given on oath which he has not signed and which he has had no opportunity of verifying such statement may be hurriedly taken down as rough notes the police officer is not trained in taking evidence and the notes are often faired out by another officer They bear no resemblance to depositions and ought to have no weight as such attached to them The provisions of sections 202 and 203 of the Penal Code appear to us to afford a sufficient safeguard against false information

This change in the law supersedes the following cases decided under the Code of 1882 and earlier Codes—10 Cal 405 8 C L R 236 20 W R 41 8 Bom 216 11 Bom 659 15 All 11 1896 P R 7

Since a person making a statement under this section cannot be said to give information within the meaning of sec 182 I P C he cannot be prosecuted under that section for giving false information if the statement made by him be false—Mangi v Crown 1914 P L R 227 15 Cr L J 650 nor under section 211 I P C—Chinna v Emp 31 Mad 506

500 Refusal to answer questions —Under this section a person answering questions put by a police officer is not bound to answer truly Therefore a refusal to answer such questions is not punishable under sec 179 I P C—In re Savanna 1 Weir 111 Q E v Sankarlinga 23 Mad 544 Gul Hira v I I 1908 P R 7 Crown v Mahamad 6 S L R 277 14 Cr L J 302

Incriminating questions —Under sub section (2) a witness is not bound to answer questions put to him by a police officer the answer to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge—Q E v Anna Ratanlal 518 Q E v Kalidas Ratanlal 488 A person examined under this section by the police with respect to an offence with which he may himself be charged and convicted is not bound to speak the truth and in such a case a conviction for giving false evidence would be illegal —Q E v Usuphkhan Ratanlal 619

Statement to police not to be signed or admitted in evidence

162. (1) No statement made by any person to a police officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter shall, if taken down in writing, be signed by the person making it, nor shall such writing be used as evidence Provided that when any witness is called for the prosecution whose statement has been taken down in writing as aforesaid, the Court shall, on the request of the accused, refer to such writing and may then, if the Court thinks it

Change —Sub-section (1) of this section with its provisos has been throughly redrafted by sec 34 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

Legislative history of the section and reasons for the change —'The amendment of section 162 has been discussed at great length by the Committee It has been the subject of amendment before and of constant difficulty in the Courts We therefore propose to recast the section and we think that a note as to its previous history will be instructive

' Under the original Code of 1861 (section 145) a Police officer could examine potential witnesses and reduce their statements to writing but the writing was not to be part of the record or used as evidence The Code of 1872 maintained the above provisions merely adding (section 119) that no person when examined by the Police should be bound to answer incriminating questions The only material change made by the Code of 1882 (section 162) was that instead of the provision that the statement when so reduced to writing should not be used as evidence, it was provided that no statement made by a witness if reduced to writing should be used as evidence against the accused thus making it clear that the provision in question was intended for the benefit of the accused.

The new section did not lay down in terms that the accused might not use the written record of a witness statement for the purpose of his defence and indeed it rather suggested that he was entitled to do so Accordingly cases occurred in which the accused demanded to see the statements which the police had taken down in order that he might use, for the purpose of his defence anything that appeared therein to his advantage and the Calcutta High Court ruled that he was entitled to do so The Allahabad High Court on the other hand held that the writings in effect formed part of the police-diary and were therefore privileged from inspection and this was the position which stood to be dealt with when the Amending Act of 1898 was under consideration There was evidently a good deal to be said on both sides as will appear from the report of the Select Committee (1898) on the Bill which is quoted in extenso below —

> The question involved (namely whether the accused is entitled to inspect statements taken down by the police under section 161) is full of difficulty In the first place it is essential in the interests of public justice that the sources of police information should be kept secret If the names of informers or detectives and the nature of their information be disclosed the detection of crime would be seriously crippled In the second place it is unfair to a witness that his evidence should be discredited on the strength of an alleged statement made to a policeman which he may have had no opportunity of verifying or correcting Such statements must necessarily be often taken down hurriedly and may be in correctly copied out They are not taken down as depositions or with regard to the rules of evidence but merely to aid the police in the course of their investigation But in the third place it may be most important for the accused to show that a witness called for the prosecution is telling a story substantially different from that which he told when first questioned by the police We have endeavoured to reconcile these conflicting interests by reverting to the language of the Codes of 1861 and 1872 and adding a proviso compelling the Court on the application of the accused to refer to such statements and then empowering it in its discretion to allow him to have copies of them We then provide for the mode in which these statements are to be used It is clear that a witness ought not to have his credit impeached on the strength of a statement alleged to have been made to a policeman unless and until it is shown that he has made that statement

The result was not altogether a happy one It will be noticed that the section deals mainly with the writing and enacts that it shall not be used in evidence with a proviso that the Court may in its discretion direct the accused to be furnished with a copy of it—presumably only in order that the accused may know that there is something in the writing which may help his defence—and goes on to say that the statement (i e what the witness said to the Police officer) may be used in the ordinary course to impeach the credit of the witness obviously implying that for this purpose it must be duly proved

It seems clear that all that the amendment of 1898 intended to effect was to make it clear that the accused had no right to call for or see the record of any statements taken down by the police under section 161 unless the Court thought that in the interests of justice he should be allowed to do so It did not purport to deal with and has left untouched the further question whether or not a statement made by a witness under section 161 as apart from the written record of the statement might be used by the prosecution for the purpose of corroborating one of their witnesses under section 157 of the Evidence Act and this is at all events one of the principal difficulties with which we have to deal now

The re draft of the section which we propose will make it clear that the statements taken under section 161 (and not merely the written records of such statements) are not to be used in any way or for any purposes except as allowed by the proviso Having regard to the fact that the making of such statements is compulsory under section 161 and to the way in which and the circumstances under which they are usually recorded we do not think that they are of any corroborative value where the witness merely repeats the same statement in Court and that they ought not therefore to be allowed to be used for the purpose of corroboration under section 157 of the Evidence Act If the really material fact to the prosecution is that a statement was made to the police on a particular date or at a particular place this fact will of course still be provable in the ordinary course and it will be open to the Courts or to a jury to make any proper deduction from this fact and the action which was taken on it The amendment will also we think make it clear that if the accused wishes to rely on anything in the previous statement of a witness to the police of which he has been allowed by the Court to have a copy he will have to prove it in the ordinary way If the witness admits this in cross examination it will of course be sufficient if he denies the contradiction and the police officer who took it down is called by the prosecution the previous statement of the witness on the point may be proved by him if he is not called by the prosecution the Court would no doubt itself in most cases call him or if the accused is calling evidence in support of his defence it may be worth his while to call the Police officer himself But it is clear that unless the previous contradictory statement is proved in some way in accordance with law it ought not to depreciate the witness s statement on oath It will be observed that under our amendment if any part of the previous statement of the witness is used for the purpose of cross-examination by the accused any other part of it may be used by the prosecution within the proper limits of re examination This is we think the only way in which the previous statement ought to be allowed to be used by the prosecution —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

500A Scope of section —The ban of sec 162 applies only to statements made to a police officer making an investigation under Chap XIV If the investigation contemplated by that Chapter is finished then this section cannot be invoked to prohibit any statement made to a police officer at some time subsequent to the investigation If on the other hand statements made to police officers when preparing a map or holding an identification parade are statements made in the course of an investigation under Ch XIV then they fall within the scope of the prohibition embodied in sec 162—Emp v Nga Than 4 Rang 72 5 Bur L J 30 27 Cr L J 881

The first information report (sec 154) against an accused is not a statement within the contemplation of sec 162 inasmuch as it is not made in the course of an investigation Again section 154 requires it to be signed whereas statements under sec 162 are forbidden to be signed even when recorded in writing—Atimaddy v Emp, 54 Cal 237 44 C L J 253 28 Cr L J 99

Section 162 is clear enough to exclude any statement made by any person and therefore a statement by the investigating officer that he examined witnesses for the defence in the course of the investigation is not admissible—Bhagirathi v Emp 30 C W N 147 27 Cr L J 222

Statements made to a police officer in the course of an investigation under sec 174 even though it is conducted in the presence of two or more respectable men are none the less statements made to a police officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter within the meaning of sec 162—In re Maruthamuthu Kadamban 52 M L J 601 28 Cr L J 634

501 Statement —Prior to the present amendment a distinction was drawn between writing and the statement embodied in the writing

—Faindra v Emp 36 Cal 281 and the result was that the writing i e the document containing the statement could not be used as evidence against the accused but the statement could be proved against him—Lalji v Emp 1886 P R 15 Emp v Hanmaraddi 39 Bom 58 16 Bom L R 603 K E v Nilakanta 35 Mad 247 22 M L J 490 Rustam v K E 7 A L J 468 (per Karamat Husain J) In Emp v Narayan Raghunath 32 Bom 111 it was remarked that the distinction between the writing and the statement was a distinction of form rather than that of substance and that therefore a statement could not be admitted or used in evidence against the accused

The present section as now amended prohibits the statement also to be used for any purpose except as expressly provided in the first proviso and the above rulings are no longer good law See the observations of Macpherson J in Badri Chowdhury v K E 6 P L T 620 A I R 1926 Pat 20 27 Cr L J 362

A statement made by a witness to the police that he knew nothing about the occurrence or a statement that he did not say anything to the police about the occurrence is not a statement within the meaning of sec 162 otherwise the absence of a statement would be equivalent to a statement—Aseruddin v Emp 53 Cal 980 28 Cr L J 273 (But it is doubtful if such a statement would not be a statement under section 161—Ibid)

The statement contemplated by sec 162 is not a complete statement recording every word uttered by the witness It is immaterial whether the statement as recorded is the actual record of the words used by the witness It is sufficient even if the statement is recorded in the form of a memorandum of what the witness had said to the police officer such a statement is available for the purpose of contradicting the witness—Mafizaddy v Emp 31 C W N 940 28 Cr L J 805

Statement must not be signed —Statements of witnesses taken in the course of police investigation must not be signed even if they are signed contrary to the provisions of this section they do not thereby become statements taken under sec 154 and do not become admissible as first information The police by violating the provisions of section 162 and thus committing an illegality cannot make admissible statements which are inadmissible under the law—In re Narayana Menon A I R 1925 Mad 106 25 Cr L J 401

501A Statement of accused —This section refers only to statements of persons examined as witnesses by the police in the course of investigation and not to statements made by accused persons as such—Rarnun v K E 7 Lah 84 27 Cr L J 709 A I R 1926 Lah 88 Hussain v Emp 20 S L R 74 27 Cr L J 456 Ganpati v Emp 6 N L R 180 12 Cr L J 60 Azimaddy v Emp 54 Cal 237 A statement made by an accused person to the police which is not in the nature of a confession

502 Use of statement —See the first proviso Under section 162 as recently amended by the Amendment Act of 1923 statements made by any person to a Police-officer in the course of an investigation under Ch XIV shall not be used for any purpose except to contradict a witness at the request of the accused in the manner provided in the first proviso of the section—Gahur Howladar v Emp 30 C W N 503 27 Cr L J 641

A statement made by a witness to the police can be used only to contradict the witness it cannot be used to corroborate his evidence before the Court such a procedure is distinctly opposed to the provision of the law in this behalf—Emp v Jijibhai 22 Bom 596 K E v Kumaramuthu 25 M L T 379 20 Cr L J 354 Bhulai v K E. 13 O C 7 11 Cr L J 117 Section 157 of the Evidence Act lays down that in order to corroborate the testimony of a witness any former statement made by such witness relating to the same fact is admissible in evidence, but this general rule is controlled by the special provisions of sec 162 Cr P Code This section as it existed prior to its amendment in 1923, expressly prohibited the use of the record containing the statement of a witness to the police as evidence against the accused and the controversy as to the admissibility of such statement by oral evidence has now been set at rest by the amendment made in 1923 which has substituted the words nor shall such statement or any record thereof be used for any purpose at any inquiry or trial for the words ' nor shall such writing be used as evidence The result is that not only is the record of the statement of a witness taken under sec 161 excluded from evidence but also the proof of such statement by oral evidence for the purpose of corroborating the testimony of the witness for the prosecution—Rakha v Crown 6 Lah 171, 26 P L R 304 27 Cr L J 438

This section does not prevent the prosecution, after a witn-

Where a Magistrate used the statements made before the chief constable during the police inquiry without conforming to the provisions of this section and without affording the accused an opportunity of cross examining the constable and considered those statements as corroborative of the evidence given by the witnesses at the trial and convicted those whose names were mentioned both in Court and in those statements and acquitted those whose names were not mentioned therein it was held that such use of the statements being grossly irregular and having seriously prejudiced the accused the whole trial was bad and that the irregularity was not cured by sec 537—Emp v Babaji 9 Bom L R 366 5 Cr L J 353

It is also illegal for a Magistrate to use as evidence against the accused the statements made by prosecution witnesses before the police by comparing them with their depositions and as a result of that comparison to convict him—Emp v Laxman 9 Bom L R 895 Emp v Narayan 32 Bom 111 Bahauala v Emp 1886 P R 1

Whether in a Police Diary or otherwise —These words have been added by the Amendment Act of 1923 The object of making this amendment is that the police should no longer claim any privilege in respect of any statement on the ground that it is a statement recorded under sec 172 There is now no distinction between a statement recorded under sec 162 and a statement recorded under sec 172 if a police officer purports to record a statement under the latter section Whether a statement is recorded under sec 162 or 172 an accused person is entitled to a copy of it for cross examination—Mafizaddi v Emp 31 C W N 940 28 Cr L J 805

First Proviso—Scope —The proviso deals with one case and one case only the case of witnesses called for the prosecution whose statements have been taken down in writing as aforesaid And the only con cession it makes to the accused is to allow him upon his request and subject to the Court s discretion (under the second proviso) to have access to a copy of the recorded statement and thereupon to use it for one purpose and one purpose only—viz to break down the evidence of the prosecution witnesses already standing against him On the face of it the proviso does not cover the case of a witness for the defence whose statements may have been recorded by a policeman nor allows the prosecution to impeach the credit of such a witness by examining him upon any written statement he may have made to the police—Emp v Naraya 3- Bom 111 Q E v Madho 1- All 3 Nga Yon v Emp U B R (1918) 84 19 Cr L J 726 K E v Lithe 6 Bom L R 963 26 Cr L J 2-3 A I R 1924 Bom 510 According to the recently amended provisions of section 162 statements of witnesses recorded by the investigating officer can only be used to assist the accused in particular by showing that a witness who in Court deposes to certain facts has in such a statement at an earlier stage given an account or made statements which are contradictory to the testimony which he gives in Court They cannot be used in cross examining the witnesses not merely to show contradictions but at large for the purposes of showing that the statements did not corroborate or assist the story as put forward in the first information report—Badri Choudhuri v K E 6 P L T 620 A I R 19 6 Pat 20 27 Cr L J 36

The first proviso to this section makes an exception in favour of the accused but it is an exception most jealously circumscribed under the proviso itself Any part of such statement which has been reduced to writing may in certain limited circumstances be used to contradict the witness who made it The limitations are strict (1) only the statement of a prosecution witness can be used and (2) only if it has been reduced to writing (3) only a part of the statement recorded can be used (4) such part must be duly proved (5) it must be a contradiction of the evidence of the witness in Court (6) it must be used as provided in section 145 of the Evidence Act that is it can be used only after the attention of the witness has been drawn to it or to those parts of it which it is intended to use for the purpose of contradiction and there are others Such a statement which does not contradict the testimony of the witness cannot be proved in any circumstances and it is not permissible to use the recorded statement as a whole to show that the witness did not say something to the investigating officer—Ibid (per Macpherson J) But in a later case the same High Court has taken a different view To construe section 162 as meaning that while any part of the statement of a witness to the Police may be used to contradict him yet if the contradiction consists in this that a statement made at the trial was not made in any part of the statement to the Police such a contradiction cannot be proved seems to be an artificial construction I am unable to adopt it and with respect I must dissent from that view —per Ross J in Itlaf Khan v Emp 5 Pat 340 7 P L T 364 27 Cr L J 796 (dissenting from Badri Chaudhury v Emp, cited above)

The words if duly proved in the proviso clearly show that the record of the statement cannot be admitted in evidence straightway but that officer before whom the statement was made should ordinarily be examined as to any alleged statement or omitted statement that is relied upon by the accused for the purpose of contradicting the witness—K. E v Vithu, 26 Bom L R 965, A I R 1924 Bom 510, 26 Cr L J 223

There is no presumption as to the genuineness of the statements of witnesses entered in the police diaries, and unless they are duly proved, the evidence given in Court cannot be contradicted by them—Labh Singh v Emp, 6 Lah 24, 26 Cr L J 1153, A I R 1925 Lah 337

Under sec 162, no statement made by a witness to a Police officer in the course of an investigation under Ch XIV if not reduced into writing can be used at the trial for any purpose whatsoever It cannot be used either to corroborate or contradict a witness either for the benefit of the accused or against him If such a statement has been reduced into writing, its use for any purpose whatsoever is also prohibited unless (a) it is a statement of a witness called for the prosecution, (b) the Court has ordered the accused to be furnished with a copy of it and (c) the written record of the statement has been duly proved It may then be used within the limits set forth in the proviso to sec 162—Bahadur Singh v Emp, 7 Lah 264, 27 P L R 379, 27 Cr L J 803

The words such statement' means the statement reduced to writing, and does not cover any statement—Venkatasubbia v Emp 48 Mad 610, 48 M L J 195, 26 Cr L J 721 The application of the new section is confined, as the old section was to the written record the new section is designed to confer on the accused person a legal right which the old section did not give, of having a copy of such written statement for the purpose of using it to contradict the witness and as regards proof and use of oral statement, the law is unaltered and is as it was before All oral statements which were previously admissible under the Indian Evidence Act and the use of which was not prohibited by the Cr Pro Code are still admissible and may be used—Ibid The Rangoon High Court however, holds that the words if reduced into writing only apply to the words "be signed by the person making it and the use of an oral statement is therefore equally prohibited along with that of a written statement The words before the amendment were such writing , these words have been replaced by the words such statement or any record thereof ' Why should the legislature drop the words ' such writing if only written statements were aimed at ?—Emp v Nga Tha, 4 Rang 72 5 Bur L J 30, 27 Cr L J 881 (F B)

'On the request of the accused —The procedure prescribed by sec 162 must be strictly followed A Court is not justified in admitting a statement made by a person to a police officer, unless the accused or his pleader asks the Court to refer to such record Sec 162 is in this point explicit—Nga Po v Emp, 4 Rang 356, 27 Cr L J 1371

503. Right of accused to get copy of statement —Under the first proviso as it stood before the present amendment, the words 'may if the Court thinks it expedient' (see the old section cited prallel) show that the accused was not entitled, as a matter of right, to obtain access to a copy of the written statement. His right to obtain such copy was left to the discretion of the Court—Emp v Narayan, 32 Bom 111 Q E v Nasiruddin 16 All 207 The accused could get a copy only if the Court thought it expedient in the interests of justice to furnish him with such copy—Dadan Gazi v Emp 33 Cal 1023, In re Thirumengada, 26 M L J 182 15 Cr L J 289

Under the present law the words 'shall direct' would seem to give the accused a right to obtain the copies See Venkatasubbiah v Emp, 48 Mad 640 48 M L J 195 26 Cr L J 721 (But such right has again been curtailed by the second proviso) Under the amended section 162 it is obligatory on the part of a Judge to give the accused copies of the statements recorded under section 161 subject only to the exclusion of irrelevant matters which the public interest requires should not be disclosed—Madari Sikdar v Emp 54 Cal 307 28 Cr L J 582

The application to get a copy of the recorded statement must be made at the time when the prosecution witness whom it is desired to test by reference to his recorded statements appears on the box But if, after all the prosecution witnesses have been examined, the defence applies to the Court to summon the Inspector of Police to appear with his diary, the application may be refused But even in such a case, the Court ought to send and peruse the statements recorded in the diary and if on such perusal it thinks that it would be expedient in the ends of justice (and that otherwise a gross miscarriage of justice may result) to allow the accused to use such statements, it would be open to the Court to furnish the accused with copies of the statements even at such a late stage and recall the witnesses and permit cross examination—Dadan Gazi v Emp, 33 Cal 1023 The stage in an inquiry or trial at which an accused person is entitled to ask for a copy of a statement made by a prosecution witness to the police in the course of the investigation is the stage when the witness is called for the prosecution that is when he is under cross examination and has already made a statement which the accused wishes to contradict by proof of his former statements to the police Consequently the accused is not entitled to the copies before cross examination is opened at all—In re Peramasami, 22 L W 784 27 Cr L J. 100 A. I R 1926 Mad 183 It is only at the time of cross examination and when the cross examination has laid the foundation for the suggestion that the evidence given by the witness in Court is contradicted by his statement recorded under sec 161 that the accused is entitled to ask the Judge to refer to the writing and grant him copies Section 162 does not impose a duty upon the Judge of granting copies of the statement recorded under sec 161 before the cross examination has been opened—Madari Sikdar v Emp, 54 Cal. 307, 28 Cr L J 582

Where the accused was furnished with materially inaccurate copies of the statements of a prosecution witness recorded in the police diary, and on discovering the mistake he applied to have that witness recalled for the purpose of re cross examination in order generally to impeach his credit but the Court refused the application, held that the accused was entitled to have the witness recalled, and the Court committed an e

507. Inducement, threat or promise :—Section 24 of the Evidence Act runs thus —

"A confession made by an accused person is irrelevant in a criminal proceeding if the making of the confession appears to the Court to have been caused by any inducement, threat or promise having reference to the charge against the accused person proceeding from a person in authority, and sufficient in the opinion of the Court to give the accused person grounds which would appear to him reasonable for supposing that by making it, he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him "

"All oppression and trickery in regard to obtaining confession are to be avoided by the Police under pain of the severest penalties, and the practice of employing private individuals to worm out confession from accused persons is strictly prohibited Nothing so clearly shows want of detective tact, talent and resource and of patient industry in a Police-officer as the resort to foul means to obtain confession The most ignorant and clumsy can make out a case if he can torture the culprit till he tells him all about it True detective talent and sagacity manifest themselves in patient and unremitting industry in weaving round the culprit such a network of undoubted facts and damning circumstances gathered from a variety of sources, that he cannot escape"—Mad Pol Man, p 95

A confession which is the direct outcome of the confessing accused being given to understand that if he confessed there was a reasonable prospect of his receiving a pardon, is irrelevant under section 24 of the Evidence Act It cannot be used either against the person making the confession or against his co-accused But where after making such a confession, the accused again makes a statement under sec 364 during the trial, in which after stating that he has now no hope of obtaining a pardon he affirms the confession previously made, such statement is relevant, and may be used against himself—Emp v Tara, 45 All 633, 21 A L J 585, 24 Cr L J 785

164 (1) Every Magistrate not being a police officer may record any statement or confession made to him in the course of an investigation under this chapter or at any time afterwards before the commencement of the inquiry or trial

Power to record statements and confessions

164 (1) Any Presidency Magistrate, any Magistrate of the first class and any Magistrate of the 2nd class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government may, if he is not a police officer record any statement or confession made to him in the course of an investigation under this Chapter or at any time afterwards before the commencement of the inquiry or trial

Power to record statements and confessions

(2) Such statements shall be recorded in such of [illegible] nce [illegible] of the case Such confessions shall be recorded and signed in the manner provided in S 364, and such statements or confessions shall then be forwarded to the Magistrate by whom the case is to be inquired into or tried

(3) A Magistrate shall, before recording any such confession, explain to the person making it that he is n

bound to make a confession and that if he does so it may be used as evidence against him, and no Magistrate shall record any such confession unless, upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily, and, when he records any confession, he shall make a memorandum at the foot of such record to the following effect :—

"I have explained to (name) that he is not bound to make a confession and that, if he does so, any confession he may make may be used as evidence against him and I believe that this confession was voluntarily made. It was taken in my presence and hearing and was read over to the person making it and admitted by him to be correct, and it contains a full and true account of the statement made by him.

Magistrate."

Explanation.—It is not necessary that the Magistrate receiving and recording a confession or statement should be a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case.

Change :—The changes in the section as shown by the italicised words have been introduced by section 35 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) The reasons have been thus stated

'We think that confessions and statements should not be recorded under the section by third class Magistrates at all or by second class Magistrates unless specially empowered We consider that a statutory obligation should be laid on a Magistrate acting under the section to warn an accused person about to make a confession that the same may be used against him and we think that the certificate prescribed by sub section (3) should record the fact that the warning had been given' —Report of the Joint Committee, (1922)

508. Object of section :—The object of police proceedings is to collect information as a preliminary step to the production of evidence in judicial proceedings against an accused person For this purpose, any person may be examined and any statement may be reduced to writing by the Police But no statement made to the Police can be used in evidence against the accused To these provisions the present section seems to be supplementary The Magistrate may prepare what the Police may not, a record of any statement, be it a confession or not, which is made to him before judicial proceedings commence—Lalu v Emp, 1893 P R 2

This section does not enable a police officer, who has obtained a statement incriminating the accused made by some person to send such person to a Magistrate practically under custody, to have him examined and his statement recorded before the judicial inquiry or trial, for fixing him down to that statement in the subsequent judicial proceedings—Q E v Jadub 27 Cal 295

509. Scope of section :—This section under the old law did not apply to the Police in the town of Calcutta Therefore it did not apply to a statement made by a person in custody to a Magistrate in Calcutta in the course of an investigation made by the Police in the town of Calcutta —Q E v Nilmadhab 15 Cal 595 Nor did this section apply to the town of Bombay—Q E v Visram Babaji 21 Bom 495

The present section has been made applicable to confessions recorded in Presidency towns by reason of the reference to Presidency Magistrates at the beginning of the section But it should be noted that even inspite of this amendment the application of this section to Presidency towns is extremely limited Sub section (2) (a) of sec 1 of this Code expressly lays down that nothing contained in this Code in the absence of any specific provision to the contrary shall apply to the police in the town of Calcutta (or Bombay) The only sections in Chap XIV which are applicable to the Police of Calcutta (or Bombay) are sec 155 and sec 156 (3) and sec 164 so far as Presidency towns are concerned applies only to confessions recorded under those two sections That is section 164 applies to confessions made in the course of investigations held by the Calcutta Police only where the Police investigation is either an investigation in a non cognizable case held under the orders of a Presidency Magistrate as contemplated by section 155 or is an investigation into a cognizable case held under the orders of a Presidency Magistrate as contemplated by section 156 (3)—Emp v Panch Kari 52 Cal 67, 29 C W N 300 26 Cr L J 781 The Patna High Court however does not accept this narrow interpretation and holds that a Presidency Magistrate is empowered to record a confession in Calcutta during a police investigation there in any case The Amendment has been made in 1923 to allow a Presidency Magistrate to record a confession in Calcutta in the course of a police investigation otherwise the amendment is altogether meaningless Section 1 bars the application of the Code to the Police, it does not bar the application of the Code to a Magistrate not being a Police officer—Nilmadhab v Emp, 5 Pat 171 27 Cr L J 957 Where an investigation is held outside Calcutta and a Presidency Magistrate records a confession in Calcutta this section undoubtedly applies—Nilmadhab v Emp, (supra)

This section applies to a confession made in the course of an investigation Where an accused is arrested in Calcutta in pursuance of a request made by the Police at Burdwan who evidently were holding the investigation with regard to the matter under the provisions of Ch XIV, the arrest and production of the accused before a Magistrate at Calcutta for the recording of confession must be taken to have been an act done in the process of investigation that was being held and the Magistrate is bound to comply with the provisions of section 164 in recording the confession—Emp v Garib Hari 30 C W N 454 27 Cr L J 621

A confession or statement under this section may be recorded by a Magistrate who afterwards conducts the inquiry or trial—Barindra v Emp 37 Cal 467 A Magistrate is not debarred from recording the confession of an accused person under this section merely because it may be afterwards his duty to hold a preliminary inquiry—Anon Ratanlal 121 A confession freely made to a Magistrate and recorded under this section is not inadmissible if the Magistrate thought proper or if it so happened that he was the only Magistrate to take the case and commit it to the Sessions Court—Emp v Lal Sheikh 3 C W N 38 The decision in Emp v Aitmaram 5 Cal 934 is no longer good law

511. "May record" —The Magistrate may record the statement or confession it is not obligatory on the Magistrate to do so There is nothing in law to support the proposition that in order to make an oral extrajudicial confession admissible in evidence it must be reduced to writing The confession may be proved by the evidence of the Magistrate —Feroz v Crown 1918 P R 11 Emp v Maruti 21 Bom L R 1065 1 Cr L J 65 (per Hayward J Shah J contra Tangutlapalli v Emp 4 Mad 30 12 M L J 37 3 Cr L J 680 Contra—Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan 49 Cal 167 where it is held that a confession not recorded as provided by this section cannot be proved by the evidence of the Magistrate

512 Statement or Confession —The word statement means the statement of a witness and does not mean the statement of an accused person This section does not provide for recording any statement of an accused person other than a confession the reason is that the section relates to a stage of the case viz the Police investigation stage at which statements of the accused which are other than voluntary confessions and which are to be elicited by his examination are not intended to be obtained from him—O E v Bhairal 2 C W N 11 In other words this section provides for the recording of two classes of things viz (1) the statement of a person who appears before the Magistrate as a witness and (2) the confession of a person accused of an offence—Emp v Malka 2 Bom 643 Crown v Lal Dil 5 S L R 174 13 Cr L J 33

Contra—The Punjab Chief Court has held that the distinction that is made in this section is between statements that are confessions and statements that are not and not between persons by whom statements of either character are made and this distinction is made merely to prescribe the different modes of recording (sub sec 2) and that it is nowhere expressed or implied in this section that the statement of an accused person cannot be recorded unless it is a confession—Lila v Emp 1893 P R 2 The Calcutta High Court also has recently laid down that the word statement is not limited to a statement made by a witness, a statement made by an accused and not amounting to a confession is a statement within the meaning of this section—Abdul Rahim v Emp, 41 C L J 474, 26 Cr. L J 1279 See also Legal Remembrancer v Lalit Mohan, 49 Cal 167 where it is laid down that under this section there can be no distinction between a statement made by an accused and a confession made by him, and that a statement made by an accused that he had committed a murder must be recorded as provided by this section The Patna High Court is also of opinion that this section contemplates a statement made by an accused person before a Magistrate which is not a confession but is wholly of an exculpatory nature—Golam Md v Emp, 4 Pat 327, 6 P L T. 598. 26 Cr. L J 878

513. At what stage can statement and confession be recorded :— A statement or confession must be recorded under this section in the course of an investigation under this chapter or at any time afterwards, but before the commencement of the inquiry or trial Therefore, where the Magistrate recorded confessions of the accused before he took cognizance of the case and before the examination of the prosecution witness began, it was held that the confessions were duly recorded under this section—Barindra v Emp 37 Cal 467 This section refers to a confession or statement recorded during an inquiry before the Police and not during an inquiry by the Magistrate Therefore, where during an inquiry under section 202, the Magistrate recorded a statement made by a person against whom the complaint was filed, it was held that the statement could not be regarded as having been recorded under this section, because the statement was made during an inquiry by the Magistrate and not during an inquiry before the Police Such a statement was not admissible against the accused without further proof—Sat Narain v Emp 32 Cal 1085 (1080)

514. Procedure :—Under this section, in the course of the investigation the Magistrate is entitled to record any voluntary statement made by the accused person, but he is not entitled to examine the accused person in respect of the facts of the case That power is given by sec 342 —Gya Singh v Mohamed, 5 C W N 864

It is an improper procedure for a Magistrate, during the investigation of a criminal case by himself, to take the statements of witnesses on solemn affirmation out of Court and in the absence of the accused, with the avowed object of proceeding criminally against the witnesses in case they should subsequently deviate from such statements in open Court—Reg v Jetha Ganesh, Ratanlal 66

A Magistrate should not, before recording a confession, look into a police report to see what the accused had stated to the Police—Jogjiban v Emp, 13 C W. N 861, 10 Cr L J 125

The Magistrate should not hold out any inducement Where after the prisoner had made a long confessional statement, he was told by the Magistrate that if he stated all that he knew, he would then be examined as an approver and witness it was held that the conduct of the Magistrate was highly improper—In re Kosa Govindan, 2 Weir 137 See also

Emp v Tara 15 All 633 cited under sec 163 But unless this inducement was actually held out to the accused by the Magistrate or by some person in authority the mere fact that the accused was under an impression that if he confessed he would be made an approver would not make the confession bad The mere thought in the mind of the accused would not affect the admissibility of the confession—Nilmadhab v Emp 5 Pat. 171, 27 Cr L J 957

The Magistrate must not put any question to the accused tending to incriminate him—In re Pavappan — Weir 136

A statement cannot be said to be properly recorded under this section if a police officer is present at the time and is allowed to put questions to the accused—Indar a v Emp 21 Cr L J 418 (Lah) Jogjiban v Emp 13 C W N 861 It is not proper to allow the Police officer who brought the prisoner to be present while the confession is being recorded by a Muharrir and to suggest questions to be put to the confessing prisoner" —Cal G R & C O page 8 Emp v Ramanand 1885 A W N 221

There is no warrant or justification for the intervention of a third party (e g police officer or another Magistrate) as the questioner, directly or indirectly of a confessing prisoner—Jogjiban v Emperor, 13 C W N 861

Confessions should be recorded in open Court A Magistrate acts improperly in recording the confession at a late hour in the night (viz at 11 30 p m) after the accused had been subjected to interrogation by a police officer for 3 or 4 hours and had broken down under the continued questioning—K E v Pramatha 30 C L J 503 21 Cr L J 266 But of course the fact of the confession being recorded late at night is by itself not a sufficient proof against its voluntariness—Abdul Salim v Emp, 49 Cal 573 (598) The Patna High Court holds that the Code does not contain any provision that the confession must be recorded in open Court, and therefore a Magistrate does not act illegally if he brings the accused to his house and records the confession there—Nilmadhab v Emp, 5 Pat 171 27 Cr L J 957

If the confession is a lengthy one, and cannot be finished in one day, the Magistrate is competent to record the confession piecemeal from day to day But in such a case the Magistrate should not, during the period of confession, return the accused to the custody of the Police at night—Nilmadhab v Emp, 5 Pat 171 27 Cr L J 957

Power to administer oath —The person making a statement under this section is a witness within the meaning of Sec 5 of the Oaths Act and therefore one to whom oath might be administered and a charge of perjury can be framed under sec 193 I P C against the person making a false statement on oath under this section—Q E v Alagu, 16 Mad 421; Emp v Tasaldnk, 1908 A W N 73 Suppa Te an v Emp 29 Mad 89 Contra—Hari Charan v Q E, 27 Cal 455, Lalu v Emp, 1893 P R 2 (per Plowden J) Emp v Banko Behari 10 C P L R 16

Mode of examination of accused —The proper mode for a Magistrate to examine an accused person under this section is to ask him if he wish to make any statement or confession If he says no the Magistrate sh

not proceed to interrogate him but if such person wishes to make any statement the Magistrate should write down the statement or confession and ask the accused such questions as may be necessary to ascertain clearly what his meaning is—Empress v Baji 5 C P L R 13 Kesho Singh v K E 20 O C 136 18 Cr L J 712

The examination of an accused person must not be conducted after the manner of cross-examination of an adverse witness by Counsel It must not be inquisitorial forcing the prisoner to make incriminating statements—Empress v Kura 1882 A W N 166 Nor should the examination be made with a view to elicit the truth out of his mouth by constant questions as though he were a witness—Emp v Baji 5 C P L R 13 It is not permissible to question the accused closely and at great length for the purpose of extracting statements to be afterwards used as evidence —Kesho Singh v K E 20 O C 136

515 Retracted confession —A retracted confession can be acted upon if it is voluntarily made and is corroborated by other evidence When the voluntary confession of a prisoner is corroborated by the confession of another prisoner and the two confessions are strongly corroborated by the mass of evidence which has been recorded in the case the confession of the former prisoner even though subsequently retracted can be made the basis of his conviction—Nilmadhab v Emp 5 Pat 171 27 Cr L J 997

A retracted confession cannot be given any weight unless it is well corroborated by reliable evidence—Ramai v K E 3 Pat 872 A I R 1925 Pat 191 26 Cr L J 314 But in some other cases it has been laid down that a retracted confession if proved to have been voluntarily made can be considered along with the other evidence of the case No binding rule can be laid down such as that a retracted confession must be supported by independent reliable evidence corroborating it in material particulars The Court should treat the value of a retracted confession as a matter of prudence rather than of law—Q E v Gharya 19 Bom 728 Q E v Gangia 23 Bom 316 Q E v Raman 21 Mad 83 Jauan v Crown 1914 P R 30 Emp v Indra Chandra 22 C W N 63 Manna Lal v K E 27 O C 4 A I R 1925 Oudh 1 25 Cr L J 19 It is not illegal to base a conviction upon the uncorroborated confession of an accused person (subsequently retracted) provided that the Court is satisfied that the confession was voluntary and is true in fact—Jauan v Crown 1914 P R 30 15 Cr L J 606 Experience and common sense show that in the absence of corroboration in material particulars it is not safe to convict on a confession unless from the peculiar circumstances on which it was made and judging from the reasons of the retraction there remains a high degree of certainty that the confession notwithstanding its having been resiled from is genuine—Jauan v Crown 1914 P R 30 Q E v Mahabir 18 All 78 If a Judge believes that a confession though subsequently withdrawn contains a true account of the prisoner's crime the Judge is bound to act so far as the prisoner is concerned on the confession which he believed to be true—Emp v Kehri 29 All 434 Q E v Maiku 20 All 133 The weight to be given to such a confession depends upon the circumstances under which it was generally given and the circumstances under which it was retracted including the reasons given by the prisoner for his retraction—Sajjad Husain v Emp, 1903 P R 16, Q E v Raman 21 Mad 83 Mathura Lal v K E 7 O C 40 23 Cr L J 49 Thus where a confession was made under police coercion and subsequently withdrawn it is certainly inadmissible in evidence—Mohjan v Crown 6 C W N 380 Sriram v Emp 2 A L J 100 2 Cr L J 59

Where a confession is retracted it is the duty of the Court that is called to act upon it especially in a case of murder to enquire into all the material points and surrounding circumstances and satisfy itself that the confession cannot but be true—K E v Durgaya 3 Bom L R 441

Where in the course of the investigation of an offence a witness makes a statement of a confessional nature which is recorded by the Magistrate under this section as a statement and not as a confession and subsequently in the course of the preliminary inquiry before the committing Magistrate he retracts that statement it is admissible in evidence against that witness on a prosecution for perjury—In re Maddala Ramanujamma 39 Mad 977

516 Sub-section (2) —Mode of recording.—The confession is to be recorded in the manner provided by section 364 i e in the form of questions and answers The Magistrate is bound to record every question that he asks It is of great importance that this provision of the law should be obeyed otherwise it may be impossible to tell how far a witness voluntarily deposes to a matter and how far it was extracted from him by questioning even in the nature of cross examination If the confession is not recorded in this manner the record is defective—Hasan Ali v K E 23 A L J 719 26 Cr L J 1209 A I R 1926 All 22 Where a confession is recorded not in the form of questions and answers as required by section 364 but in a narrative form the defect is not a fatal one and the confession is admissible in evidence provided that the accused is not prejudiced by the irregularity Section 533 would cure the defect—Teko v Empress 11 Cal 539 Emp v Munshi 8 Cal 616 Khudiram v Emp 9 C L J 55 Emp v Sagamlar 12 C L R 120, Emp v Deo Dat 45 All 166 20 A L J 915 Emp v Inis 189 A W N 60 Nga Po Sin v Emp U B R (1897 1901) 47

Where however the confession was not recorded in the manner prescribed in section 364 but there was only a gist of the confession in a narrative form and where it moreover appeared that the confession was not voluntary it was held to be inadmissible in evidence—Emp v Gauri Hari 30 C W N 454 27 Cr L J 641 Nga Sin v Emp 11 Cr L J 41 (Bur)

Language of record —See Note 1038 under sec 364

Signature —The object of requiring the signature of an accused person to the record of his confession is probably to furnish a strong test as to whether the confession was voluntary and free and to afford him a locus pœnitentiae before the completion of the record of maintain that the confession was not voluntary or was made under improper influence—Reg v Bhu Pyin 10 B H C R 166 The signature is taken as a voucher

the authenticity of the statement and not as an admission of its correctness—Khudiram v Emp, 9 C L J 55

The confession of the accused if not signed by the accused or attested by his mark is not admissible in evidence—Reg v Bai Ratan, 10 B H C R 166, but under section 533 parol evidence may be given of the terms of the confession and those terms if and when proved, may be admitted and used as evidence in the case if the defect (non signature) is such that it has not affected the merits of the defence—Q E v Raghu, 23 Bom 221 So also, if the accused subsequently signed the confession without objection as soon as the non signature was noticed the defect would be cured by sec 533 by the evidence of the Magistrate as to the authenticity of the statement—Khudiram v Emp 9 C L J 55

If the accused is able to write his thumb-impression will not be sufficient—Sadananda v Emp, 32 Cal 550

The Magistrate must sign the record of confession as well as the memorandum—Emp v Lal Shaikh 3 C W N 387

517. Sub-section (3)—Confession must be voluntary :— A confession, in order to be admissible in evidence must be made voluntarily and without pressure—K E v Gulabi, 35 All 260 11 A L J 286 In re Pisari, 2 Weir 137 No statement should be recorded under this section unless the person making it is a free agent and voluntarily agrees to have his statement taken down—Hira Lal v Emp 1918 P R 16, 19 Cr L J 517 A Magistrate acting under this section must question the accused in order to be affirmatively satisfied of the voluntariness of the confession and in case of doubt he ought not to record it or give the certificate—Q E v Basvanta 25 Bom 168 Nekı v Emp, 25 Cr L J 116 (Lah) The Magistrate should ascertain whether the confessional statement is made voluntarily, at the beginning of the statement and not at the end—In re Rajappan 2 Weir 136 A Magistrate should not proceed to record a confession unless he first has reason to believe that the person is about to make it voluntarily and he should therefore begin by enquiring into the point whether the confession is voluntarily made Where a Magistrate recorded a confession of an accused without first satisfying himself as to its being voluntary, and then at the end of it put one comprehensive question as to the nature of the confession, it was held that he had not complied with the provisions of this section—Q E v Appa, 1 Bom L R 357 Kandhai v Emp, 1 O L J 407, 15 Cr L J 633 In Pitin Tanti v Emp, 40 Cal 873 (876) it was held that the fact that the Magistrate instead of asking the accused about the voluntary nature of the confession at the commencement of the confessional statement asked him at the end was merely a defect of form which did not alter the character of the confession

"It is desirable that Magistrates should act with deliberation in examining persons brought before them for the purpose of making confession and should, as far as possible, satisfy themselves that the confession is voluntary—and this not merely from the declaration of the accused but from an attentive observation of his demeanour'—Cal G R & C. O. page 8.

When a confession made by the accused is alleged by him to have been obtained by ill treatment or other improper inducements, the Court should carefully inquire into the truth of such allegation—Reg v Kashi Nath, 8 B H C R 126 and it will not be presumed that it was so induced —Reg v Balvant 11 B H C R 137 and if the Court sees any ground of exclusion mentioned in sec. 24 Evidence Act (inducement, threat, promise), it may reject the confession, though at the time of record it appeared to be a voluntary confession—Umar v Emp, 1887 P R 51 Emp v Dewan Kahar, 4 P L T 186 But the Court cannot, merely on surmise or conjecture hold that the confession was procured by inducement threat or promise There must be in the confession itself or in the evidence or in the surrounding circumstances something to justify the inference that the confession was really not a voluntary one—Emp v Dewan Kahar 4 P L T 186 24 Cr L J 497, A I R 1923 Pat 13

Emp*, 13 C W N 861 10 Cr L J 125

Mere subsequent retraction of a confession duly recorded and certified ...

If the procedure of this section is not followed prior to the recording of a confession, the statement of the accused cannot be admitted in evidence against him or his co accused—Balan Singh v Emp, 7 Lah L J 39. 26 Cr L J 731. Unless it is proved that the Magistrate explained to him that he need not make any confession and that it might be used against him, the confession is not admissible in evidence—Bakawa's v Crown, 6 Lah 183 26 Cr L J. 1238 A I R 1925 Lah 432

The Magistrate should not be content with a few formal ... The section contemplates that the Magistrate shall hear ...

first without making any record and shall then put questions to ascertain whether the confession is voluntary and then if he has reason to believe that it is voluntary he may record the confession writing out in full every question put by him and every answer given by the accused and following the provisions of section 164 The questioning of the accused before recording a confession is a matter of substance and not of mere form and if it has been omitted the omission is a fatal one and cannot be cured by any evidence under sec 533—Inayda v Parbati 3 L B R 173 Shu Sin v K E 3 L P R 213 4 Cr L J 385 Farid v Crown 2 Lah 325 (328) Where the only warning which the Magistrate gives to the accused is that he asks the accused whether he is willing to make a confession and that if he makes a confession it will be used as evidence against him but he does not put questions to the accused to find out whether the reply which the accused is about to give is a voluntary one there is no compliance with the requirements of law for recording a confession—Emp v Garib Hari 30 C W N 151 27 Cr L J 621 No Magistrate shall record any such confession unless upon questioning the person making it he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily It is the invariable practice of the Deputy Magistrates in this Province to ignore entirely this provision of the Code It is considered sufficient to make use of a stock phrase which in this instance runs I am a Magistrate if you want to make any statement of your own accord you may do so do not make any statement which you have been tutored by others to make and then follows the story of the crime without any answer whatever to the Magistrate's formula To my mind a Magistrate might just as well say to the accused hocus pocus or abracadabra Such phrases would be as much a compliance with the terms of section 164 (3) as any formula now in vogue What is meant by the Code is that the Magistrate should ask the accused some such question as Why are you confessing Are you sorry for your crime or is it that some one has told you that you will gain something by a confession? and refuse to proceed with the recording of the confession until he has had a satisfactory answer to his question The attention of the Magistrates has been drawn several times to this defect in the procedure but the comments of the Court have invariably been completely ignored In my view the Local Government should take steps to see that Magistrates understand the requirements of section 164 (3) and that if Magistrates fail to observe them they are severally reprimanded —per Roe J in Ragho v Emp 18 Cr L J 721 (Pat) Where a Magistrate questioned the accused person thus It appears that you have committed murder and absconded by escaping from custody you have now come what have you to say? held that the question was extremely improper—In re Pitari 2 Weir 237

In order to ascertain whether the confession is voluntary the Magistrate is bound to question the accused closely as to his motive in making a confession and if he fails to do so he has no jurisdiction to say that he is satisfied as to the voluntary nature of the confession—Ragho v Emp 18 Cr L J 721 (Pat) In a more recent case of the same High Court however it has been held that it is not necessary that the Magistrate should have questioned the accused as to his motives in making the confession though as a rule of prudence it is better that he should do so—Emp v Dewan Kahar 4 P L T 186 24 Cr L J 497

It would be going much too far to say that a Magistrate recording a statement or a confession under this section cannot and should not ask a single question of the deponent But it is equally certain that his position when recording such statement or confession is merely that of a recording Magistrate and that he is in no sense inquiring into the case and that he is not an investigating officer He would be justified in and ought in the ordinary performance of his duties to clear up any matter which is ambiguous on the face of the statement but he is wholly unjustified in extracting by questions from the deponent any facts which the deponent has not spoken to in his Court Everything must depend on the nature of the questions and the object of it and the mere fact that an answer was elicited by a question does not make the proceedings improper or the statement inadmissible as a confession—Hasan Ali v K E 23 A L J 719 26 Cr L J 1209 A I R 1926 All 22

No express form of question is prescribed and the extent to which the Magistrate should question the accused must largely depend on the particular facts of each case There are cases which on the face of them attract the suspicion of a Magistrate and there are others which do not attract any suspicion at all and it is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule on the subject The Court must in each case satisfy itself that the Magistrate honestly believed and took steps to ascertain that the confession was a voluntary one—Thibu v Emp 4 P L T 279 24 Cr L J 649 It is desirable that the Magistrate in recording the confession should put various questions to the accused to enable him to decide whether

518 Police custody :—A confession obtained after the accused had been in custody for some time is always open to grave suspicion—Q E v Govardhan 9 All 528 Mothjan v Crown 6 C W N 380 When a Magistrate records the confession of a person who has been in police custody he should ascertain and record the period during which the accused had been in custody to satisfy himself whether the confession is voluntary or not—Q E v Narayan 25 Bom 543 But where an accused was actually produced before the Magistrate as soon as he was arrested and was produced before him the next day for recording the confession held that the confession should not be ignored on the ground that the Magistrate did not ask him how long he was in Police custody—Emp v Dewan Kahar 4 P L T 186 The fact and duration of Police custody has a material bearing on the question whether a confession is voluntary or not—Jogulam v Emp 13 C W N 861 The unjustifiable violence used by the Police to the accused for his arrest his illegal detention in police custody for more than 24 hours after his arrest and the marks on his person—all these must be held to have vitiated the voluntary character of his confession and it was therefore inadmissible in evidence—Q E v Appa 1 Bom L R 357 But a confession cannot be rejected on the sole ground that the accused had been a long time in police custody—Q E v Mahadhu, Ratanlal 720 The Punjab Chief Court holds that even if the accused is in the custody of a police officer when he makes the confession yet the confession being made before a Magistrate is not excluded from being given in evidence by anything contained in section 26 Evidence Act when proved by the evidence of the Magistrate—Feroz v Crown 1918 P R 11 19 Cr L J 651 (following Sher Singh v Emp 1881 P R 21)

A prisoner in police custody who was brought before a Magistrate to have his confession recorded did not cease to be in police custody merely because at the time of recording the confession there was no police officer in the room when it was found that a police officer was waiting outside the room where the confession was being recorded—Q E v Lakshmya Ratanlal 855 (856)

It is highly improper if not illegal for a Magistrate to examine an accused person who comes fresh from the hands of the police who made the inquiry Any confessional statements made by the accused in such examination are of little value—Emp v Kura 1882 A W N 166

519 Memorandum —A confession without a memorandum that it is voluntarily made is bad in law and cannot be admitted in evidence—Emp v Daji 6 Bom 288 Reg v Shiva 1 Bom 219 Emp v Radle Halui 7 C W N 270 and the want of a memorandum can be cured if at all only by the Sessions Judge taking evidence during the trial that the accused had made the statement—Koshai v Emp 5 Cal 958 Q E v Auna Valay in 22 Mad 15

Where the Magistrate has made a memorandum that the confession was voluntarily made it may be presumed that it is a correct record of a voluntary confession Nevertheless if it is found that the confession was procured by any inducement threat or promise it must be treated as irrelevant—Emp v Devai 4 P L T 186 24 Cr L J 407

The memorandum annexed to a record of confession is not a conclusive evidence of the fact that the confession was voluntarily made so as to preclude the Court of Appeal from inquiring into the nature of the confession to see whether it was voluntary or not—Jagat ra v Emp 13 C W N 861 10 Cr L J 125

The memorandum is required only in case of confessions made by the accused A statement of a witness need not be appended by a memorandum that such statement was made voluntarily—Q E v Jadil 7 Cal 295

A confession does not become unworthy of evidence merely because the memorandum required by law to be attached thereto has not been written in the exact form prescribed—Emp Bhairon 3 All 338 It is sufficient if it is in substance the same as that given in this section

It is most advisable although the law does not require it that the Magistrate should record a memorandum of enquiry showing what steps

he has taken to fully satisfy himself that an accused person is confessing voluntarily—Umar Din v Crown 1 Lah 1 ; 23 Cr L J 388

If the memorandum omitted to state that the confession was voluntarily made it was held that the Magistrate omitted to observe a most important provision of this section and the confession was therefore not admissible in evidence—In r Kattubadi Narasingha 2 Weir 140, Q E v Bhairal 2 C W N 702 (717) but in some cases it has been held that the defect would be cured by section 533 if the Magistrate afterwards deposed that he believed that the confession was voluntarily made—Emp v Deo Dat 45 All 166 20 A L J 915 Ramai v King Emp, 3 Pat 872 (877) 26 Cr L J 314 Mahsud v Emp 2 P L T 773

Under this section as now amended the Magistrate must explain to the accused that he is not to make any confession and that the confession may be used as evidence against him and the memorandum also should record the fact that the explanation was given But omission to record the fact that the accused was so warned would not make the confession inadmissible in evidence if the Magistrate who recorded the confession was afterwards examined (sec 533) and deposed that he gave the required warning to the accused and the accused understood it—Ramai v Emp, 3 Pat 872 (877) 26 Cr L J 314 A I R 1925 Pat 191 Bawa Singh v Emp 7 Lah L J 250 26 P L R 579 26 Cr L J 1458 Kheman v Emp 6 Lah 58 26 P L R 346 26 Cr L J 1071 Nilmadhab v Emp, 5 Pat 171 27 Cr L J 957 But if as a matter of fact no such explanation was given by the Magistrate to the accused the defect is not merely one of form but of substance and sec 533 cannot cure it—Partap Singh v Crown 6 Lah 415 7 Lah L J 482 27 Cr L J 514 Mt Kao v Crown, 6 P L R 173 26 Cr L J 1175

But the memorandum need not set forth the circumstances under which the confession was made Thus an omission to state in the memorandum that the accused was not in police custody at the time when the confession was made does not make the confession invalid—In re Bokru Ratanlal 534

An English memorandum as required by sec 364 is not necessary in respect of a confession under this section—Lekoo v Empress, 14 Cal 539

Refusal to make a memorandum —Where a Magistrate who recorded the confession of an accused refused to make the memorandum on the ground that the confession did not seem to be voluntary, it was held that under sec 533 the confession could be admitted in evidence during the trial when the Magistrate who recorded it proved that it was made voluntarily—Harbans v K E 8 O C 395B Where the Magistrate refused to make a memorandum on the ground that the accused had been in police custody for 5 days before he was produced before him and there was a proposal on the part of the police to treat the accused as an approver but there was no evidence that the proposal was communicated to the accused it was held that this ground was not a valid ground and the Sessions Judge ought to have proceeded in the absence of the memorandum to take evidence under section 533 whether the confession was duly made—Q E v Arga Lalayan 23 Mad 15

520 Explanation—Magistrate without jurisdiction—The Explanation to this section lays down that a statement or confession can be recorded by a Magistrate although he has no jurisdiction in the case. But a Magistrate not having jurisdiction can record the statement of a witness under this section if the witness appears voluntarily before him and is not brought before him by the police—Emp v Nuri Sheikh 29 Cal 483. This section will not empower a police officer to compel a witness to go to a local Magistrate not competent to deal with the case and to get the statement recorded—Q Emp v Nara Ratanl 165 (460); Emp v Nuri Sheikh 29 Cal 483. Where the police officer has reason to believe that the witness is likely to be gained over by the accused the proper course is to send the accused and the witness to the Magistrate having jurisdiction without delay—Emp v Nuri Sheikh 29 Cal 483

Change —The changes in this section as shown by the italicised words have been introduced by sec 36 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) For reasons see below

521 Sub-section (1)—General search —The old section spoke of any document or thing which meant a specific document or thing which might be the subject of a summons or order under section 94 it did not authorise a general search on the chance that something might be found—Bajrang Gope v Emp 38 Cal 304 Pran Khan v K E 16 C W N 1078 Emp v Brikhbhan 38 All 14 13 A L J 979 Divakar v Ramamurti 35 M L J 127 19 Cr L J, 901 The section spoke of a particular document or thing which was necessary to the conduct of an investigation into an offence and did not authorise a general search e g for arms generally—Clarke v Brojendra Kishore 36 Cal 433 or for stolen property generally—Bisser Misser v Emp 41 Cal 261 nor was the requirement of this section fulfilled by framing the warrant as one for stolen property relevant to the case —Pran Khan v K E 16 C W N 1078 13 Cr L J 764

This has been made clear by the present amendment by the addition of the specific words and specifying in such writing to be made These words were added during the Debate on the motion of Mr Rangachariar who observed as follows I think that it is a vicious thing to allow a police officer to have power to conduct a general search without knowing what it is he is going to search for but merely to see if he can find something incriminating in a person s house Even the wording of the clause itself (that such a thing cannot in his opinion be otherwise obtained without undue delay) contemplates that the man himself has some information and that he must know what it is that he is after and it is necessary that he should record this in writing and forward the record to the Magistrate so that it will be a check upon irresponsible general searches which have frequently disfigured the police administration in various parts of the country —Legislative Assembly Debates 31st January 19 3 p 1751

Thus under the amended section it has been held that it does not authorise a search for stolen property generally but only a search for specified stolen articles—Paresh v Jogendra 27 Cr L J 1195 (Cal) Where a definite list of stolen articles has been given to a police officer and he searches a house for those articles he is making a search for specific articles and his action is perfectly legal—Paresh v Jogendra (supra)

This section is not restricted to a search for what is stolen and believed to be stolen property but it permits a police officer to make a search of anything necessary for the purposes of an investigation into any offence—Emp v Karim Sukh 23 A L J 1037 27 Cr L J 11

Accused's house may be searched —A police officer is entitled to search the house of a person for specific articles even though the latter is the person accused of the crime—Paresh v Jogendra 27 Cr L J 1195 (Cal)

522 "Within the limits" —A Station House officer has no power to make a search beyond the local limits of his own circle—Mir Sha v Crown 8 S L R 1 16 Cr L J 15 Krishna Aiyar v Emp 24 M L T 96 20 Cr L J 145 Such a search is illegal and resistance to such search is not an offence—Madho Sonar v Emp 13 A L J 691 16 Cr L J 589 But see sec 166 (3) which now authorises a Police officer under certain circumstances to make a search within the limits of another police station

523 Who shall conduct the search —Sub section (2) lays down that the officer in charge of a police station or the investigating officer must conduct the search in person But this does not mean that the officer must himself make the search i e ransack boxes examine the room dig up the floor or otherwise seek for the property Nor is it necessary that all these processes should take place under his very eye Therefore where the Inspector remained outside the house while the actual search was being made inside by two constables it was held that the search was not illegal All that the section means is that the officer should go to the spot and exercise a general superintendence over the search in contra distinction to the cases where he is unable to go to the spot and deputes a subordinate by a written order to conduct the search in his place—Sadagopala v Satrughna 23 M L J 445 (dissenting from 17 M L J 323 where a search made by a constable inside the house while the Inspector was seated outside was held to be illegal as not being conducted in person by the Inspector)

The Magistrate cannot conduct the search under this section This section speaks of a search made by a Police officer and not by a Magistrate—Clarke v Brojendra 36 Cal 433 The Magistrate can conduct a search only under section 105 which section has not been made applicable here

524 Sub-section (3)—Order in writing —If the officer cannot himself go to the spot he can depute a subordinate but the deputation must be by an order in writing A constable making the search without such a written order does not lawfully exercise the power of a public servant and resistance to such search is not an offence—Q v Narain 7 N W P 209 Idu Mandal v Emp 6 C L J 753 Mir Sha v Crown 8 S L R 1 Madho Sonar v Emp 13 A L J 691

525 Sub-section (4)—Necessity of Search warrant —A subordinate Police officer may however without a warrant enter a house in search of a person who is charged with having comitted a cognizable offence but he is not empowered to enter a house without a search warrant in search of property—Reg v Venkatara 7 B H C R 50

Witnesses to the search —Prior to the present amendment it was held that the failure to call inhabitants of the locality as witnesses to the search did not make the search illegal because the provisions of section 103 did not apply to a search under this section—Sadagopala v. Satrughna 23 M. L. J. 445. This ruling is now rendered obsolete by the present sub-section (4) which makes the general provisions of searches under sections 102 and 103 applicable to searches under this section. But it should be noticed that sub-section (4) is not imperative and that the provisions of sections 102 and 103 are made applicable only so far as may be. Therefore the mere fact that in making a search under sec. 165 the police took two independent witnesses with them and did not call witnesses from the locality did not necessarily render the search illegal—Sham Lal v. Emp. 28 Cr. L. J. 652 (All.)

Damages for illegal search.—A police officer cannot investigate into a non-cognizable case without the order of a Magistrate (sec. 155), nor can he make a search in respect of it, because he can make a search only in those cases which he can investigate. Therefore a police officer making a search in a non-cognizable case without being authorised by a Magistrate is liable to be sued for damages—Bahabal v. Tarak Nath 24 Cal. 691.

Where a Police officer makes a search for specific stolen property bona fide, the person whose premises are searched is not entitled to damages—Diwakar v. Ramamurti 35 M. L. J. 127, 19 Cr. L. J. 901.

A police officer not having jurisdiction over the place searched who takes part in a search conducted by another police officer authorised by the Code to conduct the search, cannot be said to exceed his jurisdiction and is not liable in damages as one making an illegal search—Isan v. Masilamani, 42 Mad. 436, 36 M. L. J. 252, 20 Cr. L. J. 322.

525A. Sub-section (5).—This sub-section and its proviso did not exist in the Bills or Reports but were added during the debate on the motion of Mr. Rangachariar who in moving this amendment observed as follows:—"The object of this amendment is that as soon as a search is made an immediate report should be made to the nearest Magistrate. The second object is that the person whose house is searched should have copies of the records made under sub-sections (1) and (3). Sub-section (4) as it stands enables the provisions of section 103 to apply, that is, the general rules relating to searches are made applicable. Under section 103 the occupier of the place where the search was made gets only a list of the articles taken. But what I want him to get is the reason for the search which has to be recorded in writing, which has to be sent to the Magistrate and he gets a copy thereof." See the Legislative Assembly Debates 31st January 1923 page 755.

The provisions of this new sub-section as well as of sub-section (5) of section 166 are intended as an extra safeguard to protect individuals against general or roving searches. Omission by a Police officer to send forthwith to the nearest Magistrate the copies of the record that he has prepared before undertaking the search affects the validity of the search and is a ground for setting aside the conviction of the accused—Lal Mia v. Emp. 43 C. L. J. 181, 27 Cr. L. J. 542.

166 (1) An officer in charge of a police station or a police officer not being below the rank of a Sub Inspector making an investigation may require an officer in charge of another police station, whether in the same or a different district to cause a search to be made in any place, in any case in which the former officer might cause such search to be made within the limits of his own station

When officer in charge of police station may require another to issue search warrant

(2) Such officer on being so required, shall proceed according to the provisions of section 165, and shall forward the thing found if any, to the officer at whose request the search was made

(3) Whenever there is reason to believe that the delay occasioned by requiring an officer in charge of another police station to cause a search to be made under sub-section (1) might result in evidence of the commission of an offence being concealed or destroyed, it shall be lawful for an officer in charge of a police station or a police officer making an investigation under this Chapter to search, or cause to be searched, any place in the limits of another police station, in accordance with the provisions of Section 165 as if such place were within the limits of his own station

(4) Any officer conducting a search under sub section (3) shall forthwith send notice of the search to the officer in charge of the police station within the limits of which such place is situate and shall also send with such notice a copy of the list (if any) prepared under Section 103 and shall also send to the nearest Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence, copies of the records referred to in section 165 sub sections (1) and (3)

(5) The owner or occupier of the place searched shall, on application be furnished with a copy of any record sent to the Magistrate under sub section (4)

Provided that he shall pay for the same unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish free of cost

Change :—The changes have been introduced by section 37 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

"Not being below the rank of Sub-inspector" :— In the Bill as introduced an investigating officer could not be below the rank of Sub-Inspector We have proposed to some extent to remove this restriction but we are inclined to think that the powers conferred by section 166 should not be exercised by a police officer making an investigation who is below the rank of Sub-Inspector We realise however that there may be administrative difficulties in this connection and if such difficulties are pointed out by Local Governments we should be prepared to retain this clause unamended —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

Sub-sections (3), (4) .— These two sub-sections are proposed to be added in order to give power in certain circumstances to an officer in charge of a Police station to search or cause to be searched places within the local limits of another police station —Statements of Objects and Reasons (1914)

Sub-section (5) —This sub-section and the proviso as well as the words and shall also and (3) in the last three lines of sub-section (4) did not exist in the Bills or the Reports but were added on the motion of Mr Rangachariar during the Debate in the Legislative Assembly The reason for this amendment is the same as that for a similar amendment made in section 165 See the Legislative Assembly Debates January 31st 1923 page 175

167 (1) Whenever it appears that any investigation under this Chapter cannot be completed within the period of twenty-four hours fixed by Section 61, and there are grounds for believing that the accusation or information is well founded, the officer in charge of the police station shall forthwith transmit to the nearest Magistrate a copy of the entries in the diary hereinafter prescribed relating to the case and shall at the same time forward the accused (if any) to such Magistrate

Procedure when investigation cannot be completed in twenty four hours

167 (1) Whenever any person is arrested and detained in custody and it appears that the investigation * * * cannot be completed within the period of twenty-four hours fixed by Section 61, and there are grounds for believing that the accusation or information is well-founded, the officer in charge of the police station or the police officer making the investigation if he is not below the rank of Sub Inspector shall forthwith transmit to the nearest Magistrate a copy of the entries in the diary here inafter prescribed relating to the case, and shall at the same time forward the accused () to such Magistrate.

Procedure when investigation cannot be completed in tweny four hours

(2) The Magistrate to whom an accused person is forwarded under this section may, whether he has or has not jurisdiction to try the case, from time to time authorise the detention of the accused in such custody as such Magistrate thinks fit, for a term not exceeding fifteen days in the whole If he has not jurisdiction to try the case or commit it for trial, and considers further detention unnecessary, he may order the accused to be forwarded to a Magistrate having such jurisdiction :

Provided that no Magistrate of the third class, and no Magistrate of the second class not specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, shall authorise detention in the custody of the police.

(3) A Magistrate authorising under this section detention in the custody of the police shall record his reasons for so doing

(4) If such order is given by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or Sub divisional Magistrate, he shall forward a copy of his order, with his reasons for making it, to the Magistrate to whom he is immediately subordinate.

Change :—The italicised words in sub section (1) and the proviso in sub section (2) have been inserted by sec 38 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 The reasons are stated below

526. Scope :—Prior to the present amendment, the first six lines of this section ran thus — Whenever it appears that any investigation under this chapter cannot be completed etc , i e, this section applied only to investigations under this chapter and gave no authority to a Magistrate to remand an accused person to custody in proceedings under Chapter VIII, in order to enable the police to arrest other persons jointly accused with him—Emp v Basya 5 Bom L R 27, Raghunandan v Emp, 32 Cal 80, 8 C W N 779, In re Subbarayya 39 Mad 928, K E v Rameshwar, 36 All 262 These rulings are no longer good law, because the words ' under this chapter have now been omitted by the Amendment Act of 1923 The same view is taken by Woodroffe (Criminal Procedure, p 188)

527. 24 hours fixed by section 61 :—Having regard to the provisions of this section and of sec 61 and to the requirements of , intention of the Legislature is that the accused persons should be brought before the Magistrate competent to try or commit with as little delay as possible—Q E v Engadu 11 Mad 98

'Not below the rank of Sub-Inspector' — In section 167 however which confers a power to ask for a remand we would confine the operation to investigating officers not below the rank of Sub Inspector —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

528 "Forward the accused to the Magistrate" .—Before a Magistrate remands an accused person to police custody the accused must be produced before him—Peary Mohan v Weston 16 C W N 145 13 Cr L J 65 Where the accused is not brought before the Magistrate it is illegal for him to remand the prisoner on the application of the police —Crown v Shera 1867 P R 39

529 Sub-secion (2)—Magistrate's power to detain :—Under this section a Magistrate on a mere perusal of the entries in the Police diaries may from time to time authorise the detention of the accused for a term not exceeding 15 days on the whole. Thereafter he can under sec 344 by a warrant remand the accused for any term not exceeding 15 days at a time if there is sufficient evidence to suspect that the accused has committed an offence and that further evidence may be obtained by such remand—Narendra Lal v Emp 36 Cal 166

An application for remand to police custody must be made personally by the chief Police Officer present to the chief Magisterial officer present unless this is impossible owing to the absence of one of the officers concerned or through some other exceptional cause—Peary Mohan v Weston 16 C W N 145 13 Cr L J 65

The power under sec 167 is given to detain the prisoners in custody while the police make the investigation and before the inquiry but the custody mentioned in sec 344 is quite different and is intended for under trial prisoners i e when the inquiry or trial has begun or is about to begin—Q E v Engadu 11 Mad 98 In re Krishnaji 23 Bom 32 In re Nagendra Nath 51 Cal 402 (412)

Under the proviso to this sub section newly added the power of detention is confined to first class Magistrates and to second class Magistrates specially empowered The reason is that the period of detention is just the time which is taken advantage of by inexperienced Magistrates for extorting confessions and other things Therefore the power of detention should be given only to experienced Magistrates We consider that the Bill does not go far enough in its restriction of the Magistrates who should be authorised to remand to police custody We would confine the power to first class Magistrates and to second class Magistrates specially empowered —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

530 Period of detention :—The period for which a Magistrate can authorise the detention of the accused in police custody is under this section 15 days on the whole—In re Krishnaji 23 Bom 32 Reg v Sur kava 3 B H C R 31 Hargulal v Emp 1905 P R 24 Q E v Engadu 11 Mad 98 Q v Bisoram 19 W R 36

In ordering further detention when there are good reasons for it, a Magistrate should invariably limit the term as much as possible to what may be necessary for the object in view—Emp v Kampu Kuki, 11 C W N 554

531 Sub-section (3)—Grounds of detention: —Where a Magistrate orders the detention of an accused person in police custody, he must record sufficient reasons for the same—In re Krishnaji, 23 Bom 32, Peary Mohan v Weston 16 C W N 145 Before he orders the detention of an accused person he should ascertain how long the accused had been under police surveillance or influence and in recording the reasons for detention he should note all the information that he is able to obtain on the subject—Emp v Madar 1885 A W N 59

By requiring the Magistrate to record his reasons in case of sanctioning detention in police custody the law contemplates that the Magistrate should consider whether on the facts placed before him there are good grounds for allowing such detention There must be at least something to satisfy the Magistrate that the presence of the person arrested would, during the police investigation assist in some discovery of evidence—Emp v Kampu Kuki 11 C W N 554 The reasons which are to be recorded must be reasons showing the particular necessity which exists in each particular case for leaving the prisoner in the hands of the Police Under no circumstances should an accused person be remanded to police custody unless it is made clear that his presence is actually needed in order to serve some important purpose connected with the completion of the inquiry—Emp v Madar 1885 A W N 59

Thus when the accused had confessed before the Magistrate and had pointed out some of the properties stolen and was waiting to do more, but was unable to do so because the Police were by law unable without a special order to detain him, it was held that an order for detention should be made—Emp v Kampu 11 C W N 554 If in a case into which the police are enquiring the suspected persons have voluntarily offered to conduct the police to a place where the stolen property may be found but such an offer cannot be carried into execution within the limited period of 24 hours the power to detain under this section may be rightly exercised—Q E v Rugonath 3 N W P 275

But the fact that the accused is wanted by the police for the purpose of pointing out the places through which he passed on his way to commit a dacoity or for the purpose of obtaining his identification in the village is not a sufficient reason for sanctioning detention—Amir Khan v K E 7 C W N 457 So also it would be improper for a Magistrate to sanction the detention of a person in police custody so that he may be forced to give a clue to the stolen property—Q E v Rugonath, 3 N W P 275 An accused person may be remanded if it is likely that further evidence may be obtained but he cannot be remanded on a mere expectation that time will show his guilt or that further fact would come to light—Khuda Bakhsh v Crown, 1872 P R 19, or simply for the purpose of verifying his confession recorded under section 164—Emp v Lathe Halran, 7 C W N

168 When any subordinate police-officer has made any investigation under this Chapter, he shall report the result of such investigation to the officer in charge of the police-station

Report of investigation by subordinate police officer

532. It was held that a report made by a subordinate Police Office under this section was not a public document within the meaning of section 74 Evidence Act and an accused person was not entitled to a copy of it before trial—Q E v Arumugan 20 Mad 189 But now see sec 173 sub section (4)

169 If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police station or to the police-officer making the investigation, [illegible]

Release of accused when evidence deficient

[illegible] a Magistrate, such officer shall, if such person is in custody, release him on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, as such officer may direct, to appear, if and when so required, before a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police report and to try the accused or commit him for trial

Change —The words or to the police officer making the investigation have been added by section 39 of the Crim Pro Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 In the case of sec 169 we agree that the power contemplated by the section should be exerciseable by investigating officers and we see no reason in this case to restrict the power to officers not below the rank of Sub Inspector With regard to section 170 however we consider that the direct responsibility for sending up a case should rest with the officer in charge of the police station —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

533 Power of Police Officer —This section does not authorise a police officer to entertain an application for withdrawal of a complaint Permitting a complainant to withdraw is a judicial act the exercise of which is vested in the Magistrate under Secs 248 and 345 and the police have no authority to interfere in such matters—Anonymous Ratanlal 91

Re arrest —The admission to bail by the Police under this section is a purely provisional arrangement and therefore if the Magistrate considers that the evidence does establish a prima facie case of a non bailable offence the accused should be re arrested and forwarded to the Magistrate in custody—Anonymous Ratanlal 121

170 (1) If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station that there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground as aforesaid, such officer shall forward the accused under custody to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial, or if the offence is bailable and the accused is able to give security, shall take security from him for his appearance before such Magistrate on a day fixed and for his attendance from day to day before such Magistrate until otherwise directed

Cases to be sent to Magistrate when evidence is sufficient

(2) When the officer in charge of a police-station forwards an accused person to a Magistrate or takes security for his appearance before such Magistrate under this section, he shall send to such Magistrate any weapon or other article which it may be necessary to produce before him and shall require the complainant (if any) and so many of the persons who appear to such officer to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case as he may think necessary to execute a bond, to appear before the Magistrate as thereby directed and prosecute or give evidence (as the case may be) in the matter of the charge against the accused

(3) If the Court of the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate is mentioned in the bond, such Court shall be held to include any Court to which such Magistrate may refer the case for inquiry or trial, provided reasonable notice of such reference is given to such complainant or persons.

(4) * * * * * * * * * *

(5) The officer in whose presence the bond is executed shall deliver a copy thereof to one of the persons who executed it, and shall then send to the Magistrate the original with his report.

Change —Sub section (4) has been recently omitted by the Crim Pro Code Amendment Act II of 1926 The reasons for the omission have been thus stated —' Sub section (4) of section 170 provides that the d fixed under this section shall be the day whereon the accused person i appear, if security for his appearance has been taken, or the day on which he may be expected to arrive at the Court of the Magistrate, if he is to be forwarded in custody This provision requires, for example, that all witnesses shall be bound down to appear before the Magistrate on the date when the accused is expected to arrive at the Court if he is forwarded in custody. It has been found to be inconvenient, and, it is understood is not frequently followed in practice"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1925, Part V, p 214)

534. "Shall forward" —As soon as it appears to the investigating police officer that there is sufficient ground for forwarding the accused, the police officer is bound to forward the accused, and has no option but to do so—Govinda v Emp 16 N L R 9, 21 Cr L J 769

"On a day fixed" :—A recognisance taken from a prisoner binding him to attend the Court to answer a charge against him, should specify a particular day for his attendance—Q v Pooran, 11 W R 47

The police should not bind over witnesses to appear and give evidence long after the prisoner is brought before the Magistrate—Govt v Madun Das, 6 W R 5?.

535. Right of accused to copy of charge sheet at the beginning of trial:—It was held under the old law that a Magistrate was entitled to refuse to give the accused at the commencement of the trial a copy of the Police charge sheet, containing the whole of the prosecution evidence and extracts from the police diaries—Q E v Venkataratnam, 19 Mad 14 but this is no longer good law in view of the new sub section (4) of section 173 which now entitles the accused to get a copy of the charge sheet before trial

Complainant and witnesses not to be required to accompany police officer.

171. No complainant or witness on his way to the Court of the Magistrate shall be required to accompany a police officer,

Complainants and witnesses not to be subjected to restraint or shall be subjected to unnecessary restraint or inconvenience, or required to give any security for his appearance other than his own bond ;

Recusant complainant or witness may be forwarded in custody

Provided that, if any complainant or witness refuses to attend or execute a bond as directed in Section 170, the officer in charge of the police-station may forward him in custody to the Magistrate who may ... him in custody until he executes such bond ... hearing of the case is completed.

536. Unnecessary restraint:—Where a w... police surveillance for about four days, it was ... warrant in the law to keep a witness under such that under such circumstances the evidence of the witness could not be accepted as given voluntarily—Bajrang Lal v Emp 4 C W N 49

172 (1) Every police officer making an investigation under this Chapter shall day by day enter his proceedings in the investigation in a diary, setting forth the time at which the information reached him, the time at which he began and closed his investigation, the place or places visited by him and a statement of the circumstances ascertained through this investigation.

Diary of proceedings in investigation

(2) Any Criminal Court may send for the police-diaries of a case under inquiry or trial in such Court, and may use such diaries not as evidence in the case, but to aid it in such inquiry or trial Neither the accused nor his agents shall be entitled to call for such diaries, nor shall he or they be entitled to see them merely because they are referred to by the Court, but if they are used by the police officer who made them, to refresh his memory, or if the Court uses them for the purpose of contradicting such police officer the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act 1872, Section 161 or Section 145, as the case may be shall apply

537 Scope —This section does not deal with the recording of any statement made by witnesses No mention is made in this section of the recording of any statement of a witness What is intended to be recorded under this section is what the Sub Inspector did the places where he went, the people he visited what he saw etc No statement can be said to be recorded under this section so as to be a privileged one—Mafiuddi v Emp, 31 C W N 910 28 Cr L J 805

Diary to be kept properly :—Though Police diaries are not evidence in the case against the accused still it is very essential for criminal trials that they should be properly kept in the manner provided by the Code and Magistrates should enforce the observance of law in this respect —Crown v Shera 1867 P R 39 See also Punj Cir, p 171

It is incumbent upon a Police officer who investigates a case under this chapter to keep the diary as provided by this section and the omission to keep the diary deprives the Court of the very valuable assistance which such diaries can give if legitimately used—Hiralal v Crown 1918 P R 16 19 Cr L J 517

Court may send for diaries —Sessions Judges should not issue a general order directing the Police diaries in all cases committed for trial to the Court of Session and in every criminal appeal to be transmitted to them They are only authorised to send for the diaries of cases unde trial before them if they think it necessary in such cases to peruse the diaries—Q E v Mannu 19 All 390 (F B)

538 Use of diary—

Diary not an evidence in the case —Police diaries are not original evidence of the matters contained therein—Dal Singh v K E 44 Cal 876 (P C) 21 C W N 818 Q E v Zahir Husain 21 All 159 In re Nira rah 2 Weir 143 Anonymous 2 Weir 147 The Court should not take the facts and statements contained in the diaries as the material which would help it to come to a finding for this would be using the diary as an evidence in the case—Syed Abdul Rahim v Sabhu 10 C W N 600 nor should the Court make a summary of the contents of the diary and make it a part of the judgment for that would also make the statements contained in the diary virtually a part of the evidence in the case—Emp v Nand Lal 1894 A W N 155 The use of the diary as evidence in the case either for or against the accused is strictly forbidden by sec 162 Even the consent or desire of the accused cannot leagalise the use of the diary as evidence in the case—Manna Lal v K E 27 O C 40 A I R 1925 Oudh 1 25 Cr L J 49

The diary may be used not as evidence but only for the purpose of assisting the Court in the inquiry or trial or as suggesting means of further elucidating the points which need clearing up and which are material for doing justice between Crown and the accused—Dal Singh v Emp 44 Cal 876 (P C) Q E v Jadab 27 Cal 295 Q E v Mannu 19 All 390 (F B) Achhaibai v Emp 2 P L T 223 Emp v Nand Lal 1894 A W N 155 Sundar Singh v Emp 23 Cr L J 251 (Lah) or for the purpose of seeking for sources and lines of enquiry and for the names of persons who may be in a position to give material evidence—Ibid The aid which a Court can receive from the entries in such a diary is usually confined to utilising the information given therein as a foundation for questions to be put to the witnesses and in using the diary the Court should always employ very great caution —Raja Ram v Emp 3 O W N 1001 28 Cr L J 134 As observed by Knox J in Q E v Nasiruddin 16 All 207 (208) Statements made to the police during the investigation are recorded by police officers in the most haphazard manner Officers conducting an investigation not unnaturally record what seems in their opinion material at that stage and omit many matters equally material and it may be of supreme importance as the case developes Besides that in most cases they are not experts of what is and what is not evidence The statements are recorded hurriedly in the midst of a crowd and confusion subject to frequent interruption and suggestion from bystanders There is no guarantee that they do not contain much more or much less than what the witness has said These principles should be remembered by the Court when utilizing the record of statements made by a police officer in the course of an investigation and entered in the diary—Raja Ram v Emp (supra)

Entries made in personal diary kept by a police officer who did not start investigating and did not carry on the investigation of the case do not fall within the provisions of this section and the diary is not inadmissible in evidence—Kalia v Emp 26 Cr L J 579 A I R 1925 Cal 950

Use by Police officer for refreshing memory or by the Court to contradict the Police officer —A Criminal Court may permit the Police officer who made the special diary to look at it for the purpose of refreshing his memory or may use it for the purpose of showing contradiction between the statements recorded in the diary and the evidence which the police officer is giving in Court A special diary cannot be used to enable any witness other than the Police officer who made it to refresh his memory by looking at it and it cannot be used to contradict any witness other than such Police officer—Q E v Mannu 19 All 390 (F B) Dal Singh v Emp, 44 Cal 876 (P C) It is illegal to use police diaries for the purpose of contradicting the evidence of prosecution witnesses—Emp v Chunni 1883 A W N 37

The object of sub section (2) is to enable the Court to direct the police officer who is giving his evidence to refresh his memory from the notes made by him in the course of his investigation of the case or to question him as to contradictions which may appear between statements so recorded and the evidence he is giving in Court If used for the latter purpose, the provisions of secs 145 and 161 of the Evidence Act shall apply The Court may also use the diaries in the course of the trial for the purpose of clearing up obscurities in the evidence or bringing out relevant facts which the Court thinks are material in the interests of a fair trial If the statements in question however have not been made evidence in accordance with these statutory provisions no Court has the right to refer to them subsequently for the purpose of coming to a judicial decision upon the case which is under trial or inquiry—Mahomed v Emp 26 Cr L J 1308, A I R 1926 Lah 54

The accused is not entitled to insist that a Police officer should refer to the diary to refresh his memory—Emp v Kali Churn 8 Cal 154, nor is the Judge bound to compel the witness to look at the diary to refresh his memory—Emp v Jhubboo 8 Cal 739 But see Mohiuddin v K E A I R 1924 Pat 829 where it is held that if a Sub Inspector does not remember what the witnesses stated at the investigation, and refuses to refresh his memory from the diaries the Court should compel him to look into the diaries

The diary is permitted to be used for the limited purpose of contradicting the Police officer, and not for the purpose of corroborating him—Achhailal v Emp, 2 P L T 223 22 Cr L J 374 But where independently of the police diary wrongly relied upon by the Court below there was ample legal evidence to corroborate the prosecution case and to sustain the conviction the High Court in revision condoned the irregularity and refused to interfere—Ibid A Magistrate should not refer to an entry in a diary which is not used by a prosecution witness to refresh his memory as corroborative of his evidence, but an error of this kind is not a sufficient ground for interference by the High Court when the Magistrate has found the accused guilty after considering the other evidence in the case—In re Cul [illegible] 1 L W 229 15 Cr L J 256

Report of police officer

173 (1) Every investigation under this Chapter shall be completed without unnecessary delay, and, as soon as it is completed, the officer in charge of the police station shall—

(a) forward, to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police report, a report, in the form prescribed by the Local Government setting forth the names of the parties, the nature of the information and the names of the persons who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case, and stating whether the accused (if arrested) has been forwarded in custody or has been released on his bond, and if so, whether with or without sureties, and

(b) communicate, in such manner as may be prescribed by the Local Government, the action taken by him, to the person, if any,

by whom the information relating to the commission of the offence was first given.

(2) Where a superior officer of police has been appointed under Section 158, the report shall, in any cases in which the Local Government by general or [illegible] investigation.

(3) Whenever it appears from a report forwarded under this section that the accused has been released on his bond, the Magistrate shall make such order for the discharge of such bond or otherwise as he thinks fit.

(4) A copy of any report forwarded under this section shall on application be furnished to the accused before the commencement of the inquiry or trial;

Provided that the same shall be paid for unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Change :—Clause (ii) and sub section (4) have been added by sec. 40 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 "The principal change effected is to prescribe that the Police shall communicate the result of their investigation to the person by whom the first information was given"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) For reason of sub section (4) see below

541. Police report :—It is the duty of the Police to make a report in every investigation under this Chapter Where a person gave information to the Police of the commission of a non cognizable offence, and the Police obtained the authority of a Magistrate, under section 155, to investigate the case, and without making any report instituted proceedings against that person under section 211 I P C which ended in his conviction, it was held that the conviction was illegal in the absence of a Police report under this section—Emp v Appa Pighi, 17 Bom L R 69, 16 Cr L J 161

There is no legal limit to the number of investigations which can be held into a crime, and when one has been completed by the submission of a report under this section another may be begun on further information received—Divakar v Ramamurthi, 35 M L J 127, 19 Cr L J 901

The report must set forth the 'nature of the information' A report which omits to set forth the information is defective, and a Magistrate taking cognizance of a case on such report acts illegally—Lee v Adhikary, 37 Cal 49, 14 C W N 304

It is sufficient if the Police report contains the names of the parties, the nature of the information and the names of the persons acquainted with the circumstances of the case The report need not state whether in the opinion of the police the accused are guilty or not Where the police sent up their report wherein they mentioned the names of two persons and stated that certain witnesses spoke against them on account of enmity but that if the Court thought that there was evidence against them, the Court might issue warrant, held that the report was a police-report within the meaning of this section—Mehrab v. Emp, 17 S L R 150, A I R 1924 Sind 71 26 Cr L J 181

On receipt of a police report under this section, the Magistrate can take cognizance of the case under section 190(b) If instead of doing so, he proceeded to make over the case to a subordinate Magistrate for enquiry and report as if he had taken cognizance of the case on a complaint, held that the proceedings of the Magistrate were irregular—Abdullah v. K E, 40 Cal 854 17 C W N 1004, 14 Cr L J 297

Order to strike off case :—A Magistrate's order directing a case reported to him by the Police under this section, to be struck off is not a judicial order dismissing a complaint, and cannot be reviewed by the Sessions Judge under section 437 (now 436)—Q E v Kamru, Ratanlal 521

Sub-section (4) —This sub section did not exist in the Bills or Reports but was added during the debate on the motion of Mr Rangachariar who observed as follows This amendment relates to the supply to the accused person of a copy of the charge sheet in the case in which he is being prosecuted There has been considerable difficulty in this matter on account of the rulings of various Courts that copies of charge sheets should not be furnished to accused persons Some Courts went to the length of holding that till the accused begins his defence a copy of the charge sheet should not be furnished to him It has worked a great hardship The accused has to grope in the dark as to what case he has to meet, who the prosecution witnesses are and what their evidence is going to be This amendment is therefore very necessary Before a case begins or the inquiry or trial commences, an accused person ought to be furnished with a copy of the charge on which he is being prosecuted Just as he is furnished with a copy of the complaint on which he is being prosecuted, so also this charge sheet is the information on which the Magistrate takes cognizance, and it is but right that the accused should be granted a copy of it"—Legislative Assembly Debates, 31st January, 1923 pages 1763—1764

Before the enactment of this sub section, it was held that the report made by a Police officer under this section not being a public document within the meaning of Sec 74 of the Evidence Act, the accused was not entitled to get a copy of the report before trial—Q E v Arumugam, 20 Mad 189; Q E. v Venkataratnam 19 Mad. 14 But these cases are now overruled by the new sub-section (4)

Police to inquire and report on suicide, etc

174. (1) The officer in charge of a police-station or some other police officer specially empowered by the Local Government in that behalf on receiving information that person—

(a) has committed suicide or

(b) has been killed by another or by an animal, or by machinery or by an accident, or

(c) has died under circumstances raising a reasonable suspicion that some other person has committed an offence shall immediately give intimation thereof to the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests, and, unless otherwise directed by any rule prescribed by the Local Government or by any general or special order of the District or Sub divisional Magistrate shall proceed to the place where the body of such deceased person is, and there in the [illegible]

describing such wounds fractures bruises and other marks of injury as may be found on the body, and stating in what manner or by what weapon or instrument (if any) such marks appear to have been inflicted

(2) The report shall be signed by such police officer and other persons or by so many of them as concur therein and shall be forthwith forwarded to the District Magistrate or the Sub divisional Magistrate

(3) When there is any doubt regarding the cause of death or when for any other reason the police officer considers it expedient so to do, he shall, subject to such rules as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf, forward the body with a view to its being examined to the nearest Civil Surgeon or other qualified medical man appointed in this behalf by the Local Government, if the state of the weather and the distance admit of its being so forwarded without risk of such putrefaction on the road as would render such examination useless

(4) In the Presidencies of Fort St George and [illegible] this section may be made [illegible] shall then repor[illegible] sult [illegible] horised to hol[illegible] ts

(5) The following Magistrates are empowered to hold inquests, namely, any District Magistrate, Sub divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class and any Magistrate especially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government or the District Magistrate

Change:—In sub section (5) the words or Magistrate of the first class have been newly added by sec 41 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 By this amendment all first class Magistrates have been generally empowered to hold inquests

Magistrates empowered.—In the Punjab all Magistrates of the 1st and second class have been specially empowered to hold inquests under this section—Punjab Gazette 1883 pp 23 52 In Bombay all Magistrates (except Honorary Magistrates) all District Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Police are empowered to act under this section—Bombay Government Gazette 1872 p 1325 Ibid 1873 p 16

District Magistrates should inform District Superintendents of Police which of the subordinate Magistrates have been authorised under section 37 read with sec 174 Cr P C to hold inquests The District Superintendent of Police will thus be enabled to instruct his subordinates as to the particular Magistrates to whom the intimation required by this section is to be sent and the intimations will give those Magistrates the opportunity of proceeding under sec 176 when it may be desirable to do so—C. P Cr. Cir Part II No 10

542 Scope:—When the body cannot be found or has been buried there can be no investigation under section 174 This section is intended to apply to cases in which an inquest is necessary which presupposes that the corpse must be available—Gul Hassan v K E 1908 P R 27

543 Report:—The report is different from the final or complete report mentioned in sec 173 Inquest reports must be written up and completed on the spot where the inquest over the corpse is being held Immediately the inquest is closed the report thereof will be put into a cover and handed over in the presence of the Panchayatdars to the constable about to take the corpse to the Medical Officer s station for examination—Mad Pol Man Vol I p 85

Considering the important nature of the evidence which is generally supplied by the results of the post mortem examination it is necessary that in such cases the results of the observation external and internal should be fully recorded A verbatim report of the statements of witnesses examined at the inquest may often be of great use to the Court in testing the value of evidence subsequently given—In re Pachudayan 9 M L T 321 12 Cr L J 174

When a Medical officer is not examined at the beginning of a post mortem inquiry a copy of the post mortem certificate ought to be given to the accused for the purpose of enabling him to conduct his defence Similarly, he should be given a copy of the inquest report (excluding statements made therein, which the accused is not entitled to get under sec 162) when the investigating police officer is not examined at the beginning of the inquiry—In re Maruthamuthu Kulumbin, 32 M L J 601 28 Cr L J 463

Special diary not necessary in all cases.— The Lieutenant Governor does not think that special diaries are intended or necessary in all cases of inquiry into unnatural deaths The report described in section 174 Cr P Code is very much the same in character as the special diary of section 172 If the Police officer investigating sees reason to suspect crime the inquiry becomes one under section 172 and special diaries become as a matter of course necessary but in ordinary cases in which the inquiry is made and completed in a few hours there seems to be no necessity of reporting the facts first in a special diary and then in the report prescribed by sec 174 When however the inquiry is prolonged or lasts for more than one day the diary should be sent to inform the District Superintendent and Magistrate of what is going on The Lieutenant Governor would therefore rule that in cases of any complexity or in which the inquiry lasts over one day or in which a crime is suspected special diaries should be sent in anticipation of the final report which will be made under sec 173 if a crime is detected and under sec 174 if the death is from accident or unnatural causes It is to be understood that in the station Diary everything done by the Police will be entered —Bengal Police Circular 1872 page 107

175 (1) A police officer proceeding under Section 174 may by order in writing summon two or more persons as aforesaid for the purpose of the said investigation, and any other person who appears to be acquainted with the facts of the case Every person so summoned shall be bound to attend and to answer truly all questions other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge, or to a penalty or forfeiture

Power to summon persons

(2) If the facts do not disclose a cognizable offence to which section 170 applies, such persons shall not be required by the police-officer to attend a Magistrate's Court

Punishment.—A person who fails to attend in obedience to the order issued under this section is punishable under sec 174 I P Code

It should be noticed however that the word truly which has been omitted from sec 161 is still retained under this section probably through oversight but whether retained through oversight or otherwise the word cannot be ignored and a person giving false answers to questions put to him is liable to prosecution for giving false evidence under sec 193 I P C If he refuses to answer the questions he is punishable under sec 179 I P C

It should be further noted that the obligation to answer truly all questions attaches only to the persons summoned by the Police officer If a person voluntarily comes forward without any summons and makes false statements he cannot be prosecuted for perjury—Md Hayat v Crown 23 Cr L J 82 A I R 1922 Lah 133 1922 P W R 6

544 Record of statement —The statements of witnesses examined at the inquest should be recorded verbatim in the report as the statements may be of great use to the Court in testing the value of evidence subsequently given—In re Pachudayan 9 M L T 371 12 Cr L J 124

Inquiry by Magistrate into cause of death

176 (1) When any person dies while in the custody of the police, the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests shall, and, in any other case mentioned in Section 174, clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub section (1), any Magistrate so empowered may, hold an inquiry into the cause of death either instead of or in addition to the investigation held by the police officer, and, if he does so, he shall have all the powers in conducting it which he would have in holding an inquiry into an offence The Magistrate holding such an inquiry shall record the evidence taken by him in connection therewith in any of the manners hereinafter prescribed according to the circumstances of the case

Power to disinter corpses

(2) Whenever such Magistrate considers it expedient to make an examination of the dead body of any person who has been already interred in order to discover the cause of his death, the Magistrate may cause the body to be disinterred and examined

545 Jurisdiction of Presidency Magistrate —The Presidency Magistrate is not ousted of his jurisdiction to hold a preliminary inquiry into a charge of murder because the Coroner has held an inquiry into the cause of death and has committed the accused to the High Court under section 25 of the Coroner s Act (IV of 1871)—Q E v Md Rajudin 16 Bom 159 Emp v Jogeshwar 31 Cal 1 Q E v John Paul Ratanlal 540

Power to disinter corpses —A Police officer making an investigation under this section has no power to cause a dead body which has been already interred to be disinterred in order to examine it. Such power is conferred on a Coroner under section 11 of the Coroner s Act (IV of 1871) and on a Magistrate holding an inquest under the present section

546. Revision —Proceedings under this section are now liable to revision by reason of the omission of sub section (3) of section 435, by the Amendment Act of 1923

But there is nothing in this section which requires that a Magistrate holding an inquiry under this section is bound to make a report or to come to a finding The inquiry under this section into the cause of a suspicious death is not a judicial proceeding and where he sent a report of the result of his inquiry to his executive superior (the District Magistrate) the High Court could not call for it under section 435—In re Troylokhanath 3 Cal 742 Q E v Bayaji Ratanlal 843

CHAPTER XV.

OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE CRIMINAL COURTS IN INQUIRIES AND TRIALS.

A—Place of Inquiry or Trial.

177. Every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed.

Ordinary place of inquiry and trial

547. General Rule :—All crime is local, the jurisdiction over the crime belongs to the country where the crime is committed—Macleod v Attorney General L R (1891) A C 458 Crimes in their nature are local, and the jurisdiction of crimes is local—Rafael v Verelst, 2 Blackstone, p 1058 Crime is purely local, i e depends on the law of the place in which it is committed, and not on the nationality of the person who commits it—Sirdar Gurdayal v Rajah of Furidkote (1894) A C 670 Therefore British Indian Courts have no jurisdiction to try for offences committed and completed outside the British Territory—Ibrahim v Emp, 1894 P R 7 Q E v Ranchhod 2 Bom L R 337, Siddha v Biligiri, 7 Mad 354 Anonymous 6 M H C R App 3 As to the jurisdiction of British Indian Courts over offences committed by subjects of the Crown in places outside British India see sec 188

section 185 apply to determine jurisdiction in respect of such proceeding—Indra Pratap v Dewan 1 \ L J 390 15 Cr L J 5

Similar remarks may also apply to proceedings under Chapters VIII and X

"Ordinarily" —The word ordinarily indicates that this section is a general one and must be read subject to any special provisions of law which may modify it The rule laid down in this section has been relaxed or modified by several succeeding sections Thus this section must be read subject to the special provisions of sec 197 (2) which override the general rule contained in this section—K I v Maung Ka 4 L B R 265

549 Local Jurisdiction —Although this section lays down that every offence must be inquired into and tried by the Court within whose jurisdiction it was committed still if the offence is inquired into or tried by a Magistrate who has no territorial jurisdiction over the place where the offence was committed it would be at most an irregularity which would be cured by sec 531 if such commitment or trial has occasioned a failure of justice—Rayan Kutti v Emp 26 Mad 640 Asst Sessions Judge v Ramammal 36 Mad 387 Emp v Doraisamy 30 Mad 94 Where a Magistrate being empowered to commit to the sessions but having no territorial jurisdiction over the place in which the offence is alleged to have been committed commits a case to a Sessions Court which has jurisdiction over the place the commitment is valid and cannot be quashed under section 53 although the objection to such commitment is taken before the commitment—Q E v Abbi Redi 17 Mad 402 But no Judge or Magistrate can try or pass an order of committal in respect of an offence committed outside the Province altogether Such a trial or order of committal is illegal and the illegality cannot be cured by section 531—Bhagwatia v Q E 3 Pat 417 (4 2) 26 Cr L J 49 A I R 1925 Pat 187

Commitment to wrong Sessions —Where a Magistrate commits a case to a Sessions Court other than the one within whose local jurisdiction the offence has been committed the commitment is merely irregular and would be cured by sec 531 and the High Court will not quash the commitment but will direct the transfer of the case to the Court having jurisdiction—Q E v Thaku 8 Bom 312 Q E v Atmaram 2 Bom L R 394 Q E v Ram Dei 18 All 350 But the Madras High Court dissenting from the above cases and following the Privy Council ruling in Ledgerd v Bull 9 All 191 has laid down that commitment to a Sessions Court having no territorial jurisdiction over the offence is illegal and must be set aside and the High Court would not be justified in upholding the commitment and directing the transfer of the case to the proper Sessions Court—Asst Sessions Judge v Ramammal 36 Mad 387 (391) This is also the view of the Patna High Court in Bhagwatia v K E 3 Pat 417, 26 Cr L J 49 But where a commitment was made to the High Court Sessions in respect of two offences one of which was committed within and the other without the original jurisdiction of the High Court that the High Court could on the grounds of expediency and c ence proceed with the trial the irregularity being cured by sec 5

if the High Court had no jurisdiction on its original side to try the case, an order could be made under sec 526 directing the trial to take place at the High Court Sessions And the High Court ordered accordingly—Ganapathi v. Rex, 42 Mad 791, 37 M L J 60, 20 Cr L J. 484

Several offences —Where two different offences are committed in the course of the same transaction, the case should be tried by a Magistrate who has jurisdiction to try both the offences, it would not be a proper course that a Magistrate who has jurisdiction over one of them should try that offence, leaving the other to be tried by another Magistrate Such a procedure would be highly inconvenient—In re Ponnusami, 2 Weir 144

550. Holding trial outside British India :—The mere fact that an offence has been committed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of a District Magistrate would not enable him to try that offence at some place outside British India—Q E. v Manilal, Ratanlal 376

551. Effect of irregular arrest :—The irregularity of an arrest is not a ground for invalidating all proceedings and trials subsequent to the arrest—Sobha v Emp, 1899 P R 6, Crown v Gobinda, 1911 P R. 1 Thus, a Magistrate should not acquit an accused merely because the officer who arrested the accused did not belong to the circle in which the arrest was made—26 Mad 124 Thus, where the subject of a Native State, who having committed an offence in British India escaped into the Native State, was arrested by the British police without the intervention of that State, held that the subsequent trial and conviction of the accused were not affected by the irregularity of the arrest—Sobha v. Emp, 1899 P. R 6.

552. Effect of transfer of territory to Native State—Where an offence was committed in a place within British territory, but some time after the commitment of the case to the Court of Session and before the commencement of the trial, the place in which the offence was committed ceased to be a British territory and became part of a Native State, it was held that this fact did not oust the jurisdiction of the British Court to try the offence—K E v Ram Naresh, 34 All 118, 9 A L J 51 K E v Ganga, 9 A L J 696, 34 All 451 Similarly, if, pending an appeal from a conviction, the place where the offence had been committed was transferred to a Native State, it was held that this transfer of territory did not deprive the Court in which the appeal had been filed of its jurisdiction to hear it—Mahabir v K E 33 All 578, 8 A.L.J. 630.

178. Notwithstanding anything contained in Section 177, the Local Government may direct that any cases or class of cases committed for trial in any district may be tried in any sessions divisions:

Power to order cases to be tried in different sessions divisions

Provided that such direction is not repugnant to any direction previously issued by the High Court under Section 15 of the Indian High Courts Act, or Section 107 of the Government of Indian Act, 1915, or under this Code, Section 526.

553. Local Government's power in Burma :—The Local Government of Burma has no power to transfer a case committed to the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon for trial, to the Court of the Commissioner But it can transfer a case from the District of Rangoon to the Sessions Judge of Pegu—Q E v Nga Tha 10 Cal 643

Accused triable in district where act is done or where consequence ensues

179. When a person is accused of the commission of any offence by reason of anything which has been done, and of any consequence which has ensued, such offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any such thing has been done, or any such consequence has ensued.

Illustrations

(a) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and dies within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Z The offence of the culpable homicide of A may be inquired into or tried by X or Z

(b) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X and is, during ten days within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y, and during ten days more within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Z, unable in the local limits of the jurisdiction of either Court Y or Court Z to follow his ordinary pursuits The offence of causing grievous hurt to A may be inquired into or tried by X, Y or Z

(c) A is put in fear of injury within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and is thereby induced, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y to deliver property to the person who put him in fear The offence of extortion committed on A may be inquired into or tried either by X or Y

(d) A is wounded in the Native State of Baroda and dies of his wounds in Poona The offence of causing A's death may be inquired into and tried in Poona

554. Scope of Section :—This section applies when the act (or omission) is an offence by reason of anything which has been done and of any consequence which has ensued But where the act (or omission) is a complete offence irrespective of any consequence which has ensued, this section does not apply, and the offence is to be inquired into and tried only by the Court within whose jurisdiction the act was committed (See 177) Thus—

Examples —(a) The offence of falsification of accounts (sec 477A.

I P C) is complete as soon as the accounts are falsified, and any consequence resulting from it is immaterial for the offence Therefore, it is to be tried only by the Court within whose jurisdiction the accounts were falsified, and not by any other Court—Swaminathan v Annamalai, 4 M L T 481, 9 Cr L J 92

(b) Where a person who was assaulted by the accused in Baroda had his leg completely broken there and then came to British India where he remained for 2 months in the hospital, it was held that the offence of grievous hurt was complete in Baroda by the fracture of the leg, irrespective of any consequence (viz the injured man lying in hospital) ensuing in British India, therefore the offence could not be tried in British India—Sirdar Meru v Jethabhai, 8 Bom L R 513

(c) Where a dacoity was committed in a Native State and some stolen property was found concealed by the accused in the British territory, it was held that the offence of dacoity was complete in the Native State, irrespective of retaining the stolen property in the British territory, and could not be tried in British India—Reg v Lakhya 1 Bom 50

(d) Where a woman sold in District A her minor girl to a prostitute, who took the girl to District B it was held that the offence of selling a minor girl for the purposes of prostitution was complete in District A, and that the possession of the girl in District B was not a consequence completing the offence, the Magistrate of District B had no jurisdiction to try the offence—6 Agra 40

(e) The offence of infringement of copyright is complete as soon as the book infringing the copyright is printed, and it does not depend for its completion upon any consequence (e g loss of money to the complainant) such as is contemplated by Sec 179 Therefore, the offence is to be inquired into and tried under Sec 177 at the place where the infringing book was printed—Kalidas v Karam Chand, 1916 P R 28, 18 Cr L J 353

(f) Where a person consigned some goods from District F to District K, and the consignee misappropriated the goods at K, it was held that the consignee could be tried in K and not in F because the accused was not charged by reason of any consequence or loss which ensued to the consigner at F but solely by reason of what was alleged to have been done at K—Nirbhai Ram v Kallu Ram, 4 O C 376

(g) Where a complaint was made before a Magistrate at Aligarh that a person had dishonestly and fraudulently, two days after he became insolvent, realised at Calcutta the money due in respect of certain hundies which the complainant purchased, it was held that the offence should be inquired into at Calcutta where the offence (sec 415 I P C) was committed and not at Aligarh where the loss ensued to the complainant—Babu Lal v Ghansham 5 A L J 333

(h) Where the offence of kidnapping is committed outside British India, the subsequent act of conveying the kidnapped person to British India is not such a consequence as is contemplated by this section, so as to give jurisdiction to a British Indian Court over the offence committed outside British India—Bhuta Santal v. Dama Santal, 20 C W N 62, 17

(i) Two persons were alleged to have induced another to purchase a barrel at Meerut on the false representation that the barrel contained a certain quantity of spirits At Agra it was discovered that the quantity was less than what it was represented to contain It was held that the Agra Court had no jurisdiction because the offence of fraud had been committed at Meerut and that sec 179 did not apply in as much as the discovery of the fraud after the delivery of the article was not a consequence which has ensued within the meaning of the section—Pragdas v Daulatram 13 A L J 1067 16 Cr L J 825

(j) Where a petition under sec 21 of the Income Tax Act (1918) was falsely verified at a place in the Tanjore District and was presented in the Ramnad District held that the offence of false verification was completed in the Tanjore District and the Ramnad Magistrate had no jurisdiction—In re Mohideen 45 Mad 839 43 M L J 475 23 Cr L J 619

(k) The accused sent from Madras a V P parcel to the complainant at Hyderabad in consequence of an order by the complainant for some tea The complainant paid the V P amount and took delivery of the parcel which on opening was found to contain only saw dust In a trial on a charge of cheating preferred by the complainant against the accused at Madras held the deceit and the delivery of the parcel in consequence of the deceit were complete when the money was handed over to the Post office at Hyderabad and the subsequent delivery of the money by the Post office to the accused at Madras was not a necessary ingredient of the offence and the offence being committed wholly at Hyderabad sec 179 did not apply and the Madras Court had no jurisdiction to try the offence—Kaleek v Emp 5 M L J 511 8 Cr L J 457

555 Criminal misappropriation —In case of the offence of criminal misappropriation or breach of trust the consequence of wrongful gain or wrongful loss is not an essential part of the crime and a person is not accused of the offence by reason of it therefore the offence is triable where the dishonest use or disposal took place and not where the loss ensued to the complainant—Pambilis v Emp 38 Mad 639 29 M L J 175 Simhachalam v Rati Kanta 41 Cal 917 21 C W N 573 Jan Karan v Sargoo 1 P L T 200 21 Cr L J 519 A K Maitra v Kanti Mohan 25 Cr L J 377 (Cal) Banerjee v Polms 20 N L R 72 25 Cr L J 922 Abdul Salam v Ramnewal (1919) U B R 3rd Qr 172 21 Cr L J 149 Abdul Haq v Emp 23 Cr L J 743 (Lah) Ahmed Ibrahim v Haji A Cunny 1 Rang 56 24 Cr L J 746 In Asst Sessions Judge v Parasami 38 Mad 779 however where certain jewels were entrusted to a person in a Native State for sale on commission and he converted the jewels to his own use it was held that since the loss of the jewels which was the consequence occurred in British India (where the complainant resided) the Magistrate of the British Indian Court had jurisdiction under this section See also Behari Lal v Gangadin 27 Cr L J 1104 (All) where the forum of trial of the offence of criminal misappropriation was decided with reference to the place wher

558 Scope of section—Foreign territory:—The Code extends only to British territory and the present section assumes the offence therein indicated to have been committed in a local jurisdiction created by the Code Therefore where a foreign subject in a foreign territory instigated the commission of an offence which was in consequence committed in British territory it was held that the instigation not having taken place in any district created by this Code the instigator was not amenable to the jurisdiction of a British Court—Reg v Pirtai 10 B H C R 356 Kishen Koer v Crown 1878 P R 20 When a house breaking took place in a district in British India and a non British subject residing in a Native State was found to be in possession of the stolen property held that that person was not triable by the British Courts—Md Hussain v Crown 2 Lah L J 348 23 Cr L J 560 The operation of this Code cannot be extended beyond the British territory so as to give jurisdiction to a British Court to try a non British subject residing outside British India for the offence of retaining stolen properties although the theft of those properties might have taken place in British India—Maheswari v K E 18 C W N 1178 15 Cr L J 537, Q E v Kirpal Singh 9 All 523 Reg v Bechar 4 B H C R 38 If however an Indian British subject is found in the Native State in possession of property stolen in British India he can be tried by a Court in British India under this section but a certificate of the Political Agent under section 188 would be necessary—Sessions Judge v. Sundara 8 M L T 54 11 Cr L J 306

Kidnapping and abduction

560A. Change :—Sub-section (3) has been redrafted by section 42 of the Crim Pro Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923, but the actual change effected by this redrafting is the addition of the words "or any offence which includes theft or possession of stolen property" "We accept this clause but would enlarge the enumeration of offences to include the possession of stolen property. This will also cover the case of extortion.

See the definition in sec 410 I P C —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

As a result of this amendment sec 181 (3) means that the offence of being in possession of stolen property may be inquired into either at the place where it was stolen or where it was found to be dishonestly possessed This indeed is expressly stated in Illustration (b) to sec 180 It must be conceded that the language of sub section (3) of section 181 is open to objection The words such offence are intended to mean the offence of theft but grammatically these words would mean any offence of possession of stolen property—Emp v Bhima 24 A L J 148 27 Cr L J 21 (22) A I R 1926 All 167

561 Scope of section —This section does not apply to the case of an offence committed by a person who is not a British subject outside British territory This section is intended to regulate the jurisdiction of Courts in British India in respect of offences committed in British India and cannot vary or abrogate the ordinary rule that no foreign subject can be tried in British India for an offence committed outside British India —Emp v Baldewa 28 All 372 This section only applies as between Courts of different local areas whose jurisdiction has been limited under sec 12—Imp v Tribhun 5 S L R 266 Reg v Adivigadu 1 Mad 171

Thus where a dacoity or theft was committed in a Native State and part of the stolen property was found to have been concealed by the accused in British territory it was held that the offence of dacoity could not be tried by British Indian Courts although the offence of retaining stolen property could be tried by such Courts the retaining having taken place in British territory—Reg v Lakhya 1 Bom 50 Q E v Abdul Latib 10 Bom 186 and Emp v Sunkur 6 Cal 307 cited under sec 180 see also Reg v Adivigadu 1 Mad 171 When a person escaped from lawful custody in a Native State and came into British India it was held that British Courts had no jurisdiction to try him for an offence under sec 224 I P C as it was committed out of British India—Q E v Souza Ratanlal 870 So also where a criminal breach of trust was committed in a Native State a Court in British India had no jurisdiction—Imp v Tribhun 5 S L R 266 13 Cr L J 530 Where the offence of kidnapping was committed out of British India and the minor was brought into British India a British Court had no jurisdiction as the offence was complete out of British India even the fact that the person kidnapped was conveyed to British India would not give the British Court jurisdiction because the words was conveyed in this section do not import any separate or distinct offence where the offence was complete previous to such conveying—Jaimal Singh v Emp 1901 P R 1 Crown v Koocdrr 7 S L R 17 14 Cr L J 439 Bhuta Sartal v Dama 20 C W N 6? 17 Cr L J 128 The complainant sent a sum of money from Burma to the accused who was his agent in Japan The accused misappropriated the money whereupon the complainant took criminal proceedings in Rangoon Held that the offence of criminal misappropriation was complete when the conversion was done with the intent of causing wrongful gain to the offender and did not depend on the consequence of wrongful loss

Belonging to a gang of dacoits :—Where a resident of a Native State was arrested in that State and was brought before a Court in British India and charged with the offence of belonging to a gang of dacoits who had committed dacoities within the jurisdiction of that Court it was held that the Magistrate had jurisdiction over the accused, as the accused was within his district at the time of the charge—Crown v. Govinda, 1911 P R. 1, 12 Cr L J 113

"Is"—The word 'is' at the end of sub section (1) does not mean 'is of his own accord' The Magistrate has jurisdiction, whether the accused has come within the local limits of his jurisdiction of his own accord or has been brought there by force (i e, under arrest)—Ibid.

allegation in the complaint referred to specific items in respect of which the accused was charged with having committed the offence of criminal breach of trust at Rurki the Rawalpindi Court had no jurisdiction to try the case—Crown v Raghubir 1915 P R 22 Where the accused is under a liability to render accounts at a particular place and fails to do so by reason of his having committed an offence of criminal breach of trust which is alleged against him the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction that place is situated may inquire into and try the offence under the provisions of this section—Gunananda v Santi Prakash 29 C W N 43 41 C L J 80 26 Cr L J 725 Ram Sahai v Krishna 27 Cr L J 900 A I R 19 6 Lah 119 7 Lah L J 596 Where the accused was entrusted with a railway receipt for goods in one district with instructions to take delivery of the goods at their destination in another district and to sell them on complainant s account and the accused did sell them and misappropriated the sale proceeds it was held that the offence was triable by the Court within the jurisdiction of which the goods were sold and the money was received and misappropriated It was held further that the property which was the subject of the offence in this case was not the railway receipt but the money received on sale of the goods—Kasi Chetty v Kasi Chetty 10 Bur L T 50 18 Cr L J 645

In view of the specific provisions contained in section 181 (2) with regard to the jurisdiction of the Courts to try the offence of criminal breach of trust a Court within whose jurisdiction the property which is the subject matter of the offence was received or retained has jurisdiction to try such offence even though the actual offence is committed outside its limits Even if the property is received quite properly and innocently at one place and is subsequently dealt with at another place dishonestly by the accused he can be tried at the place where he received or retained the property—Emp v Laxman 51 Bom 101 28 Bom L R 1292 28 Cr L J 44

564 Sub-section (4)—Scope—This sub section refers only to cases of kidnapping and abduction but it does not apply to offences under Chapter XX of the I P C e g, detaining a married woman for the purpose of illicit intercourse Such offence is to be inquired into only in the district where the detention of the woman occurs—Jaswant v Crown 1918 P L R 51 18 Cr L J 438

Kidnapping—Sub section (4) was for the first time added in the Code of 1898 Prior to 1898 it was held that the offence of kidnapping not being a continuing offence could be tried only by the Court within the local limits of which the minor was taken out, and not by the Court within whose jurisdiction the minor was confined—Emp v Surja 18? Place of inquiry or trial where scene of offence is uncertain or not in one district only or where offence is continuing or consists of several acts

182 When it is uncertain in which of several local areas an offence was committed, or where an offence is comitted partly in one local area and partly in another, or where an offence is a continuing one, and continues to be committed in more local areas than one, or where it consists of several acts done in different local areas, it may be inquired into or tried by a Court having jurisdiction over any of such local areas

565 Object of section —This section intends to provide for the difficulty which would arise where there is a conflict between the different areas in order to prevent an accused person from getting off entirely because there may be some doubt as to what particular Magistrate has jurisdiction to try the case—Bichitranand v Bhagbut 16 Cal 667 Where there is an uncertainty in which of two districts the scene of an alleged offence lies sec 182 is applicable and the offence may be tried by the Court of either district—Purardeo v Ram Saran 25 Cal 858 Thus where the accused who was a travelling agent of a firm employed to sell goods sold the goods and misappropriated some of the money and it was not possible to say exactly where the various acts of embezzlement took place, it was held that according to the first para of this section the accused was triable either at the place where the firm was situated or at one of the various districts through which the accused travelled—Mahadeo v K E 32 All 397 7 A L J 319

If a defamatory letter is posted in Madras with a view to its being read in Tinnevelly the offence of defamation is triable either in Madras or in Tinnevelly under section 179 or 182—Krishnamurthi v Parasurama, 44 M L J 648, 24 Cr L J 309 An offence under section 134 of the Companies Act 1913 (default in filing balance sheet) even though the Company is situate outside Calcutta can be tried by the Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta because the office of the Registrar of joint stock companies with whom the balance sheet is to be filed is in Calcutta—Debendra v Registrar of Joint Stock Companies 45 Cal 486 490

566. Local area :—The words local area mean a local area to which the Code applies, and not a local area in a foreign country or in a portion of the British Empire to which the Code has no application—Bichitranand v Bhagbut 16 Cal 667 Moreover, the expression includes Sessions Division District or Sub division, and cannot be restricted to mean the scene of an alleged occurrence only Therefore this section applies where the place of occurrence is known but it is doubtful to which sessions division the place belongs—Punardeo v Ram Saran, 25 Cal. 858

Offence committed on a journey

183. An offence committed whilst the offender is in the course of performing a journey or voyage may be inquired into or tried by a Court through or into the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offender, or the person against whom, or the thing in respect of which, the offence was committed, passed in the course of that journey or voyage.

567. Object and Scope .—The object of this section is to remove doubts and inconveniences as regards the exact locality in which the offences alleged to have occurred in a journey or voyage had been actually committed or completed—Q v Malony, 1 M H. C R 193

But this section only applies where the offence is committed in British India and not in a foreign territory. The word 'journey' does not include a journey in a foreign territory but is confined in its meaning to a journey within the territories of British India. Where during the course of a journey through foreign territory and British India, the carrier to whom certain goods were entrusted committed criminal breach of trust in respect of those goods, and there was nothing to show that the offence took place during the journey in British India, the offence could not be tried by any Court in British India—Nadar v Emp, 24 Cr. L. J 579 (Lah)

568. Offence committed in a journey :—Under this section, if a person is accused before a Court of an offence committed during a journey or voyage he may be tried by that Court if any part of that journey or voyage during which the offence was committed is within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction—Q v Malony 1 M H C R 193 And the Courts competent to try the case of an offender in respect of an offence committed in a journey are the Courts through or into the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offender in the course of the journey passed at the time the offence was committed—Iminulla v P M Guha 1 C L J 334 Thus if a theft is committed from a running train the offence may be said to have been committed during a journey and it can be inquired into and tried by any Court having jurisdiction over any part of the country through which the train passed during the course of its journey no matter in whose jurisdiction the offence was committed—Lazarus v Emp 24 Cr L J 753 (Lah) Where the offence is committed in the course of a railway journey the accused can be tried at the place of destination though the offence was actually committed outside the jurisdiction of that Court—Emp v Moulabux 25 Cr L J 439 A I R 1925 Sind 177

But this section is applicable only when the journey or voyage is continuous and uninterrupted Therefore where an offence was alleged to have been committed by the accused in the course of a journey from Bombay to Howrah but in fact took place between Bombay and Allahabad at which place both the complainant and the accused broke the journey and then proceeded separately by different trains to Howrah it was held that the journey from Bombay to Howrah not being continuous the Magistrate at Howrah had no jurisdiction to try the offence—Q v Piran 21 W R 66 Where a guard of a train going from Coimbatore to Madras was found drunk and detained at Arkonam on the way but he broke away got into train and arrived at Madras it was held that the journey must be deemed to have been broken at Arkonam and the offence (of being drunk under section 27 of the Railways Act) could not be tried at Madras—Q v Malony 1 M H C R 193

But any short stoppage in the course of a journey does not break the journey Thus where some articles were missed from a boat during a halt at S in the course of a journey to C it was held that the journey would not be deemed to have been broken by the halt at S and that the offence of theft could be tried at C—Q v Abdul Ali 25 W R 45

569 Voyage on High Seas —This section applies only to the trial of offences committed in British India The words journey or voyage do not include a voyage on the High Seas or in a foreign territory but are confined only to a voyage or journey within the territories of British India—Bapu Dali v Q 5 Mad 23

But in Q E v Ismail Ratanlal 181, where the accused and the complainant sailed from Bombay to Honawar and during the voyage the accused threw a box of the complainant into the sea it was held that the Magistrate at Honawar through whose jurisdiction the accused passed during the voyage had jurisdiction to try the offence of mischief (although it was committed on the High Seas about 9 miles off from the coast)

184 All offences against the provisions of any law for the time being in force relating to Railways, Telegraph, the Post Office or Arms and Ammunition may be inquired into or tried in a presidency town whether the offence is stated to have been committed within such town or not

Offences against Railway, Telegraph, Post Office and Arms Acts

Provided that the offender and all the witnesses necessary for his prosecution are to be found within such town

185 Whenever any doubt arises as to the Court by which any offence should under the preceding provisions of this chapter be inquired into or tried, the High Court, within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction the offender actually is may decide by which Court the offence shall be inquired into or tried

High Court to decide, in case of doubt, district where inquiry or trial shall take place

185 (1) Whenever a question arises as to which of two or more Courts subordinate to the same High Court ought to inquire into or try any offence, it shall be decided by that High Court

High Court to decide, in case of doubt, district where inquiry or trial shall take place

(2) Where two or more Courts not subordinate to the same High Court have taken cognizance of the same offence, the High Court within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction the proceedings were first commenced may direct the trial of such offender to be held in any Court subordinate to it, and if it so decides, all other proceedings against such person in respect of such offence shall be discontinued If such High Court, upon the matter having been brought to its notice does not so decide,

a journey or voyage he may be tried by that Court if any part of the journey or voyage during which the offence was committed is within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction—Q v Malony 1 M H C R 193 And the Courts competent to try the case of an offender in respect of an offence committed in a journey are the Courts through or into the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offender in the course of the journey passed at the time the offence was committed—Imanulla v P M Guha 1 C L J 334 Thus if a theft is committed from a running train the offence may be said to have been committed during a journey and it can be inquired into and tried by any Court having jurisdiction over any part of the country through which the train passed during the course of its journey no matter in whose jurisdiction the offence was committed—Lazarus v Emp 24 Cr L J 53 (Lah) Where the offence is committed in the course of a railway journey the accused can be tried at the place of destination though the offence was actually committed outside the jurisdiction of that Court—Emp v Moulabux 25 Cr L J 159 A I R 1925 Sind 177

But this section is applicable only when the journey or voyage is continuous and uninterrupted Therefore where an offence was alleged to have been committed by the accused in the course of a journey from Bombay to Howrah but in fact took place between Bombay and Allahabad at which place both the complainant and the accused broke the journey and then proceeded separately by different trains to Howrah it was held that the journey from Bombay to Howrah not being continuous the Magistrate at Howrah had no jurisdiction to try the offence—Q v Piran 21 W R 66 Where a guard of a train going from Coimbatore to Madras was found drunk and detained at Arkonam on the way but he broke away got into train and arrived at Madras it was held that the journey must be deemed to have been broken at Arkonam and the offence (of being drunk under section 27 of the Railways Act) could not be tried at Madras—Q v Malony 1 M H C R 193

But any short stoppage in the course of a journey does not break the journey Thus where some articles were missed from a boat during a halt at S in the course of a journey to C it was held that the journey would not be deemed to have been broken by the halt at S and that the offence of theft could be tried at C—Q v Abdul Ali 25 W R 45

569 Voyage on High Seas—This section applies only to the trial of offences committed in British India The words journey or voyage do not include a voyage on the High Seas or in a foreign territory but are confined only to a voyage or journey within the territories of British India—Bapu Dald v Q 5 Mad 23

But in Q I v Ismail Ratanlal 181 where the accused and the complainant sailed from Bombay to Honawar and during the voyage the accused threw a box of the complainant into the sea it was held that the Magistrate at Honawar through whose jurisdiction the accused passed during the voyage had jurisdiction to try the offence of mischief (although it was committed on the High Seas about 9 miles off from the coast)

First Class Magistrate was competent to hold the preliminary inquiry himself—Reg v Kahandas Ratanlal 97

188 When a Native Indian subject of Her Majesty commits an offence at any place without and beyond the limits of British India or

Liability of British subjects for offences committed out of British India

when any British subject commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India, or when a servant of the Queen (whether a British subject or not) commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India

he may be dealt with in respect of such offence as if it had been committed at any place within British India at which he may be found

Provided that notwithstanding anything in any of the preceding sections of this chapter, no charge is to any such offence shall be inquired into in British India unless the Political Agent if there is one for the territory in which the offence is alleged to have been committed, certifies that in his opinion the charge ought to be inquired into in British India and where there is no Political Agent the sanction of the Local Government shall be required

Political Agents to certify fitness of inquiry into charge

Provided also that any proceedings taken against any person under this section which would be a bar to subsequent proceedings against such person for the same offence if such offence had been committed in British India, shall be a bar to further proceedings against him under the Indian Extradition Act, 1903 in respect of the same offence in any territory beyond the limits of British India

Change —The italicised words in the first proviso have been added by sec 44 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

575 This section controls the preceding sections —Sections 177 to 184 are controlled by the provisions of section 188 so that if the offence specified in those sections (177—184) happen to be committed outside British India those sections would cease to apply and the special provision of section 188 would come in Thus to give concrete illustrations where the offence of criminal breach of trust was committed in a Native State by a British subject, then according to section 181, independently of section 188, such offence could not have been tried by a British Court But as Secs 177—184 are controlled by section 188, the latter section would apply, and would give jurisdiction to a British Court to try the offence, but the certificate of a Political Agent would be absolutely necessary—Emp v Tribhun, 5 S L R 266, 13 Cr L J 530 So also where a person was kidnapped in a Native State and conveyed to British territory, Sec 181 would not apply but the case would fall under Sec 188 and a certificate of the Political Agent would be a preliminary requisite of the trial of the offence by a British Court—Crown v Koochri, 7 S L R 17, Narain v Emperor, 41 All 452, 17 A L J 450, 20 Cr L J 276 Where a British Indian subject is found in a Native State in possession of stolen articles, he can be tried in British India for an offence under section 412 I P C but the certificate of the Political Agent would be necessary—Sessions Judge v Sundara, 8 M L T 54 11 Cr L J 306

But in a Madras case, where the complainant in a place in British India entrusted certain jewels to the accused, a Native Indian subject of His Majesty, for sale on commission and the latter pledged the jewels in a Native State and converted them to his use, it was held that the loss of the jewels, which was the consequence, occurred to the complainant in British India, and this was sufficient under sec 179 to give jurisdiction to the British Indian Court to try the offence, that secs 179—184 should not be read subject to sec 188, and that no certificate of the Political Agent was necessary—Assistant Sessions Judge v Ramaswami, 38 Mad 779, 26 M L T 235, 15 Cr L J 207 This view of the law is totally untenable and the words "notwithstanding anything Chapter" have now *been added in the proviso to make it clear that sec, 188 controls the pre*ceding sections of this chapter The Select Committee observe —'Certain decisions of the Madras High Court seem to make it doubtful whether section 188 is subject to the provisions of sections 179—184, and we think it is desirable to clear this up We are not satisfied that this was the intention of section 188, and in our opinion it is safer, when a man is tried in British India in respect of an offence committed in a Native State, to require the Political Agent's certificate in every case The amendment which we propose will make this clear'—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

576 Illegal arrest :—See notes under section 177 A trial under this section will not be vitiated by reason of the fact that the accused has been brought into British India from a foreign territory under an illegal arrest—Emp v Vinayak Damodar Savarkar, 35 Bom 225 13 Bom L R 296

577. Native Indian Subject.—This expression means only a Native Indian subject de jure and not de facto a person who is not a Native Indian subject de jure but who owns some land in British territory and occasionally resides in British India does not thereby become an Indian subject, amenable to the jurisdiction of a British Indian Court for an offence committed by him in a foreign territory—Fakir v Emp 1885 P. R 1 on appeal from 1883 P R 22

Foreigners —This section does not apply to an offence committed by a foreigner outside British territory though he may subsequently be found in British India—Q E v Abdul Latif 10 Bom 186 British Indian Courts have no jurisdiction to try a foreigner for offences committed and completed outside the British territory—Ibrahim v Empress 1894 P R 7 No foreign subject can be tried in British India for an offence committed outside British India—Emp v Baldewa 28 All 372 Q E v Ranchhod 2 Bom L R 337 Fakir v Emp 1883 P R 22 Roda v Empress 1889 P R 30 Therefore where the subject of a Native State committed theft in that State and was subsequently found in British India in possession of the stolen property the British Indian Court had no jurisdiction to try him for the offence of theft (but had jurisdiction to try him for retaining stolen property under section 411 I P C)—Emp v Baldewa 28 All 37 Q E v Abdul Latif 10 Bom 186

578 Offence —The word offence in this section means an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code Thus the act of giving false evidence before a foreign Court where the oath is administered not under the provisions of law in force in British India but under the law of that State in relation to proceedings before the Court is not punishable under section 193 of the Indian Penal Code and cannot be taken cognizance of by Magistrates of British Indian Courts So also the offence of lodging a false complaint in a foreign Court is not punishable under the Indian Penal Code because it cannot be said that a false information was given to a public servant as defined by the Indian Penal Code Similarly the act of instituting criminal proceedings and making false charges before a foreign Court does not constitute an offence under Sec 211 of the Indian Penal Code because the criminal proceedings and false charges contemplated by that section mean proceedings and charges in British India where the Indian Penal Code is in force Therefore offences committed in relation to Courts and authorities outside British India do not constitute offences under the Indian Penal Code and cannot be tried by any Court in British India and a certificate of the Political Agent is out of the question—In re Rambharathi 47 Bom 907 25 Bom L R 772 25 Cr L J 333

"May be found —The word found must be taken to mean not where a person is discovered but where he is actually present whether he comes of his own accord or is brought under arrest—Emp v Maganlal 6 Bom 622

579 Scope of proviso —This proviso is of universal application and is not restricted to Native States only If the offence is committed in a Native State the certificate of the Political Agent is necessary if the Native State has no Political Agent the sanction of the Local Government is required And if the offence is committed in a place other than a Native State e g Spain the sanction of the Local Government is likewise necessary—Emp v Chellaram, 6 S L R 260

The words or where there is no Political Agent the sanction of the Local Government shall be required have been added to the Code in 1898 Under the previous Codes when the offence was committed i a territory in which there was no Political Agent no certificate (or sanction) was necessary as for instance in Goa (Q E v Daya Bhima 13 Bom 147) or Siam (Q E v Abdul Husei Ratanlal 773) or Cyprus (Emp v Sarmukh 2 All 218)

580 Offences on High Seas —Section 188 does not apply to offences committed on the High Seas The proviso to this section refers to offences committed in a territory and not to offences committed on the High Seas Therefore an offence committed by a Native Indian subject on the sea at a distance of five or six miles from the coast can be tried by a Magistrate of British India without the sanction of the Local Government—Emp v Manuel Philip 41 Bom 667 Po Thaung v K E 5 L B R 221 12 Cr L J 198 The power to try offences committed on the High seas is conferred on Indian Courts by Stat 23 and 24 Vic C 88 (within three miles from the Coast of British India) and Stat 30 and 31 Vic C 124 section 11 (beyond the three miles limit) See Reg v Kastya Rama 8 B H C R. 63 Q E v Sk Abdul Rahaman 14 Bom 227

581 Certificate of a Political Agent —The certificate of the Political Agent is the preliminary requisite for the institution of criminal proceedings in a Court of British India for an offence committed outside British India Want of certificate will invalidate all subsequent proceedings—Emp v Kalicharan 24 All 256 Q E v Ram Sundar 19 All 109 Narain v Emp 41 All 45? Emp v Chan 1884 A W N 85 Q E v Baku 24 Bom 287 Sirdar v Jethabhai 8 Bom L R 513 Q E v Kathaperumal 13 Mad 423 Bapu v Q 5 Mad 23 In re Sessions Judge 2 Weir 148 Ram Charan v Crown 5 Lah 416 The want of a certificate is not a mere irregularity which can be cured by section 53? by a subsequent production of the certificate—Q E v Kathaperumal 13 Mad 423 Even where the Magistrate was himself the Political Agent the defect would not be cured by any subsequent production of the certificate signed by him—Q E v Kathaperumal 13 Mad 423 Bapu Dald v Q 5 Mad 23 Q E v Ram Sundar 19 All 109

An agreement between a Native State and the authorities of a British Indian district conceding to the British Indian Courts the right to arrest and try British Indian subjects found gambling in the Native State and vice versa cannot take the place of the certificate or sanction required by this section—Nandu v Emp, 42 All 89

In a sessions case the certificate of the Political Agent must be obtained before the commencement of the committal proceedings in the Magistrate s Court—Ruliya Singh v Crown 7 Lah 468 27 Cr L J 94? (944) and the proceedings of a Magistrate committing an accused to the Sessions Court before a certificate under sec 188 is obtained are void and illegal—Buta Singh v Emp 7 Lah 396 27 P L R 447 27 Cr L J 1168 Where a commitment was made without the certificate the fact that the certificate existed at the date of the commitment (i e it had been signed by the Political Agent before the date of commitment but had not come into the hands of the Magistrate till after commitment) could not cure the defect—Emp v Kalicharan 24 All 256 In certain Punjab cases however, it has been held that the want of a certificate is not a fatal defect but a mere irregularity cured by section 537, if no objection is taken at the trial and no prejudice to the accused has been caused in the defence—Shamir Khan v Emp, 1888 P R 35 Roda v Emp, 1889 P. R 30 Fateh Din v Emperor, 1902 P R 4 (F B). Where however, the defect was observed and objected to by the Sessions Judge, the commitment should be quashed—Q E v Mastana 1899 P. R 11, Ram Charan v Crown, 5 Lah 416 (420), A I R 1925 Lah 183, 27 Cr L J 218.

The proviso lays down that no charge shall be inquired into in British India unless the Political Agent" etc, and therefore there is nothing illegal in obtaining the certificate or sanction after the complaint has been filed and the inquiry has begun or been completed as far as the framing of the charge—Emp v Sakharam, 12 Bom L R 667, 11 Cr. L J 543, In re Ram Bharathi, 47 Bom 907 (at p 911) If the certificate is not produced at the time the proceedings have reached the stage of framing a charge, the Magistrate cannot proceed any further, but it is open to him to give the complainant a reasonable time within which to obtain the certificate, and then to continue the proceedings in the event of such certificate being obtained—Alibhoy v Emp, 19 S L R 122 25 Cr L J 620, A I R. 1925 Sind 88 In a Bombay case, it has even been held that where the certificate was received after the examination of some prosecution witnesses but before the commitment of the case to the Sessions, the commitment was good and the irregularity, if any was cured by sec 537—Emp v. Mahamad Buksh, 8 Bom L R 507, 4 Cr L J 49

Section 188 does not mention the word 'certificate' at all, and there is no direction for the signing of a certificate by any particular person. Nor is the manner prescribed in which it is to be proved that the Political Agent has certified that the charge ought to be inquired into in British India, although obviously the most convenient method of proving this is the production of a document signed by the Political Agent A document certifying that a case should be tried in British India, and purporting to be signed by the Under Secretary for the Political Agent, cannot be made the basis of an assumption that the Agent has himself certified that the charge ought to be inquired into in British India But a certified copy of an order signed by the Agent himself and directing that a certificate should issue under sec 188 in the particular case sufficiently meets the requirements of this section If the order is of a date prior to the commencement of committal proceedings in the Magistrate's Court, though the certified copy is produced in the Sessions Court, the commitment is not invalid—Ruliya Singh v. Emp, 7 Lah 468, 27 P L R. 708, 27 Cr. L. J 942

Magistrate not confined to the charges in the certificate :—The Magistrate is not restricted to the charge mentioned in the certificate. The certificate granted by the Political Agent in respect of an offence will cover every charge which the facts declared in the certificate will suffice to sustain—Krishna Nath v Emp, 33 All. 514 An order of committal a charge which is different from that mentioned in the certificate but b upon the same set of facts will be perfectly valid—In re Session Judge 8 M L T 303 11 Cr L J 531

Certificate cannot be revoked —Where the District Magistrate as the Political Agent granted a certificate for the trial of the accused by a Magistrate in British India it was held that the latter was legally seized of the case and it was not competent to the Political Agent to recall the certificate and to hand over the accused to the Native State for his trial in that State—In re Vazir Saheb 14 Bom L R 377 13 Cr L J 5 7 In re Hormusjee Ratanlal 253

189 Whenever any such offence as is referred to in Section 188 is being inquired into or tried, the Local Government may, if it thinks fit direct that copies of depositions made or exhibits produced before the Politcal Agent or a judicial officer in or for the territory in which such offence is alleged to have been committed shall be received as evidence by the Court holding such inquiry or trial in any case in which such Court might issue a commission for taking evidence as to the matters to which such depositions or exhibits relate

Power to direct copies of depositions and exhibits to be received in evidence

B—Conditions requisite for Initiation of Proceedings

190 (1) Except as hereinafter provided, any Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate, and any other Magistrate specially empowered in this behalf, may take cognizance of any offence—

Cognizance of offence by Magistrate

(a) upon receiving a complaint of facts which constitute such offence ,

(b) upon a report in writing of such facts made by any police officer ,

(c) upon information received from any person other than a police officer, or upon his own knowledge or suspicion that such offence has been committed

(2) The Local Government, or the District Magistrate subject to the general or special orders of the Local Government, may empower any Magistrate to take cognizance under subsection (1), clause (a) or clause (b), of offences for which he may try or commit for trial

(3) The Local Government may empower any Magistrate of the first or second class to take cognizance under sub section (1), clause (c), of offences for which he may try or commit for trial

582 Change —The words in clause (b) have been substituted for the words upon a police report of such facts by section 45 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The object of this amendment is to make it clear that the word police report formerly used in this clause was not used in a technical sense as meaning the report of the police in cognizable cases only but was used to cover any report made by a police officer i e a report in a cognizable as well as a non cognizable case See the Report of the Select Committee of 1916 In K E v Sada 26 Bom 150 Bhairab v Emp 46 Cal 807 In re Chidambaram 30 Mad 3 Ram Lal v Emp 1 P L T 73 Harihar v K E 23 C W N 481 Emp v Ghulam Husain 6 Lah L J 606 and Q E v Nga Shwe 1 L B R 18 it was held that the term police report in this clause meant a report in a cognizable case only and that since a police officer had no power to make a report in a non cognizable case a police report in such a case was to be treated as a complaint under clause (a) and the procedure of section 200 would then have to be followed by the Magistrate Under the present amendment the wording of clause (b) is quite general and would include even a non cognizable offence being taken cognizance of by a Magistrate upon a report in writing by a police officer —Emp v Shivaswami 29 Bom L R 742 A I R 1927 Bom 440 (441), Public Prosecutor v Ratnavelu 49 Mad 525 27 Cr L J 1031 (F B) (overruling In re Perumal 22 L W 209 26 Cr L J 1530) The present amendment lays down that the report of a police officer in a non-cognizable case is a report under clause (b) all the same and not a complaint under clause (a) and the Magistrate will not have to follow the procedure of Chapter XVI (e g to examine the complainant on oath) See Bholanath v Emp 28 C W N 490 26 Cr L J 68 Public Prosecutor v Ratnavelu (supra)

Moreover before the present amendment the words 'police report' were used in a technical sense to mean a police report under section 170 or 173 i e a report made after investigation and not an information sent by the Police to the Magistrate before making any investigation—Ahmed Khan v Emp 5 S L R 1 12 Cr L J 92 Emp v Khusaldas 6 S L R 82 13 Cr L J 752 In re Nagendra Nath 51 Cal 402 (413) King Emp v Sada 26 Bom 150 (157) Under the present amendment the words have been changed altogether and replaced by the non technical words report made by any police officer which would certainly include a report or information given before investigation Even before the present amendment it was held in a Sind case that the Police report referred to in this section was not confined to a report under sec 173 but was wide enough to cover reports under other sections of the Chapter (e g, reports under sections 157 and 168) nor was it confined to reports under Ch alone—Mehrab v Crown 17 S L R 150 (dissenting from 5 S L R

583. Magistrates empowered:—The power of Magistrates to take cognizance of a case under this section is not affected by Sec 82 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873)—Q E v Mulchand, Ratanlal 355

When a Magistrate who has begun a case is succeeded by another, the latter has power to issue process for the arrest of an accused person, though the predecessor had not issued such process before commencing the trial—Q E v Govinda Ratanlal 652 See section 559

Under this section a third class Magistrate can take cognizance of an offence under clauses (a) and (b) only i e upon a complaint or a police report—K E v Sada, 26 Bom 150

The District Magistrate of the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore has jurisdiction to take cognizance of and try offences committed by European British subjects in accordance with the provisions of this Code—In re Lawrence, 34 Mad 346 (F B)

If a Magistrate not empowered to take cognizance under cl (a) or (b) does so under a bona fide mistake, his proceedings will not be set aside merely on the ground of his not being empowered—Sec 529 (e). But the proceedings under clause (c) of a Magistrate not empowered to take cognizance under that clause are void—Sec 530 (k)

If a Magistrate not empowered to take cognizance of offences upon complaint (e g a second class Magistrate who is not competent to take cognizance of a murder case) nevertheless takes cognizance of the case, sends the complaint to the police for inquiry and on receiving the police report, dismisses the complaint as false and prosecutes the complainant under section 211 I P Code for making a false complaint, held that the action of the Magistrate in taking cognizance of the offence may be cured by sec 529 (e), but the further action of the Magistrate in prosecuting the complainant for making a false complaint cannot be validated by sec 529 (e)—Bengali Gope v K E, 5 Pat 447, 7 P L T 335, 27 Cr L J 704

The District Magistrate cannot authorize a second class Magistrate to take cognizance of complaints of offences, which the second class Magistrate is not competent to try (e g a case of murder) Section 37 and Schedule IV of this Code must be read with sec 190, and there is nothing in these provisions to extend the power which the District Magistrate can confer—Bengali Gope v. K E (supra)

A Magistrate duly empowered under this section to take cognizance of an offence cannot refuse to take cognizance on the ground that the gravity of the offence requires severer punishment than he can inflict—Q E v Gema, Ratanlal 375

584. Offence:—A Magistrate authorised under this section to take cognizance of an offence upon complaint, can take cognizance of an offence under sec 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, even in the absence of a special authorisation in that behalf, because the very definition of the word 'offence' in section 4 clause (o) includes any act in respect of which a complaint may be made under section 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act—

585 "Taking cognizance" —The expression "to take cognizance" has not been defined in the Code and it is difficult to ascertain at what precise stage of the case cognizance is said to be taken When a Magistrate in charge on receipt of a police report makes over the case to another Magistrate for inquiry and the latter after taking evidence summons the accused it is the latter Magistrate and not the former who is said to have taken cognizance of the offence—Ananda Rani v Sk Aftab 17 C W N 795 14 Cr L J 475 A Magistrate cannot be said to have taken cognizance of a case under section 107 until he issues notice to the person charged to show cause why he should not be proceeded against under that section Therefore where the Police reported the matter to the District Magistrate who ordered the case to be transferred to the file of the Headquarters Deputy Magistrate who then issued notice to the accused held that it was the latter Magistrate and not the District Magistrate who took cognizance of the case—Konda Reddy v K E 41 Mad 246 (249)

Taking cognizance does not involve any formal action or indeed action of any kind but occurs as soon as a Magistrate applies his mind to the suspected commission of an offence Where a police report of a dacoity was submitted to the Subdivisional Officer on the 24th April 1909 and the case was afterwards withdrawn by the District Magistrate to his own file on the 20th January 1910 held that the District Magistrate took cognizance of the case on the 20th January 1910—Sourindra v Emp, 37 Cal 412

In cases where sanction or certificate is necessary (i e cases under secs 132 188 197) the Magistrate is not competent to take cognizance upon a mere complaint unaccompanied by the requisite sanction or certificate—Durga Das v Q E 27 Cal 820 See also Lalit Chandra v Emp, 39 Cal 119 13 Cr L J 433

A Magistrate is not debarred from taking cognizance of an offence simply because another Magistrate has already taken cognizance of the same and is in seisin of the case But since the accused person cannot be tried twice for the same offence, the proper course is for the one Magistrate to transfer his case to the other and thus a multiplicity of trials can be avoided—Hari Satya v Emp 50 Cal 482 24 Cr L J 710 37 C L J 327

Magistrate cannot proceed without taking cognizance —On a complaint of a cognizable offence the police sent up for trial only some of the persons against whom a complaint was made After their conviction by a Deputy Magistrate the Deputy Commissioner while inspecting the police outpost made a note that the remaining accused should be sent up The remaining accused were thereupon sent up to the Deputy Magistrat It was held that nothing was made over to the Deputy Magistrate at

Magistrate bound to take cognizance upon complaint —It cannot be held that the words may take cognizance of an offence mean that a Magistrate is not bound to take cognizance of an offence on receiving a complaint of facts constituting an offence—Ram Sarup v K E 4 O C 1?7 The use of the term may offence does not make it optional with a Magistrate to hear a complaint but refers to the action of the Magistrate in taking cognizance of the offence in either of the specified courses in which the facts constituting the offence may be brought to his notice He is bound to examine the complainant and can then either issue summons to the accused or order an inquiry under sec 202 or dismiss the complaint under sec 203—Umer Ali v Safer Ali 13 Cal 334 He is bound when the circumstances giving him jurisdiction exist to receive the complaint and deal with it according to law—1? 587 Clause (b)—Police Report —The police report mentioned in this section is not limited to a report mentioned in Chap XIV of the Code Where on an information received by post a Magistrate sent the case to the police for inquiry and report and on the report thus received took cognizance of the case it was held that it must be presumed that the action taken by him was based on the police report—Sarfara Khan v K E 11 A L J 331 14 Cr L J 218

A police report in a non cognizable case falls within this clause and there is no authority in the Code for examining a police-officer submitting a police report under this section as if he were a complainant—Nga Saw v K E 1914 U B R 19 16 Cr L J 97 Sk Abdul Ali v Emp 1 P L T 446 59 I C 41 See Note above under heading Change

A report submitted by a Police officer under section 24 of the Police Act falls under this clause—Sk Abdul Ali v Emp 1 P L T 446 59 I C 41

A Police challan is a police report of facts constituting an offence under clause (b) and a Magistrate can take cognizance upon it—Emp v Surdar, 1901 P R 8, Emp v Chet Singh 1900 P R 27 But a mere suggestion by the police officer is not a police report and where a Magistrate issued summons to the accused on the suggestion of a police-officer that the accused injured the crops of the people of the village it was held that the Magistrate acted illegally, as none of the conditions required by this section had been fulfilled—Samun v Emp 1894 P R 24

The police report must state the facts which constitute the offence That is the concrete facts which constitute the alleged offence must be specifically stated before the Magistrate Where no facts were stated the mere assertions made by the police that certain offences had been committed could not be regarded as compliance with the letter or the spirit of the law—In re Nagendra Nath 51 Cal 402 (414) A I R 1924 Cal 476

So also a Magistrate cannot take cognizance of an offence on the mere information of a police officer who has no knowledge of the facts and whom it is impracticable to examine—Q E v Nga Shwe 1 L B R 18

A prosecution is not legally instituted under section 190 (b) when the police report is defective and does not fulfil all the requirements of sec 173 (e g when it does not set forth the nature of the information) and the first information report under sec 154 is equally defective in this respect —Lee v Adhikari 37 Cal 49 In Feroja v Amiruddin 16 C W N 1049 it has been remarked that if the police report be defective it is open to the Magistrate to treat it as a complaint and in that case it will be necessary for him to call upon the Police officer to appear and substantiate that complaint upon oath

Magistrate not bound to take cognizance upon police report —A Magistrate is entitled to refuse to initiate proceedings on the report of the Police in the absence of a complaint—Bhiku v K E 1 A L J 609 He has a discretion either to take cognizance of the offence or to proceed under sec 203 or to take no further steps—Anon 2 Weir 119

Instances where Magistrate acts under Clause (b) and not under Clause (c) —Where L was charged by the police before the Magistrate and the Magistrate after examining the investigating officer found that another person S should be joined as an accused person and issued process against him it was held that the Magistrate took cognizance of S s offence under clause (b) and not under clause (c) and was not bound to act under section 191—Sarwa v Emp 9 N L R 65 The principle is that when a Magistrate takes cognizance under clause (b) on a police report he takes cognizance of the offence and not merely of the particular person charged in the report as the offender He can therefore issue process against other persons also who appear to him on the basis of the report and other materials placed before him when he has taken cognizance of the case to be concerned in the commission of the offence When he does so it is not a case of taking cognizance against such persons under clause (c) of this section —Mehrab v Crown 17 S L R 150 (F B) overruling 5 S L R 1 Similarly where the Magistrate issued warrants against persons not named in the complaint or in the first information but named in a report subsequently made by the police after investigation it was held that the Magistrate took cognizance of the case under clause (b) and not under clause (c) of this section—Rajani Kanto v Emp 8 C W N 864 Where a Magistrate while acquitting a certain person sent up by the Police stated that another person had in his opinion committed the offence and that the Police should take action against the person, and that person was accordingly sent up and convicted, it was held that the Magistrate acted under clause (b) and not clause (c), and section 191 was not applicable—Hakim Ally v K E 4 L B R 137, 7 Cr L J 414. Where an accused person charged by the Police was convicted and the case came up in appeal before a Subdivisional Magistrate the latter could try the offender himself under sec 423 (1) (b) if the offence was one within his ordinary jurisdiction and in so doing the Sub-divisional Magistrate took cognizance of the case not under clause (c) but under clause (b), as he had before him the police charge sheets stating all the facts—Emp v. Manikka, 30 Mad 228 Where after the close of a trial the Magistrate ordered the police to send up a charge sheet in respect of a witness for the prosecution, which the Police did and then the Magistrate tried that person and convicted him held that the Magistrate took cognizance of the case under clause (b) and not under clause (c) and section 191 did not therefore apply to the case—Emp v Gundoo 23 Bom L R 842 22 Cr L J 603

Transfer or commitment on application of accused

191 When a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence under sub section (1), clause (c), of the preceding section, the accused shall, before any evidence is taken, be informed that he is entitled to have the case tried by another Court, and if the accused, or any of the accused if there be more than one, objects to being tried by

by

or transferred to another Magistrate

593 Principle —The principle of this section is that no man ought to be a Judge in his own case If a Magistrate proceeds against a person upon his own personal information he is interested in the prosecution and thereby he would practically make himself a Judge in his own case and his pre conceived opinion as to the guilt of the accused is likely to bias himself against the accused

Moreover this section has another object in view viz to clear away everything which might engender suspicion and distrust (in the mind of the accused) of the tribunal and so to promote the feeling of confidence in the administration of justice which is so essential to social order and security The law in laying down the strict rule has regard not so much to the motives which might be supposed to bias the Judge as to the susceptibilities of the litigant parties —per Miller and Lush JJ in Serjeant v Dale 2 Q B D 558 quoted in Q E v Maniklal 19 Mad 263 The law partly out of regard for the susceptibilities of the accused and partly to inspire confidence in the administration of justice allows the accused the right to claim to be tried before another Magistrate—Imp v Shewak Ram 7 S L R 77

A Magistrate cannot take cognizance of an offence under clause (c) of section 190 without complying with the provisions of this section—Sk Abdul Ali v Emp 1 P L T 446 Where on a report being made by a Cantonment official in respect of an offence under sec 97 of the Cantonment Code the Cantonment Magistrate took cognizance of the case and convicted the accused held that the trial and conviction were illegal as the Magistrate should have informed the accused under this section that he was entitled to have the case transferred to another Magistrate—Anandi Pershad v Emp 1920 P L R 124 21 Cr L J 394 When a Magistrate himself institutes criminal proceedings under section 476 he is bound to inform the accused that he is entitled to have his case tried by another Court—K E v Naipal 8 O C 1 A I R 1924 Oudh 448 25 Cr L J 1224

The mere fact that the Magistrate takes cognizance of a case under clause (c) of section 190 does not bring the case within the operation of sec 556 and so long as the Magistrate complies with the provisions of section 191 he is entitled to try the case—Nga Chit v Emp 3 Bur L J 121 A I R 1924 Ran 352 26 Cr L J 349

594 Right of accused to have case transferred —The words shall be informed that he is entitled are mandatory and a Magistrate cannot refuse to comply with them—Q E v Hawthorne 13 All 345 He is bound to inform the accused of his right to have the case transferred If he omit to inform the accused of his right or if in spite of objections taken by the accused the Magistrate proceeds with the case the proceedings will be wholly void It is not a mere irregularity curable by section 537—Q E v Hawthorne 13 All 345 Emp v Chedi 28 All 212, Mohib Ali v K E 3 A I J 691 Ram Ratan v Emp 19 A L J 138 Chander Sen v Emp 21 A L J 89 24 Cr L J 656 Crown v Mul Raj 1905 P R 36 K E v Abdul Rahim 1905 P R 8 Emp v Sakhia 5 N L R 113 Ghasi v Q E 1898 P R 13 Sarfaraz Khan v K E 11 A L J 331 K E v Naipal 10 O L J 532 25 Cr L J 1224, Bodha v Crown 16 P I R 1921 22 Cr L J 96 Narain Das v Emp, 27 Cr L J 375 (All)

Although this section enables the accused to apply for a transfer of the case still unless the accused exercises that right the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to try the case is unquestionable The mere fact that the Magistrate has taken cognizance under section 190 clause (c) does not oust the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to hear and determine the In re Ganeshi 15 All 192 (194)

The omission by the Magistrate to inform the accused that he is entitled to have his case tried by another Court may be a ground for having the proceedings set aside but not for making an order for transfer—In re Abdul Ally 2 Weir 151

595 Nature of the accused's right —All that the accused is entitled to under this section is to have the case tried by another Court, but he cannot choose or determine for himself by what other particular Court the case is to be tried—In re Shrinivas 7 B L R 637 And the Magistrate has a discretion on objection being taken either to transfer the case to another Magistrate or to commit it to the Sessions He is not bound to transfer the case to another Magistrate He may elect to commit the case to the Court of Session—Karuppana v Fellir, 22 Mad 148

Again the accused can object only to the trial of the case by that Magistrate he cannot object to a preliminary inquiry This section directs the Magistrate either to transfer the case to another Magistrate or to commit the case to the Sessions And the commitment involves the holding of a preliminary inquiry This section empowers the Magistrate to hold a preliminary inquiry even in a case triable by himself if the case is one triable exclusively by the Sessions Court the Magistrate is a fortiori entitled to hold an inquiry preliminary to commitment—Q E v Abdul Razzak, 21 All 105 Azam Ali v Emp 20 Cr L J 47 (Cal)

But a Magistrate who takes cognizance of a case under section 190 (c) cannot after becoming a District Magistrate hear an appeal from a conviction in the case (which was tried by another subordinate Magistrate) without following the procedure laid down in Sec 191 as an appeal is a part of the trial of the offence—Bansi Lal v Emp 12 C W N 438

596 When objection to be taken —If the accused wants to be tried by another Court he must express his objection before any evidence is taken—Murad v Emp 1894 P R 29 (at p 87)

597 Application of Section to Chapter VIII —The provisions of sections 190 and 191 do not apply to proceedings under section 110 and a Magistrate who has instituted those proceedings need not inform the person proceeded against that he is entitled to have his case transferred to another Magistrate—In re Mithu Khan 27 All 172 But in Alimuddin v Emp 29 Cal 392 and Godhan v Emp 4 P L J 7 however, it has been held that the principle of this section viz that no man ought to be a judge in his case applies to proceedings under Sec 110 though they do not relate to offences therefore where a Magistrate has initiated proceedings against a person under sec 110 mainly if not wholly upon his own knowledge of the character of that person he is incompetent to proceed with the trial under sec 117

192 (1) Any Chief Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub divisional Magistrate may transfer any case, of which he has taken cognizance, for inquiry or trial, to any Magistrate subordinate to him.

Transfer of cases by Magistrates

(2) Any District Magistrate may empower any Magistrate of the first class who has taken cognizance of any case to transfer it for inquiry or trial to any other specified Magistrate in his district who is competent under this Code to try the accused or commit him for trial, and such Magistrate may dispose of the case accordingly

'May transfer —The power under this ssection is optional and not obligatory As to cases which a Magistrate is disqualified from trying and is bound to transfer see Secs 487 and 556

598 'Any case —This section deals with the power of the Magistrate to transfer any case the words any case are not restricted to criminal cases only but are wide enough to include any case triable by any criminal Court e g cases under Chapter VIII—Chintaman v Emp 35 Cal 243 K E v Munia 4 All 151 Hiranandа v Emp 1 Pat 621 or cases under Chapter XI —Satish v Rajendra 22 Cal 898 Rai Kissore v Dwarka 10 C W N 1095 Mahendra v Rajpati 20 A L J 215 Abdul Hamid v Hasan 4 P L T 297 24 Cr L J 487 Even if the transfer be not strictly legal the irregularity would be cured by Section 529 (f) —Gurudas v Gaganendra 2 C L J 614 Akbar v Domi Lal, 4 C W N 821

The word case has not been defined but reading together sections 192 (1), 190 (a) and 200 (c) it is clear that the term includes a proceeding upon a complaint as soon as the complaint has been received by the Magistrate who takes cognizance of the offence and before he issues any process A case can therefore be transferred under sec 192 even before a decision to issue process against the accused has been made—Asaram v Bhagiratni, 7 N L R 97 12 Cr L J 437

Power to transfer cases which the subordinate Magistrate is incompetent to try —Under sub section (1) the Magistrates specified have power to transfer a case to a Sub Magistrate even though the latter be incompetent to try the case on his own initiative thus a complaint under section 20 of the Cattle Tresspass Act can be entertained only by the District Magistrate or a Magistrate specially authorised, but this section will empower a Subordinate Magistrate to try the case if it is transferred to him by the District Magistrate—Budhan v Issur Singh 34 Cal 926

But if a first class Magistrate transfers a case under sub section (2), he can transfer only those cases to a Subordinate Magistrate which the latter is competent to try or commit for trial

599 "Of which he has taken cognizance" —This section empowers the District Magistrate to transfer to Subordinate Magistrates only those cases of which he has taken cognizance A Magistrate is said to take cognizance of a case under section 107 only when (and not before) he issues notice to the person charged to show cause why he should not be proceeded against under that section Therefore where the District Magistrate has not issued any notice to the person charged that is, where he has not taken cognizance of a case under section 107 he cannot transfer the case to a subordinate Magistrate—Konda Reddy v K E, 41 Ma

246 This section enables a District Magistrate or subdivisional Magistrate to transfer only those cases of which he has taken cognizance under the provisions of section 190. It has no reference to cases which have been transferred to his Court—Darra v. Mukat, 12 A. L J. 277, 15 Cr. L. J 357. In other words, a case which has once been transferred to a District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate cannot be transferred by him again under Sec. 192—Bashir Husain v Ali Husain, 36 All 166; Crown v. Nga So, 1 L B R. 86, Anonymous, 7 M H C R, App. 33. But where a case had been transferred by the Chief Court under sec 526 from the Dt Magistrate of Rohtak to the Dt Magistrate of Hissar with a direction that the latter should either dispose of the case himself or transfer it to some other competent Magistrate in the District, and the District Magistrate of Hissar transferred the case under sec. 192 to an Honorary Magistrate, held that the District Magistrate of Hissar was competent under this section to make the transfer—Kishen Singh v. Crown, 1917 P. R 30; Q E. v Mata Prasad, 19 All 249

Where a trying Magistrate sends up a report to the District Magistrate that an accused before him has committed perjury and altered a document filed in Court, the report amounts to a complaint, and the District Magistrate can take cognizance of the case under section 190 (a) and transfer it for trial under section 192 to another Magistrate subordinate to him—Suraj Prasad v Emp, 21 A L J 825 Emp. v Sundar Sarup, 26 All 514.

600. At which stage case can be transferred:—The Magistrate can transfer the case, on taking cognizance of it A District Magistrate is competent, under section 190 to take cognizance without complaint and to transfer the case to a subordinate Magistrate without such complaint—Crown v Allahwarayo, 1 S L R 119 He can transfer the case before any process has been issued to the accused—Asaram v. Bhagirathi, 7 N L. R. 97, 12 Cr L J 437 He can transfer a case even after summons has been issued against the accused—In re Azim Sheikh, 7 C. L. J. 249; Eqbal v. Emp, 26 Cr L J 413 (Pat). But a case cannot be transferred under this section after it has been partly tried—Anonymous, 2 Weir 152, e g after all the evidence for the prosecution and the defence has been taken—Q E v Radhe, 12 All 66 The transfer of a part heard case, after the framing of the charge and the cross-examination of some of the prosecution witnesses, to another Magistrate for disposal is undesirable A Magistrate who undertakes a trial and hears the witnesses should, if possible, finish it—Mazahar Ali v. Emp, 50 Cal 223 (226)

'For inquiry or trial' —This section empowers a Magistrate to transfer a case for inquiry or trial, but it does not empower him to transfer a case simply for the purpose of considering the report of an investigation under sec 202, which he has himself ordered. The provisions of sections 192 and 202 do not entitle a Magistrate, after he has proceeded under the latter section, to make an order under the provisions of the former section transferring the case for the purpose of being dealt with under sections 203 or 204, without a fresh investigation as contemplated by sec. 202—Mahabir v. Giribala, 29 C W. N. 508, 26 Cr. L. J 990, A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 742.

601. How much of the case need be transferred :—Where a complaint or a police report deals with several persons, it is not necessary that the entire case, i e, the case regarding the offences committed according to the complaint or Police report, should be transferred. Whether the entire case has been transferred or not is a question of fact, depending on the intention of the transferring Magistrate, and this intention must be gathered from the order itself Where no reservation is made, it may be concluded that the entire case has been transferred—Ajab Lal v Emp, 32 Cal 783 Thus, where a complaint was lodged against several persons, and the Magistrate after examining the complainant, issued summons against one of the accused only and transferred the case to a Subordinate Magistrate it was held that the whole case of the complainant was transferred and the Subordinate Magistrate could take proceedings against the other accused persons also—In re Azim Sheikh, 7 C L J 249

602. 'Subordinate to him' :—A case can be transferred under this section by the Magistrate specified to the Court of a Magistrate subordinate to him and not to a superior Magistrate A transfer of a case by a Subordinate Magistrate to a Superior Magistrate is not contemplated by this section So a third class Magistrate cannot transfer a case to a District Magistrate—Q E v Radhe 12 All 66

The subordination of the Presidency Magistrate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate shall be deemed to be of the same kind and extent as the subordination of Magistrates and Benches to the District Magistrate under sec 17 (1) The Chief Presidency Magistrate can under sec 528 withdraw any case from any Presidency Magistrate and refer it for inquiry or trial to any other Presidency Magistrate—In re Nageswar, 1 Bom I R 347

For the purpose of this section, an Additional District Magistrate is subordinate to the District Magistrate, see Sec 10 (3).

A village headman is not a Magistrate, and a case cannot be transferred to him—Q E v Maung Gale, 1 L B R 59

603. Effect of transfer :—When a District Magistrate has transferred a case for trial to a Deputy Magistrate, the former ceases to have jurisdiction in the case so long as the transfer is in existence, and cannot take any further steps in the matter (e g issue warrants), unless the case is withdrawn to his own file under section 528—Golapdy v Q E, 27 Cal. 979, Imrit Majhi v. K. E, 46 Cal 854 Until the transferring Magistrate withdraws the case from the file of the subordinate Magistrate (to whom the case was transferred) to that of his own Court, he has no power to make any order save an order for further inquiry under section 437 (now 436)—Ajab Lal v. Emp, 32 Cal 783, Radhaballabh v Benode Behari, 30 Cal 449 In this respect this section differs from Sec. 202 Under that section the Magistrate receiving a complaint refers it to a subordinate Magistrate only for inquiry and report, and does not cease to have control over the case The provisions of sections 192 and 202 are separate and distinct and the powers conferred by one section do not curtail the powers conferred by the other—Imrit Majhi v K E, 46 Cal 854

In a recent case it has been held that a Magistrate who has transferred a case under section 192 to a Subordinate Magistrate cannot recall the case —Mahari v Baldeo, 7 P L T. 530, 26 Cr L J 1585 (1587) This view, it is submitted is not correct The learned Judge seems to have over looked the new provisions of sec 528 sub-section (4)

604 Procedure before transfer: —Notice to parties —Before a case is transferred under this section from one subordinate Court to another the District Magistrate should give notice to the parties of such transfer —Teacotta v. Ameer Majee, 8 Cal 393 Umrao v Fakirchand 3 All 749, In re Saker Naik, 2 Bom L R 342 In re Daud Hussain Ratanlal 460, Imp v Sadashiv, 22 Bom. 549

Examination of complainant —Under section 200 proviso (a), when a complaint is made in writing the Magistrate is not bound to examine the complainant before transferring the case under this section See also Q v Hariu, 18 W R 18

605. Procedure after transfer :—Examination of complainant — If the transferring Magistrate has already examined the complainant, the Magistrate to whom the case is transferred is not bound to examine the complainant again—See 200 (c)

Examination of prosecution witness —Even where the transferring Magistrate has examined all the prosecution witnesses still the Magistrate to whom the case is transferred is bound to examine the witnesses again He cannot act upon the deposition of witnesses recorded by the transferring Magistrate—Q E v Bashir Khan 14 All 346, In re Tola Venkatna 2 Weir 152 see also Dy Leg Rem v Upendra 12 C W N 140

606. Transfer by High Court :—In the case of a transfer of a criminal case by the High Court from a Court subordinate to the District Magistrate to the District Magistrate s Court it will be understood that the District Magistrate should try the case himself unless the High Court has expressed that the District Magistrate shall have the power to transfer the case to a subordinate Court But when the High Court transfers a case from the Court of one District Magistrate to the Court of another District Magistrate, it will be understood unless the contrary is directly expressed that the Magistrate of the Court to which the transfer is made has power and jurisdiction to apply section 192, and to transfer the case to the Court of any Magistrate subordinate to him who may be competent to try it—Q E v Mata Prasad, 19 All 249 Kishen Singh v Crown 1917 P R 30

Cognizance of offences by Court of Session

193 (1) Except as otherwise expressly provided by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, no Court of Session shall take cognizance of any offence as a Court of original jurisdiction unless the accused has been committed to it by a Magistrate duly empowered in that behalf.

(2) Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges shall try such cases only as the Local Government by general or special order may direct them to try or in the case of Assistant Sessions Judges, as the Sessions Judge of the division, by the general or special order may make over to them for trial	(2) Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges shall try such cases only as the Local Government by general or special order may direct them to try or, [* * * *] as the Sessions Judge of the division by the general or special order, may make over to them for trial

Change—The words in the case of Assistant Sessions Judges which occurred in sub section (2) after the words may direct them to try have been omitted by sec 46 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 We propose to omit from section 193 (2) the words in the case of Assistant Sessions Judges The section as it stands at present (i e before the amendment) makes a distinction between Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges only allowing transfers by the Sessions Judge in the case of the latter Considerable inconvenience has been felt owing to this limitation which we propose to remedy by the omission of the words referred to above —Report of the Select Committee of 1916 Under the present law Sessions Judges will be able to make over the cases to the Additional Sessions Judges as well as to the Assistant Sessions Judges

607 Object of this section —The object of the requirement of a commitment before trial is to secure in the case of a person charged with a grave offence a preliminary inquiry which would afford him the opportunity of becoming acquainted with the circumstances of the offence imputed to him and enable him to make his defence—Rama Varma v Q 3 Mad 351 The law contemplates that in the serious cases of which a Court of Session may take cognizance the accused should have some information of the case he has to answer—Q v Chinna Vedagiri 4 Mad 227

608 Trial without commitment —The trial in the Court of Session without a commitment is ultra vire —Q E v Ramalevan 15 Mad 352 Sharina v Emp 1884 P R 42 Q E v Jagat 22 Cal 50 The absence of commitment is a defect of substance and not merely of form and is not cured by section 537—Sharira v Emp 1884 P R 42 Even where a Sessions Judge holds that the approver who is giving evidence before him as a witness is not complying with the conditions of pardon, he cannot try him at once but can do so only after a proper commitment by a competent Court—Q E v Ramalevan 15 Mad 352 Q E v Jagat Chandra 22 Cal 50 Nga Aune v Q E L B R (1893—1900) 576

Irregular commitment —If the commitment is made by a Magistrate duly empowered the fact that the Magistrate investigated the case without a formal complaint is not a ground of treating the commitment as a nullity the Sessions Court should proceed with the trial in the usual course—Reg v Raichoddas 4 B H C R 35

A commitment made in the absence of the accused is void and the subsequent trial upon such commitment must be set aside as a nullity—Khanan v Crown 1913 P L R 260

Onus of proof —Where the commitment was made by a person exercising the powers of a Magistrate that fact is sufficient to entitle a Sessions Court to proceed with the trial and it would be on the party impugning the correctness of the proceedings to show that there was no jurisdiction —Q v Komuroodee 13 W R 17

609 Reference under section 123 —Power of Additional Sessions Judge—A reference to a Court of Session by a Magistrate of a case under section 123 is not a case committed for trial and the Court of Session disposing of it does not try a case within the meaning of this section An Additional Sessions Judge empowered by the Government to try all cases which may be committed for trial by the District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order on such reference—In re Doyoram Ratanlal 830 This decision is no longer good law because the new sub section (3B) of sec 123 as now amended by the Amendment Act of 1923 expressly authorises the Sessions Judge to make over all references under sec 123 to the Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge In Benode Behari v Emp 50 Cal 229 the word cases under this section was held to include a reference under section 123 but such a laboured interpretation is no longer necessary.

610 Assistant Sessions Judge appointed temporarily —An Assistant Sessions Judge who has been directed by the Government to take over charge of the duties of the Sessions Judge during a temporary vacancy of the office is not an officer appointed to act as a Sessions Judge and has no jurisdiction to try any case even as Assistant Sessions Judge unless it was made over to him by a general or special order under the last para of this section—Q E v Mahadhu Ratanlal 500

Power of Assistant Sessions Judge to hear appeal —The word case used in sub section (2) does not include an appeal or other matter and a Sessions Judge has no power to transfer an appeal filed in his Court to the Court of the Assistant Sessions Judge—Emp v Abdul Razzak 37 All 786 See Not 1110 under sec 409

194 (1) The High Court may take cognizance of any offence upon a commitment made to it in manner hereinafter provided

Cognizance of offences by High Court

Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect the provisions of any Letters Patent granted under the Indian High Courts Act 1861, or the Government of India Act, 1915, or any other provisions of this Code

Information by Advocate General

(2) (a) Notwithstanding anything in this Code contained the Advocate General may with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government exhibit to the High Court against persons subject to the jurisdiction of the High Court, information for all purposes for which Her Majesty's Attorney General may exhibit informations on behalf of the Crown in the High Court of Justice in England

(b) Such proceedings may be taken upon every such information as may lawfully be taken in the case of similar informations filed by Her Majesty s Attorney General so far as the circumstances of the case and the practice and procedure of the said High Court will admit

(c) All fines, penalties forfeitures debts and sums of money recovered or levied under or by virtue of any such information shall belong to the Government of India

(d) The High Court may make rules for carrying into effect the provisions of this section

Prosecution for contempts of lawful authority of public servants

195 (1) No Court shall take cognizance—

(a) of any offence punishable under sections 172 to 188 (both inclusive) of the Indian Penal Code, except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of the public servant concerned, or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate ,

Prosecution for contempts of lawful authority of public servants

195 (1) No Court shall take cognizance—

(a) of any offence punishable under sections 172 to 188 of the Indian Penal Code, except * * * on the complaint in writing of the public servant concerned or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate ,

(b) of any offence punishable under sections 193, 194, 195, 196, 199, 200, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211 or 228 of the same Code, when such offence is committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of such Court, or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate;

Prosecution for certain offences against public justice

(c) of any offence described in section 463 or punishable under section 471, 475 or 476 of the same Code, when such offence has been committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in such proceedings, except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of such Court, or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate.

Prosecution for certain offences relating to documents given in evidence

(2) In clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) the term "Court" means a Civil,

(b) of any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the same Code, namely, sections 193, 194, 195, 196, 199, 200, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except * * * on the complaint in writing of such Court or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate; or

Prosecution for certain offences against public justice

(c) of any offence described in section 463 or punishable under section 471, section 475 or section 476 of the same Code, when such offence is alleged to have been committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in such proceeding, except * * * on the complaint in writing of such Court or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate.

Prosecution for certain offences relating to documents given in evidence

(2) In clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) the term "Court" includes a Civil,

Revenue or Criminal Court but does not include a Registrar or Sub-Registrar under the Indian Registration Act, 1877.	Revenue or Criminal Court, but does not include a Registrar or Sub-Registrar under the Indian Registration Act, 1877.

Nature of sanction necessary. (4) The sanction referred to in this section may be expressed in general terms, and need not name the accused persons; but it shall so far as practicable specify the Court or other place in which, and the occasion on which, the offence was committed.	(omitted).
(5) When sanction is given in respect of any offence referred to in this section, the Court taking cognizance of the case may frame a charge of any other offence so referred to which is disclosed by the facts.	(omitted).
(6) Any sanction given or refused under this section may be revoked or granted by any authority to which the authority giving or refusing it is subordinate; and no sanction shall remain in force for more than six months from the date on which it was given; provided that the High Court may, for good cause shown, extend the time.	(omitted).
(7) For the purposes of this section every Court	(3) For the purposes of this section, a Court sha shall be deemed to be subordinate only to the Court to which appeals from the former Court ordinarily lie, that is to say :—

(c) Where no appeal lies, such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the principal Court of original jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such first mentioned Court is situate.

(a) Where such appeals lie to more than one Court, the Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction shall be the Court to which such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate.

(b) Where such appeals lie to a Civil and also to a Revenue Court, such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Civil or Revenue Court according to the nature of the case in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed.

(3) The provisions of sub-section (1), with reference to the offences named therein apply also to criminal conspiracies to commit such offences and to the abetment of such offences, be deemed to be subordinate to the Court to which appeals ordinarily lie from the appealable decrees or sentences of such former Court, or in the case of a Civil Court from whose decrees no appeal ordinarily lies, to the principal Court having ordinary original civil jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such Civil Court is situate :

Provided that—

(a) where appeals lie to more than one Court, the Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction shall be the Court to which such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate ; and

(b) where appeals lie to a Civil and also to a Revenue Court, such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Civil or Revenue Court, according to the nature of the case or proceeding in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed.

(4) The provisions of sub-section (1), with reference to the offences named herein, apply also to criminal conspiracies to commit such offences and to the abetment of such offences, and attempts to commit and attempts to commit them.

(5) Where a complaint has been made under sub-section (1) clause (a), by a public servant, any authority to which such public servant is subordinate may order the withdrawal of the complaint and if it does so, it shall forward a copy of such order to the Court and upon receipt thereof by the Court, no further proceedings shall be taken on the complaint

Change —This section has been substantially amended by sec 47 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendement Act XVIII of 1923

The changes introduced by the present Amendment are the following —

(1) The words with the previous sanction have been omitted from clauses (a) (b) and (c) of sub section (1) Under the old law a private person could launch a prosecution for the offences referred to in this section after obtaining the sanction of the Court Under the present law, by abolishing sanction altogether the right of private individuals to prosecute for the said offences has been taken away Sub sections (4) (5) and (6) which dealt with sanction have also been omitted

(2) The words in writing have been added after the word complaint in clauses (a) (b) and (c) and the words is alleged to have been committed have been substituted for the words have been committed' in clauses (b) and (c) For reasons see notes under these words

(3) In sub section (-) the word includes has been substituted for means

(4) Sub-section (3) has been re numbered as sub section (4)

(5) Sub section (7) has been re numbered as sub section (3), because that sub section should come in more properly after the definition of the word Court in sub section (2) The old clause (c) of sub section (7) has now been incorporated into the body of sub section (3) with this restriction that it is now confined to civil Courts only

(6) Sub-section (5) is entirely new

Reasons for the change — The provisions of sec 195 cause constant and great difficulty and various amendments have been suggested which we have considered at length We have no doubt that it will not be possible to remedy the evils which are connected with this section so long as private individuals are allowed to prosecute for offences connected with the administration of justice In our opinion the only effective way of dealing with this section is to allow prosecutions to be launched only by the public servant or by the Court"

We see no reason why the public servant or the Court should not file a complaint exactly in the same way as a private individual would in other cases and our proposals in this connection with this section the enlargement of section 476 involve the adoption of this.

our view section 195 should bar the cognizance by any Court of offences of this nature except upon such complaint while the procedure to be followed when the Court desires to prosecute should be prescribed by section 476

The adoption of this principle will at all events get rid of the objectionable practice of keeping a sanction which has been granted to a private individual hanging over the head of the accused person for a period of six months, which is frequently utilised for the various purposes of blackmail In the case of a complaint by a Court or a public servant we do not think that it will be necessary to prescribe any limit of time

It will also in our opinion be a distinct advantage to get rid altogether of the term sanction in connection with these prosecutions a result which will be effected by the amendments we propose

We recognise that clause (a) of sub section (1) stands on a somewhat different footing from clauses (b) and (c) but we think there is no reason to retain even in it any reference to a sanction as prosecution under clause (a) can reasonably be launched in all cases on the direct complaint of a public servant —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

The object of the amendment is to stop private persons from obtaining sanction as a means of wreaking vengeance and to give the Court concerned full discretion in deciding whether any prosecution is necessary or not—Abdul Rahman v Emp 4 Bur L J 213 27 Cr L J 669

611 Sanction abolished—Effect of Amendment —Since sanction has been abolished by the Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 a sanction granted after the 1st September 1923 (the date on which the Amendment Act came into operation) is illegal—In re Gafur 26 Bom L R 1035 26 Cr L J 448 A sanction granted after 1st September 1923 is illegal even though an application for sanction was made prior to that date The order granting sanction cannot be treated even as a complaint—Baldeo Misser v D I G of Police 51 Cal [illegible] (655)

So also where sanction was granted before the 1st September 1923 but no prosecution was launched by that time further proceedings cannot be taken after that date on the strength of the sanction A prosecution can then be started only on a complaint by the Court concerned—Ali v Ah Yone Bur L J 289 Jawahir v Jaggu 6 Lab 41, 26 P L R 157 26 Cr L J 1163 Amaraj v Emp 23 A L J 3 26 Cr L J [illegible]

But where a sanction was obtained and the Court had taken cognizance of the offence before the Amendment Act came into operation the subsequent amendment of the law did not take away the jurisdiction of the Court to proceed with the trial and did not necessitate a fresh complaint under the amended provisions—In re Appasamy 49 M L J 216 27 Cr L J 84 Muthia Gowdan v Chinna 15 4 M W N 358 26 Cr L J 142 Emp v Akbar Ali 7 Lab 99 27 P L R 181 27 Cr L J 7-4 Wasudeo v Emp 27 Cr L J 181 (Nag) Kewal Ram v Emp 27 Cr L J 560 (All)

An application under sub section (6) of the old section to revoke a sanction granted before the Amendment Act of 1923 is maintainable even after the coming into operation of the Amendment Act of 1923 because the right conferred by sub section (6) of the old section was not a mere matter of procedure but a substantive right and such right could not be taken away by any amending Act—Ramkrishna v Sithai Ammal 48 Mad 620 (F B) 49 M L J 223 27 Cr L J 91 (practically overruling Nataraja v Rangasuamy 47 Mad 384 46 M L J 274 25 Cr L J 361, and Sesha Ayyar v Public Prosecutor 19 L W 463 34 M L T 353 25 Cr L J 702) Similarly where proceedings under the old sec 195 were commenced and the order of the subordinate Judge refusing to sanction a prosecution was passed under the old section but during the pendency of an application to the District Judge against the order of refusal the new section came into operation and the District Judge sanctioned the prosecution held that the case was governed by sec 6 (e) of the General Clauses Act and the repeal of the old sec 195 could not affect any pending investigation in respect of the right which had accrued to the complainant The District Judge therefore did not act illegally in granting the sanction—Kashmire Lal v Kishen Dei 26 Cr L J 90 A I R 1924 All 563

N B—It should be noted that many of the cases cited below are cases relating to sanctions but the principle of these cases applies also to complaints for under the old law no distinction was made between a sanction and a complaint The cases noted below are therefore cited with certain verbal alterations

612 Object of section —The object of this section is —to protect persons from being needlessly harassed by rash baseless or vexatious prosecutions at the instance of private individuals for the offences specified—Parameshwaran v Emp 39 Mad 677 Palaniappa v Ramasamy 3- M L J 54 to protect persons from criminal prosecution by persons actuated by personal malice or ill will or frivolity of disposition—Balwant v Umed Singh 18 All 203 Emp v Mahadeo 1887 A W N 142 Ram Prasad v Sooba 1 C W N 400 to protect persons from criminal prosecutions upon insufficient grounds and to ensure prosecution only when the Court after due consideration is satisfied that there is a proper case to put a party on his trial—Tuck Sew v Hain 4 L B R 234, to insist on there being prosecution only when the public justice demands it and to prevent prosecution when public interest cannot be served—Ram Prasad v Sooba 1 C W N 400 Vastera Pulluraya v Lakshmi, 2 Weir 178 Q E v Girdharlal, Ratanlal 374 In re Chandra Kanta, 3 C W N 3 Kishan v Sheo Dial 1893 A W N 104 and to save the time of Criminal Courts from being wasted by endless prosecutions without convictions—Parameshwaran v Emp, 39 Mad 677 Ram Prasad v Sooba Roy 1 C W N 400

Section 195 though it forms a part of the Code of Procedure in reality contains a provision of the substantive law of crimes It does not deal with the competency of the Courts nor lay down which of several Courts shall in any particular matter have jurisdiction to try the case It in reality lays down that the offences therein referred to shall not be deemed to be any offences at all except on the complaint of the persons or the Courts therein specified it enhances the connotation of those and limits the scope of their definition—Fakir Mahomed v Emp 27 Cr L J 1105 (1110) (Sind)

613 Duty of Court —A complaint ought not to be made under this section when there is no probability of conviction It is necessary for the Court before making a complaint to consider the evidence and to decide as to whether there is a prima facie case and any reasonable chance of conviction being obtained—Aboo v Kuppusuamy 2 Weir 188 In re Paree Kunhammad 26 Mad 116 Chakrapani v K E 12 M L J 408 Abboo Chetty v Kuppusawamy 12 M L J 302 Munisami v Rajratnam 44 M L J 774 Kali Charan v Basudeo 12 C W N 3 Kusum Sao v Janak Lal 4 P L J 374 In re Raoji 7 Bom L R 732 (per Russel J) Palaniappa v Ramasami 32 M L J 54 Kidla Singh v Emp 13 A L J 1111, Mulayya v Maung Shwe 3 Bur L T 152 11 Cr L J 749, Khajumal v Crown 14 S L R 69 Bhagirathi v Emp 26 Cr L J 1401, Emp v Sheoshankarpuri 10 N L R 177

It would be an abuse of the powers vested in a Court of justice if complaints were made by it on the principle that though the conviction of the party complained against is a mere possibility it is desirable that the matter should be thrashed out so that it may be decided whether or not an offence has been committed—Jadunandan v Emp 37 Cal 250

In making a complaint the Court must act on its own independent judgment and should not be guided by the opinions of others (e g police officers) He should not act merely on the report of the Police—Bapu v Bepu, 39 Mad 750 (757) Q E v Sheikh Beari 10 Mad 232 (239)

614 Sub-section (1)—Complaint —Under the present law a Court must make a complaint and cannot directly order prosecution The complaint must set forth the offence the precise facts on which it is based and the evidence available for proving it—Ram Prasad v Emp 25 A L J 639 28 Cr L J 543

If a Court adopts the procedure laid down in section 476 and after making the necessary inquiry under that section sends the case to a first class Magistrate such action amounts to making a complaint—Q E v Rachappa 13 Bom 109 In order to make a complaint under this section the Judge or Munsiff will not have to appear before a Magistrate and make a complaint on oath like an ordinary complainant If he adopts the procedure under sec 476 that would be sufficient Section 476 was enacted with the object of avoiding the inconvenience which might be caused if a Munsiff or subordinate Judge or a Judge were obliged to appear before a Magistrate and make a complaint on oath to lay the foundation of a prosecution—Ishri Prosad v Sham Lal 7 All 871 (F B)

But it should be noted that Sec 476 refers only to offences when committed before the Court and the ruling in 7 All 871 must be applied to those cases only But if the offence is committed before a public servant other than a Court his proper course is to prepare an ordinary complaint See Nga Lu Po v K E U B R (1908) Cr P C 13 10 Cr L J 17

But even in the case of complaints by public servants the law is not so stringent as in the case of complaints by ordinary persons Thus where a Sub-Inspector drew up what was virtually a complaint and sent it up along with a calendar of wintesses to his immediate superior praying that a case under sec 182 I P C be lodged aga nst the accused and then the superior officer got the documents presented to tl e Magistrate by the Court Inspector it v as held that there was a sufficient complaint by the Sub Inspector althou h it was not addressed to the Mag strate as required by sec 4 (h) but to his sup rior officer—Mehr Cl iragh Di i v Crown 4 Lah 359 So al o where a police officer made a report that a certain person hid lodg d a fals information b fore him an l recommended that that person might be p os cuted h ld that he rep rt virtually amounted to a compla n v th n the m anin of sec 195—Dilan Singh v Emp 40 Cr 36c

The words in writ ng have been inserted after the word com plaint in order to remove the inconvenience which might b felt if it was made incumbent on the public s rvant to attend the Court and to appear before the Magis rate in o der to lodg the complaint It will be sufficient if he sends a written complaint to the Magistrate It is for this reason that clause (aa) has been added to sec 200 so that it is not incumbent on the Magistrate to examine the public servant (complainant) when taking cognizance of the offence—Lachmi Singh v K E 5 P L T 505 A I R 1924 Pat 691 25 Cr L J 97

If an offence under sec 173 I P C is committed before a public ser vant the Court shall not take cognizance of the offence without a com plaint in writing from the public servant and it is not open to a Magistrate to ignore the provisions of th s claus by the device of instituting the case under another section of the I P Cod Hence the Magistrate cannot say that he took cognizance of an offence under se 225B of the P nal Code and that having done so he was entitled under sec 238 of the Cr P Code to convict the accused under sec 173 I P Code which he regarded as a minor offence of the same cha acter as that for which a penalty is provided under sec 225B I P Code—Varain Singh v K E 47 All 114 22 A L J 1005 26 Cr L J 446 A I R 1925 All 129

A complaint for an offence under section 211 I P C can be made only when the case is deliberately false but where the case brought is not false in substance but is bolstered up by false evidence prosecution should be made for an offence not under section 211 but under section 196 I P C—Bholanath v Harimohan 7 C L J 169 There must be good grounds for thinking that a false and malicious charge was made and that a prosecution is necessary in the interests of justice—Nandram v Ramchand 5 C P L R 78

Mere acquittal of the person against whom the charge was made is not sufficient for a prosecution under Sec 211 I P C There must be more than a mere acquittal there must be a reasonable belief in the mind of the prosecuting Court that there was no foundation whatever for the original charge there must be a belief that in instituting the criminal proceedings the accused had acted knowingly without belief in the truth of the allegations made by himself and recklessly without caring whether the allegations were true or false—Kusum v Janaklal 4 P L J 374

The fact that the complainant fails to prove his case is by itself not sufficient to sanction a prosecution under section 211 I P Code It must be established satisfactorily in the mind of the Judge or Magistrate that the complaint was made with intent to cause injury or that it was a false complaint made with the knowledge that it was false—Bhikan Kahar v Emp 6 P L T 365 26 Cr L J 141 abetment of perjury was committed in the course of an inquiry before a committing Magistrate (who was a first class Magistrate). While the proceedings were pending before him, the Magistrate was transferred and was succeeded by a second class Magistrate (who had no power to commit). The outgoing Magistrate therefore sent the proceedings to the District Magistrate. It was held that the District Magistrate had jurisdiction to make a complaint in respect of the offence, for he was 'such Court' referred to in clause (1) (b) of this section and was the officer on whom devolved the disposal of committal of cases in the district.—In re Pamarao 42 Bom. 190: 20 Bom. Transfer of case.—Where a case is transferred to another Court, it is the Court which tries the case on the merits that can make the complaint, and not the Court which took cognizance of the case and issued process.—Jiban Kristo v. Beem Kristo 6 C. W. N. 35; Paltram v. Mahomed Kanir 3 C. W. N. 33. Where a case was transferred by a Magistrate to another Magistrate for investigation, the Court which investigated the case was the proper Court to order the prosecution and not the Court which transferred the case, since the Court which transferred the case ceased to have jurisdiction in the matter: see Emp. v. Bhika 39 Cal. 1041, 16 C. W. N. 505. But where a false complaint against a public servant made to a Deputy Commissioner was simply referred (and not transferred) for inquiry and report under section 202 to a Subdivisional Magistrate, the latter could not make order for the prosecution of the complainant for bringing a false case.—Asrat-Ulla v. Emp., 4 C. But in another Calcutta case an opinion has been expressed that an order for prosecution for bringing a false case can be made by the Magistrate investigating the case under sec. 202 and not by the Magistrate who sent the case to the former for investigation.—Maniruddin v. Abdul Rauf 40 Cal. 41 (44).

Commitment of case.—In a case committed to the Sessions, it is the Sessions Court and not the committing Magistrate who can make a complaint for prosecution of a witness who made false statements before the committing Magistrate, because such statements are said to be made in relation to proceedings before the Sessions Court.—Narayana v. Palani-appa 5 L. somewhat curtailed it was held that it could not be said that there was any such continuity as would enable the High Court to hold that the Court that was re constituted was the same as the one that had ceased to exist, and consequently the new Court could not make a complaint in respect of an offence committed before the old Court—In re Appa Atla 16 Cr L J 87 (Mad)

624 No delegation of power —The power to make a complaint must be exercised by the Court before which the offence was committed The Court cannot delegate that power even to the Public Prosecutor The filing of a complaint by the Public Prosecutor in the absence of a complaint by the Court will not be treated as equivalent to a complaint by the Court—Crown v Gurditta 1917 P R 19 18 Cr L J 518

625 Clause (c) —Offences under this clause —Offences described in section 463 I P C —The word forgery is used as a general term in section 463 I P C and that section is referred to in a comprehensive sense in this section so as to embrace all species of forgery punishable under the Penal Code including one under section 467 I P C —Q E v Tulja 12 Bom 36 Tetu Shah v Bolai Shah 14 C W N 479 Khairati Ram v Malaua Ram 5 Lah 550 (553) 26 Cr L J 537 Ram Samujh v Emp 30 W N 614 27 Cr L J 969 Ismail Panju v K E 6 Cr L J 1115 A I R 1925 Nag 337 or an offence under section 468 I P C —Asst Sessions Judge v Ramammal 36 Mad 387 or under section 466 I P C —Anonymous Ratanlal 83 Bachu Behary v Emp, 20 Cr L J 630 (Pat) or under section 465 I P C —Khairati Ram v Malaua Ram 5 Lah 550 but it does not include an offence under Sec 474 I P C —Asrabuddin v Kalidayal 19 C W N 125

Since an offence described in section 463 includes an offence under sec 467 I P Code it follows that where a prosecution of an accused is ordered only under sec 471 I P Code without referring to any other section but he is tried and convicted under secs 471 and 467 I P Code the conviction under the latter section is not sustainable as there was no complaint in respect of an offence under that section—Ram Samujh v Emp 1 Luck 5 3 3 O W N 614 27 Cr L J 969 (970)

A complaint may be made by the Court for prosecuting the plaintiff for bringing a false claim on a forged document even though the case in which the claim was held to be false was decided by consent of the parties —Emp v Ram Narain 27 Cr L J 1021 (All) Cf Narain Das v Emp, 25 A L J 559 28 Cr L J 549

Where the original complaint made by the Court was in respect of abetment by conspiracy and the Magistrate acting on the facts disclosed in the evidence for the prosecution added a second charge of abetment of forgery in an account book produced before the Insolvency Court in pursuance of the alleged conspiracy held a complaint of the Insolvency Court was not necessary for the second charge was in respect of an act done in pursuance of the conspiracy mentioned in the original complaint Section 235 of the Code also permits a joinder of such charges—Abdul Rahman v Emp 4 Bur L J 213 27 Cr L J 669

626 "Alleged to have been committed" —These words ha been substituted by the Select Committee of 1916 for the word committed in deference to the remarks made by Piggott J in Emperor v Bhawani Das 38 All 169 at page 172 With regard to the actual wording of the sub section under consideration it does seem to me to be some what lacking in precision To forbid a Court to take cognizance of an offence committed by a party is open to the criticism that no Court can decide whether an offence was committed or not until after it has taken cognizance It seems necessary therefore to read the word committed as equivalent to the expression alleged to have been committed See also Janardhan v Baldeo Prasad 5 P L J 135

627 Document —The word document in this section means the original document Where the original document which was proved to have been forged was not produced or given in evidence but only a registration copy of it was produced in the suit no complaint by the Court was necessary for a prosecution under secs 465 and 467 I P C—K E v Raja Mustafa 8 O C 313 2 Cr L J 653 Where the accused produced certified copies of certain forged documents in a Revenue Court held that no complaint of the Revenue Court was necessary for the prosecution of the accused the words produced or given in evidence in this section refer only to the production of the original and not to the production of a copy and this for the very reason that the Court before which a copy of the document is produced is not really in a position to express any opinion about the genuineness of the original—Girdhari Lal v Emp 19 O C 1 2 O W N 174 16 Cr L J 99

628 "Produced or given in evidence" —Complaint by the Court is necessary if the document was produced in Court—Asrabuddin v Kali dayal 19 C W N 125 16 Cr L J 309 even though it was not given in evidence—Akhil Chandra v Q E 22 Cal 1004 In re Gopal 9 Bom L R 735 The word produced has been added in the Code of 1898 and did not exist in the old Codes and therefore the decisions in Abdul Khadar v Meera Sahib 15 Mad 224 Adhar v Ablakh 1895 A W N 145 (in which it was held that no sanction was necessary unless the document was given in evidence) are no longer good law

Complaint by the Court is necessary if the document is produced i e tendered in evidence although it is not exhibited and marked and considered by the Court—Guru Charan v Girija 9 Cal 887 The mere filing of the document is tantamount to production and is sufficient to constitute the offence—Rati Jha v K E 39 Cal 463 Asrabuddin v Kalidayal 19 C W N 125 Mobarak Ali v Emp 17 C W N 91 13 Cr L J 419 Tularam v Emp 28 Cr L J 388 (Nag) Where a party to a proceeding hands up a document to the Judge who does not take the document on the file but returns it to the party the document is produced all the same within the meaning of this clause—Gulab Chand v Emp 49 Bom 799 27 Bom L R 1039 27 Cr L J 251

Where a certified copy of a forged entry in an account book was accompanied with the plaint and then under O 7 r 17 C P Code the account book was produced before the Court and the munsarim then checked the copy and marked the account book and returned it to the plaintiff held that as the account book was produced before the Court, any offence committed in respect of this account book (viz offence under secs 467 and 471 I P Code) has certainly been committed in respect of a document produced in Court although it may be that the book was never called to the Court after it had been shown to the munsarim (the case having been decided on the oath of the defendant)—Rameshwar Lal v Emp 25 A L J 555 28 Cr L J 668

This clause is wide enough to cover a document produced or given in evidence in the course of a proceeding whether produced or given in evidence by the party who is alleged to have committed the offence or by any one else—In re Bhau Ijarkal sh 49 Bom 608 27 Bom L R 607, 27 Cr L J 69 In other words two things are necessary under clause (c) viz —(1) the document must be produced or given in evidence in the proceeding (2) the offence must be alleged to have been committed by a party to the proceeding but it is not necessary that the person who produces the document in Court must be the offender himself

Where a document was not produced in the suit but was disclosed in an affidavit filed therein and inspection thereof was allowed to the other side and it was filed in the office of the Translator of the High Court for translation held that these actions did not amount to producing the document in evidence as it was not actually produced in Court, and therefore no complaint of the Court was necessary for prosecution under Secs 465 467 and 474 I P C in respect of that document—Munisamy v Rajaratnam 45 Mad 928 (F B) 43 M L J 375 A I R 1922 Mad 495 Where in a proceeding under sec 145 a document comes into Court attached to a police report prior to the proceeding the document is not said to be produced in Court and even if it is neither of the parties to the proceeding is a party to its production consequently the complaint of the Court under this section is not necessary as a condition precedent to the institution of criminal proceedings against the guilty party upon a charge under section 463 I P C —Janardhan v Baldeo Prasad 5 P L J 135

It is not using a forged document as genuine if the document is produced in obedience to a summons from the Court An involuntary production of a document in Court cannot amount to any use of it—Asst Sessions Judge v Ramammal 36 Mad 387 2? A document is said to be given in evidence within the meaning of this section when it is handed over by the person tendering it to the Court, although the Court may reject it as evidence for insufficiency of stamp or want of registration—Q E v Nagin Das, Ratanlal 242

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether a complaint of the Court is necessary in respect of an offence mentioned in clause (1) (c) when such offence has been committed prior to the production of the document in Court The Bombay High Court holds that where an offence under Sec 471 I P C (using as genuine a forged document) in respect of a document produced in Court has been committed before it comes int Court, no complaint of the Court is necessary, the use complaine being prior to its production in Court—Noor Mahomed v Kaikhosru, 4 Bom L R. 268 The Allahabad High Court also holds that so long as the prosecution is confined to offences connected with a document prior to its production in Court no sanction is required All that clause (c) prohibits is taking cognizance of an offence described in sec 463 I P C when such offence has been committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court with respect to a document produced or given in evidence in such proceeding—Lalta Prasad v K E, 34 All 654, 10 A L J 294 So also the Punjab Chief Court holds that no complaint by a Court is necessary where the offence of instigation of the fabrication of false evidence (under sec 466 I P C) appears to have been committed at a time when there were no proceedings whatsoever in any Court and the police were merly inquiring into the circumstances of the case—Crown v. Ajaib Singh, 1917 P R 34

But the Calcutta High Court is of opinion that a complaint of the Court is necessary under such circumstances, because the very fact that the document is produced in Court will bring the case within the purview of this section, and it is immaterial that the forgery is alleged to have been committed before the production of the document in Court—Teni Shah v Bolahi Shah, 14 C W N 179, Nalini Kanto v Anukul, 44 Cal 1002 The same view has been taken in two Allahabad cases—Emp v. Bhawani, 38 All 169, 14 A L J 74 Kanhaiya Lal v Bhagwan Das, 48 All 60, 24 A L J 956, 26 Cr L J 1485 The Madras High Court also holds that this section is not limited to cases where the fabrication is committed pendente lite, but it extends to cases of fabrication of false evidence in advance—In re Parameshwaran 39 Mad. 677, 18 M L T 322 And recently the Lahore High Court has also expressed the view that where a document has been produced in Court by a party, the sanction (complaint) of such Court is necessary for his prosecution in respect of an antecedent forgery—Khairati Ram v Malawa Ram, 5 Lah 550 (552) following Nalini Kanta v Anukul, 44 Cal 1002 and Teni Shah v Bolai Shah, 14 C W N 479

The Court making a complaint should specify the document in respect of which the forgery has been committed as well as the particular act or acts of forgery—In re Bindraban 10 W R 41

629. 'Party' —Complaint is necessary if the document is produced or given in evidence by a party to the proceeding But no complaint is necessary to prosecute a witness in the proceeding since a witness is not a party—John Martin Sequira v Lujja Bai 25 Mad 67; In re Eadara, 3 Mad 400, Sessions Judge v Kondeti, 26 M L J 220, 15 Cr, L J 242, Crown v Jiwan Mal, 1917 P R 10, Debilal v Dhajadhari, 15 C W N 565; nor is a complaint necessary to prosecute the agent of a party—Chand Mal v Emp, 1879 P R 9, Fatima v Raman, 3 Bur. L T. 108, 12 Cr L J 87, or an abettor if he is not a party—Chaudhri Ghansham v Emp, 32 All 74 A claimaint in insolvency proceedings is a party to the proceedings and a complaint is necessary for his prosecution in respect of statements contained in an affidavit filed by him before the Official Assignee in support of his claim—In re Hajee Mohamed, 36 M L J. 60

A complainant in a criminal proceeding is a party to the proceeding—Kanhaiyalal v Bhagwan 48 All 60 23 A L J 956 26 Cr. L J 1485

630 Proceeding in Court —No sanction or complaint is necessary if the offence is not committed in relation to any proceeding in a Court Thus where a mahal belonging to several co-sharers having been sold under the Public Demands Recovery Act a surplus was lying in deposit with the certificate officer and a mukhtar filed an application to withdraw that deposit purporting to have been signed by all the co sharers but the signatures of two of them were alleged to be forged held that the surplus sale proceeds not having been entrusted to the certificate officer in his capacity as a Court no complaint by the Court was necessary for the prosecution of the alleged forgers—Jharu Lal v Mahant Madan Das 2 Pat 237

631 Subsection (3)—Subordination of Courts —This subsection applies only to subordination of Courts Thus where a Subordinate Magistrate acts as an executive officer his subordination must be determined with reference to Sec 17 (i e he is subordinate to the Sub-divisional Magistrate or the District Magistrate as the case may be) and he cannot be deemed as subordinate to the Sessions Judge—Sankaran v Sakkarappa 2 Weir 155 Maini Misser v Emp 6 Pat 39 28 Cr L J 353

But the word Court in this subsection is not confined to the Courts mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of subsection (1) but applies also to the public servant in clause (a) of that subsection when such public servant is acting as a Court and the offence is committed in connection with proceedings in which the public servant concerned is so acting—Arunachalam v Ponnusami 42 Mad 64 followed in In re Budruddin 47 Bom 102 Therefore although a Sub Magistrate is no doubt a public servant in his capacity of an administrative officer still if he is acting in his judicial capacity he must be deemed to be a Court and is therefore subordinate to the Court to which an appeal from his order would lie under the provisions of this sub section—Arunachalam v Ponnusami 42 Mad 64 35 M L J 454 20 Cr L J 78 Similarly a first class Magistrate is a public servant and as such subordinate to the District Magistrate, but if he acts as a Court he must be taken to be subordinate to the Court to which appeals lie from his Court viz the Court of the Sessions Judge—In re Budruddin 47 Bom 10 24 Bom L R 810 23 Cr L J 576

Every Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Court to which appeals from the former will ordinarily lie Thus—

632 Clause (a) —Where appeals lie to more than one Court, the Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction would be the Court to which the original Court must be deemed to be subordinate—Ram Krishna v Mohan Lal 8 N L R 57 13 Cr L J 498 Thus the Subordinate Judge would be held to be inferior to the District Judge and not to the High Court even though the appeal in the particular instance would lie to the High Court—Imp v Lakshman 2 Bom 481 In re Anant Ram-Chandra 11 Bom 438 So also the Recorder s Court at Rangoon is subordinate to the High Court for the purpose of this section though in the particular case the appeal may lie to the Privy Council—Maduray v Elderton 22 Cal 487

633. Clause (b) — or proceeding —These words have been added in deference to the opinion expressed by the Judges in Ajudhia Prosad v Ram Lal 34 All 197 In this case a suit was brought in the Court of the Assistant Collector for arrears of rent exceeding Rs 100, and in execution proceeding thereof certain false statements were made The suit being one for rent exceeding Rs 100 was appealable, but the execution proceeding was not appealable according to the provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act The question arose—to which Court was the Assistant Collector subordinate? and to determine this question it was necessary to decide whether clause (b) or clause (c) of sub section (7) of the old section was applicable It was contended that since the 'case being one for rent exceeding Rs 100 was appealable (though the execution proceeding was not), clause (b) would apply but the Judges held that the word 'case in clause (b) included execution proceedings and since the execution proceeding in the present case was not appealable clause (b) could no apply, as that clause applies only where an appeal lies The case therefore governed by clause (c) of sub section (7)

634. Subsection (4)—Abetment —A distinction has bee

between the abetment of an offence mentioned in clause (b) of subsection (1) and the abetment of an offence mentioned in clause (c) Since clause (c) speaks only of offences committed by a party to the proceeding it follows that no complaint by Court is necessary in respect of an abetment of an offence mentioned in clause (c) if the abetter was not a party to the proceeding—Emp v Ghansham 32 All 74 But in the case of offences mentioned in clause (b) an abettor cannot be prosecuted without a previous complaint by the Court even though he was not a party to the proceeding because no mention is made of a party to the proceeding in clause (b)—Ram Bilas v Lachmi Narain 45 All 140

634A Sub-section (5)—Withdrawal of complaint —Subsection (5) applies only where a complaint has been made by a public servant and not by a Court Where a Magistrate has made a complaint in respect of an offence under section 211 I P Code the complaint is deemed to have been made under sub sec (1) clause (b) by a Court and not by a public servant Consequently sub section (5) does not apply, and the District Magistrate has not power to order the withdrawal of the complaint—Ram Prasad v Emp 25 A L J 639 28 Cr L J 543

A Sub-Divisional Magistrate passing an order under sec 144 Cr P Code and making a complaint for the prosecution of the accused under sec 188 I P Code for disobedience to that order acts as a public servant under sub sec (1) clause (a) of this section and not as a Court Consequently sub-section (5) of this section does not apply The S D Magistrate is subordinate to the District Magistrate and not to the Sessions Judge (see sec 17) An application for withdrawal of the complaint under sub section (5) is to be made to the District Magistrate and not to the Sessions Judge—Mani Misser v Emp 6 Pat 39 28 Cr L J 353

Prosecution for offences against the State

196 No Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under Chapter VI or IXA of the Indian Penal Code (except Section 127), or punishable under Section 108A, or Section 153A, or Section 294A, or Section 295A, or Section 505 of the same Code, unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from, the Governor General in Council, the Local Government, or some officer empowered by the Governor General in Council in this behalf

Form and contents —This section does not prescribe any particular form of order and does not even require the order to be in writing No special mode is laid down in the Code whereby the order or sanction of Government is to be conveyed to the officer who puts the law in motion—Q E v Bal Gangadhar Tilak 22 Bom 112 What the Court has to see is whether the complaint has been made by the order or under the authority of the Government—In re Subramania 32 Mad 3 In re Narayan Menon 25 Cr L J 701 A I R 1925 Mad 106 A telegram sent by the Government expressly authorising the Public Prosecutor to file a complaint against the accused for an offence under section 124A I P C is a perfectly valid authority—In re Varadarajulu Naidu 42 Mad 180

The sanction under this section need not be very particular about its contents provided its meaning and intention are clear Where the letter of authority sanctioning prosecution for sedition did not specify the name of the printer of the newspaper but he was indicated from the first and his name was supplied at the commencement of the Police Court proceedings it was held that this was a sufficient compliance with the section—Apurba v Emp 35 Cal 141 A sanction for the prosecution of the accused in the alternative for offences under section 121 or under sectio 121A is not defective on the ground that it does not specify with suffici

clearness the sect on or the offence in respect of which it is given—Puthen Veetil Kunhi v Emp 42 M L J 108 23 Cr L J 203 Where the persons to be prosecuted were named the offences and the period of their activity specified and the particular sections of the Penal Code set out the mere circumstance that these persons were not described as the members of the Revolutionary society the existence of which was sought to be proved at the trial did not affect the validity of the sanction—Pulin Behary Das v Emp 16 C W N 1105 13 Cr L J 609 In a prosecution for sedition if the sanction contains the name of the printer publisher editor etc of the newspaper the name of the newspaper the offence committed and the particular section of the Penal Code and refers to certain articles appearing in the newspaper the fact that the sanction does not specify the exact article complained of does not make the sanction insufficient or invalid—Q E v Bal Gangadhar Tilak 22 Bom 112 (1*4 150) The intention of the Legislature is to ensure that no prosecution for an offence within sec 196 should be launched except on a complaint authorised by the Government and if this intention is given effect to it is immaterial whether or not all the facts on which the complaint was to be based were stated in the authority with meticulous precision—Nga Aung v K E 2 Bur L J 196 25 Cr L J 193 A I R 1924 Rang 65 Where the sanction contained a misdescription of the article on which the prosecution was based and this was rectified by a subsequent sanction filed in the course of the trial it was held that the petitioner was not prejudiced and the defect was cured by sec 537—Apurba v Emp 35 Cal 141

Where the authority to prosecute was not given to any determinate person but the order sanctioning the prosecution was communicated to the District Magistrate the Public Prosecutor and the senior special Judge and a prosecution was initiated by the Additional Public Prosecutor held that the fact that the order of authorisation was not given to any determinate person did not affect the legality of the trial and that the alleged defect in the order was curable by sec 537 of the Code—In re Kutty Moopan 44 M L J 166 Apurba v Emp 35 Cal 141 (151)

Signature —The authority under sec 196 need not in the case of a Local Government be signed personally by the Lieutenant Governor it is enough if it is signed by one of his accredited or Gazetted officers

(e g the Chief Secretary in this case)—Apurba v Emp 35 Cal 141 The sanction must be signed by the Chief Secretary to the Government An order signed by the Deputy Secretary on behalf of the Chief Secretary is not legal—Oziulla v Beni Madhab 50 Cal 135

Local Government —The sanction must in order to satisfy the section have been the act of the Local Government and not of a single member of such Government—In re Varadarajulu Naidu 42 Mad 885

Where a sanction was duly given by the Local Government under this section and no objection was made thereto at the trial it was not open to the person convicted at the trial to challenge the sanction in appeal before the High Court on the ground that the Local Government granting the sanction was not legally constituted and had no authority to sanction the prosecution—Pulin Behari Das v Emp 16 C W N 1105 13 Cr L J 609

638 Want of sanction and complaint —Absence of sanction under this section vitiates the whole proceedings and the defect is not a mere irregularity curable by section 537 A trial without sanction under section 196 or 197 is illegal—Perumalla v Emp 31 Mad 80 Swami Dayal v K E 1908 P R 8 Shamal Khan v Emp 1890 P R 16 A sanction given after the filing of the complaint does not fulfil the requirements of this section—In Varadarajulu Naidu 42 Mad 885 Barindra v Emp 37 Cal 467 Where there was no complaint or sanction of the Local Government the whole proceedings in the trial were without jurisdiction and the defect was not cured by the provision of section 537—Barindra v Emp 37 Cal 467 Where the law clearly says that it is a condition precedent to the prosecution that a sanction shall be obtained from the Local Government it is not open to any subordinate authority to override the provision of the law by saying that the offence falls under another section of the Penal Code and that no sanction is necessary for the prosecution under that section—Ram Nath v K E 47 All 268 22 A L J 1106 A I R 1925 All 230

But where the accused was prosecuted upon a sanction of the Local Government without a formal complaint and no objection was taken to the absence or irregularity of the complaint at the trial the defect did not affect the trial and the irregularity or insufficiency of the complaint was cured by Sec 537—Sami Dayal v K E 1908 P R 8 Pulin Behari v Emp 16 C W N 1105

639 Prosecution for other offences not mentioned in sanction—Where an order under section 196 authorised a particular Police Officer to prefer a complaint of offences under sections 121A 122 I P C or under any other section of the said Code which may be found applicable to the case and the Magistrate prosecuted the accused and committed him in respect of an offence under sec 121 I P C it was held that since the offence under sec 121 required a sanction under this section and it was not specifically mentioned in the sanction the commitment in respect of an offence under sec 121 was illegal—Barindra Kumar Ghosh v Emp, 37 Cal 467 The reason is, that the power an discretion of determining whether cognizance shall be taken in respect

an offence mentioned in this section cannot be delegated by the Local Government to any other body of persons and if the Magistrate is allowed to prosecute a person for an offence referred to in this section when such offence was not specifically mentioned in the sanction it means a delegation of power to the Magistrate which cannot be sustained In the words of Jenkins C J It would be opposed to the true intendment of sec 196 for the Local Government by its order to give its legal or other advisers a roving power to determine under what sections of the Chapter proceedings should be taken and to abandon to them the discretion and responsibility that properly belongs to itself —Barindra v Emp 37 Cal 467 (490) 14 C W N 1114 11 Cr L J 453 Where sanction is granted by the Local Government for the prosecution of certain persons for an offence in respect of an act which is precisely defined in the order granting the sanction the order cannot be treated as an authority for a prosecution in respect of an offence which is absolutely distinct and is alleged to have been committed on an occasion different for that specified in the order—U Pathada v Emp 3 Bur L J 178 26 Cr L J 245 So also, where the Local Government gave sanction to prosecute a person for an offence under sec 121 I P Code the Court has no power to charge and convict him for an offence under section 124A I P Code—U Nyan v Emp 4 Rang 131 27 Cr L J 1075 But a sanction under sec 124A authorises a prosecution under sections 124A and 114 I P C —In re Subramania 32 Mad 3

So also it is not illegal to prosecute without a sanction a person for an offence for which no sanction is necessary thus where a person has committed an offence under sec 12 I P C and by the same act abetted the offence of dacoity the fact that the Government refused sanction for the former offence would be no bar to his prosecution for the minor offence of abetting dacoity for which no sanction is necessary—Q E v Anant Puranik 25 Bom 90

Prosecution for certain classes of criminal conspiracy

(1) in a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit either an illegal act other than an offence, or a legal act by illegal means, or an offence to which the provisions of Section 196 apply unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from, the Governor General in Council, the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor General in Council in this behalf, or

(2) in a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit any non cognizable offence, or a

cognizable offence not punishable with death, transportation or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, unless the Local Government, or a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate empowered in this behalf by the Local Government has, by order in writing, consented to the initiation of the proceedings

Provided that where the criminal conspiracy is one to which the provisions of sub section (4) of Section 195 apply, no such consent shall be necessary

640 Scope —This section applies only to a prosecution for conspiracy punishable under section 120B of the Penal Code and not for abetment by conspiracy punishable under section 109 of that Code—Abdul Salim v Emp 49 Cal 573 Abdul Rahman v Emp 3 Rang 95 26 Cr L J 1329

Initiating a prosecution under section 120B I P C without the sanction of the authority referred to in section 196A Cr P Code is ab initio illegal and the subsequent addition of charges which do not require such sanction does not cure the illegality nor are the proceedings relating to such additional charges legal—Abdul Rahman v Emp 3 Rang 95

The proviso lays down that a sanction under this section for prosecution for criminal conspiracy to commit a non cognizable offence (e g fraudulently using as genuine a forged document or dishonestly making a false claim) is not necessary where the Court before which the forged document was used or false claim was made makes a complaint in respect of the offence under sub section (4) of section 195—Kali Singh v Emp, 50 Cal 461 A I R 1924 Cal 53 24 Cr L J 949

If the object of the conspiracy is to commit forgery there can be no prosecution for such a criminal conspiracy without the sanction of the Local Government under sec 196A Where however the main charge is that of cheating in which it is not necessary at all to mention forgery as the object of the conspiracy (the forgery being committed not for its own sake but in order to cheat a person and obtain money from him in a way in which if he had known the fact he would not have parted with the money) the entire charge does not fail in consequence of the elimination of the head of forgery as an object of the conspiracy charged Where the trial starts for an object of the conspiracy which is beyond the cognizance of the Court and other objects of the conspiracy are within the cognizance of the Court the omission of one head which is beyond the cognizance of the Court cannot affect the jurisdiction as regards the rest of the charge The matter would be different if commitment is made on a charge of committing criminal conspiracy for the purpose of forging documents and subsequently on discovering that such a charge requires sanction another object that of cheating is substituted—Bishambhar Nath v Emp 2 O W N 760 26 Cr L J 1602 (1604 1606) If cheating is an offence mentioned in this section cannot be delegated by the Local Government to any other body of persons, and if the Magistrate is allowed to prosecute a person for an offence referred to in this section when such offence was not specifically mentioned in the sanction, it means a delegation of power to the Magistrate which cannot be sustained In the words of Jenkins C. J ' It would be opposed to the true intendment of sec 196 for the Local Government by its order to give its legal or other advisers a roving power to determine under what sections of the Chapter proceedings should be taken, and to abandon to them the discretion and responsibility that properly belongs to itself '—Barindra v Emp, 37 Cal 467 (490) 14 C W N 1114, 11 Cr L J 453 Where sanction is granted by the Local Government for the prosecution of certain persons for an offence in respect of an act which is precisely defined in the order granting the sanction the order cannot be treated as an authority for a prosecution in respect of an offence which is absolutely distinct and is alleged to have been committed on an occasion different for that specified in the order—U Pathada v Emp, 3 Bur L J 178, 26 Cr L J 245 So also, where the Local Government gave sanction to prosecute a person for an offence under sec. 121 I P Code, the Court has no power to charge and convict him for an offence under section 124A I P Code—U Nyan v Emp, 4 Rang 131 27 Cr L J 1075 But a sanction under sec 124A authorises a prosecution under sections 124A and 114 I P C—In re Subramania, 32 Mad 3

So also it is not illegal to prosecute without a sanction a person for an offence for which no sanction is necessary thus where a person has committed an offence under sec 122 I P C and by the same act abetted the offence of dacoity, the fact that the Government refused sanction for the former offence would be no bar to his prosecution for the minor offence of abetting dacoity for which no sanction is necessary—Q E v. Anant Puranik 25 Bom. 90

196-A. No Court shall take cognizance of the offence of criminal conspiracy punishable under Section 120B of the Indian Penal Code—

(1) in a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit either an illegal act other than an offence, or a legal act by illegal means, or an offence to which the provisions of Section 196 apply unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from, the Governor-General in Council, the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor-General in Council in this behalf, or

(2) in a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit any non-cognizable offence, or a

cognizable offence not punishable with death, transportation or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, unless the Local Government, or a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate empowered in this behalf by the Local Government has, by order in writing, consented to the initiation of the proceedings.

Provided that where the criminal conspiracy is one to which the provisions of sub section (4) of Section 195 apply, no such consent shall be necessary.

640. Scope —This section applies only to a prosecution for conspiracy punishable under section 120B of the Penal Code, and not for abetment by conspiracy punishable under section 109 of that Code—Abdul Salim v Emp, 49 Cal 573, Abdul Rahiman v Emp., 3 Rang 95, 26 Cr. L J 1329

Initiating a prosecution under section 120B I P C without the sanction of the authority referred to in section 196A Cr P Code is ab initio illegal, and the subsequent addition of charges which do not require such sanction does not cure the illegality, nor are the proceedings relating to such additional charges legal—Abdul Rahiman v. Emp, 3 Rang 95.

The proviso lays down that a sanction under this section for prosecution for criminal conspiracy to commit a non cognizable offence (e g. fraudulently using as genuine a forged document or dishonestly making a false claim) is not necessary where the Court before which the forged document was used or false claim was made makes a complaint in respect of the offence under sub section (4) of section 195—Kali Singh v Emp, 50 Cal 461, A I R 1924 Cal 53, 24 Cr L J 949

If the object of the conspiracy is to commit forgery, there can be no prosecution for such a criminal conspiracy without the sanction of the Local Government under sec 196A. Where, however, the main charge is that of cheating, in which it is not necessary at all to mention forgery as the object of the conspiracy (the forgery being committed not for its own sake but in order to cheat a person and obtain money from him in a way, in which, if he had known the fact, he would not have parted with the money), the entire charge does not fail in consequence of the elimination of the head of forgery as an object of the conspiracy charged. Where the trial starts for an object of the conspiracy, which is beyond the cognizance of the Court, and other objects of the conspiracy are within the cognizance of the Court, the omission of one head which is beyond the cognizance of the Court cannot affect the jurisdiction as regards the rest of the charge. The matter would be different, if commitment is made on a charge of committing criminal conspiracy for the purpose of forging documents, and subsequently on discovering that such a charge requires sanction, another object, that of cheating, is substituted—Bishambhar Nath v Emp, 2 O. W. N. 760, 26 Cr. L J 1602 (1604, 1606) If cheating is carried out by means of forgery it does not follow that the provisions of sec 196A would apply—Ibid

If the sanction is obtained after the arrest of the accused but before the examination of the witnesses and the framing of the charge the requirements of this section are complied with—Ali Mia v Emp 51 Cal 155 28 Cr. L J 466

196-B In the case of any offence in respect of which the provisions of Section 196 or Section 196 A apply, a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate may notwithstanding anything contained in those sections or in any other part of this Code, order a preliminary investigation by a police officer not being below the rank of Inspector, in which case such police officer shall have the powers referred to in Section 155 sub section (3)

Preliminary inquiry in certain cases

This section has been added by section 49 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

This new section is designed to meet the difficulty which arises from the fact that cases under sections 196 and 196A cannot be properly investigated by the Police before complaints are made Doubts have arisen as to whether investigation can be ordered under section 155 (2) by a Magistrate without his taking cognizance of the case The new section will provide for preliminary investigation We recognise that it does not altogether meet the case where the desirability of adding a new charge arises in the Sessions Court It has been suggested that this difficulty might be met to some extent by substituting the words proceed to the trial for the words take cognizance in sections 196 and 196A But on the whole we prefer not to make this change and to leave the sections unaltered —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

ernment having power to order his removal or of some officer empowered in this behalf by such Government or of some Court or other authority to which such Judge or public servant is subordinate, and whose power to give such sanction has not been limited by such Government offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty, no Court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction of the Local Government.

Power of Government as to prosecution

(2) Such Government may determine the person by whom, the manner in which, the offence or offences for which, the prosecution of such Judge, Magistrate or public servant is to be conducted, and may specify the Court before which the trial is to be held.

Change —The whole of sub section (1) has been re drafted by section 50 of the Crim Pro Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 ' It has been pointed out to us that difficulties with regard to section 197 have recently come to light There are certain public servants who are only removeable from office by the Secretary of State and it is unreasonable that they should obtain no protection under the section Further, in view of section 2 (2) of the Code, the word "Judge has to be interpreted according to the definition given in section 19 of the Indian Penal Code, with the result that Magistrates acting in certain capacities under the Code, e g, when holding inquiries, obtain no protection We have therefore, proposed a re-draft of sub section (1) of section 197 to meet these difficulties. We have confined the operation of the section to public servants removable by a Local Government or some higher authority and have provided that the sanction required for a prosecution will be the sanction of the Local Government '—Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

'While acting official duty —These words have been substituted for the words 'as such Judge or public servant occurring in the old section in order to amplify the words and to make the sense clear—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

640A. Object of section — The object of this section is to guard against vexatious proceedings against Judges, Magistrates and public servants, and to secure the opinion of superior authority whether it is desirable that there should be a prosecution —Woodroffe, (Crim Pro., p 229). But it is no part of British policy to set an official above the common law If he commits a common offence, he has no peculiar privilege. But if one of his official acts is alleged to be an offence, the [illegible] will not allow him to be prosecuted without its sanction, for the obvious reason that otherwise official action would be beset by private prosecution Judges would be charged with defamation policemen with wrongful restraint, and distrainers with theft This privilege of immunity from prosecution without sanction only extends to acts which can be shown to be in discharge of official duty or fairly purporting to be in such discharge—Kamisetty Raja Rao v Ramaswamy 50 Mad 754 52 M L J. 647 28 Cr. 641 Judge —In section 19 of the Indian Penal Code, the word Judge' has been thus defined —

The word Judge denotes not only every person who is officially designated as a Judge but also every person who is empowered by law to give, in any legal proceeding civil or criminal a definitive judgment or a judgment which, if not appealed against would be definitive, or a judgment which if confirmed by some other authority, would be definitive or who is one of a body of persons, which body of persons is empowered by law to give such judgment

643 "Not removable from his office —The words not removable from his office etc have reference only to the expression public servant' and not to Judge This is now made clear by the wording of the present section So the sanction of the Government is necessary for the prosecution of any Judge if a complaint is made against him as such Judge whether he is or is not removable from the office without the sanction of the Government—Anonymous 6 B H C R App 21

The Chairman of a Union Panchayet is a public servant not removable from his office without the sanction of the Local Government even though the power to remove him has been delegated by the Government to the President of the District Board The delegation of the power of removal means only that the Local Government itself performs that act through the medium of a particular officer (President of the District Board) as the channel through which it is done It is an ordinary case of qui facit per alium facit per se—In re Abdul Kadir 1916 M W N 384 17 Cr L J 168 But the Allahabad High Court is of opinion that where the Local Government has delegated the power of removal of a public servant to some other authority as for instance where the Government by a notification has delegated to the Excise Commissioner the power to suspend remove or dismiss any Excise Inspector, held that the sanction of the Local Government is not necessary for the prosecution of an Excise Inspector—Jalaluddin v. Emp., 48 All. 264, 24 A. L J. 230, 27 Cr. L. J. 345 (dissenting from In re Abdul Kadir, supra). In a Lahore case, it has been held that where the accused, a public servant (viz. a Zilladar) was appointed at a time when the powers of appointment and removal of a Zilladar were vested in the Local Government alone, and subsequently the Local Government delegated the power of appointment, suspension and removal of the Zilladars to the Chief Engineer, held that the prosecution of the Zilladar instituted without the sanction of the Local Government but with the sanction of the Chief Engineer, was illegal The sanction of the Local Government was necessary under section 197—Crown v. Lala Khan Chand, 24 Cr L J 411, A I R 1922 Lah 337.

644. "Acting in the discharge of official duty" —These words have been substituted for the words "as such Judge or public servant" occurring in the old section, and from a comparison of the old and the new sections it seems that the language of the present section has been made simpler Under the Code of 1872, the language used in the section (466) was "committed in his capacity of a public servant" i e, the section applied only to those acts which could have no special significance except as acts done by a public servant—Imp. v Lakshman, 2 Bom 481 It applied only to those offences committed by a public servant which were peculiar to his position as a public servant (per Pontifex J.), the section was intended to apply to those cases in which the offence charged was an offence which could be committed by a public servant only i. e., those cases in which the fact of his being a public servant was a necessary element in the offence (per Field J)—Sreemanta Challerjee, (unreported case of the Calcutta High Court, 9-12 1881) cited in 26 Cal 852 at p 860 Under the Codes of 1882 and 1898, the language of the section was "as such Judge or public servant" and it indicated that the offence charged must involve as one of its elements that it was committed by a person filling that character, and therefore where a Magistrate used insulting and defamatory language towards a pleader in the course of a trial, no sanction was held to be necessary for the prosecution of the Magistrate, as the position of his being a Magistrate was not a necessary element in the offence of defamation—Nando Lal Basak v Mitter, 26 Cal 852 followed in Emp. v Ghulam Kader Khan, 13 C. P. L R. 126. Where a Judge or Magistrate or public servant commits an offence which could be committed by anybody and which entails consequences neither in the way of penalty nor anything else in the least different from what it would entail if committed by anybody else, sanction is not required under this section for his prosecution. Therefore, where the Chairman of a Union Panchayet was prosecuted for the offence of criminal breach of trust in respect of Union funds, held that the offence was not one which was committed by him in his capacity of a public servant, to necessitate a previous sanction under this section—In re Abdul Kadir, 1916 M. W. N. 384, 17 Cr. L J. 168. Where a Magistrate used abusive language towards another Magistrate while both of them were trying a case as members of a Bench it was held that no sanction was necessary to prosecute the former, because the offence was not committed as Magistrate, i e, the fact of his being a Magistrate was not a necessary element of the offence—In re Harlekar, 2 Bom L R 1079 So also, where the superintendent of the Gun Carriage Factory in Madras caused timber to be brought within the city of Madras without a license as required by section 341 of the Madras Act I of 1884 (City of Madras Municipal Act), held that no sanction was necessary to prosecute him as the offence was not one which could be committed by a public servant only, nor did it involve as one of its elements that it had been committed by a public servant—Municipal Commissioners v Major Bell, 25 Mad. 15. Where a Union Chairman, while removing an obstruction to a public thoroughfare caused by the complainant, used insulting and abusive language towards the latter, no sanction was held to be necessary for the prosecution of the Chairman, as it could not be said to be a part of the functions of a Union Chairman to use abusive language in a public street—In re Abdul Rahiman, 4 L W 556 17 Cr L J 462 A Magistrate or a judicial officer who was holding a trial could not be said to be acting in a judicial capacity, if he abused or defamed a witness or a legal practitioner appearing before him—Baishnab Charan v Sukhomoy 25 C W N 957, 22 Cr L J. 585

These cases though correctly decided under the old Codes, would be of no authority now, as the language of the present section materially differs from the language of the old law Under the present section it will not be necessary to decide whether the fact of the accused being a Judge or a public servant was a necessary element in the offence or whether the offence was one which could not have been equally committed by a private person These nice questions would no longer arise, if it is found that the Judge Magistrate or public servant has committed an act at a time when he was doing an official duty, this will be sufficient to attract the provisions of this section In other words the Legislature has now given a greater protection to the officers concerned than it did under the old section This is also the view of Sir Woodroffe (Criminal Procedure p 229) But the Madras High Court has recently held that the expression ' offence alleged to have been committed while acting in the discharge of his official duty does not mean any offence committed by him while he is in office the acting refers to the specific action which comprises the offence An offence arising out of abuse of official position by an act not purporting to be official does not necessitate sanction under sec 197 And so a complaint against the Chairman of Municipal Council of having threatened a voter with injury to his property with intent to induce such voter to vote for any candidate or to abstain from voting is not one in respect of which sanction is necessary under section 197, in as much as the act complained of is not committed in the discharge of his official duty, although the incident of his official position might have given him the opportunity to do it—Kamisetty Rama Rao v.

by a notification [illegible] delegated to the Excise Commissioner the power to suspend, remove or dismiss any Excise Inspector, held that the sanction of the Local Government is not necessary for the prosecution of an Excise Inspector.—[illegible] v. [illegible] [illegible] (dissenting from [illegible] Khan [illegible]). In a Lahore case it has been held that where the accused, a public servant, was a Ziladar, was appointed at a time when the powers of appointment and removal of a Ziladar were vested in the Local Government alone, and subsequently the Local Government delegated the power of appointment, suspension and removal to the [illegible] of the Chief Engineer, held that the prosecution of the Ziladar instituted without the sanction of the Local Government and with the sanction of the Chief Engineer was illegal. The sanction of the Local Government was necessary under section [illegible] — [illegible] Khan [illegible] [illegible] L. J. [illegible] [illegible] Lah. [illegible]

[illegible] "Acting in the discharge of official duty".—These words have been substituted for the words "as such Judge or public servant" occurring in the old section, and from a comparison of the old and the new sections it seems that the language of the present section has been made simpler. Under the Code of [illegible], the language used in the section [illegible] was "committed in his capacity of a public servant" i.e., the section applied only to those acts which could have no such [illegible] except as acts done by a public servant—[illegible] v. [illegible] [illegible] Bom. [illegible] [illegible] applied only to those offences committed by a public servant which were peculiar to his position as a public servant. [illegible] the section was intended to apply to those cases in which the offence charged was an offence which could be committed by a public servant only, i.e. those cases in which the fact of his being a public servant was a necessary element of the offence [illegible]—[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the Calcutta High Court [illegible] [illegible] Cal. [illegible]. Under the Codes of [illegible] and [illegible], the language of the section was "as such Judge or public servant" and it indicated that the offence charged must involve as one of its elements that it was committed by a person filling that character, and therefore where a Magistrate used insulting and defamatory language towards a pleader in the course of a trial, no sanction was held to be necessary for the prosecution of the Magistrate, as the position of his being a Magistrate was not a necessary [illegible] of the offence of defamation—[illegible] [illegible] v. [illegible] [illegible], followed in [illegible] v. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] C. P. L. R. [illegible]. Where a Judge or Magistrate or public servant commits an offence which [illegible] be committed by anybody and which entails consequences neither in the way of penalty nor anything else in the least different from what it would entail if committed by anybody else, sanction is not required under this section for his prosecution. Therefore, where the Chairman of a [illegible] [illegible] was prosecuted for the offence of criminal breach of trust in respect of Union funds, held that the offence was not one which was committed by him in his capacity of a public servant, so as to necessitate a previous sanction under this section—[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] W. [illegible] [illegible] Cr. L. J. [illegible]. Where a Magistrate used

abusive language towards another Magistrate while both of them were trying a case as members of a Bench, it was held that no sanction was necessary to prosecute the former, because the offence was not committed as Magistrate, i e, the fact of his being a Magistrate was not a necessary element of the offence—In re Harlekar, 2 Bom L R 1079 So also, where the superintendent of the Gun Carriage Factory in Madras caused timber to be brought within the city of Madras without a license as required by section 341 of the Madras Act I of 1884 (City of Madras Municipal Act), held that no sanction was necessary to prosecute him as the offence was not one which could be committed by a public servant only, nor did it involve as one of its elements that it had been committed by a public servant—Municipal Commissioners v Major Bell, 25 Mad 15 Where a Union Chairman, while removing an obstruction to a public thoroughfare caused by the complainant, used insulting and abusive language towards the latter, no sanction was held to be necessary for the prosecution of the Chairman, as it could not be said to be a part of the functions of a Union Chairman to use abusive language in a public street —In re Abdul Rahiman, 4 L W 556 17 Cr L J 462 A Magistrate or a judicial officer who was holding a trial could not be said to be acting in a judicial capacity, if he abused or defamed a witness or a legal practitioner appearing before him—Baishnab Charan v Sukhomoy, 25 C W N 957, 22 Cr L J, 585

These cases though correctly decided under the old Codes, would be of no authority now, as the language of the present section materially differs from the language of the old law Under the present section it will not be necessary to decide whether the fact of the accused being a Judge or a public servant was a necessary element in the offence or whether the offence was one which could not have been equally committed by a private person These nice questions would no longer arise, if it is found that the Judge Magistrate or public servant has committed an act at a time when he was doing an official duty, this will be sufficient to attract the provisions of this section In other words the Legislature has now given a greater protection to the officers concerned than it did under the old section This is also the view of Sir Woodroffe (Criminal Procedure p 229) But the Madras High Court has recently held that the expression offence alleged to have been committed while acting in the discharge of his official duty does not mean any offence committed by him while he is in office, the acting refers to the specific action which comprises the offence An offence arising out of abuse of official position by an act not purporting to be official does not necessitate sanction under sec 197 And so a complaint against the Chairman of Municipal Council of having threatened a voter with injury to his property with intent to induce such voter to vote for any candidate or to abstain from voting, is not one in respect of which sanction is necessary under section 197, in as much as the act complained of is not committed in the discharge of his official duty, although the incident of his official position might have given him the opportunity to do it—Kamisetty Rama Rao v.

Ramaswamy 50 Mad 754 52 M L J 647 28 Cr L J 539 (following 25 Mad 15 and 1916 M W N 384 cited above)

Where a village Magistrate uses his authority and position as a public servant to constrain a person to give a bribe sanction is necessary for his prosecution—In re Mangapathi Naidu 2 Weir 221 Where a Judge used defamatory language to a witness during the trial of a suit a complaint against the Judge could not be entertained without a sanction under this section as the Judge was then acting in his official capacity—In re Ghulam Muhammad 9 Mad 439 Where the Administrator General of Bengal was appointed administrator to the estate of a deceased person and was charged with an offence under the Calcutta Municipal Act for not removing the privy on certain premises belonging to that estate it was held that although the person charged with the offence held the office of the Administrator General still it was a mere accident and that the actual capacity in which he was charged was his capacity as administrator to the estate of a private person The offence was therefore committed in his private capacity as administrator to the estate and not in his public capacity as Administrator General and no sanction was necessary for his prosecution—Corporation of Calcutta v Administrator General of Bengal 30 Cal 977 If a Magistrate or a Judicial officer in order to examine a witness detains him until the time of his re examination comes or until he makes inquiries as to the failure of the witness to appear before him his acts are purely judicial and if any offence is committed by the Magistrate exceeding his powers in doing those acts it is necessary that there should be a sanction for his prosecution—Baishnab Charan v Sukhomoy 25 C W N 957 22 Cr L J 585 These cases though decided under the old law would still hold good

In an officer conducting an auction sale himself purchases a thing in the name of his servant for his own benefit it is an act done by him in the discharge of his official duty—K E v Krishna Kant 28 O C 153 26 Cr L J 1157 Where the President of a Municipal Committee received brokerage or commission on goods ordered by the Municipality held that he could not be prosecuted for that offence without the sanction of the Local Government as he was acting in the discharge of his duty as public servant—Emp v U Maung Gale 4 Rang 128 27 Cr L J 1088

Where a village Magistrate prepared a false record (in order to provide evidence for use in future) to the effect that a certain person was convicted of theft and sentenced by him to detention for 2 hours where as a matter of fact such person was never convicted or sentenced for any such offence and that person thereupon made a complaint for the prosecution of the village Magistrate for making the false record it was held that as the village Magistrate was not bound to make a record he was not acting as a Judge when he made a record the act was merely purported to be done by him as Judge and no sanction was therefore necessary—Palamandy v Arunachellam 32 Mad 255 But the case would now fall under the present section by reason of the words purporting to act occurring in the section These words would include not only the cases where the official has jurisdiction to take cognizance of a matter and in professedly exercising that jurisdiction commits an offence or acts ultra vires, but also cases where the initial jurisdiction is wanting and a jurisdiction is assumed by an official who in such assumed capacity acts to the prejudice of a person See Subbia Pillai v Emp, 1920 M. W. N. 7, 21 Cr. L J 223, in which the correct view of the law was taken, though it was decided under the old section

645. "Taking cognizance" —This section prohibits taking cognizance of an offence committed by the Judge or public servant in his public capacity, without a sanction But the preliminary examination of the complaint is not such cognizance as is meant by this section, and therefore such examination is not invalid in the absence of sanction. Indeed it is often necessary to examine the complainant before his complaint can be understood, and the complaint must be understood before sanction can be given—Narayanasami Petitioner, 7 M H C R 182 (187); Satya Charan v Chairman, 3 C W. N 17 The question as to whether section 197 applies to a complaint against a public servant must be postponed till after the examination of the complainant—Satya Charan v. Chairman, Uttarpara Municipality, 3 C W N 17 (18) But summoning the accused or taking any evidence against him amounts to taking cognizance, and this should not be done until the necessary sanction has been obtained—Reg v Parshram, 7 B H C R 61.

646. Sanction—Who can give sanction —Under the previous law (i e before the Amendment of 1923), sanction could be given by the Government or by the officers empowered by the Local Government, or by the Court or the authority to which the Judge or public servant was subordinate Thus, sanction for the prosecution of a Kulkarni could be given by the Mamlatdar or the Patel, to whom such Kulkarni was subordinate, and not necessarily by the Collector—Reg v Mathar, 7 B H C R 64 Sanction to prosecute a first grade overseer could be given by the Executive Engineer—Reg v Narayan Ramchandra, Ratanlal 32 Sanction for prosecution of a Tahsildar could be given by the District Magistrate—Indar Singh v Crown, 1919 P R 4 The Inspector General of Registration could grant sanction for prosecution of Registrars and Sub-Registrars—9 Mad Jur 1 The President of the Taluk Board could give sanction for the prosecution of the Chairman of a Union Panchayet—In re Abdul Kadir, 1916 M W N 384, 17 Cr L J 168 These cases are no longer of any authority Under the present law, sanction can be given only by the Local Government Under the old law the Local Government could empower an officer (e g the District Magistrate or Additional District Magistrate), to give sanction under this section Under the present law, the sanction can be given by the Local Government alone and not by any such officer

Sanction cannot be delegated —The authority empowered to grant sanction cannot delegate to another the task of determining which offence the sanction should relate to Thus, an order passed by the Board of Revenue sanctioning the prosecution of a Deputy Tahsildar for 'bribery or other charges as the District Magistrate thinks likely to stand inv

gation by a Criminal Court was held to be invalid because the order ought to have specified what other offences the accused should be charged with, and to leave this matter to the District Magistrate means a delegation of power not intended by the Legislature—Q E. v Sataner, 16 Mad 468 See also Reg v Vinayak, 8 B H C R 32 cited in Note 648 below But where the order granted sanction for an 'offence under section 161 I P C or any other section of the Code that may be found applicable with respect to the offence briefly described in the schedules hereto annexed' it was held that the order was no delegation because the order granting sanction had specified the acts committed by the accused, and had also specified the offence and the section of the I P C and it merely left it open to the Court to convict the accused under any other section if in the opinion of the Court some other section of the I P C. was more relevant than section 161—Girdhari Lal v Emp, 1911 P R 11

Sanction for abetment —Where a sanction has been granted to prosecute a person for a substantive offence no fresh sanction is necessary to prosecute him for abetting that offence when the conviction for abetment is based on the same facts as those on which the charge for the substantive offence is founded—Profulla v Emp, 30 Cal 905

Form of sanction —The Code does not prescribe any particular form of sanction under this section—In re Kalagaia, 27 Mad. 54 A letter addressed to the Magistrate is a sufficient sanction—Reg v Narayan Ramchandra, Ratanlal 32, Profulla v Emp, 30 Cal 905 Non specification of the place in which and the occasion on which the offence was committed does not affect the validity of the sanction—In re Kalaga a 27 Mad 54 The order granting sanction need not specify the offence with the same precision as is necessary in a charge—Girdhardhari Lal v K E, 13 C W N 1062 Emp v Jehangir, 29 Bom L R 996 Thus where the Kulkarni and the Patel of a village were charged with cheating in as much as they conspired to levy extra amounts of money from three persons who came to pay the land assessment and the sanction was given for prosecution for cheating or for such other offence with which it may be necessary to prosecute them in connection with obtaining money from the ryots it was held that the sanction was not invalid for vagueness in as much as it had sufficiently designated the offence or offences which might be established in connection with obtaining money from ryots—Emp v Madhav 43 Bom 147, 20 Bom L R 607, 20 Cr L J 71 Where throughout the question is only of a single offence which is otherwise properly described and specified the sanction is not bad merely because a mistake has been committed in specifying the date of the offence by one day (e g where the sanction stated the offence to have been committed on 29th February whereas the correct day was 1st March)—Emp v Jehangir Cama 29 Bom L R 996 A I R 1927 Bom 501 Had there been two offences committed on the two dates 29th February and March 1, the case might have been different—Ibid

Since the action of the sanctioning authority is more of the nature of executive than of judicial action, the sanction need not state any

reasons—Chinna Chendrayya v Subbarayudu, 1923 M W. N 77, 24 Cr L. J 116

Notice to accused —A sanction under this section is not void for want of notice to the accused to show cause why it should not be given The giving of such opportunity is entirely at the discretion of the Government, and the Criminal Court before which he is prosecuted is not an appellate authority over the Government in the matter of sanction—In re Kalagava 27 Mad 54

Inquiry by Government before sanction —There is no provision of law empowering the Government or an officer of the Government to hold a judicial inquiry in order to ascertain whether or not he ought to grant sanction under this section and any inquiry which he may hold for this purpose is merely a departmental inquiry consequently no oath can be administered to any person examined in course of such inquiry, nor can any person be prosecuted for giving false evidence therein—Q E v Venkataramanna 23 Mad 223

The Government granting sanction under sections 196 and 197 acts purely in its executive and not judicial capacity and the sanction need not be based on legal evidence There is nothing in the significance of the word 'sanction to import a judicial element into the act of the executive—In re Kalagava 27 Mad 54

647. Want of sanction —The sanction required by this section must be obtained before any proceedings are taken Proceedings taken without sanction are illegal and without jurisdiction—Emp v Bhimaji 42 Bom 172 Q E v Morton 9 Bom 288 Even a sanction obtained subsequently will not validate the proceedings—Q E v Morton 9 Bom 288 Emp v Bhimaji 42 Bom 172 Where no sanction has been granted by the Local Government the Magistrate cannot proceed with the case merely relying on a Government Resolution and yielding to the wishes of the parties—Emp v Bhimaji, 42 Bom 172, 20 Bom L. R. 89 19 Cr. L J 342 But in an earlier Bombay case it has been held that if no objection to the absence of sanction is taken at the inquiry or trial, the proceedings will not be necessarily invalid for want of sanction. Where in a commitment without any previous sanction having been obtained under this section no objection was taken as to want of sanction, at the preliminary inquiry, the Sessions Judge can, in his discretion under section 532, accept the commitment and proceed with the trial—Q E v Morton, 9 Bom 288 But it is doubtful whether section 532 contemplates absence of sanction.

648 Sub-section (2 —Government's direction as to prosecution —The Local Government has power under this section to authorise some particular person to prefer charges against a public servant, and when it has limited the manner in which the prosecution is to be launched, the specification should be adhered to Thus, where in the resolution sanctioning the prosecution of a public servant for corrupt practices, the Government directed that a particular person should prefer the charges against the public servant the conviction on charges preferred by a person other than the one specified was illegal, a

the result would also be the same if the authorised person had delegated the function to some other person—Reg v Vinayak, 8 B H C R 32

Specification of Court:—The power given by section 197 (2) overrides the general rule contained in sec 177 that an offence shall be ordinarily tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed. Where the Local Government sanctioned the prosecution of a person who committed an offence in Upper Burma, and specified a Court in Lower Burma for the trial of such person, it was held that the Court in Lower Burma was competent to take cognizance of the offence and was wrong in holding that it had no power to receive the complaint—K E v Maung Ka, 4 L B R 265 This shows that the Local Government can specify any Court irrespective of local jurisdiction

Where the Local Government sanctioned the prosecution of a Sub-Judge and specified the Sessions Court of Tellicherry as the Court which should try the offence and appointed Mr Irvine as the officiating Sessions Judge, and subsequently by another order of Government Mr. Irvine was appointed as the Additional Sessions Judge and he tried the case, it was held that the trial was not invalid, for though Mr Irvine was appointed as the Additional Sessions Judge still his appointment did not constitute an Additional Sessions Court. His Court was still the Sessions Court of which he was an Additional Sessions Judge and since an Additional Sessions Judge is competent to try those cases which the Local Government may direct and since Mr Irvine was directed by the Local Government to try the case when he was first appointed as officiating Sessions Judge, he was competent to try the case—Q E v Kunjan, 1 M L J 397

Where the Local Government has specified a particular Court, such specification will supersede all power of transfer conferred on the High Court under sec. 526—Nando Lal v Miller, 26 Cal 852 (at p 862) See sub-section (7) of sec. 526

649 Revision —Under the old law, if an offence was committed by an Honorary Presidency Magistrate a sanction for his prosecution could be granted by the Chief Presidency Magistrate and the High Court had power under sec 15 of the Charter Act (though not under sec 439 of this Code) to interfere with an order granting or refusing sanction under sec 197.—Nando Lal v Miller, 26 Cal 852 But under the present law, the power of granting or refusing sanction lies only with the Local Government, and the High Court will have no power to interfere even under the Charter Act

Even under the old law, it was held in a Lahore case that the granting of sanction being an executive rather than a judicial act, the High Court had no power to interfere with the proceeding of a District Judge granting sanction for the prosecution of a Sub Judge—Ali Hussain Khan v Harcharan, 2 Lah 305, 1922 P L R 35, 23 Cr L J 113

Prosecution for breach of contract or defamation or offences against marriage

198. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence falling under Chapter XIX or Chapter XXI of the Indian Penal Code or under Sections 493 to 496

(both inclusive) of the same Code, except upon a complaint made by some person aggrieved by such offence

Provided that where the person so aggrieved is a woman who, according to the customs and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public, or where such person is under the age of eighteen years or is an idiot or lunatic or is from sickness or infirmity unable to make a complaint, some other person may, with the leave of the Court, make a complaint on his or her behalf

Chapter XIX (comprising sections 490 492) of the I P Code relates to criminal breach of contracts of service (Chapter XXI (comprising sections 499 502) relates to Defamation Sections 493 496 deal with offences relating to marriage

Change —The proviso has been added by section 51 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

650 Necessity of complaint —A Magistrate acts without jurisdiction if he takes cognizance of a charge of defamation without complaint So where a postcard written by the accused to the complainant, containing a defamatory matter was privately handed over by the latter to the Magistrate without a complaint held that the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction in starting a criminal prosecution thereupon—Abdulla v Clarke 1909 P W R 3 9 Cr L J 154

Magistrate s power to add or alter charge —When a complaint presented to the Magistrate contained only charges under sections 352 and 504 I P C but did not contain a charge under section 500 I P C (defamation) but that charge was subsequently added by the Magistrate on statements made by the complainant it was held that the Magistrate could not add the charge of defamation or take cognizance of it as there was no formal complaint in respect of it such as is required by this section—Q E v Deoki Nandan 10 All 39 So also the Magistrate cannot alter a charge under section 501 I P C to one under section 500 I P C when there was no formal complaint by the person aggrieved in respect of the latter offence—Crown v Ui a Shaikar 1889 P R 18

But a more liberal view has been taken in the cases noted below Thus in a Punjab case where a complaint was made to the Magistrate under sec 211 I P C that the accused had made a false charge against him (complainant) of poisoning his daughter in law with a view to injure his reputation but the Magistrate treated the case as one under sec 500 I P C and tried it so it was held that having regard to the substance of the complaint the Magistrate was competent to alter the complaint under sec 211 I P C to one under sec 500 I P C when in fact the complaint was preferred by the aggrieved person—Nur Aslam v Emp. 1884 P R 24 The principle is that a complaint need not state precisely the section of the Penal Code under which the accused shall be charged

[illegible] enough if the complaint [illegible] before the Magistrate [illegible] the facts which if proved would warrant a commitment under any of the sections referred to in this section—Emp. v. [illegible] 25 All [illegible] under any section of the Indian Penal Code but must contain a statement of the facts relied on as constituting the offence [illegible] for the Magistrate to determine on these facts what offence has prima facie been committed the nature of the charge will be determined by him. All that is necessary for him to see is that the [illegible] and the charge is within his competency, and that in the case of certain offences the complaint has been made by the proper person. Therefore though the complainant did not complain in so many words of having been defamed and did not mention section 500 I P Code still if it contained a statement of the facts constituting the offence and he asked the Court to take action for those sections or under any other section which the facts disclosed might justify the Magistrate was competent to frame a charge of defamation and to try the offence—Nazrat v. Emp., 6 Lah [illegible] A. I. R. [illegible] 5 Lah 631 Where the husband of a woman who had committed bigamy made a complaint to the Magistrate alleging facts seemed to constitute an offence under sec 498 I P C but in the subsequent inquiry it appeared that an offence under section 494 I P C was committed, it was held that the Court could take cognizance of the offence under section 494 I P C without a fresh complaint formally preferred under that section—Emp. v. Ali [illegible] All [illegible] In re Ujjal [illegible] C L R [illegible] This section is clearly designed to prevent Magistrates from inquiring on their own motion into a case connected with marriage unless the husband or other person authorised moves them to do so but when the case is once properly instituted before the Magistrate he can proceed in respect of any other offence proved or against any other person implicated—In re Ujjal [illegible] C L R 573

Power of Appellate Court to alter charge —An Appellate Court can under sec 423 alter a conviction under one section into one under another section and in doing so it is not bound by such restrictions as, for instance a complaint by the aggrieved person Thus it can convert a conviction under section 182 I P C into one under section 500 I P C notwithstanding that there was no complaint in respect of the latter offence by the aggrieved person as required by this section—Emp v Gur Narain 25 All 534

651 Abetment —A Magistrate taking cognizance of abetment of the offences mentioned in this section must be deemed to have taken cognizance of the substantive offences and therefore a complaint by the aggrieved person is a condition precedent to the taking cognizance of the abetment—Jitmal v Emp 1888 P R 4 But the Allahabad High Court holds that sec 198 does not apply to a charge of abetment of the offences mentioned therein Section 195 provides in express terms that a complaint is needed for a prosecution for the abetment of the offences mentioned therein or for an attempt to commit them. No such provision is contained in section 198 and it cannot be therefore said that the charge of abetment of the offences referred to therein is excluded from cognizance without a complaint by the person aggrieved by such abetment—Munir v K E 24 A L J 155 27 Cr L J 101

652 Person aggrieved —The general rule is that a complaint may be made by any body whether he be an aggrieved person or not But sec 198 modifies the general rule by providing that the offence of defamation etc should not be taken cognizance of by any Court except upon a complaint made by the person aggrieved by the defamation—Naurati v Emp 6 Lah 375 A I R 1925 Lah 631

Defamation —The question as to whether the complainant is the person aggrieved by the offence alleged within the meaning of this section is to be determined by the nature of the offence and the special circumstances of each case—Daem Sardar v Baiti Dhali 3 C L J 38 In the case of a married woman it was held in an earlier Punjab case that since under sec 499 I P C the reputation to be harmed must be the reputation of the very person concerning whom the imputation is made a husband could not be considered to have been harmed in his reputation by a defamatory statement concerning his wife—Daood v Emp 1884 P R 22 But the other High Courts are of opinion that the reputation of the husband is so intimately connected with that of his wife that it would be unreasonable to hold that the defamation of his wife (e g imputation of unchastity) would ordinarily be not as hurtful to his feelings as it is to those of his wife Therefore the husband is undoubtedly a person aggrieved by the defamation of his wife—Chellam v Ramasami 14 Mad 379 Chotalal v Nathabai 15 Bom 151 (F B) Emp v Lachman 1882 P R 20 Anantha v K E 15 M L J 274 Appanna v Alkanna 27 M L J 746 26 Cr L J 521 Girdit Singh v Crown 5 Lah 301 25 Cr L J 342 Sessions Judge Godavari 2 Weir 231 If however the husband is a lunatic and the woman is living in the house and under the protection of her father in law any allegation against the daughter in law seriously affects the reputation and status in society of the father in law and he is a person aggrieved within the meaning of this section and is competent to institute a complaint—Daem Sardar v Baiti Dhali 3 C L J 38 (This is now expressly provided by the recent amendment) Where a Hindu lady is living with her father brother or son she is a member of that family and her reputation is bound up with the reputation of the person in whose house and under whose charge she is living and any imputation as to her character will affect as much the relative with whom she is living as herself Therefore the brother of a Hindu widow with whom she has been living is an aggrieved person in respect of an imputation of unchastity made against the woman—Thakur Das v Adhar Chandra 32 Cal 425 In Masuria Din v Jagannath 1893 A W N 207, however it has been held that the son is not an aggrieved person in respect of a defamation of his mother In a Bombay case also it was held that only the female herself and not a male relative of hers could make a complaint for defamation under this section—Ratanlal 327 But under the proviso newly added by the Amendment Act of 1923 any friend or relative of the female will now be able to make the complaint with the leave of the Court

Where certain allegations made in a newspaper against A and certain others were true as regards A but untrue as regards the others it was held that A was not the person aggrieved by the publication of the allegations—Subraya v Kader Rowthen, 1914 M W N 351 15 Cr L J 357

The complaint in respect of defamation must be made by the person aggrieved and cannot be preferred by his official superior Thus where a police officer has been defamed a complaint by his official superior on the ground that the good name of the police force has been attacked cannot be entertained—Gaya v K E 26 O C 44 23 Cr L J 641 Where a newspaper published statements which were alleged to be defamatory of specific acts of negligence on the part of the Health Officer and his subordinates it was held that the President of the Municipality was not a person aggrieved within the meaning of this section merely because he had a control over those officers and that by the imputation made against his subordinates his own conduct and administration had not been impugned—Beauchamp v Moore 26 Mad 43

The words person aggrieved in case of defamation must be treated as equivalent to person injured the object of the section being to limit the right of complaint to the person who suffered injury Therefore the founder of a monastery is incapable of making a complaint in respect of a defamatory statement affecting the moral character of a certain Pongyi who presided over the monastery—Nga Shun v Emp 1 Bur S R 617

Death of complainant in defamation —The death of the complainant during the course of the criminal proceedings for defamation necessarily terminates those proceedings—Ishar Das v K E 1908 P R 10

Person aggrieved by bigamy —In the case of an offence of bigamy committed by the wife the husband is the only person aggrieved by such offence and he alone can make the complaint The father of the husband is not the person aggrieved —K E v Lala 32 All 78 so also the brother of the husband is not the person aggrieved—Emp v Imtiazan 25 All 132 Q E v Bai Rukshmoni 10 Bom 340 Hanuman v K E 11 O C 148 7 Cr L J 457

Prior to the present amendment it was held that if the husband of the girl who committed bigamy was a minor his mother was not competent to make a complaint as she was not the person aggrieved—In re Sessions Judge, 2 Weir 231 it was also held that if the husband was a lunatic, his brother could not make a complaint on his behalf—Dy Leg Remr v Sarna 26 Cal 336 These two cases are now rendered obsolete by the proviso newly added in this section

Prosecution for adultery or enticing a married woman

199. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence under Section 497 or Section 498 of the Indian Penal Code except upon a complaint made by the husband of the woman, or in his absence, made with the leave of the Court by some person who had care of such woman on his behalf at the time when such offence was committed ;

Provided that, where such husband is under the age of eighteen years or is an idiot or lunatic, or is from sickness or infirmity unable to make a complaint, some other person may, with the leave of the Court, make a complaint on his behalf

Section 497 I P C —Adultery Section 498—Enticing or taking away or detaining with criminal intent a married woman

Change —The italicised words have been added by section 52 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923

Object of section —The restriction imposed in this section (empowering only the husband or the guardian to make the complaint) is not to afford immunity or protection to the offender, but to prevent a person unconnected with the woman from giving publicity to a matter which neither the husband nor the guardian is willing to agitate—In re Rathna Padayachi 17 Cr L J 363 (Mad)

653. Scope of section —The only offences referred to in this section are offences under secs 497 and 498 I P C but a charge of house trespass with intent to commit adultery is not contemplated by this section, and such an offence may be inquired into without complaint by the husband of the woman concerned although a prosecution for the offence of adultery must be instituted by the husband alone—Anonymous, 1 Weir 531 Where the complaint charged the accused with house trespass with intent to commit theft but it appeared that he committed house trespass with intent to commit adultery with the complainant s wife, he could be convicted of the latter offence although the complaint had not made a formal complaint for that offence—Q E v Kangla 23 All 82 Emp v Dhauntua Lodhi 19 Cr L J 881 So also where the accused admitted that he had entered the house at night for the purpose of carrying on an intrigue with the complainant s wife but the complainant refused to charge the accused with having entered the house with intent to commit the offence of adultery but founded his complaint solely on the entry having been with intent to commit theft, which was found to be false it was held that the Magistrate had the power to convict the accused of house trespass with intent to commit adultery even though the husband refused to make that charge—Anonymous 5 M H C R App 5 1 Weir 532 But the Magistrate in this case dismissed the charge as the husband refused to lay that complaint

But in another Allahabad case where the complainant charged the accused with house trespass with intent to commit theft but the accused stated that he had gone there to have sexual intercourse with a woman, and the accused was convicted for house trespass with intent to commit adultery, held that the conviction was injudicious, in the absence of a complaint by the husband of the woman—Emp. v Harcharan, 1886 A W N 42

654 Complaint —The complaint referred to in this section means a complaint as defined in sec 4 (h) A Magistrate is not competent to entertain a case under sec. 498 I P C. on the report of a police officer and in the absence of a complaint by the husband or guardian of the woman alleged to have been enticed away by the accused—Bhana v Crown 1910 P R 32 Information lodged by the complainant before the police is not a complaint sufficient to warrant a conviction under secs 497 and 498 I P C—Taru Prosad v Emp 30 Cal 910 Emp v Khushal Singh 17 C P L R 103 In re Chidambara 2 Weir 235 Arumuga v Gangabai 43 M L J 564 23 Cr L J 592 But where on a charge under sec 366 I P C the Police took up the proceeding in which the husband appeared as a witness and he asked the Magistrate to drop the proceeding thereunder but said that he intended to prosecute the accused under sec 498 I P C and to get him punished it was held that there was a complaint in as much as he made an allegation before the Magistrate that the offence should be inquired into—Bhawani v Emp 38 All 276 14 A L J 232 17 Cr L J 0

If the husband brings a complaint of any other offence and from certain statements in his deposition it appears that an offence mentioned in this section has been committed no conviction for the latter offence can be sustained because the husband has not made a formal complaint of that offence Thus where the husband preferred against the accused a complaint of rape on his wife but not of adultery and certain statements in his deposition disclosed an offence of adultery a conviction for the latter offence was illegal in as much the husband had not preferred a formal complaint of adultery even the circumstance of the husband appearing as a witness in the case could not be regarded as amounting to the institution of a complaint for adultery—Emp v Kali 5 All 233 Chema v Emp 29 Cal 415 Rahmat Ula v Emp 1883 P R 10 Similarly where the accused was charged with offences under secs 366 and 379 I P C but from statements in the deposition of the husband of the woman concerned an offence under sec 498 I P C was made out and the Judge convicted him of that offence it was held that the conviction was illegal in the absence of a formal complaint by the husband in respect of that offence and the statements made by the husband in his deposition could not be said to be a complaint under sec 4 (h) of this Code—Emp v Imamkhan 14 Bom L R 141 13 Cr L J 287 Even the formal assent of the husband to a charge of adultery added at the end of his deposition would not probably be a formal compliance with this section—Q v Lucky Narain 24 W R 18 Where a husband charged the accused persons with theft and theft only they could not be convicted of an offence under sec 498 I P C as there was no complaint preferred by the husband under this section in respect of the latter offence—Roda Singh v Crown 1918 P R 2 19 Cr L J 300

But a contrary view has been taken in several cases Thus in Sheikh Mahomed Ratanlal 584 (585) it was held that the word complaint must be taken as including not only a written complaint but also the examination of the complainant at any rate prior to the issue of process there fore where the written complaint specifically mentioned section 497 I P C only but did not mention an offence under sec 498 I P C but the complainant s examination made out such an offence the Magistrate had jurisdiction to frame a charge under sec 498 I P C and to try such offence And in Jatra Sekh v Rea et 20 Cal 483 it was laid down that upon a complaint in respect of an offence under section 366 I P C a conviction under sec 498 I P C could stand even in the absence of a complaint by the husband if his evidence was such as to justify the conviction for the latter offence In a recent case the Madras High Court is also of opinion that for the purpose of ascertaining the complaint under this section the written complaint as well as the sworn statement may be read together—In r Ar nachala n 45 M L J 543 24 Cr L J 837

The complaint referred to in this section is a complaint of the specific offence mentioned in this section and not a complaint of any offence Where a person was charged with kidnapping or with abduction and the Judge convicted the accused on the evidence of an offence under sec 498 I P C held that the conviction was wrong as there was no specific complaint of an offence under sec 498 I P C —Bai guru Asari v Emp 27 Mad 61 Where the accused was charged only with the offence of kidnapping a minor girl and theft of jewels and there was no complaint that the accused s purpose was to have illicit intercourse with the girl the Magistrate could not take cognizance of an offence under sec 498 I P C —In re Ar inachalam 45 M L J 543 So also where a complaint was made of an offence under secs 494 and 498 I P C the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the accused for an offence under sec 497 I P C —Q E v Nalya Ratanlal 531 Emp v Bada 1881 A W N 112 Similarly a Magistrate cannot convict a person of an offence under sec 498 I P C when the complaint was for an offence under sec 497 I P C —Korap Ali v Hadi Molla 1 C W N cxvi A committing Magistrate cannot alter a charge of rape into one of adultery on the representation of the accused without any request on the part of the husband of the woman—Emp v Ram Baksh 188 A W N 165 Where a charge of rape brought against the accused was found untrue held that in the absence of a complaint by the husband the Court cannot on the same evidence take cognizance of the offence of adultery—Agu Po v K E U B R (1912) 4th Or 155 14 Cr L J 84 But a more liberal view has been taken in the following case of the Punjab Chief Court where it has been laid down that though the offence charged in the complaint made by the husband is one under section 3 1 I P Code still if the facts set forth in the complaint are sufficient to support a conviction under sec 498 I P C the Magistrate has jurisdiction to frame a charge under the latter section It is quite sufficient that the complaint shall state the true facts in his own language and it is for the Magistrate to apply the law to those facts If in the opinion of the Magistrate the offence disclosed falls under sec 498 I P Code the Magistrate is a liberty to proceed and frame a charge under that section provided the complaint satisfies the conditions of sec 199 Cr P Code whateve may have been the section of the I. P Code recited in the complaint—Piran Ditta v. Q E, 23 P R. 1895

It has also been laid down that the Court cannot add a charge of an offence referred to in this section without a formal complaint in respect of that charge by the person specified Where the accused was committed to the Sessions on charges under secs. 363 and 366 I P C., and at the conclusion of the evidence, to establish these charges the Sessions Court added a charge under sec 498 I P C and convicted the accused on all the three charges, it was held that the procedure adopted by the Sessions Judge was not regular, that the additional charge was prejudical to the accused and that the conviction under section 498 I P. C must be set aside—Emp v Isap Md, 31 Bom 218

655. Who can complain —The only person who can prefer a complaint of an offence referred to in this section is the husband of the woman The husband is entitled to make the complaint even though the marriage has been dissolved before the complaint, if the offence was committed before the marriage was dissolved—Dhanna Singh v Crown, 1922 P W R 16, 23 Cr L J 462

In the absence of the husband, the complaint may be made by any person having the care of the woman Thus, the mother of the husband, who was in charge of the wife during the absence of the husband, is competent to prefer a complaint of an offence under sec 498 I P. C against the person who abducts the wife—Mahub Ali v Emp, 24 Cr. L J. 780 (Lah) Where at the time of the offence the wife was left under the care of her father, the fact that the husband stands by will not prevent the father from preferring the complaint—In re Rathna, 17 Cr L J 363 (Mad.), Mir Alam v Emp, 5 Lah L J 183 23 Cr L J. 690 The absence must be from the place, and therefore where the complaint was preferred by the nephew of the husband when the latter was bed ridden with paralysis, it was held that the Court could not take cognizance of the offence—Crown v Tikiomal, 3 S L R 13 But this ruling is no longer correct in view of the words "sickness or infirmity" occurring in the proviso newly added

The complaint may be preferred by any person having the care of the woman, during the absence of the husband, even though the absence be temporary, e g for two days It may sometimes be absolutely necessary that when the husband is away, a complaint should be promptly filed, whether the absence be for two days or more, when there is a probability that unless prompt action is taken, the accused may entirely vanish with the woman that he has enticed, and it may not be possible to trace their whereabouts—Sahibrai v Emp, 27 Cr L J 414 (Sind)

The words "some person who had care of such woman" mean a person who had the care of a woman on her husband s behalf during the latter's absence and there need not be any express delegation of trust by the husband in favour of such person to enable him to lodge a complaint in his absence In such a case, the Court must grant leave to the complaint But it is not necessary that the Magistrate must expressly record that leave was granted to the complainant to proceed with the complaint Where the record shows that the deposition of the complainant was recorded before issuing process, and the Magistrate interrogated the complainant on that point, and he satisfied himself that in the absence of the husband the complainant was competent to file the proceedings held that the Magistrate substantially accorded leave to the complainant and the provisions of sec 199 were substantially complied with—Sahitrai v Emp 27 Cr L J 414 415 (Sind)

If the husband be a minor he can be represented by another in a prosecution for adultery See the proviso (The contrary view taken in 2 Weir 235 will not longer stand as good law) Thus if the husband is a minor the complaint may be lodged by the husband s father but if at the time of the offence the minor husband was absent (i e not living with the wife under the same roof) and the wife was living with her maternal uncle then the only person who could make the complaint was the maternal uncle (as having charge of the woman on her husband s behalf) but not the husband s father—Wallia v Emp 23 Cr L J 613 (Lah)

The husband can even though he is a minor make the complaint, and there is nothing in law to prevent him from doing so—Wallia v Emp, 23 Cr L J 613 (Lah) Even the proviso newly enacted will not debar the minor husband himself from lodging the complaint, for the proviso is merely an enabling provision

656 Miscellaneous —Death of husband—effect —The law only requires that the prosecution on a charge of adultery should be instituted by the husband But it cannot be said that the death of the husband after institution of the prosecution but before trial necessarily puts an end to the prosecution although it is desirable that the charge should be withdrawn by the prosecution on the death of the aggrieved party —Anonymous 4 M H C R App 55 2 Weir 235 Imp v Nur Mahomed, 1 S L R 72

Where proceedings were dropped during the lifetime of the husband it is not open to any person after the husband s death to revive the proceedings—In re Rukmani 16 Cr L J 466 (Mad)

Withdrawal of case by husband —If the complainant withdraws the charge before commitment to the Sessions the Court can discharge the accused but a withdrawal after commitment will not have such effect because a commitment once made by a competent Magistrate can be quashed only by the High Court and only on a point of law—Emp v Jangbir 4 All 150

Acquittal for want of proper complaint—Fresh complaint —Where the brother of the husband of the woman instituted a complaint under sec 498 I P C alleging that he had authority from the husband to prefer the complaint but after taking evidence the Magistrate held that the complainant had no authority and acquitted the accused and subsequently the husband himself instituted the complaint it was held that the previous acquittal was no bar to a fresh trial—Umeruddin v Emp, 31 All 317, 6 A L J 262 Emp v Tikaram, 17 Bom. L R 678 16 Cr L J 657

199A Objection by lawful guardian to complaint by person other than person aggrieved

When in any case falling under Section 198 or Section 199, the person on whose behalf the complaint is sought to be made is under the age of eighteen years or is a lunatic, and the person applying for leave has not been appointed or declared by competent authority to be the guardian of the person of the said minor or lunatic, and the Court is satisfied that there is a guardian so appointed or declared, notice shall be given to such guardian and the Court shall, before granting the application, give him a reasonable opportunity of objecting to the granting thereof

This section has been added by sec 53 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 19 3

We have added a new section 199A in order to safeguard the rights of a legally appointed guardian —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

CHAPTER XVI

OF COMPLAINTS TO MAGISTRATES

It is most desirable that Magistrates should follow the procedure which is quite clearly laid down in this chapter dealing with complaints to Magistrates—Balai Lal v Pasupati 21 C W N 127

Magistrates should also be prompt in disposing of complaints under this chapter They have no right whatever to keep complaints instituted before them without passing orders for several months Such action is in the highest degree improper and shows w nt of proper understanding as to what their duties are—Salimullah v B rjhan 18 Cr L J 271 (All)

200 Examination of complainant

[* * *] A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence on complaint shall at once examine the complainant upon oath and the substance of the examination shall be reduced to writing and shall be signed by the complainant, and also by the Magistrate

Provided as follows —

(a) when the complaint is made in writing, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require a Magistrate to examine the complainant before transferring the case under Section 192

(aa) when the complaint is made in writing, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require the examination of a complainant in any case in which the complaint has been made by a Court or by a public servant acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties ,

(b) where the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate such examination may be on oath or not as the Magistrate in each case thinks fit and where the complaint is made in writing need not be reduced to writing , but the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit before the matter of the complaint is brought before him, require it to be reduced to writing ,

(c) when the case has been transferred under Section 192 and the Magistrate so transferring it has already examined the complainant, the Magistrate to whom it is so transferred shall not be bound to re examine the complainant

Change —This section has been amended by section 54 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The words subject to the provisions of section 476 which occurred at the very beginning of the old section have been omitted and proviso (aa) has been newly added We would add to this clause a provision that in the case of a complaint under sec 476 the examination of the complainant shall be dispensed with —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

The words where the complaint is made in writing have been inserted in proviso (b) by the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act II of 1926 The reason has been thus stated — At present a Presidency Magistrate need not record the substance of an examination even if the complaint is not in writing It is desirable that where there is no complaint in writing the Magistrate should record the examination in writing —Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India 1925 Part V p 214)

657 Taking cognizance —A Magistrate is bound to take cognizance of an offence upon complaint see Note 586 under sec 190 ante A Magistrate is bound to receive all complaints whether they may be preferred orally or in writing —Cal G I & C O, p 8

If a paradanashin lady makes a complaint to a Magistrate he is entitled to take cognizance of it but before he takes cognizance he must be satisfied that it is her complaint It is comparatively unimportant by what means the complaint reaches the Magistrate if it is really her complaint—Abhoyesuari v Kishori Mohan 42 Cal 19 18 C W N 1020.

658 Complaints —See notes under sec 4 (h)

It is clear from the wording of sections 200 and 201 that a complaint need not be in writing—J R Das v King Emp 1 Rang 549

Presentation of complaint —Since the complainant is to be examined at once it follows therefore that ordinarily a complaint must be presented in person A complaint shall never be accepted which is not signed by the complainant and is not preferred by a person duly authorised to prefer that specific complaint—Ibhoyeswari v Kishori 42 Cal 19 15 Cr L J 348 The presentation of a complaint through a Mukhtar is illegal because the Magistrate can not at once examine the complainant —Ratanlal 625

659 Examination of complainant —The object of requiring the Magistrate to examine the complainant possibly is that the facts constituting the offence may be ascertained when in a written complaint they are not given—Sukumar v Mafizuddin 25 C W N 357 22 Cr L J 455 The object of the examination is further to see whether there is a prima facie case against the accused and to prevent the issue of process in cases where the examination of the complainant would show that the complaint was false frivolous and vexatious and intended merely to harass the accused—Girdhari Lal v Crown 1911 P R 11 The object of the examination is to find out whether there is any matter which calls for investigation by a Criminal Court—Baij Nath v Raja Ram 10 A L J 79 13 Cr L J 704

The examination of the complainant is not to be a mere form but an intelligent inquiry into the subject matter of the complaint carried far enough to enable the Magistrate to exercise his judgment as to whether there is or there is not sufficient ground for proceeding—Cal G R & C O p 9

The law requires that the complainant shall be examined at once the Court cannot fix a future date for the examination of the complainant

A Magistrate cannot refuse to take cognizance of an offence on receipt of a complaint but he is bound to examine the complainant—Umer Ali v Safer Ali 13 Cal 334 Even in a case in which a charge can in the first instance be laid before the Police the Magistrate is bound to examine the complainant if the latter chooses to make a complaint—Ameer Mahomed v Brass 14 W R 36 Even if a Magistrate finds a complaint to be false and groundless he cannot refuse to examine the complainant—In re Ramelara 3 N W P 272 Although it is competent for him to dismiss the complaint still he cannot dismiss it without examining the complainant—Jalaluddin v Md Khalil 1884 A W N 47 Satya Charan v Chairman 3 C W N 17

Mode of examination —On presentation of a complaint the Magistrate shall examine the complainant on oath the substance of that examination must be reduced to writing and must be distinct from the complaint itself Mere calling upon the complainant to attest the complaint is not a sufficient compliance with this section—Kesri v Md Baksh 18 All 221 If however the complaint is made in writing and is sufficiently clear it may frequently be a sufficient compliance if the Magistrate reads it over to the complainant and the complainant is on oath asked to subscribe to it—In re Mirabai 6 Bom L R 662 Mahomed v Mahomed 26 Cr L J 1101 (Sind) But if the written complaint is obscure and vague the Magistrate would be bound to examine the complainant at sufficient length for the purpose of clearly ascertaining the allegations on which the complaint is made—In re Mirabai 6 Bom L R 662

The substance of the complaint must be reduced to writing by the Magistrate Where there was an oral complaint to a Magistrate which was not recorded under sec 200 nor was there a police report nor did the Magistrate take cognizance of the offence suo motu under sec 190 (c) held that the Magistrate had not duly taken cognizance of the case under sec 190—Ranga Chari 2 Weir 241 (242)

The substance of the examination of the complainant on oath should be read over to him (following the principle underlying sec 360) so that the accuracy of the record of the examination may be vouchsafed particularly, if it is to be used as a basis for a possible prosecution for perjury in future—Bhagirathi Bai v Emp 26 Cr L J 1401 (Nag)

If the complainant is a parlana hin lady she may be examined by commission under Sec 503 of the Code The terms of that section are very wide They refer not only to an inquiry and a trial but to any other proceeding That section authorises the examination of any witness and a complainant is certainly a witness—Abhoyeswari v Kishori Mohan 42 Cal 19 Contra—Sarb Dayal v Q E 1896 P R 10 where it is laid down that in the preliminary stage of a proceeding the complainant is not a witness but a mere complainant and cannot be examined by commission

Signature of complainant —If the complaint is in writing it must be signed by the complainant a complaint cannot be accepted if it is not signed by him—Abhoyeswari v Kishori Mohan 42 Cal 19 Jilan v Emp 1 P L T 564

After the complainant has been examined and the substance of the examination has been reduced to writing by the Magistrate such writing shall be signed by the complainant Unless it is signed the Magistrate cannot take cognizance of the complaint—Q v Mahim Chandra 3 B L R 67 Such is the vitiating effect of want of signature that a conviction on the alternative charges of making two statements one in the examination under this section of the accused as a complainant and the other in his examination subsequently as a witness both the statements contradicting each other is bad if the statement recorded under this section does not bear the signature of the complainant—Baijoo v Emp 6 C W N 840 The examination of the complainant being taken on oath and signed by him can be used as a basis for a prosecution for perjury The evident object of getting the substance of the examination of the complainant signed by him is to make use of it in case of need as against the complainant s subsequent deposition as a witness for starting against him a prosecution for perjury on the ground that the two statements contradict each other—Bhagirathibai v Emp, 26 Cr L J 1401, A I R 1926 Nag 141

660 Omission to examine—Effect —The examination of the complainant is not a mere matter of formality, and when a Magistrate dismisses a complaint without making such examination himself the omission is a material one and cannot be cured by sec 537 of the Code—Parg i Koeri v Emp 1 P L T 346 In re Ramasami 43 M L J 710, Moolchand v Kessoomal 15 S L R 200 The cognizance of an offence by a Magistrate on complaint is not complete until the complainant has been examined on oath—Purai Koeri v Emp, 1 P L T 346 A Magistrate cannot dismiss a complaint without examining the complainant —Loke Nath v Saryasi, 30 Cal 923 Kartik v Emp, 2 P L T 14; Fazlar Rahman v Abdhar Rahaman, 23 C W N 302 Ha'adhar v Sub Inspector 9 C W N 199 Satya Charan v Chairman 3 C W N 17 Jalu Alim v Md Khalil 1884 A W N 47 Q E v Harrak Chand 8 W R 12 No investigation can be ordered under Sec 202 without examining the complainant—20 Cr L J 552 (Patna) Jitan v Emp 1 P L T 564 Mahadev v Q E 27 Cal 921 (924) In re Budh Nath 4 C W N 305, Virabhadrayya v Varicherla 2 Weir 244, Ali Muhammad v Crown 1012 P R 2 (This is now expressly provided in the proviso of sec 202) No process can be issued against the accused unless and until the Magistrate has examined the complainant—Hemnarain v Kishori Mohan 42 Cal 19

But in several cases it has been held that the omission to examine the complainant on oath before issuing process is a mere irregularity and does not invalidate the conviction in the absence of any prejudice to the accused by reason of such irregularity—Phagu Shahu v K E 1 P L J 5?? Emp v Heeran Gope 21 Cr L J 779 1 P L T 349 Sk Abdul Ali v Emp 1 P L T 446 Bhairab v Emp 40 Cal 507 Q E v Mosa, 11 Mad 443 Bateshar v Emp 37 All 628 Gopichand v Emp, 1 Ran 517 Muso v Crown 8 S L R 41 15 Cr L J 639 Thus, where the complainants made a complaint to the Police that the accused beat them causing grievous hurt but the police did not send up the case, and the complainants applied to the Magistrate who sent for the police papers and summoned the accused without examining the complainants, it was held that the irregularity did not vitiate the proceeding—Bateshar v Emp 37 All 628 13 A L J 840 The omission to examine the complainant under sec 200 is a mere irregularity and not an illegality The person prejudiced by such an irregularity is the complainant and when the case ends in conviction he has no grievance The accused cannot in general complain of the irregularity, as the omission to take a sworn statement from the complainant cannot prejudice the accused—Amirtyaraj v Palanimuthu, 19 L W 461 25 Cr L J 730 A I R 1924 Mad 587

661. Complaint by Court or public servant —Under the new proviso (aa) when a complaint is preferred by a Court or public servant, the examination of the complainant may be dispensed with Even before this amendment it was held in several cases that the omission to examine the Court or the public servant did not vitiate the proceedings. Thus where the complainant who was a bailiff and who was resisted by the accused in the execution of a civil process was not examined but his report was brought on the record through the Nazir, it was held that the fact of the complainant not being examined would not justify the setting aside of the conviction because there were other witnesses who gave a full account of the matter—Muso v Crown 8 S L R 41 15 Cr L J 649 Where the complainant in writing and signed was preferred by a responsible public official and was accompanied with a sanction of the Local Government for the prosecution of one of its servants it was held that the failure by the Magistrate to examine the complainant on oath had not in any way prejudiced the accused or caused a failure or miscarriage of justice—Girdhari Lal v Crown 1911 P R 11 12 Cr L J 217 Where the Sub Inspector preferred a complaint for the prosecution of a certain person and the Magistrate without examining the complainant recorded the evidence and convicted the person complained against held that the omission to examine the complainant (Sub Inspector) did not occasion a miscarriage of justice the irregularity being cured by the provisions of sec 537 (a)—Chiragh Din v Crown 4 Lah 359 25 Cr L J 125 Where the District Judge made a complaint to the District Magistrate by means of a letter and the Magistrate ordered a police investigation without examining the District Judge on oath in support of his statement in his letter it was held that the omission to examine was a mere irregularity curable by sec 537 (a)—In re Aparao 20 Bom L R 1018 20 Cr L J 42 Under the present law no question of irregularity would arise If a police officer makes a report in a non cognizable case the report is not a complaint but falls under clause (b) of sec 190 and a Magistrate taking cognizance of the case on the police report is not bound to follow the procedure prescribed by sec 200 (which applies only when the Magistrate takes cognizance on complaints) See Note 581 under sec 190 Even if the report be treated as a complaint the new sub-section (aa) of sec 200 relieves the Magistrate from the necessity of examining the police officer on oath—Pub Pro v Ratnavelu 49 Mad 525 27 Cr L J 1031 (F B) overruling In re Perumal 22 L W 709 26 Cr L J 1550

Procedure by Magistrate not competent to take cognizance of the case

201 (1) If the complaint has been made in writing to a Magistrate who is not competent to take cognizance of the case, he shall return the complaint for presentation to the proper Court with an endorsement to that effect

	(2A) Any Magistrate inquiring into a case under this section, may, if he thinks fit, take evidence of witnesses on oath
(3) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay	(3) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay

Change —This section has been amended by sec 55 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

The main changes introduced are the following —

(1) Third class Magistrates have been given power to make preliminary inquiries personally ( ) Authority to make a preliminary inquiry has been given in any case in which the Magistrate thinks fit for reasons to be recorded in writing The only ground contemplated by the old section was if the Magistrate is not satisfied as to the truth of the complaint This is thought to be undesirably narrow (3) The words inquiry or investigation have been substituted for the expression previous local investigation and power is given to take evidence upon oath in the case of such a preliminary inquiry (4) Presidency Magistrates are enabled to act under this section without special authorisation —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

Or which has been transferred to him under section 192 — We have made a small amendment in sec 202 (1) to cover cases which have been transferred to a Magistrate under sec 192 as well as cases of which he has taken cognizance himself—Report of the Select Committee of 1916 This amendment supersedes the ruling in 18 C W N 95

The present proviso to subsection (1) has been substituted by the Cr P Code Amendment Act II of 1926 in place of the old proviso which was added by the Amendment Act of 1923 and which ran thus —

Provided that no such direction shall be made—(a) unless the complainant has been examined on oath under the provisions of section 200 or (b) where the complaint has been made by a Court under the provisions of this Code

Thus this proviso laid down that a Magistrate receiving a complaint need not direct an inquiry or investigation if the complaint was made by a Court This has caused difficulties in the case of a Court complaining under sec 476 of the Code Under that section the Court has only to record a finding that it is expedient that an inquiry should be made into an offence which appears to have been committed and it seems clear that cases will arise in which an inquiry or investigation should be made before a person is put on his trial The difficulty was brought to light by the Bombay High Court and the Local Government and the other High Courts have all agreed that some provision is required This clause gives effect to this proposal —Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India 1925 Part V p 214)

The present proviso lays down by implication that an inquiry or investigation may be directed in any case including the case of a Court complaining under sec 476 but that in such a case the examination of the complainant is not necessary before the inquiry or investigation

662 Scope and application of section —This chapter deals with the procedure to be followed by a Magistrate upon taking cognizance of an offence upon complaint i e when he takes cognizance under sec 190 (a) and not when he takes cognizance upon a Police report or other information mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of sec 190 See Rangachari v Weir 241 (242) This section applies only to cases where there is a complaint as distinguished from a mere information A Magistrate acting upon second hand information cannot be said to be acting upon complaint—Varain v Emp 1888 P R 24 So also a Magistrate taking cognizance of a case upon a police report cannot proceed under this section and cannot therefore refer the case to a subordinate Magistrate for local investigation—Abdulla v Emp 40 Cal 854 Imp v Shoukatmal 7 S L R 75 Sarbu Mahton v Emp 17 C W N 824 Tiloki v Emp 2 P L T 770 22 Cr L J 735

Under the old section the investigation could be ordered only in those cases where the Magistrate was not satisfied as to the truth of a complaint—Jhumuck v Patluk 27 Cal 798 Ranga Chari 2 Weir 241 (242) Mahadeo v Q E 27 Cal 921 (924) Narain v Emp 1888 P R 24 Under the present section the Magistrate can direct inquiry on any ground See notes under Change above

If the complainant is not speaking from personal knowledge a Magistrate taking cognizance would exercise a wise discretion in making the inquiry under this section—Sukumar v Mofizuddin 25 C W N 357

This section applies to a complaint of an offence A petition for maintenance under sec 488 is not a complaint of an offence and therefore this section is inapplicable to proceedings in maintenance The Magistrate to whom a maintenance petition is preferred has no power to refer it to a Subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and report but must inquire into it himself—Sardaran v Amir Khan 1905 P R 29

This section does not in terms authorise a Magistrate to refer a petition under sec 107 to a police officer for investigation as a petition under sec 107 does not allege the commission of an offence and does not amount to a complaint But as the Magistrates have control over the police whose assistance they can seek in the discharge of their duties it is perfectly open to a Magistrate to avail himself of the help of the police apart from sec 202 and to refer the matter of the petition under section 107 to a police officer for investigation—Sonji v Konert 49 Mad 315 50 M L J 160 A I R 1926 Mad 321

663 Recording reasons —If the Magistrate on examining the complainant distrusts the statement of the complainant he is bound to record his reasons before directing a local investigation—Balai Lal v Pasupati 21 C W N 127 17 Cr L J 396 If the Magistrate refers a case to the police for inquiry and report without examining the complainant and without recording any reasons for distrusting the truth of the complaint and then on receiving the report from the police dismisses the complaint under sec 203 held that the order of dismissal must be set aside—Virabhadrayya v Vyricherla 2 Weir 244 But in some cases it has been held that omission to record the reasons is at most an irregularity which will be cured by section 537 unless it has occasioned a failure of justice—Anonymous 2 Weir 244 (245) K E v Alagirisami 25 Mad 546 In re Arula 10 M L T 120 Madho v Rashid Ahmed 18 Cr L J 765 15 A L J 642 Ram Prasad v Moti 11 A L J 754 14 Cr L J 493, Ram Saran v Md Jan Khan 26 Cr L J 1394 A I R 1926 Pat 34, Balai Lal v Pasupati 21 C W N 127 17 Cr L J 396

664 'Postpone the issue of process" —The process shall ordinarily issue after the examination of the complainant unless the Magistrate has reason to doubt the truth of the complaint when only he is authorised to postpone the issue of process and order an inquiry or local investigation—Jhumuck v Pathuk 27 Cal 798

The procedure prescribed by this section can be adopted when no process has been issued to compel the attendance of the accused A Magistrate who after issue of process directs an inquiry and report acts in contravention of the procedure prescribed by law—Q E v Khurram, 1896 A W N 140 Once a process has been issued against the accused the Magistrate cannot exercise his option of holding a preliminary inquiry He must proceed with the trial—Gaji v Jumanshah 6 S L R 83 13 Cr L J. 749 Bishan Dial v Ghaziuddin 1901 A. W N 44 Thus it is illegal to order a preliminary inquiry after the accused has been brought before the Court under a warrant—Ramkant v Jadub 21 W R 44 When a Magistrate has accepted a complaint and issued process upon it and taken evidence for the complainant he or his successor cannot refer the case to the Police for inquiry and report—Sadappachariar v Rangachariar 9 Mad 282 Where a subordinate Magistrate has taken cognizance of a case and has issued process the District Magistrate has no power to interfere and order an inquiry—Jhumuck v Pathuk 27 Cal 798 and it is doubtful whether he can make such order even after withdrawing the case to his own Court for trial—Ibid On the other hand if a Magistrate directs a local inquiry, he cannot issue process before he receives the report of the inquiry—Krishna Bala v Nirodabala 41 C L J 170 A I R 1925 Cal, 989 But where after the Magistrate had issued processes agai accused persons one of them appeared and laid a cross comp then the Magistrate rescinded the order of issue of process the cases to a subordinate Magistrate for local inquiry ar that the action of the Magistrate was right and proper—Lalit Mohan v Nani Lal, 39 C L J 329, 25 Cr L J 464

665. If the accused appears —This section speaks of postponement of issue of process If, however, the accused appears of his own accord without a summons he is entitled to require that the complaint shall be proceeded with or dismissed If no evidence is offered against the accused, he must be formally discharged—In re Lakshman 26 Bom 552.

666. Inquiry —Under the old section, the inquiry was to be conducted by the Magistrate himself who tried the case; he could not direct the inquiry to be held by a subordinate Magistrate or a police officer These persons could only hold a local investigation See Haricharan v Girish Chandra, 38 Cal 68 (72) Gangadhar v K E, 43 Cal 173 20 C. W N 63, Md Imamuddin v Debendra, 18 C W N 95, Mohar Khan v Gazuddin, 18 C W N 390 The present amendment now empowers these persons to hold an inquiry as well as an investigation See also Amrit Majhi v K E. 46 Cal 854 23 C W N 623, in which the order referring the complaint to a subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and report was held to be legal

The inquiry contemplated by this section does not necessarily mean an inquiry by the Magistrate himself examining witnesses or holding investigation into the case It is open to the Magistrate to investigate into the matter in order to ascertain the truth or falsity of the complaint in any way he thinks proper Where an investigation has been made by the police and witnesses had been examined by the investigating police officer, there is nothing in law to prevent the Magistrate from looking into the police papers for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint. If upon looking into the police papers the Magistrate is satisfied that this is not a fit case in which process should issue, he can dismiss the complaint—Ramanand v Ali Hussan, 26 Cr L J 129 (Pat)

Before the present amendment, the only Magistrate who could make an inquiry under this section was the Magistrate taking cognizance of the case, a Magistrate to whom a case was transferred could not hold an inquiry under sec 202 See Md Imamuddin v Debendra, 18 C W N 95 Under the present amendment, such Magistrate is empowered to hold the inquiry by reason of the addition of the words "or which has been transferred to him under section 192"

Under this section the Magistrate has the option of only one or two alternatives, viz either to inquire into the case himself or to direct a local investigation He cannot have recourse to both the alternatives; and if he, after partially inquiring into the case himself makes an order directing local investigation the procedure is irregular—Emp v Durga Prosad 44 All 550, 20 A L J 355, 23 Cr L J 279

The police inquiry contemplated by this section cannot take the place of such evidence as the complainant may desire to produce before an adjudication is made of his complaint Such inquiry can be ordered, before evidence is recorded to enable the Magistrate to determine how far the complaint was prima facie well founded When the Magistrate decides to record the evidence himself he should complete the inquiry and determine upon the evidence adduced how far the complaint is borne out—Mahadei v Ram Sahai 2 O C 321 The inquiry under this section cannot take the place of hearing the Magistrate who takes cognizance of the case cannot refer the case under this section to a subordinate Magistrate for calling upon the accused to show cause against prosecution and for submitting a report thereon—Bhairab v K E 46 Cal 807, 23 C W N 484 29 C L J 318

This section makes no provision for the manner in which the evidence in an inquiry should be recorded The failure to take down the deposition of the witnesses by the Magistrate in a case in which he had before him the final report of the police containing a detailed account of the statements of witnesses examined by the police and the witnesses repeated the same statements before him is not an error of law—Ts akdhari v Mi ri 26 Cr L J 1346 A I R 1925 Pat 584

Second inquiry —A Magistrate may hold an inquiry even after a local investigation has been made by a subordinate officer if he is dissatisfied with the result of such investigation—Harichara v Girish Chandra 38 Cal 68 But in Ram Prasad v M n 11 A L J 754 it has been held that the Magistrate taking cognizance cannot hold a further inquiry after the holding of a local investigation

667 Local investigation —The object of the local investigation is to ascertain the truth or falsehood of the complaint a local investigation was not intended by the Legislature to supersede a regular trial The object of this section is to prevent the issue of process where there is some initial ground for doubting the truth of the complaint and where on a local investigation there appears no evidence to support it Where it is found that there is some evidence in support of the comlainant s charge the function of the officer making the local investigation is fulfilled Process should then be issued and the truth or falsity of the complaint should be determined in a regular manner—Nga Tha P v K E U B R (1910) 1st Qr 73 11 I C 191 Cr L J 385

A local investigation can be ordered where there is a quarrel about boundaries or any matter of that kind Otherwise the Magistrate taking cognizance should make an inquiry himself—Baij Nath v Raja Ram 10 A L J 79 13 Cr L J 704

The words local investigation are not restricted to the investigation of the physical features only but they mean an inquiry into the truth or falsity of the allegations made in the complaint petition The word local is used with a view to hold the investigation in the locality for the convenience of the parties and their witnesses and also it may in certain cases necessitate an inspection of the place of occurrence but certainly it is not confined only to the inspection of the locality—Munshi Miar v Emp 19 Cr L J 126 (Pat

668 Who can investigate —If the offence is one triable only by a Court of Session the local investigation must be directed to a Magistrate who is competent to deal with a case triable by the Court of Session It should not be directed to a second class Magistrate

Budh Nath 4 C W N 303 But see Surjya v K E 6 C W N 295 where it has been held that a Magistrate holding a local investigation under this section need not be competent to entertain the complaint which he is asked to investigate

A local investigation can be directed to a subordinate Magistrate and not to a superior Magistrate—Emp v Bhiku Hossein, 39 Cal 1041 18 C W N 885 This section does not contemplate the subordination of a 1st class Magistrate to a District Magistrate Both are first class Magistrates and the latter cannot direct the investigation to be held by the former—Aly Mohd v Emp 1912 P R 2 A Deputy Magistrate attached to the sub-division is subordinate to the Sub Divisional officer—Munshi Mian v Emp 19 Cr L J 126 (Pat)

The investigation may be made by any person subordinate to the Magistrate even though he be a clerk—Kanchan v Ram Kishen 36 Cal 72

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to order a local inquiry by a pleader in the nature of a commission in a civil case—Mohan Khan v Gayuddin 18 C W N 399

Investigation by Police —It is not a proper course to make indiscriminate use of police agency for investigating complaints The object of law is to give persons who have been injured an access to justice independent of Police, and it is improper for the Magistrate when a complaint is made to him to refer the complaint to a Police officer Such a course would foster abuses and defeat the purpose of the law—In re Jankidas 12 Bom 161 In petty cases of assault and the like the Police ought not to be directed to make inquiries because in petty matters the police are under a strong temptation of making money out of the complaint In such matters the proper course for the Magistrate is to take action at once upon the complaint—Ganesha v Q E 1894 P R 19 Magistrates are cautioned against the indiscriminate use of Police agency for the purpose of ascertaining matters as to which a Magistrate is bound to form his own opinion upon evidence given in his presence This caution is specially needful in respect of all cases regarding offences not cognizable by the Police —Cal G R & C O, p 9

If the complaint is made against a police officer it is improper for the Magistrate to call for a report from the police officer who is himself the accused person—Baidya Nath v Muspratt 14 Cal 141 or from some other police officer—Jalaluddin v Md Khalil 1884 A W N 47, Mewa Lal v Emp, 18 A L J 620, or even from a superior police officer or the Superintendent of Police—Haladhar v Sub Inspector of Police 9 C W N 199 Shama v Eza 18 A L J 731 In such cases the inquiry had better be held by the Magistrate himself—Q E v Kanappa 20 Mad 387 Shama v Eza Ahmad 18 A L J 731 21 Cr L J 649 Mewa Lal v Emp 18 A L J 620, 1 Cr L J 416 Mahadei v Ram Sahai 20 O C 321 Harikat v Emp, 21 Cr L J 313 (All)

The Magistrate can order a police investigation under this section but this investigation is something different from the investigation referred to in sec 156 (3) A Magistrate, after he has taken cognizance of a case under sec 200, cannot order a police inquiry under sec 156 (3) and direct the police to submit a charge sheet That is, a Magistrate, after he has acted under Chap XVI, cannot proceed under Ch XIV—Isaf Nasya v Emp, 54 Cal 303 28 Cr L J 577

669. Proviso—Examination of complainant—Before directing a local investigation the complainant must be examined either by the Magistrate who receives the complaint or by some other Magistrate to whom the case might have been transferred—In re Bai Kashi, Ratanlal 368 Unless the complainant is duly examined an inquiry and report under this section cannot be called for and if made, are without jurisdiction and cannot form the basis of any further action—Mahadeo v Q E, 27 Cal 921 In re Budh Nath, 4 C W N 305 Jitan v Emp, 1 P L T 564 and the complainant who was not examined under this section could not be prosecuted in respect of his complaint (if it was false) which was dismissed on a report called for under this section—Aly Mohd v Emp, 1912 P R 2 Mahadeo v. Q E 27 Cal 921 Ram Sarup v K E, 4 O C 127

Where after the complainant was examined by the Magistrate who took cognizance of the case a superior Magistrate transferred the case to his own file and without re examining the complainant and without recording any reasons, referred it to the police for inquiry and report, it was held that the procedure was illegal and the fact that the complainant was previously examined by the Magistrate who took cognizance was of no avail—Virabhadraya v Vyricherla, 2 Weir 244

670. Powers of the investigating officer—A Magistrate conducting a local investigation can exercise all the powers of a Magistrate including the power to administer oath (see the new sub section 2A) Such a proceeding is a judicial proceeding within the meaning of Sec 476 —1 Cr L J 118 (Mad) and the investigating Magistrate can direct the prosecution of the complainant under sec 476 if the complaint turns out to be false—Kanchan v Ram Krishan, 36 Cal 72 Contra—Kachi Madar v Emp 21 M L J 795 12 Cr L J 323 where it was held that a preliminary investigation made by a Magistrate under this section was not a judicial proceeding and therefore a person could not be prosecuted for an offence brought to the notice of the Court during such investigation This ruling is no longer correct

The Magistrate holding the investigation is not disqualified thereby from afterwards trying the case when there is nothing to indicate that he initiated or directed the proceedings or took any personal interest in the matter of the complaint presented before him—Anand v Basu Meah, 24 Cal 167 The fact that the investigating Magistrate expressed an opinion in submitting the report is no bar to his holding the trial—Bani Madhab v Rosaraj 4 C W N 604 But where a Magistrate took an active part in forwarding the police inquiries and collecting evidence against the accused, he is disqualified from trying the accused—Sudhama v Q E, 23 Cal 328 So also where a Magistrate, during a local investigation himself discovered the evidence of crime, and collected or ascertained the evidence in support of it, and thereafter directed, recommended or invited the institution of criminal proceedings it is undesirable that he should try the case—Bhop Singh v Kermott, 8 N L R 1, 13 Cr L J 236

In a recent Patna case it has been held that if a Magistrate sends a cognizable case to the police to investigate under this section, the police officer making the investigation can arrest and send up a charge sheet The Magistrate's order under this section does not debar the police from exercising their general powers of arrest and investigation in regard to the same matter as formed the subject of the complaint ' It is possible to conceive of cases where, although the Magistrate may distrust a complaint or delay in passing orders, (i.e postpone the issue of process and order an investigation under this section), the police would be failing in their duty if they did not arrest an offender against whom a cognizable offence has been made out Much more so would this be the case where the Magistrate after recording the complaint finds that a regular police investigation would be more suitable and intentionally keeps the complaint pending in order that the police may exercise their powers of investigation and arrest independently of the Magistrate —K E v. Bhola Bhagat 2 Pat 379 (382 383) 4 P L T 521, 24 Cr L J 375.

671. Position of the accused —A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to require the presence of the accused at an inquiry or investigation under section 202, into a complaint of which he is empowered to take cognizance under sec 190 or which has been transferred to him under sec. 192—Appa Rao v Janakiammal, 49 Mad 918 (F. B.), 51 M L J 605, 28 Cr L J. 129 Magistrates are in the habit of giving a person against whom a charge is formulated at least an option to come before him if he so desires at the earliest stage Such a procedure is entirely unwarranted by the Code The object of this section is to prevent accused persons being harassed at all or asked to appear if in the opinion of the Magistrate no prima facie case is made out, and the Code never contemplated that at that stage they should be either asked or permitted to state their cases—Ibid An accused person is not to be called upon under sec 202 to appear unless and until the Magistrate has satisfied himself from the complainant and his witnesses that there is a prima facie case against him It is highly irregular for a Magistrate, when a complaint is put in and sworn to, without hearing the complainant's case or his witnesses, to issue notice to the accused to appear and show cause against the issue of process, hear what the accused has to say, examine any witnesses he wishes to have examined and then decide whether the complainant shall be received or not—Varadarajulu v. Kuppusami, 49 Mad 926, 51 M L J 602, 28 Cr L J. 113, Sheikh Meeran v Ramavelu, 37 Mad 181 (183)

A person complained against does not become an 'accused' person or a 'person against whom any proceedings have been instituted' within the meaning of sec 340, until it has been decided to issue process against him under Chapter XVII Sec 340, therefore, does not entitle him to be represented by a pleader during the preliminary inquiry held under this section—Shaikh Chand v Mahomed Hanif, 4 N L R 81, Golap Jan v Bholanath, 38 Cal 880 (887), or during the proceeding when the Magistrate

is considering the report of the local investigation ordered by him—Balai Lal v Pisupati 21 C W N 127, 17 Cr L J 396 If he chooses to attend the proceedings he may do so like any other member of the public but has no locus standi as a party, the purpose of the law being clearly to exclude him until sufficient ground for joining him has been made out by the complainant Therefore the Magistrate can refuse him permission to cross examine the complainant s witness—Shaikh Chand v Md Hanif, 4 N L R 81 See also Chandi Charan v Manindra 27 C W N 196 24 Cr L J. 333 The accused has no right to be present when a Magistrate is holding an inquiry under sec 202 Proceedings under this section are not inter partes but merely to satisfy the Magistrate whether there is or is not any ground for issuing process Allowing a legal practitioner to attend the proceedings is only as a matter of grace and not of right—Atmarai v Topandas 20 S L R 43 27 Cr L J 494 In a proceeding under this section the Magistrate acts illegally in sending for the accused person and calling for a report from him as to the truth or falsity of a charge preferred against him—Harnarain v Kariman 21 Cr L J 621 5 P L J 61 Baidyanath v Muspratt 14 C W 141 A preliminary inquiry should not be held in the presence of the person complained against and he should not be allowed to cross examine the complainant s witnesses—Bhimlal v Emp 40 Cal 444 17 C W N 290 Ram Manthari v Raj Kishore 19 Cr L J 527 4 P L W 307 When a Magistrate holds an inquiry under this section he should not hear arguments on behalf of the accused—Bachoo Mia v Anwar 30 C W N 312 26 Cr L J 305 A I R 1925 Cal 576 Contra—In Ram Baran v Mohd Jan 6 Cr L J 1394 the Patna High Court did not object to the action of the Magistrate in calling the accused to the inquiry and in Sheikh Akbar v Prance 12 Cr L J 207 (Cal) it was held that the accused should be permitted to watch the proceedings and his pleader should be allowed to act as amicus curiae But this practice has been disapproved of by the other High Courts in the cases cited above

Statements made by the person complained against during an inquiry under this section cannot be regarded as having been recorded under sec 164 or sec 364 Such person does not stand in the position of an accused person during the inquiry and such statements cannot be admitted in evidence against him—Sat Narain v Imp 32 Cal 1085

672 Evidence in the inquiry —The Magistrate conducting the preliminary inquiry need not confine himself to the evidence of the complainant alone but he may examine such witnesses as he thinks fit—In re Kankuchand Ratanlal 669 There is nothing in section 202 to prevent the investigating officer from making a full inquiry by obtaining information from the complainant and his witnesses, and the defendant and his witnesses if any—Deli Bux v Jutmal 33 Cal 1282

673. Submission of report —The officer who conducted the investigation must submit the report of his investigation to the same Magistrate who had originally ordered him to investigate he is not authorised to submit it to another Magistrate for the purpose of dismissing the complaint' and declaring that no offence had in reality been committed—Thakur Singh v Kripal, 1918 P L R 53, 19 Cr L J 436

674. Revision—If an irregularity in procedure has not resulted in any miscarriage of justice, the High Court will not make an order which can result only in harassment and waste of public time In a case in which a perfunctory inquiry has been made by the Police and the report considered in a perfunctory manner by the Magistrate, the High Court will interfere and insist on the provisions of this section being strictly enforced But where the inquiry has been carefully made and carefully considered, the High Court will refuse to re open the matter—Sheonandan v Emp., 4 P L W 114, 19 Cr L J 263

Dismissal of complaint

203. The Magistrate before whom a complaint is made or to whom it has been transferred may dismiss the complaint if after examining the complainant and [illegible] in such case he shall briefly record his reasons for so doing.

Dismissal of complaint

203. The Magistrate before whom a complaint is made, or to whom it has been transferred, may dismiss the complaint, if after considering the statement on oath (if any) of the complainant and the result of the investigation or inquiry (if any) under Section 202, there is in his judgment no sufficient ground for proceeding. In such case he shall briefly record his reasons for so doing.

This section has been amended by sec 56 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The word "the investigation or inquiry (if any) have been substituted recently by the Cr P C Amendment Act II of 1926 for the words 'any investigation or inquiry' occurring in the Amendment of 1923 See Note 677 below

675. Dismissal of complaint.—Where on a complaint made against several persons the Magistrate proceeded against only one of them and convicted him but refused to issue process against the others, held that the order of refusal was to all intents and purposes an order of dismissal of complaint against those persons under sec 203—Girish Chandra v Emp, 29 Cal 457, Hari Lal v Emp, 20 Cr L J 835 (Pat) Where, on a complaint being filed, the Magistrate called for a police report and subsequently on a consideration of that report passed the order under mistake of law and refused to issue processes, held that the order must be regarded as an order dismissing a complaint—Shaik Siddik v. Shaik Chaturi, 17 C W N 451, 14 Cr L J 123, 17 C L J. 608.

An application under Sec 107 does not fall within the definition of a 'complaint, and therefore sec 202 does not apply to it but every Magistrate has the inherent power of refusing an application which he finds to be groundless and so if he is satisfied after making an inquiry that the apprehension of a breach of the peace complained of does not exist he can refuse the application under sec 107 without taking any evidence which the applicant wanted to produce—Shamsuddin v Ram Dayal 25 Cr L J 89 A I R 1924 Lah 630

Dismissal when can be made —This section gives very large powers to the Magistrate to dismiss a complaint without issuing a process at all against the accused persons but certain conditions are laid down in the chapter in which the section occurs and those conditions must be strictly fulfilled in making an order under this section A Magistrate may dismiss a complaint (1) if upon the statement of the complainant reduced to writing under sec 200 he finds that no offence has been committed (2) if he distrusts the statement made by the complainant (3) if he distrusts that statement but his distrust not being strong enough to warrant him to act upon it he directs further inquiry as provided by sec 202 and after considering the result of the investigation he finds there is no sufficient ground for proceeding—Baidyanath v Muspratt 14 Cal 141 In re Ganesh Narain 13 Bom 600 Subul Chandra v Ahad Ulla 53 Cal 606 30 C W N 546 27 Cr L J 788

There can be no dismissal of complaint under sec 203 after process has issued This section refers to cases falling within Chapter XVI where there has been no issue of process Where the accused has been summoned to answer a charge there is a proceeding within the meaning of Chapter XVII and the complaint cannot be dismissed under sec 203—Q E v Budhunbhai Ratanlal 544 Even an order directing withdrawal of process issued against the accused will not amount to an order of dismissal of complaint—Panchoo v Khoosdel 12 C W N 68

Who can dismiss complaint —The complaint can be dismissed either by the Magistrate who took cognizance of it or by the Magistrate to whom it was transferred for local investigation The District Magistrate has no power to pass any order for dismissal of complaint unless he first removes the case to his own file—Mrinal Kanti Ghosh v Emp 6 C W N 843 When a case has been transferred to a subordinate Magistrate and is pending on his file the District Magistrate has no power to pass an order of dismissal of complaint—Sheikh Kutab Ali v Emp 3 C W N 490 Unless he withdraws the case to his own file the District Magistrate cannot pass any orders in the case and the only person who can deal with the case is the subordinate Magistrate—Q v Behlias 12 W R 33 A complaint was originally made before a Deputy Magistrate The Deputy Magistrate sent the case to the District Magistrate with a view to the Dt Magistrate transferring it to another Court but the Dt Magistrate instead of transferring the case to another Court examined the record and came to the conclusion that the complaint was wholly without foundation, and so he dismissed it Held that the District Magistrate was

Sec 202 This provides a wide field Anything outside it is extra judicial and must be discarded—Mustafa v Motilal 9 Bom L R 742

A Magistrate ought to dismiss a complaint where the subordinate Magistrate to whom the case was made over for inquiry and report under sec 202 held an elaborate inquiry examined a number of witnesses and submitted a report that there was no case against the accused In such a case the trying Magistrate acts wrongly in disregarding the report and ordering issue of summons against the accused—Abdullah v Emp., 40 Cal 854 (857)

What are not proper grounds of dismissal —If the allegations contained in the complaint disclose a criminal offence, a Magistrate should not dismiss the complaint simply because the case is one in which a civil remedy is obtainable —Koshal Singh v Tolshee 10 W R 40 A complaint cannot be dismissed on the ground that the entertainment of the complaint would encourage hundreds of such complaints and would stir up old religious feelings of animosity between the Hindus and Mussalmans —Q E v Ram Chandra Ratanlal 562 or on the ground that a more responsible person ought to have preferred the complaint—Boodhoo v Ram Dayal 18 W R 55 or on the ground that the complainant is a man of low caste and the alleged offence is theft of a goat which is merely a harm under section 95 I P C rather than an offence—Q v Pah 2 W R 35 or on the ground that the complainant is actuated by a malicious feeling and that the alleged offence was committed six years ago and that if the act of the accused was held criminal a large part of the population would go to jail—Q E v Manu Ratanlal 549 or on the ground that the complainant had no personal knowledge of the facts alleged in the complaint (in such a case the Magistrate should allow the complainant to bring forward evidence to prove those facts)—In re Kanh Ratanlal 669 or on the ground that the person complained against has been exonerated in a previous departmental inquiry into the facts alleged in the complaint—Palia v Ashar 1887 P R 33

679 Recording reasons —The Magistrate is bound to record his reasons for dismissing the complaint for if that is not done it would be impossible for the High Court to consider whether the discretion vested in the Magistrate under this section has been properly exercised or not Baidyanath v Muspratt 14 Cal 141 Kartik Pathak v Emp 2 P L T 142 Harnandan v Ahid 7 P L T 481 26 Cr L J 1502 (Pat) An order of a Magistrate dismissing a complaint under this section without record of any reasons for dismissal but merely stating that he agrees with the police report is improper and will be set aside—Ahmed v Ameena 7 M.L.T 175 11 Cr L J 331

The words in this section are he shall record, i e the provisions of this section are imperative, and a failure to record reasons is a direct disobedience of law and not a mere irregularity—Marimuddin v Abdul Rauf 40 Cal 41 (43) Where a Magistrate did not record any reason for dismissing a complaint but directed that the complainant should be prosecuted under section 211 I P Code held that the order of dismissal was without jurisdiction and altogether bad, that there must be a further erred in the exercise of its jurisdiction—Charoobala v Barendra, 27 Cal 126 (129) Debi Bux v Jutmal, 33 Cal 1282, Kedar Nath v Khetranath, 6 C L J 705 But in several other cases it has been laid down that secs 435 and 439 of the Code confer upon the High Court the power of sending for the records of Presidency Magistrates, and of reversing the order of the Magistrates and ordering a further inquiry in the case of dismissal of complaint or discharge of accused—Colville v Krishto Kishore, 26 Cal 746; Dwarka Nath v. Beni Madhab 28 Cal 652 (F B) Malik Pratap v. Khan Mahomed 36 Cal 994 and the High Court can direct further inquiry, if there are good reasons for doing so although no question of jurisdiction arises in the case—Malik Pratap v Khan Md, 36 Cal 994

683 Death of complainant—Effect—As there is no abatement of a criminal case on the death of the complainant, a fresh complaint on the same facts need not be made but the old complaint must be treated as pending and proceeded with to its disposal—In re Ramasamier, 16 Cr L. J 713 (Mad)

CHAPTER XVII.

OF THE COMMENCEMENT OF PROCEEDINGS BEFORE MAGISTRATES

Issue of process

204. (1) If in the opinion of a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence there is sufficient ground for proceeding, and the case appears to be one in which, according to the fourth column of the second schedule, a summons should issue in the first instance, he shall issue his summons for the attendance of the accused. If the case appears to be one in which, according to [illegible] issue in the first instance, [illegible] he think [illegible] brought [illegible] before such Magistra[illegible] [hi]mself) some other Magistrate having jurisdiction

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of Section 90.

(3) When by any law for the time being in force any process-fees or other fees are payable, no process shall be issued until the fees are paid, and if such fees are not paid

within a reasonable time, the Magistrate may dismiss the complaint

685 Magistrate taking cognizance —Where a Joint Magistrate who took cognizance of a case made over the case to a Deputy Magistrate for disposal the former ceased to have any control over the case The case having been transferred to the Deputy Magistrate that officer alone had jurisdiction to deal with an application for summons until the case was withdrawn from his cognizance Therefore if he refused to issue process as unnecessary the Joint Magistrate had no jurisdiction to order for its issue—Ajab Lal v Emp 32 Cal 783 Fani Bhusan v Kemp 10 C W N 1086

Offence —Process can issue only for an offence already committed It is not competent for the Magistrate to issue process in anticipation of an offence Such a case is for the interference of the Police and not of the Magistrate—In re Taleah Ratanlal 90

A neglect to maintain a wife is not an offence therefore an application for maintenance under sec. 488 should not be dismissed under sub section (3) of this section owing to the applicant s failure to comply with an order for the payment of process fees—In re Ponnammal 16 Mad 234

686 Sufficient ground —The only condition requisite for the issue of process is that the complainant s deposition must show some [illegible] prosecution had no personal knowledge of the allegations made in the complaint the Magistrate should satisfy himself upon proper materials that a case had been made out for the issue of process—Thakur Prosad v Emp 10 C W N 1090 Chamroo v Emp 11 C W N 170

Under the Cr P Code a wide discretion is given to Magistrates with respect to the grant or refusal of process against accused persons This discretion should be exercised with caution and an accused person ought not to be dragged into Court to answer a charge merely because a complaint has been lodged against him In determining whether process ought to issue a Magistrate must proceed according to the provisions of the Code and if after carrying out the instructions therein contained he is of opinion upon the materials before him that a prima facie case has been made out he ought to issue process and in such circumstances he is not entitled to refuse to issue process merely because he thinks that it is unlikely that the proceedings will result in a conviction If the Magistrate comes to the conclusion that the facts alleged by the complainant disclose an offence and in his opinion there is no ground for distrusting the complainant the Magistrate would not be justified in refusing the issue of process merely because some other person has been tried and acquitted upon the same charge and upon the same facts for inter alia it may be that at the previous trial the Magistrate has not correctly appraised the value of evidence or for some other reason the order of acquittal cannot be supported—Subal Chandra v Ahadulla 53 Cal 606 30 C W N 546, 27 Cr L J 788

In exercising the discretion under this section as to whether a process should issue the Magistrate must be guided by his own independent judgment and not by the judgment of others e g an expression of opinion by the Police—Rangasawmy v Sabapatti 4 M H C R 162

687 Issue of process —Proceedings are said to commence under this chapter when processes are issued against the accused after the issue of process a complaint cannot be dismissed under sec 203—Q E v Budhunbhai Ratanlal 544 See Note 675 under sec 203

If the Magistrate issues a warrant in a case in which he ought to have issued a summons the error of the Magistrate is not a ground for questioning the proceedings—Aneef v Ramsundar 1 W R 16 Under such circumstances the Magistrate can cancel the warrant and issue summons instead—Imp v Janat 1 S L R 69 8 Cr L J 187 Crown v Zalt Khan 7 S L R 40 14 Cr L J 604

An order directing issue of process is not a judgment within the meaning of section 369 and therefore a Magistrate making the order of issue of process can rescind the order on sufficient grounds—Lalit Mohan v Nani Lal 27 C W N 651 A I R 1923 Cal 662

When unnecessary —Process is unnecessary when the accused voluntarily appears to answer the charge against him and the want of a summons or of a complaint in order to the issue of a summons becomes immaterial—Ratanlal 8 Where the complainant has taken process against some of the accused the others are entitled to appear and insist that the complaint against them shall be proceeded with or dismissed—In re Lakshman 26 Bom 552

Refusal to issue process —Where the Police report is true and the Magistrate has directed the case to be entered as such he cannot refuse to issue process simply because there is no chance of conviction and no useful purpose would be served by an inquiry the complainant is entitled to a process against the accused and for the attendance of his witnesses—Kuldip v Budhan 29 Cal 410 In an inquiry before the Magistrate in a Sessions case if the evidence for the prosecution discloses a prima facie case against the accused and the evidence stands unrebutted the Magistrate cannot discharge the accused simply because the evidence appears to be improbable In doing so the Magistrate is really trying the case instead of merely considering whether there are sufficient grounds for commitment —Chiranji Lal v Ram Lal 1904 A W N 5

So also when from the examination of the complainant it appears that there is reason for the issue of process against all the accused the Magistrate exercises a wrong discretion in issuing process against some of the accused and in refusing to issue process against the others He must issue process against all—Bishan Dayal v Chet Khan 4 C W N 560

But where two counter complainants preferred complaints before a Magistrate and he issued process in one case and postponed the issue of process in the counter case until after the disposal of the first case held

within a reasonable time the Magistrate may dismiss the complaint

685 Magistrate taking cognizance —Where a Joint Magis[trate] who took cognizance of a case made over the case to a Deputy Magistrate for disposal the former ceased to have any control over the ca[se] The case having been transferred to the Deputy Magistrate that off[icer] alone had jurisdiction to deal with an application for summons un[til] the case was withdrawn from his cognizance Therefore if he refused to issue process as unnecessary the Joint Magistrate had no jurisdiction to order for its issue—Ijab Lal v Emp 32 Cal 783 Tani Bhusan v Emp 10 C W N 1086

Under the Cr P Code a wide discretion is given to Magistrates with respect to the grant or refusal of process against accused persons This discretion should be exercised with caution and an accused person ought not to be dragged into Court to answer a charge merely because a complaint has been lodged against him In determining whether process ought to issue a Magistrate must proceed according to the provisions of the Code and if after carrying out the instructions therein contained he is of opinion upon the materials before him that a prima facie case has been made out he ought to issue process and in such circumstances he is not entitled to refuse to issue process merely because he thinks that it is unlikely that the proceedings will result in a conviction If the Magistrate comes to the conclusion that the facts alleged by the complainant disclose an offence and in his opinion there is no ground for distrusting the complainant the Magistrate would not be justified in refusing the issue of process merely because some other person has been tried and acquitted upon the same charge and upon the same facts for inter alia it may be that at the previous trial the Magistrate has not correctly appraised the value of evidence or for some other reason the order of acquittal cannot

If the case is adjourned the witnesses should be told to appear on the adjourned date and the party should not be required to repeatedly summon his witnesses on payment of fresh process fees A dismissal of complaint on failure to pay such fees in such a case is not proper—Balmakund v Nanak Chand 1912 P L R 60 13 Cr L J 176

205 (1) Whenever a Magistrate issues a summons, he may if he sees reason so to do dispense with the personal attendance of the accused, and permit him to appear by his pleader

Magistrate may dispense with personal attendance of accused

(2) But the Magistrate inquiring into or trying the case, may in his discretion at any stage of the proceedings, direct the personal attendance of the accused and, if necessary, enforce such attendance in manner hereinbefore provided

689 Scope of section—Although this section speaks of issue of summons it is not confined to summons cases only If in a warrant case the Magistrate issues a summons instead of a warrant to a pardanashin lady he can dispense with her personal attendant—Basumati v Budhram 21 Cal 588 Prem Kuar v Mai Sham 1908 P W R 20 8 Cr L J 454

Again the section applies only where a summons has been issued to the accused if however a warrant is issued against him his personal attendance cannot be dispensed with unless he is too ill to attend the Court—Sashi Mukhi v Asutosh 13 C W N cl In a Patna case where the accused had been arrested by warrant the High Court held that it was illegal to dispense with his personal appearance and to allow him to be represented by a pleader even though he was ill—Abdul Hamid v K E 2 Pat 793 4 P L T 648 24 Cr L J 872 Where the accused absconded after the charge had been framed against him and he was convicted and sentenced in his absence held that as in this case a warrant had been issued for his arrest in the first instance the Magistrate could not dispense with his personal attendance—Crown v Sardar 1917 P R 36 18 Cr L J 975

690 Pardanashin lady—A pardanashin lady cannot as of right claim exemption from personal attendance in Court and the Magistrate cannot dispense with her appearance simply because she is a pardanashin lady—In re Faridunnissa 5 All 92 But in a summons case the Magistrate should use his discretion under this section by dispensing with her personal attendance and allowing her to appear by a pleader until he has before him clear direct and prima facie proof of an offence committed by her—In re Rahim Bibi 6 All 59 Prem Kuar v Maisham 1908 P W R

691 Appearance by a pleader —On service of summons the accused need not personally attend but may appear by a pleader Such appearance is a valid appearance and the Magistrate cannot prosecute the accused under section 174 I P C for non appearance (disobedience to summons)—Durga Das v Umesh Chandra 27 Cal 985 nor can the Magistrate proceed exparte and decide the case—Tarinee Churn v Municipal Commissioner 24 W R 25 If however the Magistrate requires personal attendance he should direct such appearance on a fixed date and in default, may issue a warrant—Durga Das v Umesh 27 Cal 985 But the discretion under this section should be liberally exercised—Emp v Mahomed 3 S L R 167 4 I C 1152

Under section 205 whenever a Magistrate issues a summons he may if he sees reason to do so dispense with the personal attendance of the accused and permit him to appear by his pleader A Magistrate can, therefore at the time of issuing a summons direct that the personal attendance of the accused shall be dispensed with He can also do this after the issue of summons and if the person summoned takes the risk of not attending in person and sends a pleader to represent him provided the Magistrate gives him the necessary permission under this section the Code does allow representation of the accused by his pleader In a case where the Court has allowed an accused person to appear by a pleader it must be taken that such appearance involves the performance of all acts that devolve upon the accused in the course of the trial unless the Magistrate thinks it necessary or desirable that the accused himself should be present for any particular purpose Therefore under secs 242 and 243 the pleader of the accused may make the necessary answers and plead guilty or not guilty on his behalf—Dorab Shah v Emp 50 Bom 250 28 Bom L R 10 27 Cr L J 440 The pleader appearing for the accused may perform all the acts which devolve upon the accused in the course of the trial thus he can answer the questions put to him by the Court in his examination under section 342 he can plead or refuse to plead to a charge under section 255—Crown v Jamal Khatun 6 S L R 206 14 Cr L J 272

Although the Magistrate can under sub-section ( ) revoke the permission to appear by pleader and enforce the personal attendance of the accused, still the Magistrate ought not to do so in a trivial case (e g a case under the Income Tax Act) and on a trivial ground, e g merely on the ground that the accused objects to the case being tried by that Magistrate and wants it to be transferred to some other Magistrate—Dwijendra v Emp, 38 C. L J 9 24 Cr L J 902

Appearance by other persons —Where the accused was represented by her mother in law and the Magistrate proceeded with the case and convicted the accused the conviction was set aside by the High Court as there was no proper representation of the accused in the case—Q E v Vithi Ratanlal 205 but where in an extremely trivial case the accused was represented by her father in law and convicted the High Court refused to interfere—Q E v Chandrablaga Ratanlal 206

Where an accused person is permitted to appear by pleader it is open to the accused to appoint a private person to appear in his stead under section 4 (r) and it is equally open to the Court to permit such private person to represent the accused Where this is allowed there should be clearly on record something (e g power of attorney) to show that the private person who represent the accused has been duly appointed by him just as an ordinary pleader has to file a vakalatnama The Court should also note on the record that he has given the requisite permission to such person to represent the accused and should not leave the matter to mere implication (The omission to record it is however a mere irregularity) Where there is no power of attorney or letter of authority to show that a person has been appointed by an accused person to appear and plead on his behalf the Court is not entitled to accept a plea of guilty put forward by such person and to convict the accused upon such plea—Dorabshah v Emp 50 Bom 250 28 Bom L R 10 27 Cr L J 110

CHAPTER XVIII

OF INQUIRY INTO CASES TRIABLE BY THE COURT OF SESSION OR HIGH COURT.

692 Object of preliminary inquiry —The object of the law in requiring an inquiry before a trial in the Court of Session is to prevent the commitment of cases in which there is no reasonable ground for conviction This provision of law while it saves the accused persons from detention in custody and prolonged anxiety of undergoing trials for offences not brought home to them also saves the time of the Court of Session from being wasted over cases in which the charge is obviously not supported by such evidence as would support a conviction—Lachman v Juala 5 All 161 A preliminary inquiry also affords the accused an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the circumstances of the offences imputed to him and enables him to make his defence—Rama Tarria v Q 3 Mad 351

No accused can be committed to the Sessions without a preliminary inquiry under this chapter—Emp v Bai Mahalaxmi 17 Bom L R 910 16 Cr L J 747

206 (1) [* * * * * *] Any Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate Sub divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class or any Magistrate (not being a Magistrate of the third class) empowered in this behalf by the Local Government may commit any person for trial to the Court of Session or High Court for any offence triable by such Court

Power to commit for trial

(2) But save as herein otherwise provided no person triable by the Court of Session shall be committed for trial to the High Court

Change —The words Subject to the provision of section 443 occurring in the old section at the very beginning have been omitted by section 9 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (XII of 1923) because the old section 443 which specified the Magistrates competent to inquire into or try a charge against an European British subject has now been repealed and substituted by an entirely new section See Chapter XXXIII

The italicised words have been added by sec 57 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) This amendment is on the same lines as that of section 144 (1) We do not think that the powers under this section should be granted to a Magistrate of the third class —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

693 Committal by Magistrate without jurisdiction —Where the committing Magistrate has authority to commit but has no territorial jurisdiction in the place where the offence is committed the irregularity will be cured by section 531 unless it has occasioned a failure of justice—Rayan Kutti v Emp 26 Mad 640 Q E v Abbi Reddi 17 Mad 402 In Emp v Hem Mandal 11 C L R 55 Emp v Tika Singh 3 All 251 and Q E v Jagma Ratanlal 922 (23) such a committal was held to be void

Committal to wrong sessions —See Note 549 under sec 177

694 "Offence triable by such Court" —The procedure to be adopted under this chapter is not confined to cases exclusively triable by the Court of Session but is also applicable to cases which in the opinion of the Magistrate concerned ought to be tried by such Court—Ramsundar v Narotam 6 All 477 as for instance cases in which the Magistrate cannot inflict adequate punishment upon the accused—Q E v Kayemulla 24 Cal 429 K L v Rama Ranchod 4 Bom L R 85 In such cases the Magistrate must state his grounds in the order of commitment, so as to enable the High Court in revision to judge whether he has exercised a proper discretion—Emp v Mahanad Khan 11 Bom L R

207 The following procedure shall be adopted in inquiries before Magistrates where the case is triable exclusively by a Court of Session or High Court, or, in the opinion of the Magistrate, ought to be tried by such Court

Procedure in inquiries preparatory to commitment

695 "Ought to be tried —The words ought to be tried in this section and sec 347 must be read with sec 254 A case which ought to be tried by the Court of Session is one which the Magistrate is not competent to try or one in which in his opinion adequate punishment cannot be inflicted by him—K E v Pema 4 Bom L R 85 Q E v Abdul Rahiman 16 Bom 580 Emp v Behari 1886 A W N 256 Emp v Hanuman 20 Cr L J 97 (Nag) Imp v Ismail 11 S L R 79 Diwanchand v Crown 8 S L R 23 Q E v Kayemulla 24 Cal 429 See also Emp v Jagmohan 6 A L J 989 Emp v Bindeshri 41 All 454 If the case is one which he has jurisdiction to dispose of i e if he can inflict adequate punishment he should not send up the case for trial to the Court of Session—Diwanchand v Crown 8 S L R 23 15 Cr L J 664 K E v Dharam Singh 3 A L J 14 Emp v Asha Bhathi 15 Bom L R 998 14 Cr L J 657 if he can try it himself he should not commit the case on the sole ground that the accused had been committed in another case—Emp v Hanuman 20 Cr L J 97 (Nag) But in Crown v Ali 1917 P R 13 and Crown v Bhogavathi 42 Mad 83 (dissenting from the above cases) it has been held that the incompetency of the Magistrate to try the case or to pass adequate sentence is not the only ground for committal The Magistrate may commit for any other sufficient reason Thus where the Magistrate committed certain persons to the Sessions on charges under sec 147 I P C not because he could not pass adequate punishment but because other persons on the other side have been committed to the Court of Session on charges under Secs 304, 325 148 and 149 I P C it was held that the committal was not illegal—Crown v Ali, 1917 P R 13, 18 Cr L J 524.

Taking of evidence produced

208 (1) The Magistrate shall, when the accused appears or is brought before him, proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take in manner hereinafter provided all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution or in behalf of the accused, or as may be called for by the Magistrate

(2) The accused shall be at liberty to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution and in such case the prosecutor may re-examine them

Process for production of further evidence

(3) If the complainant or officer conducting the prosecution or the accused applies to the Magistrate to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness or the production of any document or thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless, for reasons to be recorded, he deems it unnecessary to do so.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require a Presidency Magistrate to record his reasons

696. Remand of accused before taking evidence —A person arrested under a warrant should be brought promptly before the Magistrate, and the Magistrate has then no authority to further detain him in custody or remand him to prison, without sufficient cause—Abdul Kadir v. Magistrate, 20 W R 23 If from the absence of the witness or from any reasonable cause, it becomes necessary or advisable to defer the inquiry, the Magistrate instead of immediately examining the complainant and his witnesses, as required by this section, may remand the accused person If there is some evidence available and further evidence is forthcoming, it may be desirable to postpone the inquiry for a short period in order that when commenced it may be continuous But the fact that there is or may be a great body of evidence forthcoming against the accused, is not a ground of detention for an inordinate period—Manikam v. Q 6 Mad 63 Similarly, where there is no evidence at all to begin with a Magistrate will not be justified in remanding the prisoner, in the expectation that evidence might turn up—Q v Purna Chandra, 4 B L R App 1.

697. Taking evidence produced —A commitment made without taking any evidence on a preliminary inquiry is illegal—Ratanlal 100 Under this section it is the duty of the Magistrate to take all evidence tendered by both sides before framing a charge—Crown v Po Kyan, 1 L B R 348 In every inquiry into a Sessions case, it is the duty of the committing Magistrate to make a full and careful inquiry and to record the whole evidence in the case He should do so even when the accused has made a confession as confessions are in many cases retracted at the trial—Ratanlal 842 The Magistrate is bound to take all such evidence as may be produced (1) in support of the prosecution (2) on behalf of the accused and (3) as may be called for by the Magistrate—Durga Dutt v K E, 10 A L J 144 13 Cr L J 443 A commitment or discharge without examination of all the witnesses for the prosecution is illegal—Q v Chinna Vedagiri 4 Mad 227 Q v Parasurama 4 Mad 329 The prosecutor is bound to produce all evidence in his favour directly bearing on the charge and to call those witnesses who prove their connection with the transaction in question and are able to give important information unless there is reasonable belief that they will not speak the truth—Emp v Dhunno 8 Cal 121 The prosecutor should not refuse to call or put into the witness box any witness for the prosecution merely because the evidence of such witness might in some respects be favourable to the defence—Q E v Durga 16 All 84 (F B) It is his duty to call all witnesses who can throw any light on the inquiry whether they support the prosecution theory or the defence theory—1 P L T 161 But if the prosecutor is of opinion that a witness is a false witness or is likely to give false testimony he is not bound to call that witness—Q E v Durga 16 All 84 Q E v Stanyon 14 All 521 Q E v Bankhandi 15 All 6

If all the witnesses are not called for the prosecution without sufficient cause the Court may properly draw an inference adverse to the prosecution—Emp v Dhunno 8 Cal 121 But no corresponding inference will be drawn against the accused for non production of his witnesses He may rely on the witnesses for the prosecution or call his own witnesses or meet the charge in any other way he chooses—Emp v Dhunno 8 Cal 121 Ashraf Ali v K E 21 C W N 1152 19 Cr L J 81 In a recent Patna case it has been laid down that if the prosecution did not send up all the material witnesses it is the duty of the committing Magistrate to call and examine them himself in order to determine which side was speaking the truth—Pershad v Emp 26 Cr L J 1589 A I R 1926 Pat 5

The Magistrate is competent to cross examine the prosecution witnesses in order to consider whether the witnesses are credible or not—Emp v Bai Mahalaxmi 17 Bom L R 910 16 Cr L J 747

Evidence for the accused —The Magistrate is not empowered to frame a charge or make an order for commitment until he has taken all such evidence as the accused may produce or is prepared to produce before him for hearing—Q E v Ahmedi 20 All 264 Emp v Muhammed Hadi 26 All 177 Jaswant Singh v Emp 46 All 137 21 A L J 911 The accused must be given an opportunity of adducing evidence on his behalf and the Magistrate cannot refuse to take it without recording his reasons—Reg v Sita Ratanlal 100

698 Sub-section (2)—Right of cross-examination —Under this sub-section the accused has a right to cross examine the witnesses for the prosecution Refusal by a Magistrate to allow the accused to cross examine the prosecution witnesses during the inquiry is arbitrary and improper The depositions of the prosecution witnesses during the inquiry are not to be deemed as duly taken if the accused had not an opportunity to cross examine them and cannot be treated as evidence at the Sessions trial—Q E v Sagal 21 Cal 642

Under this section the accused has the right to cross examine the prosecution witnesses before the proceedings have reached the stage in which it may be necessary to draw up a charge—In re Surja Narain 5 C W N 110 Q E v Sagal 21 Cal 642 Durga Dutt v K E 10 A L J 144 Baldeo v K E 19 O C 39 18 Cr L J 105 Where an application to cross examine was made before the charge was framed and before the Magistrate had decided to commit the case to the Court of Session he was bound to allow the accused to cross examine the prosecution witnesses—Jyotsna Nath v Emp 51 Cal 44- (445) The proper time for cross examination of a witness in an inquiry under this chapter is in the ordinary course immediately after the examination in chief of that particular witness—Emp v Arnold 6 L B R 1?9 5 Bur L T 239 Tambi v Emp 11 Bur L T 144 19 Cr L J 3 7 As each witness is examined by the prosecution he should be then and there cross examined by the accused and re examined by the prosecution and allowed to go home and it is not a convenient procedure to allow cross examination to be reserved until after the examination in chief of all the prosecution witnesses has been finished—Durga Dutt v K E 10 A L J 144 13 Cr L J 443, In re Mohamed Kasim 14 M L T 53? 15 Cr L J ?9 Tambi v Emp 11 Bur L T 144 19 Cr L J 327 In Jogendra v Motilal 39 Cal 885 16 C W N 1155 however it has been held that it is open to the Magistrate to allow cross examination of the prosecution witnesses even after a charge is drawn up See this case cited under sec 213 (2)

The ordinary rule as laid down in the Evidence Act is that the witnesses will be examined in chief cross examined and re examined There is no express provision for postponing the cross examination of witnesses till all the prosecution witnesses are examined in chief A special provision has been made under certain circumstances with respect to trials under warrant cases entitling the accused to postpone the cross examination of witnesses till a certain stage No such provision has been made with respect to an inquiry into cases triable by a Court of Session under Chapter XVIII The Magistrate however has the discretion to allow the accused to postpone the cross examination of witnesses in suitable circumstances He cannot of course throw any obstacle in the exercise of the liberty by an accused to cross examine the witnesses for the prosecution Thus where the accused have applied for copies of statements made by prosecution witnesses to the Police during the investigation with a view to cross examine the witnesses and the Magistrate has ordered such copies to be furnished under the proviso to sec 162 (1) the Magistrate is bound to postpone the cross examination of the witnesses until such copies are furnished to the accused and to afford the accused an opportunity to cross examine after receiving such copies Omission to do so constitutes a direct violation of the statutory provisions of sec 208 (2) and vitiates the commitment—Saadat Mian v Emp 6 Pat 329 28 Cr L J 709

Where a case was at first begun as a warrant case and the accused had not cross examined the witness because in a warrant case he could reserve his rights to do so until after the framing of the charge but after hearing the prosecution evidence the Magistrate came to the conclusion that the case was a Sessions case and thereupon converted the proceeding into one under this chapter held that the accused had a right to have the witnesses recalled for cross examination as he had been prejudiced by the sudden change of procedure—Dhamarcha v Emp 19 A L J 463 23 Cr L J 496

The procedure of this section is to be followed in cases under sec 347 See sec 347 as now amended

699 Sub-section (3) —Summoning witnesses —Before committing the accused to the Sessions the Magistrate should if so required by the accused compel the attendance of witnesses for the defence If he commits an accused to the Sessions without examining the witnesses applied for under this sub-section the order of commitment is invalid—Emp v Muhammad Hadi 26 All 177 But the Magistrate has also a discretion to refuse to issue process if he thinks it unnecessary to do so He may refuse process where there has been an inordinate delay in asking for it e g when the accused made the application for process not until the charge was about to be drawn up—Sessions Judge v Rangaya 36 Mad 321 23 M L J 368 The Magistrate may reject the application for summoning witnesses if it is made on the date fixed for passing the order of commitment—Emp v Sarath 42 Cal 608 19 C W N 335

Moreover it is not incumbent on the Magistrate to summon every person named as a witness by the complainant—Chelam Tewari v Sukdad 23 W R 9 For instance Hindu ladies of respectability and secluded habits would not be compelled to attend as witnesses when no distinct case is made out against the accused—Q v Ram Doyal 3 W R 46

If the Magistrate refuses to issue process he must record his reasons for so doing if he rejects the application for process without recording reasons he acts illegally and the order that is passed subsequently is unsustainable in law—Kanda Raja v Sangaraja 24 L W 713 In re Sal Narain 3 All 392 If he records his reasons for exercising his discretion in rejecting the application of the accused to summon the defence witnesses the order of the Magistrate cannot be held to be illegal and therefore the order of commitment cannot be set aside under sec 215 as no point of law arises—Saadat Mian v Emp 6 Pat 329 28 Cr L J 709

But if the Magistrate issues process for the attendance of witnesses he is bound to examine them and cannot refuse to do so Therefore where on the application of the accused the Magistrate summoned witnesses for the defence and consented to make a local inspection but under a direction from the Sessions Judge committed the accused for trial without examining those witnesses and without making the local inspection it was held that the commitment was illegal and should be set aside—Emp v Mathura 1906 A W N 306 4 Cr L J 451

209 (1) When the evidence referred to in Section 208 sub-sections (1) and (3), has been taken, and he has (if necessary) examined the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, such Magistrate shall, if he finds that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused person for trial, record his reasons and discharge him unless it appears to the Magistrate that such person should be tried before himself or some other Magistrate, in which case he shall proceed accordingly.

When accused person to be discharged.

(2) [illegible]

Magistrate, he considers the charge to be groundless

700. Examination of the accused —The object of examining the accused is to enable a Judge to ascertain from time to time, particularly if the accused is undefended, what explanation he may offer regarding any facts stated by a witness appearing against him, so that these facts should not stand unexplained—Exparte Virabudra, 1 M H C R. 199, Hussein Buksh v. Emp, 6 Cal 96 But the accused should not be [illegible]

974 under sec. 342

Moreover, the accused should not be examined for the purpose of filling up gaps in the evidence for the prosecution—Basanta Kumar v. Q E, 26 Cal 49, nor for the purpose of supplementing the evidence where it is deficient—In re Chinibash, 1 C L R. 436 The accused must be examined as an accused and not as a witness Where on a complaint against two persons for an offence, the committing Magistrate inquired into the case against one of them and examined the other as a witness, the second accused could not be committed to the Sessions in the absence of a preliminary inquiry into his case and without examining him as an accused—Emp. v. Bai Mahalaxmi, 17 Bom L R 910, 16 Cr L. J 747.

It is not left to the discretion of the committing Magistrate as to whether he should examine the accused or not; he is bound to examine It is the duty of the Magistrate, before committing the accused, to examine him for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him. If the Magistrate commits the accused without examination, the commitment should be quashed if it has occasioned a failure of justice—Q E v. Pandara, 23 Mad 636.

The accused should not be ordered to file any written statement—Chinnasami v Veeriah, 2 Weir 255, but if he chooses to make any statement the Court should not refuse to allow him to do so—In re Abdul Guffoor, 10 C. L R 54

701. Duty of Magistrate—'sufficient grounds'.—A Magistrate should not commit an accused to the Sessions simply because the case is a Sessions case and because the evidence for the prosecution discloses an offence He may examine the accused and his witnesses and decide whether there are sufficient grounds for commitment—Emp v Dikes 1899 A W N 135

The words 'sufficient grounds of commitment" are ambiguous, and have led to a difference of opinion among the High Courts as to whether the Magistrate should weigh the evidence and decide whether the conviction of the accused is certain, or whether the Magistrate should merely see if a prima facie case has been made out and there is a possibility of conviction

On the one hand, it has been laid down that in deciding whether there are sufficient grounds for commitment, the Magistrate is to see whether there are credible witnesses to facts which, if believed by a jury, would justify the conviction of the accused, but it is not the duty of the Magistrate to weigh the evidence If he proceeds to weigh the evidence to accept some statements and reject others, to deal with probabilities or to draw inferences as to knowledge or intention, and to decide whether the guilt of the accused has or has not been conclusively proved, he is in reality dealing with the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused and is usurping the functions of the trial Court He must not in any way encroach upon the functions of the jury—National Bank v Kothandarama, 14 M L T 200, 14 Cr L J 529, Akbar Ali v Rup Bahadur 24 A L J 133, 27 Cr L J 2 (4); Chinnammal v Konda Reddi 28 Cr L J 120, 38 M L T 135 The Magistrate has not to pronounce a definite judgment on the question whether the accused is guilty or innocent The only question he has to decide is whether there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, i e whether there is or is not sufficient legal evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion—Fattu v Fattu, 26 All 564 The words 'sufficient grounds of commitment' do not mean sufficient grounds of conviction, but evidence which is sufficient to put the accused on his trial, and such a case arises when credible witnesses make statements which if believed would sustain a conviction The weighing of their testimony with regard to improbabilities and apparent discrepancies is more properly a function of the Court which is to try the case than that of the committing Magistrate—Q E v. Namdev, 11 Bom 372, Emp v Varjivandas, 27 Bom 84, Hazara Singh v Bishen Singh, 1908 P R 14 When the Legislature speaks of sufficient grounds for committing for trial, it should not be supposed to have spoken of sufficient grounds for conviction. The intention of the legislature is to make a distinction between grounds of commitment and grounds for conviction Satisfactory proof of the guilt of the accused is ground for conviction Satisfactory evidence to go to trial must be regarded as the ground for committing for trial What the inquiring Magistrate has got to try and determine is not whether the case has been made out by the prosecution but only whether there is a case for trial There is always a case for trial when the evidence is of such a nature that the guilt of the accused can be held to be proved or disproved only as the result of the valuing and the weighing of evidence But if the evidence be of such a nature that no reasonable person and no tribunal Judge or jury would ever on the evidence hold the accused guilty it follows that there is no case for trial and it is then a case for the enquiring Magistrate to discharge—In re Mania Manicka 48 Mad 874 49 M L J 155 26 Cr L J 1570 A I R 1925 Mad 1061 What the Magistrate has to consider is not whether the conviction of the accused is reasonably certain but whether there is evidence on which a conviction is possible in law—Emp v Tarjivandas 27 Bom 84 Where the prosecution produced a good deal of direct evidence it is no function of the Magistrate to weigh the evidence but he should commit the accused person for trial It is the duty of the Magistrate to commit when the evidence for the prosecution is sufficient to make out a prima facie case against the accused—Maula v Crown 4 Lah 69 5 Lah L J 276

On the other hand there are some cases in which it has been laid down that a Magistrate is competent to weigh the evidence and to decide whether it is credible or no Thus in an earlier Allahabad case it has been held that the power given to Magistrates under this section extends to weighing of evidence and the expression sufficient grounds must be understood in a wide sense so as to indicate such evidence as would justify a conviction—Lachman v Juala 5 All 161 Notwithstanding direct evidence adduced against the accused it is not incompetent to a Magistrate to examine the credibility of the evidence to see whether the prosecution case is improbable and the evidence unreliable—Rash Behari v Emp 12 C W N 117 In re Bai Parbati 35 Bom 163 Murshi Mander v Karu 6 P L T 146 25 Cr L J 1089 Trikowri v Emp 1 P L T 153 21 Cr L J 328 In re Karemban 15 L W 552 A I R 1927 Mad 195 Sultan v Crown 1909 P R 10 Mir Abdulla v Crown 1910 P L R 215 11 Cr L J 751 The Magistrate has discretion and power to weight the evidence in order to see whether the case is a fit one for the jury to decide or whether there is no prima facie case for the accused to meet—Thiru Vandiya Trevar v Emp 42 M L J 49 23 Cr L J 209 A I R 1922 Mad 43 It is open to the committing Magistrate to form his opinion with regard to the credibility of the witnesses called before him but of course it is not his duty to closely criticize their evidence—Tarapada v Kalipada 51 Cal 849 (852) 28 C W N 58, Where charges exclusively triable by a Court of Session are brought before a Magistrate and some evidence is offered in support thereof it is not his duty in all cases to commit the accused to the Sessions The Magistrate should exercise his discretion and after weighing the evidence decide whether or not he should try the case himself—Emp v Hari Das 37 C L J 34 24 Cr L J 674 A I R 1923 Cal 108 In re Kalyan Singh 21 All 265

cases and has laid down the following propositions that a Magistrate is competent to consider the credibility and weigh the probabilities of the evidence that in this consideration his discretion is limited that in a matter of reasonable doubt he must not rely upon his own opinion in fact he must not encroach upon the functions of a Court of trial Further more he must keep before him the question whether there are fair grounds for concluding that the accused is guilty upon the evidence In other words where there is a prima facie case upon evidence reasonably credible by a Court of trial he should commit The Rangoon High Court has also expressed the opinion that it is impossible to lay down any general rule or rules which must be applied in every case and that it is extremely diff cult to arrive at a formula which will be of assistance in all circumstances Each case must be decided upon its own particular facts—Maung Hun v Maung Po 4 Rang 471 28 Cr L J 219 (221 223)

702 When Magistrate should commit —(1) Where there is credible evidence which if believed shows that there is a prima facie case which ought to be tried at the Sessions the Magistrate should commit the case to the Sessions and not try it himself—Q E v Munisami 15 Mad 39 Tarapada v Kalipada 51 Cal 849 (852) Hazara v Bishin Singh 1908 P R 14 National Bank v Kothandarama 14 M L T 200 14 Cr L J 529 Jamal Mahomed v Moideen 9 M L T 71 12 Cr L J 20 Anonymous 2 Weir 652 (653) Chiranji Lal v Ram Lal 1904 A W N 5 Q E v Namdev 11 Bom 372 Makhni v Farzand Ali 18 A L J 232 21 Cr L J 318

(2) Where the question of discharge or commitment turns on probabilities the Magistrate ought rather to leave the decision to the Session Court than to order a discharge on the improbabilities of the case by giving the benefit of doubt to the accused—Fattu v Fattu 26 All 564 Chiranji Lal v Ram Lal 1904 A W N 5 Akbar Ali v Raja Bahadur 24 A L J 133 27 Cr L J 2 (All) Emp v Allah 25 A L J 191 28 Cr L J 281 Makhni v Farzand Ali 18 A L J 232 In re Bai Parvati 35 Bom 163 Q E v Namdev 11 Bom 372 Q v Kisto Doba 14 W R 16 Nga Hmyin v K E 1917 U B R 3rd Qr 29 19 Cr L J 10? Aidas Tekchand v Saban 15 S L R 1 22 Cr L J 570

(3) Where a person is charged with an offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session and there is some evidence to support the story of the complainant it is the duty of the Magistrate to commit the accused for trial by that Court and not to disregard the graver charge merely because he considers the prosecution story to be an exaggeration and convict the accused of other minor offences immediately connected with the graver offence—Mir Moze Ali v K E 23 C W N 1031 21 Cr L J 10

(4) Where the evidence discloses a circumstance of aggravation which makes the offence one cognizable by a higher Court it becomes the duty of the Magistrate to use the proper procedure for sending the case to the higher Court and not to try it himself It is an evasion of law to treat an aggravated offence as an ordinary offence and thus to introduce a different jurisdiction or a lower scale of punishment—Q E v Gundya 13 Bom

(2) When the Magistrate is clearly of opinion that the evidence for the prosecution is on the whole untrustworthy and that there is no reasonable probability of the case ending in a conviction—Harbans v Fakir Das 7 C W N 77 Tarapadi v Kalipada 51 Cal 849 Fattu v Fatti 26 All 564 In re Bai Parvati 35 Bom 163 In re Damappa 15 Cr L J 373 (Mad) Lachman v Jiala 5 All 161 Thirumalai v Emp 42 M L J 49 In re Naramban 1922 M W N 326 Maulu v Crown 4 Lah 69 Ahmad v Emp 23 Cr L J 601 (Lah) Dharam Singh v Jyoti Prosad 37 All 355 Md Abdul v Baldeo 44 All 57 Akbar Ali v Raja Bahadur 24 A L J 133 27 Cr L J 2 Emp v Ganpat 46 All 537 (538) 22 A L J 411 Tinkowri v Emp 1 P L T 153 Aidas Tikchand v Saban 15 S L R 1 Nga Hmyin v K E 1917 U B R 3rd Qr 29 19 Cr L J 102 If the Magistrate is satisfied that the charge is without foundation he is entitled and indeed it is his duty to discharge the accused even though the statements of the prosecution if accepted at their face value might make out a prima facie case against the accused—Emp v Ganpat Lal 46 All 537 (dissenting from Chiranji Lal v Ram Lal 1904 A W N 5) Though in case of doubt the Magistrate may be justified in leaving the case for the jury to decide still if he is convinced that the evidence is false it is his dury to discharge the accused—Kasim Ali v Sarada 30 C W N 336 But the Magistrate must exercise a proper discretion in ordering the discharge of any person charged with a session offence. It is not enough for the Magistrate merely to doubt some portions of the prosecution evidence He must be satisfied that the prosecution will fail and rightly fail in the sessions Court—Chheda v Emp 1 O W N 402 11 O L J 664 25 Cr L J 1189

(3) Where no evidence is forthcoming against the accused owing to the absence of the prosecutor and his witnesses and the case is not one in which the Magistrate ought to adjourn the inquiry—Tuki Mahomed v Kisto Lal 15 W R 53

In all the above cases the Magistrate should discharge the accused

(4) When the charge is not so serious as to justify a committal the Magistrate should not shirk the responsibility of trying the case by committing it to the Sessions—Crown v Ahmed Shah 1 S L R 103

704 Recording reasons —A Magistrate discharging an accused person under this section should record his reasons for so doing But if he omits to record reasons it cannot be said that the order of discharge is illegal—Aung Min v K E 4 L B R 362 In all cases where a Magistrate discharges or commits he should give his reasons for so doing and it will be proper for the High Court to consider these reasons when deciding whether he has exercised his discretion correctly—Maung Hmn v Maung Po 4 Rang. 471 28 Cr L J 219 (223) But the Magistrate is not authorised to write a judgment All that he is empowered to do is to record reasons for a discharge, if he makes such an order, and to pass the order of discharge—Hari Ram v Ganga Sahai, 40 All 615, 16 A L J. 486, 19 Cr L J 706.

705. Effect of discharge—fresh proceedings.—An order of discharge does not amount to an acquittal The discharge of a person accused of an offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session is no bar to his being apprehended and brought before a Magistrate with a view to his commitment—Q v Telkoo, 8 W R 61; Q. E. v. Krishnabhai 10 Bom 319 See section 437 Even if the Magistrate purports to acquit the accused, such an acquittal is really a discharge, and is no bar to fresh commitment Thus where a complaint was made of an offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session, and the Magistrate took evidence and framed a charge for a minor offence and acquitted the accused, the order of acquittal was in effect an order of discharge in respect of the original offence complained of, and the Sessions Judge in revision could order the commitment of the accused on the original charge under sec 436 (now sec 437)—Krishna Reddi v Subbamma, 24 Mad 136, followed in Khanu v Emp 19 S L R 353 25 Cr L J 1368 Contra—Baijanath v. Gouri Kanta, 20 Cal 633, Q E v Hanumantha 23 Mad 225 See these cases cited in Note 1190 under sec 437

The District Magistrate or Sessions Judge directing further inquiry or commitment under sec 437 is bound to consider all the grounds upon which the order of discharge has been passed, including a consideration of the evidence which has been disbelieved or held to be insufficient to establish a prima facie case—Harbans Singh v Fakir Das, 7 C W N 77

Compensation —No compensation should be awarded to the accused person discharged under this section, on the ground that the charge is vexatious, if the case is one triable exclusively by the Court of Session—Q E v Lalbu Ratanlal 961 See sec 250.

706. Sub-section (2)—Discharge at early stage.—Sub-section (2) relieves a Magistrate from the necessity of going on with an inquiry or trial when he is reasonably convinced on what has been already deposed to, that a criminal charge cannot be sustained—Dhanjibhai v Pyarji, Ratanlal 201 Thirumalai Vandaya v Emp, 42 M L J. 59 23 Cr L J 209

707. Interference by High Court.—See sections 436, 437 If an order of discharge is passed by a Presidency Magistrate, the High Court can interfere and direct a committal not merely by virtue of the power given by section 15 of the Charter Act but also by the powers conferred by section 439 of this Code—Emp v. Varjivandas, 27 Bom 84 (following Colville v Kristo Kishore, 26 Cal 746 and dissenting from Charoobala v. Barendra, 27 Cal 126) See Note 682 under sec 203

210. (1) When, upon such evidence being taken and such examination (if any) being made, the Magistrate is satisfied that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, he shall frame a charge

When charge is to be framed under his hand, declaring with what offence the accused is charged

(2) As soon as such charge has been framed, it shall be read and explained to the accused, and a copy thereof shall if he so requires be given to him free of cost

Charge to be explained, and copy furnished to accused

Change —The words such charge have been substituted for the words the charge by section 58 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 We have made this verbal amendment to meet a suggestion of the Bengal Government —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

708 "Upon such evidence —See section 208 It is illegal to commit an accused without taking any evidence in the preliminary inquiry—Reg v Sita Ratanlal 100 So also it is illegal to frame a charge or order commitment without taking all the evidence produced by the accused —Q E v Ahmadi 20 All 264 If the case is transferred from the Court of one Magistrate to another the latter can commit the case to the Sessions acting upon the evidence recorded by the former—K E v Kanhua 36 All 315 12 A L J 467 15 Cr L J 354

709 Sufficient grounds —See Note 701 under section 209 A commitment can be made only when there are sufficient grounds for committing that is to say not merely sufficient allegations as to the offence which may or may not be credible but such grounds as satisfy the Magistrate as being sufficient to support a charge A District Magistrate cannot therefore order a Subordinate Magistrate to commit a case unless it appears that the latter had no good reason to discredit the prosecution witnesses and that their evidence was sufficient in law to form the basis of a conviction —Emp v Pirooji 9 Bom L R 275 5 Cr L J 213

The discretion given to Magistrate to decide whether there are sufficient grounds for commitment is a judicial discretion and must be exercised with care and on some proper ground It is an improper exercise of discretion to add a grave charge without sufficient evidence for the mere purpose of committing the case to the Sessions—Emp v Mahomed Khan 11 Bom L R 18 9 Cr L J 163

710 Commitment of case triable by Magistrate —A Magistrate is competent to commit a case not exclusively triable by the Court of Session if he cannot inflict adequate punishment in the case See notes under sections 206 and 207

But a Magistrate going on leave does not exercise proper discretion if he commits a case triable by himself to the Sessions simply because the witnesses for the accused are not in attendance and it would be inconvenient for his successor to begin the trial afresh—Anonymous Ratanlal 110, so also a Magistrate ought not to commit the accused in a case of theft merely because the case was connected with another case which he was bound by law to commit—Emp v Asha Bhatti 15 Bom L R 998 14 Cr L J 657

When two or more persons are jointly indicted and the jurisdiction of the Magistrate is ousted in the case of one of them by reason of the offence committed by him being one triable only by the Court of Session the proper course is to commit all of them to the Sessions and not to try the others himself and commit that one person to the Sessions—Anonymous 1 Weir 448 Probodh Kumar v Mohini 22 Cr L J 480 (Cal)

711 Frame of charge—See section 226 as to the procedure in case of commitment without any charge or with an erroneous or imperfect charge

The Magistrate when he has framed a charge is bound to read it out to the accused and to ask him if he wishes to have any witnesses summoned to give evidence on his behalf before the Sessions Court—Q v Hurnath 2 W R 50

When a Magistrate has given his reasons for committing the case for trial, the Sessions Judge must either accept the charge as framed or frame others himself But the Code does not authorise him to insist on a redrawing of the charge by the Magistrate unless he specifies the charge which he wishes to be sent up—In re Ramdhone 25 W R 17

The framing of a charge does not amount to an order of commitment and after the charge is framed the Magistrate does not become functus officio in respect of the case He can amend the charge or can proceed with the case himself he can consider whether he ought to commit or not —Emp v Venkatesh 12 Bom L R 521 11 Cr L J 486 He can even discharge the accused See sec 213 (2) and notes thereunder The ruling in Ratanlal 161 is no longer good law But once an order of commitment is passed under sec 213 the Magistrate has no power to proceed any further with the case—Emp v Venkatesh 12 Bom L R 521

211 (1) The accused shall be required at once to give in orally or in writing a list of the persons, (if any) whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on his trial

List of witnesses for defence on trial

(2) The Magistrate may in his discretion, allow the accused to give in any further list of witnesses at a subsequent time and, where the accused is committed for trial before the High Court, nothing in this section shall be deemed to preclude the accused from giving, at any time before his trial, to the Clerk of the Crown a further list of the persons whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on such trial

Further list

712 Magistrate's duty to require list—The Magistrate is bound under this section to require the accused to give a list of the witnesses

he desires to call It is not enough to put him the question Have you any evidence ?" such a question is ambiguous and might suggest to the accused only an inquiry as to whether he had witnesses ready in Court—Emp v Kondi 7 Bom L R 723 2 Cr L J 601

If a Magistrate commits an accused person to the Sessions without asking him if he wishes to have any witnesses to be summoned on his behalf to give evidence before the Sessions the omission may be supplied subsequently—Q v Hurnath 2 W R 50

Refusal of accused to give list of names of witnesses —If an accused person on being called upon under sec 211 declines to give the list, he cannot compel the Magistrate after committal to issue any summons for witnesses on his behalf He is of course entitled to call any witnesses in the Sessions Court whom he may have in Court whether or not he has caused such witnesses to be summoned The Sessions Judge may in his discretion cause any witnesses to be summoned on the application of the accused and is bound to summon them if he considers that their evidence may be material—Q E v Shakir Ali 19 All 502

The accused is entitled before the committing Magistrate to refuse to disclose the names of the witnesses he wishes to call at the trial and the Magistrate cannot force him to disclose their names or the nature of the evidence they would be called upon to give—Q E v Hargovind 14 All 242

Refusal of Magistrate to summon and examine witnesses —On receipt of the list of witnesses the Magistrate is bound to exercise his discretion and state distinctly whether he would summon the witnesses or not If he is of opinion that the witnesses were included in the list for the purpose of vexation delay or of defeating the ends of justice he ought to proceed under the second proviso of section 216—Q v Rajeswar 16 W R 14

But a Magistrate should not refuse an application for summons on the ground that the witnesses are implicated in the offence with which the accused is charged—Ram Sahai v Sankar 15 W R 7 or on the ground that the number of witnesses is very large—Harendra v Bhabani 11 Cal 762 or on the ground that he entertains doubts as to the value of their evidence—In re Mohima Chunder 15 W R 15

212 The Magistrate may, in his discretion, summon and examine any witness named in any list given in to him under Section 211

Power of Magistrate to examine such witnesses

713 Discretion of Magistrate —This section gives the Magistrate the widest possible discretion to summon and examine any of the witnesses named in any list given under sec 211, even in cases where the accused has reserved his defence for the Sessions trial The Magistrate is not bound to record reasons before exercising his powers—In re Rudra Singh 18 All 380 The Magistrate is not bound to examine any witness named in the list—Sessions Judge v Kaneaya 36 Mad 321 23 M L J 368 13 Cr L J 778 Saadat Mian v Emp, 6 Pat. 379 28 Cr L J 709.

The discretion of the Magistrate ought not to be interferred with by the Sessions Judge Therefore where the Magistrate intended to summon some witnesses for the accused and to make a local inspection but had to commit the case to the Sessions at the direction of the Sessions Judge it was held that the Sessions Judge's direction was ultra vires as it unduly interfered with the discretion of the Magistrate and the committal was bad in law—Emp v Mathura, 1906 A W N 306 4 Cr L J 451

213 (1) When the accused, on being required to give in a list under Section 211, has declined to do so, or when he has given in such list and the witnesses (if any) included therein whom the Magistrate desires to examine have been summoned and examined under Section 212, the Magistrate may make an order committing the accused for trial by the High Court or the Court of Session (as the case may be), and (unless the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate) shall also record briefly the reasons for such commitment

Order of commitment

(2) If the Magistrate after hearing the witnesses for the defence is satisfied that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused, he may cancel the charge and discharge the accused

714 Commitment —As to when the Magistrate should or should not commit see Notes 702 and 703 under sec 209

A commitment made in the absence of the accused is illegal—In re Surya Narain 5 C W N 110 but where the accused was allowed to appear by an agent under section 205 a commitment made in the absence of the accused but in the presence of the agent is not illegal—Q v Hurnath W R 50

Commitment after discharge —Where a Magistrate after examining four witnesses for the prosecution discharged the accused but subsequently becoming aware that there was a fifth witness he cancelled his order of discharge examined the witness and committed the accused to Sessions, it was held that the commitment was not illegal—Anonymous 7 M H C R App 40 7 Weir 258

Commitment to wrong Sessions —See Note 519 under section 171

Signature of Magistrate —The signature of the Magistrate to the warrant of commitment should not be impressed with a stamp But such a signature is only an irregularity and does not vitiate the proceedings—Subramanya v Queen 6 Mad 306

Reasons for commitment —The Magistrate shall briefly record the reasons for commitment If a Magistrate commits a case triable by himself he is bound to record his reasons for commitment so as to enable Court to judge whether the committal is a sound exercise of discretionary power—Emp v Md Khan 11 Bom L R 18 9 Cr L J 163 Emp v Nanji 38 Bom 114 he must state why the case was not disposed of by himself—Diwani Chand v Crown 8 S L R 23 15 Cr L J 664 The High Court has jurisdiction to quash the commitment, if the Magistrate gives no reasons whatever for the commitment—Emp v Nanji 38 Bom 114 or gives reasons which are bad in law—Emp v Achaldas 28 Bom L R 293 27 Cr L J 479 Emp v Bhimaji 42 Bom 172 19 Cr L J 342

The Magistrate in his grounds of commitment should specify exactly and precisely the proof against each particular prisoner and the manner in which it is supported—Q v Kodai Kahar 5 W R 6

Commitment of some trial of others —Where several persons are jointly charged with the same offences and it is considered necessary to commit one of them to the Sessions the most convenient course is that all the prisoners should be committed and not that the one person should be committed and the others tried by the Magistrate himself If however the Magistrate adopts the latter course it cannot be said that he has acted in contravention of any provision of law—In re Kathu Chanchugadu, 2 Weir 258 Anonymous 1 Weir 448

Joint commitment —Where several persons are jointly charged with having committed an offence especially in cases of rioting etc where there are two hostile parties each person should be committed for trial separately and not all together and the trial should also be separate—Q v Sheikh Ba oo 8 W R 47 but a commitment is not to be set aside as illegal, because all the accused were jointly committed The sections of the Code relating to joinder of charges, and the Privy Council ruling in Subramania Aiyar v K E 25 Mad 61 refer to trials only and not to commitment—In re Govindu 26 Mad 592 Q E v Ahmed Khan 1900 A W N 206 Emp v Sita 7 Bom L R 457 2 Cr L J 432 In such cases of joint commitment, the Sessions Judge should frame separate charges and try the accused separately, as if there had been separate commitments—In re Govindu 26 Mad 592 Q E v Ahmed Khan, 1900 A W N 206

715 Sub-section (2)—Scope —Subsection (2) is intended to provide for cases where the evidence recorded after the charge so changes the aspect of the case as to leave no reasonable doubt that a conviction is not sustainable but it does not apply where the evidence for the defence merely casts some doubts on the case—Crown v Po Nyan, 1 L B R 348 Under this section the Magistrate has a discretion even after he has framed a charge of cancelling it if after hearing the evidence for the defence he considers that there are no longer sufficient grounds to put the accused on his trial—Nga Hmyin v K E, U B R (1917) 3rd Qr 20 19 Cr L J 102 If the Magistrate after hearing the defence witnesses comes to the conclusion that their evidence rebuts the evidence produced for the prosecution or renders it so incredible or unreliable that a conviction will not follow he may act upon his opinion and pass an order of discharge under this subsection He is not bound to commit merely because there was some prima facie evidence—Md Abdul v Baldeo 44

All 57, 19 A L J 831, 22 Cr L J 703 Akbar Ali v Raja Bahadur 24 A L J 133, 27 Cr L J 2 This discretion must, however, be carefully exercised, and whenever there is a possibility that different Courts might take different views of the evidence, the Magistrate, even though he may himself not think the evidence sufficient for a conviction, should leave it to the Sessions Court to pronounce finally upon the matter—Akbar Ali v Raja Bahadur (supra)

The words 'witnesses for the defence' in subsection (2) are wide enough to cover evidence extracted by cross examination of the prosecution witnesses and therefore it is open to a Magistrate, after he has drawn up a charge, to allow the accused to cross examine the witnesses for the prosecution and as a result to cancel the charge—Jogendra v Matilal, 39 Cal 885, 16 C W N 1155, 13 Cr L J 771.

(12) Where the committing Magistrate held the inquiry without the certificate of the Political Agent which was necessary in the case—Ram Charan v Crown 5 Lah 416 see this case and other cases cited under sec 188

719 What are not proper grounds for setting aside commitment —(1) The High Court cannot set aside a committal merely because the Magistrate made a joint commitment of several accused —In re Govinda 26 Mad 592 Q E v Ahmad Khan 1900 A W N 206 and Emp v Sita 7 Bom L R 457 cited under sec 213

(2) A commitment can be quashed only on a point of law and cannot be quashed on the ground that there was no evidence on the committing Magistrate s record to sustain the charge—Emp v Suleman 13 Bom L R 201 12 Cr L J 256 Ismail v Emp 26 Cr L J 1045 (Nag) In re Sessions Judge, 27 M L J 593 15 Cr L J 665 so also a commitment cannot be quashed because of doubts as to the credibility of the evidence for the prosecution if there is in fact some evidence which would justify the Sessions Judge in leaving the question of guilt or innocence to the jury—Mahomed Moideen v K E 1 Rang 526 25 Cr L J 261 A commitment cannot be quashed merely on the ground that the evidence was doubtful The proper course in such a case would be for the District Magistrate to instruct the Public Prosecutor to withdraw from the prosecution under sec 494—K E v Ngu Taung 7 Bur L T 26

(3) Where a Magistrate going on leave committed to the Sessions a case triable by himself, on the ground that the witnesses were not in attendance and that this successor would find it inconvenient to try the case afresh, it was held that the commitment was merely irregular and not illegal so as to justify the High Conrt to quash it—Anonymous Ratanlal 110

(4) A commitment is not illegal because it is made to the same Sessions Judge who gave the direction for the prosecution of an accused for an offence (giving false evidence) committed before him—Reg v Gasi, 1 Bom 311

(5) A commitment for false complaint (sec 211 I P C) is not illegal merely because the Magistrate has proceeded on the report of a police officer and has not made a judicial inquiry into the complaint—Emp v. Saleh Roy, 6 Cal. 582

(6) The fact that some of the accused were committed while other persons who were concerned in the offence had not yet been arrested is not a ground for setting aside the commitment—In re Ramasami, 7 M L T. 187, 11 Cr L J 333

(7) A commitment ought not to be quashed on the ground that a civil suit is pending in respect of the subject matter of the offence—In re Devji, 18 Bom 581 but the trial of the case may be postponed until the determination of the civil suit—Sankaraya v Kerala Subba, 2 Weir 260

(8) Where the Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction over the place of offence but the objection taken on this point was overruled by the Sessions Judge, the High Court held that there was no sufficient ground for questioning the commitment—Q E. v Abbi Reddi, 17 Mad 402.

(9) The High Court cannot interfere when the Magistrate, being of opinion that he cannot adequately punish the accused, exercises his discretion by committing the case to the Sessions—King Emp v Baldeo, 11 A L J 439, 14 Cr L J 304

(10) The High Court cannot quash a commitment where the Magistrate, though he can inflict the maximum sentence provided for the offence, commits the case, being of opinion that it should for other reasons be tried by a Court of Session—Crown Prosecutor v Bhagirathi, 35 M L J 559, 19 Cr L J 997 Ghani v Crown 14 S L R 85, 21 Cr L J 791

(11) A commitment will not be quashed on the ground that the committing Magistrate has failed to observe the provisions of sec 360 in respect of some of the witnesses in such a case the trial Court will be directed to recall the witnesses in respect of whom sec 360 was not complied with, and to comply with those provisions so far as these witnesses are concerned—Abdur Rahim v Emp 29 C W N 698, 26 Cr. L J 1276

(12) Where there has been a commitment for the trial of charges some of which are triable by a Session Court and others triable by a Magistrate, the fact that during the trial the charges for the Sessions offences are withdrawn is not a ground for setting aside the order of commitment and taking away the accused's right to a trial by jury—Emp. v. Monmotha, 31 C W N 144 28 Cr L J 141.

Summons to witnesses for defence when accused is committed.

216. When the accused has given in any list of witnesses under Section 211 and has been committed for trial the Magistrate shall summon such of the witnesses included in the list, as have not appeared before himself, to appear before the Court to which the accused has been committed :

Provided that, where the accused has been committed to the High Court, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, leave such witnesses to be summoned by the Clerk of the Crown and such witnesses may be summoned accordingly

Provided also that if the Magistrate thinks that any witness is included in the list for the purpose of vexation or delay or of defeating the ends of justice the Magistrate may require the accused to satisfy him that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the evidence of such witness is material and if he is not so satisfied may refuse to summon the witness (recording his reasons for such refusal) or may before summoning him require such sum to be deposited as such Magistrate thinks necessary to defray the expense of obtaining the attendance of the witness and all other proper expenses

Bond of complainants and witnesses

217. (1) Complainants and witnesses for the prosecution and defence, whose attendance before the Court of Session or High Court is necessary and who appear before the Magistrate shall execute before him bonds binding themselves to be in attendance when called upon at the Court of Session or High Court to prosecute or to give evidence as the case may be

Detention in custody in case of refusal to attend or to execute bond

(2) If any complainant or witness refuses to attend before the Court of Session or High Court, or to execute the bond above directed, the Magistrate may detain him in custody until he executes such bond or until his attendance at the Court of Session or High Court is required, when the Magistrate shall send him in custody to the Court of Session or High Court as the case may be

721. "Whose attendance is necessary" —There is no law which obliges the committing Magistrate to cause the attendance at the Sessions Court of every one of the witnesses examined by him irrespective of their evidence being material for the prosecution It is for the Magis-

219 (1) The committing Magistrate or in the absence of such Magistrate any other Magistrate empowered by or under Section 206 may, if he thinks fit, summon and examine supplementary witnesses after the commitment and before the commencement of the trial, and bind them over in manner hereinbefore provided to appear and give evidence

Power to summon supplementary witnesses

(2) Such examination shall, if possible, be taken in the presence of the accused, and where the Magistrate is not a Presidency Magistrate, a copy of the evidence of such witnesses shall, if the accused so require, be given to him free of cost	in the presence of the accused, and where the Magistrate is not a Presidency Magistrate, a copy of the evidence of such witnesses shall * * be given to the accused free of cost

Change —The italicised words in sub-section (1) have been substituted for the words The Magistrate by section 60 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 This amendment provides that the supplementary witnesses may be examined not only by the committing Magistrate, but by any other Magistrate in his absence who is empowered to commit for trial

The words if the accused so require occurring in sub-section (2) of the old section have been omitted by the same Amendment Act The accused is now given an absolute right to a copy of the evidence

722 Scope —This section provides for cases in which there may be an accidental gap in the evidence In such a case, the Sessions Judge may call additional evidence at the trial under sec 540 or the committing Magistrate may himself take steps before the trial under sec 219 to supplement the evidence—Mahabir v Emp, 23 Cr L J 79 (Oudh)

The power of the committing Magistrate to call and examine supplementary witnesses ceases with the commencement of the trial After the trial has commenced the Sessions Judge can cause witnesses to be summoned before himself or under certain circumstances have them examined by commission. But he cannot direct the committing Magistrate to call additional witnesses and hold an inquiry—Hassan v Emp, 1888 P R 29 If, after receiving the order of commitment the Sessions Judge, in view of the Magistrate s recorded opinion th[illegible] that further evidence should be taken, the proper course is to point [illegible] committing Magistrate that he should summon and examine [illegible] witnesses who can give evidence and bind them over [illegible] trial and not to send the case to the Magistrate after th[illegible] trial and after the opinions of the assessors have been [illegible] Emp, 18[illegible] P R 4

OF THE CHARGE

Form of Charges

221 (1) Every charge under this Code shall state the offence with which the accused is charged

Charge to state offence

(2) If the law which creates the offence gives it any specific name the offence may be described in the charge by that name only

Specific name of offence sufficient description

(3) If the law which creates the offence does not give it any specific name, so much of the definition of the offence must be stated as to give notice of the matter with which he is charged

How stated where offence has no specific name

(4) The law and section of the law against which the offence is said to have been committed shall be mentioned in the charge

(5) The fact that the charge is made is equivalent to a statement that every legal condition required by law to constitute the offence charged was fulfilled in the particular case

What implied in charge

(6) In the presidency town the charge shall be written in English elsewhere it shall be written either in English or in the language of the Court

Language of charge

(7) If the accused has been previously convicted of any offence and it is intended to prove such previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court is competent to	(7) If the accused having been previously convicted of any offence is liable by reason of such previous conviction to enhanced punishment or to punishment of a different kind for a subsequent award, the fact, date and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge If such statement is omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed	offence, and it is intended to prove such previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court may think fit to award for the subsequent offence, the fact, date and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge If such statement has been omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed

(a) A is charged with the murder of B This is equivalent to a statement that A s act fell within the definition of murder given in Sections 299 and 300 of the Indian Penal Code that it did not fall within any of the general exceptions of the same Code and that it did not fall within any of the five exceptions to Section 300 or that if it did fall within Exception I one or other of the three provisos to that exception applied to it

(b) A is charged under Section 326 of the Indian Penal Code with voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B by means of an instrument for shooting This is equivalent to a statement that the case was not provided for by Section 335 of the Indian Penal Code and that the general exceptions did not apply to it

(c) A is accused of murder cheating theft extortion adultery or criminal intimidation or using a false property mark The charge may state that A committed murder or cheating or theft or extortion or adultery or criminal intimidation or that he used a false property mark without reference to the definitions of those crimes contained in the Indian Penal Code but the section under which the offence is punishable must in each instance be referred to in the charge

(d) A is charged under Section 184 of the Indian Penal Code with intentionally obstructing a sale of property offered for sale by the lawful authority of a public servant The charge should be in those words

Change —Sub-section (7) has been amended by sec 61 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 There is some doubt

whether under Section 221 it is permissible to prove a previous conviction if the enhanced punishment which it is sought to award is not beyond the competence of the Court and the amendment directs that in such a case evidence of the previous conviction may be given —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) This amendment supersedes the ruling in Ramanjulu 2 Weir 264 where it was held that if the sentence passed was within the Magistrate s competency the details of the previous conviction need not be given

723 Particulars to be stated in the charge —The object of these sections is to enable the accused to know the substantive charges which he will have to meet and to be ready for them before the evidence is given—Ram Chandar v Emp 17 Cr L J 411 (All) An accused is entitled to know with accuracy and certainty the exact value of the charge brought against him Unless he has this knowledge he will be prejudiced in his defence especially in cases where it is sought to implicate him for acts not committed by himself but by others with whom he is in company—Behari Mahton v Q E 11 Cal 106 Amritalal v K E, 42 Cal 957 Chhakari v Emp 26 Cr L J 567 (Cal) Kedar Nath v K E 29 C W N 408 26 Cr L J 849 An accused s entitled to be informed with the greatest precision what acts he is said to have committed, and under what section of the Penal Code these acts fall—Sheo Sankar v K E 2 O W N 862 27 Cr L J 62 Failure to state in any substantial form the nature and particulars of the offence alleged against the accused would in some cases be a fatal defect which would vitiate the whole proceedings Where an offence charged involves consequences which may be charged in general terms such as may arise in a case of arson where a man may by one act of arson set fire and destroy several stacks of hays of several persons no particular is required the nature of the offence being sufficiently stated by the date time and place of the setting fire but extortion or obtaining money from persons by unlawful means involves stating with some approach to accuracy the approximate amounts alleged to have been obtained from each person and the nature of the extortion used against each person—Ram Chandar v Emp, 17 Cr L J 411 (All)

In a charge of rioting the common object of the unlawful assembly should be specified—Buddhu v Lachmina 9 C W N 599 Behari v Q E 11 Cal 106 Poresh Nath v Emp 33 Cal 295 Where the object of the unlawful assembly is to take possession of some property the property must be specified in the charge—Poresh Nath v Emp 33 Cal 295 Where there are two objects of an unlawful assembly both the objects must be specified and not one—Sabir v Q E., 22 Cal 276 For a charge of conspiracy, only an agreement is sufficient so it is sufficient to include in the charge the agreement which is alleged to have been arrived at between the conspirators—Bishambhar v K E 2 O W N 760 26 Cr L J 1602 Where a conspirator is present at the commission of the offence, he may under the provisions of sec 114 I P C be deemed to have committed the offence but if that is the way in which the accused is to be made responsible for the offence he should be specifically charged with such offence as read with the provisions of sec 114 I P Code—Ahmuddi v K E 52 Cal 253 29 C W N 173 40 C L J 541

Where a particular intention is an important element in the offence the intention must be specified—Balmakund v Ghanshamram 22 Cal 391

The existence of aggravating circumstances which go to enhance the punishment must be set out in the charge—Reg v. Mukta Ratanlal 53

Subject matter of offence —Where the law and the section as well as the words of the section are mentioned in the charge the subject-matter of the offence need not be specified Thus where the illegal act charged is the unlawful and malicious possession of explosive substances within the meaning of Sec 4 of the Explosive Substances Act it is not esssential to specify in the charge the explosive substance which the accused had in their possession—Amrita Lal v K E 42 Cal 957 19 C W N 676 16 Cr L J 497

Liability to whipping —Where the accused is liable to be punished under the Whipping Act the charge must state the liability—Badiya v Queen 5 Mad 158

Law and section of the law —A charge for an offence under the Penal Code must refer to the section of the Penal Code under which the offence is punishable—Q v Dur colla 9 W R 33 Moreover, in framing the charge the Court should adhere to the language of the section as far as practicable—Amritalal v K E 42 Cal 957 Chhakari v Emp 26 Cr L J 567 (Cal) Where the law and section were mentioned in the charge and the accused fully understood the nature of the offence with which they were charged the omission of the words unlawfully and maliciously and in British India occurring in the section was held not so material as to prejudice the accused—Amritalal v K E 42 Cal 957

724. Sub-section (7)—Previous conviction —The prosecution is bound to prove the previous conviction and the identity of the accused with the person previously convicted—Yippaka Daligadu 2 Weir 266

Where the fact of previous conviction is not mentioned in the charge it cannot be used for the purpose of enhancing the sentence—Reg v Annaji Ratanlal 70 e g for the purpose of adding the sentence of whipping to imprisonment—Anonymous 2 Weir 265 and 267 In In re Abbulu 7 M L T 77 and Bisakhi v Crown 1917 P R 29 18 Cr L J 8,3 however it is held that the omission to set out the previous conviction is not a sufficient reason for interfering with the enhanced sentence in appeal or revision unless there has been a failure of justice by reason of such omission See section 225 see also Nga Hla v K E, 8 L. B R 461 19 Cr L J 79 where it has been held that the omission to state the fact date and place of previous conviction is not material where the previous conviction was put to the accused and admitted by him before judgment was passed

The previous conviction must be entered in the charge and the accused

should be called on to plead thereto the mere admission by the accused that he had once been in jail is insufficient to show that he pleaded guilty to a previous conviction—K E v Govind Sakharam 4 Bom L R 177

Fact date place of previous conviction —When a person is charged with previous convictions it is not sufficient to state that the accused is an old offender ' as that does not sufficiently bring home to the accused person the particular offence or class of offences which renders him liable to a more severe sentence than would otherwise be imposed—In re Yip pakka 2 Weir 266 If the fact date and place of the previous conviction are not stated no enhanced sentence can be passed on the accused—Emp v Haidar 1883 A W N 110 But where the accused was at the time lying under sentence of the previous conviction referred to the omission to mention the particulars of the previous conviction would in no way prejudice the accused and would afford no ground for interfering with the enhanced sentence—Emp v Raghu Ali 1881 A W N 37

In passing an order under sec 565 it is not necessary that the details of the previous conviction should be mentioned in the charge—Emp v Jhagru, 9 N L R 88 14 Cr L J 390 (cited under sec 565)

222 (1) The charge shall contain such particulars as to the time and place of the alleged offence, and the person (if any) against whom, or the thing (if any) in respect of which, it was committed, as are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged

Particulars as to time, place and person

(2) When the accused is charged with criminal [illegible]

the dates between which the offence is alleged to have been committed, without specifying particular items or exact dates, and the charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence within the meaning of Section 234

Provided that the time included between the first and last of such dates shall not exceed one year

725 Particulars as to time, place etc. —The charge must contain sufficient particulars as to time place person and circumstance so that the accused may have notice of the matter with which he is charged—Q E v Fakirappa 15 Bom 491 Oates v Emp 38 C L J 163 A charge for house breaking and theft is bad for vagueness if it does not specify the articles stolen or the name of the person whose house was broken into and omits to mention one of the places where the offences were committed—Subbaiu v K E 28 M L J 381 16 Cr L J 298 charge of defamation is defective if it does not set forth the particular occasion on which it was committed—Bishuanath v Keshab, 30 Cal 402 Where a charge of dacoity under sections 395 and 397 I P C did not specify the dates on which the looting took place, held that the conviction must be quashed, as the charge did not give the accused sufficient notice and particulars of what they had to meet—In re Gam Mallu, 49 Mad 74 26 Cr. L J 1513 A conviction under sec 377 I P C is illegal on a charge which does not set forth the time, place or the person with whom the offence was committed, but only states that the accused habitually wore women's clothes and exhibited physical signs of having committed that offence—Q E v Khairati, 6 All 204 In a charge of adultery it is sometimes impossible to specify the particular date or dates on which the sexual intercourse took place, it is sufficient to specify two dates between which the offence is alleged to have been committed—Bhola Nath v Emp, 51 Cal. 488 (492), 28 C W N 323 25 Cr L J 997

The test as to the sufficiency of the particulars of time, place etc, is whether the accused has reasonable notice of the offence with which he is charged In one case it may be necessary to specify accurately the time and place, while in another it may be unreasonable to require the prosecution to do so—Q. E v Waman, Ratanlal 659

726 Sub-section (2) —This sub-section did not exist in the Code of 1882 The ruling in Ekram Ali v Q E, 2 C W N 341 and Q E v. Pirsotam, 24 Cal 193 to the effect that particular items and exact dates of the misappropriation must be mentioned is no longer good law As the law stood before, there was great difficulty in convicting where there was a running account and where the prosecution were unable to put their hands on a specified item out of which the particular sum was embezzled also, there was the difficulty of joinder of charges under sec 234. These difficulties have been removed after 1898—Khirod Kumar v Emp 20 C W. N. 54 40 C L J 555

This sub-section applies only to a charge of criminal breach of trust or misappropriation it does not apply to a charge under sec 477 A I P C —Kalka Prosad v Emp, 38 All 42; Q E v Matilal, 26 Cal 560; Raman Behari v Emp 41 Cal 722, or to a charge of cheating—Raja Khan v K E, 1 A L J 599

Again, it applies only to misappropriation of money, and not to misappropriation in respect of a number of trees—Raghavendra v. Emp, (1911) 2 M W N 467, 12 Cr. L J 567

727. Gross sum only need be mentioned —This is an enabling section and it enacts that it is sufficient to specify the aggregate sum without going into details It dispenses with the necessity of enumeration of various items but it does not prohibit such enumeration—Emp v Datto Hanmant 30 Bom 49 It is optional with the complainant either to mention the gross sum or to specify all the items misappropriated And this section does not make compulsory either the one or the other The complainant may choose to specify all the particular items instead of mentioning the gross sum and this will be treated as a mere superfluity but not an illegality—Samiruddin v. Nibaran, 31 Cal 928, or the com plainant may mention only the gross amount even where the particular items can be specified—Thomas v Emp, 29 Mad 558

But although it is sufficient to frame a general charge of the gross amount the Magistrate should also see that the charge does not become so general as to be vague and the accused is not prejudiced thereby—Mahammad Shah v Crown, 1907 P W R 16 Though it is sufficient to mention only the gross sum and not necessarily the particular items still the prosecution must prove what total sum the accused has unlawfully expended or failed to account for in such a way as to leave no doubt that he has been engaged in a criminal misappropriation and how that total sum is made up There must be a definite finding of a certain definite sum traced to the accused and clearly shown to have been wilfully and unlawfully appropriated to his own use It is not sufficient to fling into the charge an alleged balance or net profit which the accused an agent of the complainant is supposed to have earned and say that in respect of that net profit he is guilty of misappropriation of every rupee which he cannot produce or explain—Mohun Singh v Emp 42 All 522

If the particular items are specified the charge will not be illegal by reason of the fact that the items exceed three in number—Emp v Gulzari Lal 24 All 254 This section is not controlled by Sec 234 but rather modifies it

728 Charge so framed charge of one offence —This section clearly admits of the trial of any number of acts of breach of trust committed within the year as amounting only to one offence—Emp v Datto Hanmant 30 Bom 49 A charge in respect of a gross sum without specifying several items is a charge of one offence and not of several offences—Emp v Ibrahim 33 All 36 7 A L J 897 11 Cr L J 442 Where an accused person is tried on charges of criminal breach of trust in respect of two cheques and also on another charge in respect of a gross sum made up of three distinct items which might have been but were not specified the trial is in fact not on five distinct charges but is only for three offences (2 cheques plus gross sum) and is therefore legal under section 234—Thomas v Emp 29 Mad 558 see also Emp v Ishaq 27 All 69 Sat Narain v Emp 3 Cal 1085

This sub section enacts that the charge in respect of a gross sum shall be treated as a charge for one offence within the meaning of section 234 but it does not provide that the several acts of misappropriation will be treated as forming one transaction within the meaning of section 235—Kasi Viswanathan v Emp 30 Mad 328

'One year' —The time covered by the several acts must not be more than one year where the charges related to items misappropriated in the course of two years the conviction was quashed—Dhanjibhoy v Karim Khan 1905 P R 14 Thus, where the accused was charged with committing criminal breach of trust in respect of eight necklaces, and it was found that the breach of trust in respect of one necklace happened in February 19.. and with regard to another in January 192 held that the trial was vitiated Section 235 did not apply, as the act

breach of trust in respect of each necklace was a separate transaction—Raman Lal v Emp, 49 All 312, 25 A L J 317, 28 Cr L J 171

223 When the nature of the case is such that the particulars mentioned in Sections 221 and 222 do not give the accused sufficient notice of the matter with which he is charged, the charge shall also contain such particulars of the manner in which the alleged offence was committed as will be sufficient for the purpose

When manner of committing offence must be stated

Illustrations

(a) A is accused of the theft of a certain article at a certain time and place The charge need not set out the manner in which the theft was effected

(b) A is accused of cheating B at a given time and place The charge must set out the manner in which A cheated B

(c) A is accused of giving false evidence at a given time and place The charge must set out that portion of the evidence given by A which is alleged to be false

(d) A is accused of obstructing B a public servant in the discharge of his public functions at a given time and place The charge must set out the manner in which A obstructed B in the discharge of his functions

(e) A is accused of the murder of B at a given time and place The charge need not state the manner in which A murdered B

(f) A is accused of disobeying a direction of the law with intent to save B from punishment The charge must set out the disobedience charged and the law infringed

729 The question as to whether further particulars are necessary under this section is a question of discretion in each case—Kudrutulla v Emp 39 Cal 781 In a case of cheating the charge must set out the manner in which the offence was committed Whether the words of the charge are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the accusation which he has got to meet depends upon the circumstances of each particular case The omission to state the manner of cheating is regarded as material or not according as the accused has or has not in fact been misled by the omission and the omission has or has not occasioned a failure of justice (section 225 Ill b and c)—Kedar Nath v Emp 29 C W N 403 41 C L J 17 26 Cr L J 849 Where the manner of the cheating was set out as follows — By deceiving with false representations and promises as well as by conduct held that the expression used was too vague and indefinite to give the accused proper notice of the manner of cheating—Kedar Nath v Emp (supra)

A charge of an attempt to cheat must specify the person attempted to be cheated and the manner in which the attempt was made—Emp v Imam Ali 8 C W N 278

224 In every charge words used in describing an offence shall be deemed to have been used in the sense attached to them respectively by the law under which such offence is punishable

Words in charge taken in sense of law under which offence is punishable

225 No error in stating either the offence or the particulars required to be stated in the charge, and no omission to state the offence or those particulars shall be regarded at any stage of the case as material, unless the accused was in fact misled by such error or omission, and it has occasioned a failure of justice

Effect of errors

Illustrations

(a) A is charged under section 242 of the Indian Penal Code with having been in possession of counterfeit coin having known at the time when he became possessed thereof that such coin was counterfeit the word fraudulently being omitted in the charge Unless it appears that A was in fact misled by this omission the error shall not be regarded as material,

(b) A is charged with cheating B and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge or is set out incorrectly A defends himself calls witnesses and gives his own account of the transaction The Court may infer from this that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating is not material

(c) A is charged with cheating B and the manner in which he [illegible] B is not set out in the charge There were many transactions [illegible] A and B and A had no means of knowing as to which of them the [illegible] referred and offered no defence The Court may infer from [illegible] that the omission to set out the manner of cheating was [illegible] material error

(d) A is charged with the murder of Khoda Baksh on the [illegible] 1882 In fact the murdered person's name was Haidar [illegible] date of the murder was the 20th January 188[illegible] A was [illegible] with any murder but one and had heard the inqu[illegible] trate which referred exclusively to the case of Haidar [illegible] may infer from these facts that A was not misled and [illegible] charge was immaterial

(e) A was charged with murdering Haidar B[illegible]

1882 and Khoda Baksh (who tried to arrest him for that murder) on the 21st January 1882 When charged for the murder of Haider Baksh, he was tried for the murder of Khoda Baksh The witnesses present in his defence were witnesses in the case of Haidar Baksh The Court may infer from this that A was misled and that the error was material

730 Error or omission —When the common objects of an unlawful assembly were to steal mangoes and to cause the death of a person and the Judge in summing up the case to the jury spoke of the two objects, but the charge mentioned only the latter object it was held that the omission to specify both the objects in the charge was material in as much as it is difficult to say which of the two common objects had been accepted by the jury and if the jury had accepted that object which was not mentioned in the charge, there had been a failure of justice—Sabir v Q E 22 Cal 276 When the charge against the accused was that he embezzled some deeds but he was convicted of embezzling some amounts obtained by dealing with those deeds it was held that the charge was materially defective and the conviction must be set aside—Bipra Das v Nirodamani 12 C W N 577

Where the common object of the unlawful assembly was set out in the complaint and was found by the Magistrate but was not mentioned in the charge but it appeared that the accused had been in no way prejudiced by the omission in the charge held that sec 225 applied and the omission did not vitiate the trial—Emp v Jeshwant 28 Bom L R 497 27 Cr L J 744 following Basiruddi v Q E 21 Cal 827 Where the charge did not mention the common object of the unlawful assembly but there was ample material in the evidence on the record to show that the accused were members of an unlawful assembly and to show what their common object was held that the omission was not a ground for setting aside the conviction—Basiruddi v Q E (supra) A charge of sedition is not defective if it omits to state the particular passages or particular words used by the accused it is sufficient if the substance of the words is set out Even if it is defective it will be cured by this section—Emp v Tribhuvan 33 Bom 77 In re Mylapore Krishnasami 32 Mad 384, Chithambaran v Emp 32 Mad 3 In a charge under section 420 I P C it is proper to state the exact date on which the offence is alleged to have been committed but when the time of the alleged offence is approximately indicated and there is nothing to show that the omission to give the exact date has materially prejudiced the accused at his trial the omission does not affect the legality of the trial—Faranand v Emp 27 Cr L J 909 (Pat) The omission of words such as dishonestly or unlawfully or in British India is not material and is cured by this section—Reg v Pahlwa 10 B H C R 3 3 Amritalal v Emp 42 Cal 957

If the charge is drawn up clumsily or in a somewhat informal manner but is sufficiently explicit as to give the accused notice of the charge the irregularity will be cured by this section—Emp v Tribhuvan 33 Bom 77 Bachchu v Isyara 4 O W N 341 28 Cr L J 409

Test to determine whether error is material —In determining whether the error or omission has occasioned a failure of justice the Court should have regard to the manner in which the accused has conducted his defence and to the nature of the objection i e whether the objection could and should have been raised at an earlier stage of the proceedings—Reg v Rakhma 10 B H C R 373 Q E v Ramji 10 Bom 124 Where the charge did not correctly set out the facts of the case for the prosecution upon which it was founded but it was clear from the answer which the accused gave to the Court when examined under the provisions of sec 342 that he understood exactly what the case against him was held that the defect in the framing of the charge did not prejudice the accused in any way—Gokul v Emp 29 C W N 483 26 Cr L J 906 Where the accused did not make any objection to the defect in the form of charge at the earliest possible occasion and as a matter of fact no protest was made either in the Appellate Court or in the Revisional Court below and they know perfectly well what offences they were charged with held that the irregularity had not occasioned any failure of justice—Bachchu v Piyara 4 O W N 341 28 Cr L J 409

Duty of Magistrate —Where a charge is erroneous as to the intention with which the offence was committed it is the duty of the Magistrate before convicting the accused for committing the offence with a different intention to amend the charge to that effect so as to give notice to the accused of what he is charged with Thus where the charge was house breaking with intention to commit theft but it was found that the intention was criminal intrigue with a woman in the complainant s house the Magistrate before convicting the accused of house breaking with the latter intention should clearly draw up a charge to that effect—Mahomed Hosain v Emp 41 Cal 743 Hajari v K E 26 C W N 344 But see Karali Prasad v K E 44 Cal 358 in which it has been held under the identical circumstances that it is not necessary for the Magistrate to amend the charge the accused having been charged with criminal trespass with a guilty intention it is competent to the Court to convict him with criminal trespass with some other guilty intention and in such a case the accused is not in fact prejudiced by the conviction

Procedure on commitment without charge or with imperfect charge

226 When any person is committed for trial without a charge or with an imperfect or erroneous charge, the Court, or, in the case of a High Court, the Clerk of the Crown, may frame a charge or add to or otherwise alter the charge, as the case may be, having regard to the rules contained in this Code as to the form of charges

Illustrations

1 A is charged with the murder of C A charge of abetting the murder of C may be added or substituted

2 A is charged with forging a valuable security under Section 467 of the Indian Penal Code A charge of fabricating false evidence under Section 193 may be added

3 A is charged with receiving stolen property knowing it to be stolen During the trial it incidentally appears that he has in his possession instruments for the purpose of counterfeiting coin A charge under section 235 of the Indian Penal Code cannot be added

731 "Charge" —Throughout this Code, the word 'charge' is generally used as the statement of a specific offence and not as indicating the entire series of offences of which a prisoner is accused and it is in the former sense that the word is used in this and the following sections—Q E v Appa Subhana 8 Bom 200

'Without charge —These words apply not only to the cases where there is no charge at all but also to cases in which there is no charge in respect of such offence as the Sessions Judge or Clerk of the Crown may think the accused ought to be tried for—Q E v Appa 8 Bom 200

'Frame a charge —At the beginning of the trial if the Judge finds that the Magistrate has omitted to frame a charge he may supply the omission and frame the charge that is made out on the evidence recorded by the Magistrate—Dodo v Emp 9 S L R 37 16 Cr L J 573

732 Addition of charge —If the charge framed by the Magistrate is imperfect or erroneous the Sessions Judge may alter or add to the charge having regard to the offences disclosed in the evidence recorded by the Magistrate But the Sessions Judge cannot go beyond the evidence recorded by the Magistrate in adding to or altering the charge He cannot add or alter a charge upon the evidence recorded by himself at the trial If he does so the effect is that he takes cognizance of an offence without any preliminary inquiry in respect of it by the Magistrate and the provisions of section 193 of this Code are rendered nugatory Thus where the charge drawn up by the Magistrate was under Sec 201 I P C and the Sessions Judge on the application of the Public Prosecutor added a charge for an offence under sections 109 and 201 I P C upon the evidence of a person who was examined as a witness for the first time by the Sessions Judge it was held that the action of the Judge was ultra vires and the addition of the charge was not merely an error of procedure but an improper assumption of jurisdiction—Rama Tarnaa v Q 3 Mad 351

Again the Sessions Court can add or alter a charge with reference to the immediate subject of the prosecution and committal and not with regard to a matter not covered by the indictment Thus where a prosecution was instituted by A on a charge under section 417 I P C and the Sessions Judge altered the charge into one for an offence under sec 420 I P C for cheating B it was held that the procedure was illegal inasmuch as there was no complaint by B and the prosecution was instituted by a person in respect of a matter with which B was not concerned and the Magistrate did not commit the accused with respect to any offence committed against B—Birendra v Emp 32 Cal 22 Similarly where the accused was committed to the Sessions for the murder of A the Sessions Judge could not add a charge for causing grievous hurt to

B—Shah Din v Crown 1909 P W R 20 11 Cr L J 131 (In 8 All 665 however such a procedure was not treated as an illegality but a mere irregularity and the High Court refused to interfere because no prejudice was caused to the accused) But where the committing Magistrate committed the accused for the murder of A and for causing grievous hurt to B the Sessions Judge could add a charge for the murder of B—Hussenulla v Emp 28 C W N 561 A I R 1924 Cal 625

The Session Judge s power to add a charge is not fettered by the fact that a complaint in respect of it had been previously preferred before the Magistrate and dismissed by him—Q E v Bajiram 16 Bom 414

Power to expunge a charge —The Sessions Judge has power to frame add or alter a charge but he has no power to expunge a charge duly framed by the committing Magistrate—Emp v Preshollah 7 C L R 143

Charge when can be added or altered —Though the Sessions Judge has power to add a charge at any stage of the proceedings before judgment still he should exercise a sound and wise discretion and he does not exercise such a discretion when he adds a new and grave charge after the close of the defence—K E v Mathura 6 C W N 72 A charge cannot be altered after delivery of verdict—Reg v Shek Ali 5 B H C R 9

733 Alteration of charge —The Sessions Judge can substitute a charge of abetment for a charge of the substantive offence—Reg v Govind 11 B H C R 278 If the committing Magistrate does not frame a charge with separate heads for each distinct offence the defect may be remedied by the Sessions Judge—In re Kalarati 7 W R 8 In a case in which the accused was charged with 15 offences and committed to the Sessions the proper procedure is to amend the charge and to hold separate trials and not to confine the prosecution to three heads of charges acquitting the accused of all the rest—Emp v Sreenath 8 Cal 450

Altering a charge includes the withdrawal of a charge which has been added by the Sessions Judge after commitment—Dwarka Lal v Mahadeo 12 All 551

227 (1) Any Court may alter or add to any charge at any time before judgment is pronounced or in the case of trials before the Court of Session or High Court before the verdict of the jury is returned or the opinions of the assessors are expressed.

Court may alter charge

(2) Every such alteration or addition shall be read and explained to the accused

734 Addition or amendment of charge —Where a Magistrate summoned the accused under a certain section of the Penal Code but the evidence disclosed an offence under another section, he can amend the charge—Biroo Sardar v Sheriff 26 Cr L J 302 (Cal) Sessions Judges when they receive an indictment should compare the charge sheet with the section and when necessary, amend the charge sheet, using the words of the section so far as possible—Bhulan v Emp, 27 Cr L J 5 (Oudh)

A Court of Session though vested with large powers of amending and adding to charges can only do so with reference to the immediate subject of the prosecution and committal, and not with regard to a matter not covered by the indictment—Muthu Goundan v Emp, 27 M L T 231 21 Cr L J 57

In amending a charge the Magistrate should not write over the original charge but should leave it on the file for reference and should write the new charge separately—Nga Pan v Emp, 8 Bur L T 17 16 Cr L J 2

The Court in substituting one charge for another cannot ignore the preliminary requisites of a charge thus a charge for rape cannot be altered into a charge for adultery because the complaint of the husband is a preliminary requisite in the latter offence—Chemon v Emp 29 Cal 415 nor can the Court alter a charge of rape into a charge for rape and adultery in the alternative—Emp v Kallu, 5 All 233 See notes under sec 199

But the power to add a charge is not limited by the terms of the certificate under section 188 Once a certificate has been obtained the Court has power to add any charge for any offence disclosed by the facts though not specified in the certificate—Emp v Krishna Nath, 33 All 514 See Note 581 under sec 188

Where a prisoner has been extradited for dacoity, the Court may alter the charge of dacoity into theft—Q E v Khoda 17 Bom 369

Amendment must not prejudice accused —Although this section gives power to the Court to add to or alter a charge still this power should be exercised with discretion and it is the duty of the Court to see that the accused is not prejudiced by the addition or alteration of the charges—Dodo v Emp 9 S L R 37 Reg v Govindas, 6 B H C R 76 Thus an addition of a grave charge or alteration of a charge at a late stage of the proceedings would prejudice the accused in his defence and would be illegal See K E v Madura 6 C W N 72, Emp v Isaf Mahomed 31 Bom 218 Where during the trial of an accused person upon specific charges in a Court of Session, it is found at the conclusion of the trial that the charges as framed disclose no offence against the accused, it is illegal and prejudicial to the accused to alter or amend the charges and to convict him thereon without affording him an opportunity of meeting the amended or altered charges The fact that the accused cross examined the prosecution witnesses to prove the unsustainability of the charges as originally framed is no ground for holding that by substantially altering the charge the accused was not prejudiced—Muthu Goundan v Emp, 27 M L T 231 21 Cr L J 57 It is open to a Sessions Judge to add an alternative charge but it is not a proper exercise of discretion to withdraw the charge (of an offence triable by jury) which the committing Magistrate thought to be proved and to put the accused under a disadvantage by substituting another charge (of offences triable with assessors) so that he might be deprived of the right of trial by jury—Ramsundar v Emp 5 Pat 238 7 P L T 178 27 Cr L J 51.

Amendment cannot cure illegality —An illegal charge cannot be amended or altered and such amendment will not cure the illegality Thus where a charge is drawn up of 4 offences it is wholly illegal under section 234 and the illegality cannot be cured by striking out one of the offences and convicting the accused for the remaining three—Manavala Chetty v Empress 19 Mad 569 Chetto v Emp 49 Cal 555 So also, where a Magistrate at first framed a charge under sections 352 and 504 I P Code but finding that the two distinct offences which were in no way connected with one another could not be tried together he struck out the charge framed and framed a charge under sec 504 alone held that the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was illegal—Krishna Murthi v Narayanaswami 49 M L J 93 26 Cr L J 1618 A I R 1925 Mad 1065

735 Addition or alteration when to be made —A charge must be amended before the judgment is pronounced If a charge is defective e g if more than three offences are included in one charge which is invalid under section 234 the Magistrate cannot remedy the defect by saying in his judgment that he would proceed on only three charges If he wishes to strike out any of the charges he should do so before concluding the trial and should give the accused an opportunity of making such defence as he thinks fit otherwise the trial is vitiated—Chetto v Emp 49 Cal 555 24 Cr L J 86

Although a charge may be added or altered at any time before the judgment is pronounced still it is illegal to do so at a late stage of the proceedings e g after the prosecution case has been closed and the defence evidence has been recorded—Emp v Isaf Mahomed 31 Bom 218 K E v Madura 6 C W N 72

If the complainant compounds the offence the Court should acquit the accused upon the presentation of the petition of composition and has no power to alter the charge already drawn up—Hasta v Crown 1914 P R 29 16 Cr L J 81

In a trial by jury or assessors the Sessions Court has no power to alter the charge after the delivery of the verdict of the jury or the opinion of the assessors—Reg v Shek Ali 5 B H C R 9 Harbans v Crown, 1916 P R 33 17 Cr L J 454 The words return of verdict mean the return of the final verdict which the Judge is bound to record—Q E v Appa Subhana 8 Bom 200

Application for alteration of charge —An application for alteration of charge must be made immediately after the original charge has been read and explained by the Magistrate—In re Abdul Rahaman 27 Cal 839, and the Magistrate should consider the application at once and not postpone passing his order on the application—Q E v Vajiram 16 Bom 414

736 Sub-section (2) —An alteration of charge must be read over and explained to the accused It is not the intention of the legislature to empower a Court to convict an accused person of an offence of which he has not been told anything Where a person was summoned to answer a charge under section 34 Police Act but the Magistrate fi

that the facts did not prove such offence, convicted him under sec 279 I P C without his being informed of the alteration of the charge held that the conviction was illegal—Dhan Singh v Emp, 23 A L J 456 A I R 1925 All 448 26 Cr L J 1057 Raghunath v Emp, 24 A L J 168, 27 Cr L J 152, A I R 1926 All 227 When a new charge was read aloud to the jury but was not specially explained to the prisoner and he was not called upon to plead to that charge, but his counsel on being asked did not require a new trial (under sec 229), it was held that the accused was not prejudiced by the addition of the new charge and the omission did not affect the trial—Q E v Appa Subhana, 8 Bom 200

228. If the charge framed or alteration or addition made under section 226 or section 227 is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is not likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused in his defence or the prosecutor in the conduct of the case, the Court may, in its discretion, after such charge or alteration or addition has been framed or made, proceed with the trial as if the new or altered charge had been the original charge.

When trial may proceed immediately after alteration.

737. The addition or alteration of a charge does not open up the trial from the beginning and the Court may immediately proceed with the trial if it is of opinion that there will be no prejudice to the accused If the accused has already been examined under section 342, before the amendment of the charge and before he has been called upon to enter on his defence, it is not incumbent on the Court to re-examine the accused after the amendment of the charge—Shamlal v K E, 1 Pat. 54 3 P L T 23 Cr L J 146

229. If the new or altered or added charge is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is likely, in the opinion of the Court to prejudice the accused or the prosecutor as aforesaid, the Court may either direct a new trial or adjourn the trial for such period as may be necessary

When new trial may be directed, or trial suspended

738 New trial —See Q E v Appa Subhana, 8 Bom 200 (cited in Note 736 under section 227) where the right to a new trial was waived

Where the original and the altered charges are nearly related to each other (the original charge being one of murder, and the altered charge being one of abetment of murder), and the accused did not object to the amendment it was held that there was no such material prejudice as would have necessitated a new trial under this section—Reg v Govind 11 L H C R 278 If, however, the amendment of charge would raise different questions of law and would admit of a different line of defence the accused would be prejudiced and a new trial would be necessary—Reg v Govindas 6 B H C R 76

In a new trial the Court would not be justified in referring to the record of the former trial as a whole but he may refer to such depositions as are especially put in evidence—In re De v Dutt 7 C L R 193

230 If the offence stated in the new or altered or added charge is one for the prosecution of which previous sanction is necessary the case shall not be proceeded with until such sanction is obtained, unless sanction has been already obtained for a prosecution on the same facts as those on which the new or altered charge is founded

Stay of proceedings if prosecution of offence in altered charge require previous sanction

739 Sanction for one offence, conviction for another —The mere fact that the sanctioning authority is of opinion that the facts constitute an offence under one section of the Act is in itself no bar to a conviction of the accused person for another offence under another section, provided of course that the facts stated in the order giving sanction are the same as those upon which the conviction is based In such a case it is not necessary that fresh consent to the trial upon such altered charge would have to be given by the sanctioning authority Section 230 of the Code makes full provision for a case of this kind—Amar Singh v Crown, 1919 P R 31 21 Cr L J 30

Where sanction has been obtained in respect of a substantive offence, it will avail in respect of abetment of such offence and no fresh sanction is necessary. Therefore where sanction was obtained for the prosecution of a Sub-Registrar for an offence under section 468 I P C the trial of the Sub Registrar for the abetment of that offence required no further sanction—Prafulla v Emp 30 Cal 905

231 Whenever a charge is altered or added to by the Court after the commencement of the trial, the prosecutor and the accused shall be allowed to recall or re summon, and examine with reference to such alteration or addition any witness who may have been examined, and also to call any further witness whom the Court may think to be material.

Recall of witnesses when charge altered

740 Recall of witnesses —Under this section it is imperative on a Court when it alters or adds to a charge after the commencement of a trial to allow the prosecutor and the accused to recall or resummon and examine, with reference to such alteration or addition, any witness who may have been examined and also to call any further witness whom it may deem material If the Court adds or alters a charge af

the commencement of the trial, without allowing the accused to recall and re examine the witnesses, and the accused has been misled thereby, the High Court will order a new trial to be had upon a charge framed in the proper manner—Harbans v Crown, 1916 P R 33 17 Cr L J 454 The provisions of sec. 231 are peremptory, and therefore when a charge is altered the Court is bound to recall any witnesses which the prosecution or the accused desires, and the Judge cannot refuse to call them because the accused cannot show on what points further cross examination is necessary—Chhanka v Emp, 28 Cr L J 769 (Pat). Where the committing magistrate at first framed a charge and then at a late stage of the commitment proceedings, altered the charge without giving the accused an opportunity of re examining the witnesses for the prosecution and producing his defence in regard thereto and committed the accused to the Sessions on the charge so altered held that the procedure of the Magistrate was entirely illegal and likely to prejudice the accused in his trial before the Court of Session—Mohan Lal v Emp, 22 A L J 239 25 Cr L J 798

When a charge is amended, the accused has a right to recall and cross-examine all the prosecution witnesses The right is not restricted to the recalling of those witnesses only who have deposed to the subject-matter of the amendment in the charge—Hazara Singh v. Emp, 26 Cr L J 1497 (Lah)

Effect of material error

232 (1) If any Appellate Court, or the High Court in the exercise of its powers of revision or of its powers under Chapter XXVII, is of opinion that any person convicted of an offence was misled in his defence by the absence of a charge or by an error in the charge, it shall direct a new trial to be had upon a charge framed in whatever manner it thinks fit.

(2) If the Court is of opinion that the facts of the case are such that no valid charge could be preferred against the accused in respect of the facts proved, it shall quash the conviction

A is convicted of an offence under section 196 of the Indian Penal Code upon a charge which omits to state that he knew the evidence, which he corruptly used or attempted to use as true or genuine, was false or fabricated If the Court thinks it probable that A had such knowledge and that he was misled in his defence by the omission from the charge of the statement that he had it it shall direct a new trial upon an amended charge but if it appears probable from the proceedings that A had no such knowledge, it shall quash the conviction

741. Errors in the charge—If the Chief Court (High Court) thinks that in consequence of material errors in a charge, the accused has been misled it is bound to direct a new trial to be had upon a charge framed in the proper manner—Harbans v Crown, 1916 P R 33, 17 Cr. L J 454 Where the owners of land were charged under sec 154 I P C for omission to give information of the riot to the thana but they were convicted for the omission on the part of their agents, and not of themselves, it was held that the error in the charge prejudiced the accused, and a new trial was ordered by the Appellate Court—Sarat Chandra v Emp, 7 C W N 201 Where the charge framed against the accused was to the effect that they caused hurt under sec 324 I P C to a certain person by means of a dao (a cutting instrument), but they were convicted under sec 354 I P C for assault with a lathi, it was held that the accused might have been prejudiced in his defence by this error in the charge and a retrial was ordered—Sital Chandra v Emp, 17 C W N 419, 14 Cr L J 212

742. Charge for one offence—Conviction for another—Where the accused were charged with and convicted of rioting and on appeal the Sessions Judge set aside the conviction for rioting but convicted them for house trespass and hurt, it was held that the latter offences, being distinct and separate offences from rioting should have formed the subject of separate charges, and the accused had been prejudiced within the meaning of this section by the omission of charges for the latter offences—Yakub Ali v Lethu 30 Cal 288 See also, Har Narain v Emp 18 C W N 1274 and Genu Manjhi v K E 18 C W N 1276, where the conviction was quashed on similar grounds

Where the accused was charged for dishonestly using as genuine a forged instrument, but was convicted for defamation, it was held that not only should the conviction be set aside but also as there was nothing to show that any valid charge could be preferred against the accused for the offence of defamation no trial could be held (see sub-sec 2)—Gobinda Prshad v Garth 28 Cal 63

Joinder of Charges.

233 For every distinct offence of which any person is accused there shall be a separate charge, and every such charge shall be tried separately, except in the cases mentioned in sections 234, 235, 236 and 239.

Separate charges for distinct offences.

A is accused of a theft on one occasion and of causing grievous hurt on another occasion A must be separately charged and separately tried for the theft and causing grievous hurt

743 Object of Section —The object of this section is to see that the accused is not bewildered in his defence by having to meet several charges in no way connected with one another—Ram Subheg v K E 19 C W N 972 and to see that he is not prejudiced by being accused of several things at once—Q E v Fakirapa 15 Bom 491 Another object is that the mind of the Court might be prejudiced against the prisoner if he were tried in one trial upon different charges resting upon different evidence It might be difficult for the Court trying him on one of the charges not to be unduly influenced by the evidence against him on the other charges—Q E v Juala Prasad 7 All 174

The general law as to the trial of accused persons is embodied in this section which provides for separate trial of each accused person for every distinct offence and the exceptions are laid down in sections 234 235 236 and 239 which must be strictly construed so as not to defeat the right of independent trial conferred by the general law—Tepanidhi v K E 5 P L J 11 1 P L T 180 21 Cr L J 161

744 Scope of Section —These sections (233 239) relating to joinder of charges refer to the trial of the accused The ruling in Subrahmaniya Aiyar s case 25 Mad 61 (cited below) cannot be extended to preliminary inquiries held by Magistrates committing a case to the Sessions so as to render the commitment itself illegal on the ground of misjoinder of offences or offenders at the preliminary inquiry—In re Govinda 26 Mad 592 In re Sessions Judge 35 M L J 259 20 Cr L J 514 See notes under sec 215

This section applies not only to warrant cases but also to summons cases although it is not necessary to frame a charge in the latter cases Therefore a joint trial and conviction for several distinct offences in summons cases is illegal—K E v San Dun 3 L B R 52 2 Cr L J 739 It also applies where the accused is charged with a summons case and a warrant case—K E v Maung Gale 3 L B R 113 3 Cr L J 350

It also applies to trials under the Bengal Excise Act and the fact that the trial has taken place as in a summons case does not exclude the operation of this section—U N Biswas v K E 41 Cal 694 18 C W N 486

This section applies not only to original trials but the Appellate Court is also bound by it thus an Appellate Court acting under section 423 (1) (b) and altering the finding cannot act in contravention of the provisions of section 233—Sahib Singh v K E 1905 P R 38

746 What are not distinct offences —Offences of the same kind committed on one occasion though consisting of parts are not different offences but are to be treated as constituting one offence e g the making of any number of false statements in the same deposition is one aggregate case of perjury and charges need not be multiplied according to the number of false statements—Rakhal Chandra v K E 36 Cal 808 10 Cr L J 150 Theft of two articles belonging to two different persons committed at one and the same time constitutes only one offence of theft and not two and hence two convictions and sentences are not legal—Bhura v Emp 26 Cr L J 1495 (Nag) If a person is found in possession of a number of stolen articles the offence committed by the accused (receiving stolen property) is a single offence and not a number of offences and it makes no difference whether the articles belong to a single owner or to different owners But if there were evidence that the accused received the articles at different times or from different thieves the case would be different—Emp v Sheo Charan 45 All 483 (486) The mere fact that property stolen on two different occasions is found at one and the same time in the possession of an accused is not of itself sufficient to prove that the accused has committed two different offences under sec 411 I P C (retaining stolen property) as it is quite possible that the property though stolen on two different occasions may have been received from the same thief at the same time—Q E v Makhan 15 All 31 So also the mere fact that the goods stolen from two different persons are found in the possession of the accused will not be sufficient to try the accused on two separate charges under sec 411 I P Code (receiving stolen property) and to sentence him for each of the charges unless there is proof that he received them at different times or from different thieves All the goods in the possession of the accused may have been stolen by the same thief and may have been delivered to the accused by him at the same time though stolen on different occasions If the accused received all these goods at the same time that would constitute only one offence—Ishan Muchi v Q E 15 Cal 511 In the absence of proof that a person accused of receiving stolen property received the stolen goods on different occasions it is not permissible to charge try and convict him in respect of each of them—Aga Kywet v Q E 1 L B R 37 Where several items of stolen property were found in the possession of the accused on the same date held that the accused committed only one offence and in the absence of evidence that the different articles were received at different times he could not be charged separately for each item of stolen property consequently the trial of the accused in respect of some of the stolen articles barred a second trial in respect of the remaining articles—Ganesh Shaha v Emp 50 Cal 594 K E v Bishun Singh 3 Pat 503 (519) 5 P L T 319 25 Cr L J 738 Receiving on one occasion various items of stolen property the result of various thefts is only one offence—K E v Irapa 3 Bom L R 187 So also the stealing of several bullocks from the same man at the same time is but one offence, and there need not be as many charges as the number of bullocks stolen—Emp v Raghu 1881 A W N 154 So also, misappropriation of several books of account in respect of the same estate though on different occasions is but one offence, the several books of account forming one set of books—Promothanath v K. E, 17 C W N 479, 14 Cr. L J 219 So also misappropriation of several sums of money on several occasions in regard to one individual is one offence—In re Luchminarain, 14 Cal, 128 Receiving a bribe partly on one day and partly on another is one offence—Jagat Chandra v Lal Chand 5 C W N 332 Theft of a box and a bicycle from one person committed at the same time is one offence—Bijoy v Satish 21 Cr L J 682 (Cal)

747 Separate Charge —For every distinct offence there shall be a separate charge Even though the offences have been committed in the same transaction there should be a distinct charge for each distinct offence though they can be tried together under sec 235—Gul Mahomed v Cheharu, 10 C W N 53 Emp v Fathu 26 All 195 See also the cases cited under heading what are distinct offences above In almost all these cases it has been held that the framing of one charge in respect of several distinct offences is not merely an irregularity but an illegality, and the conviction on such a charge must be set aside. But in Moharuddi v Jadunath 11 C W N 54 Musai v K E, 41 Cal 66 Ram Subheg v. K E 19 C W N 972 Padhanath v Emp 50 Cal 64 and Tamez Khan v Rajabali 31 C W N 337 it was held that the error in framing one charge was an error in form rather than of substance and did not amount to an illegality but a mere irregularity curable by sec 537 In a petty case the irregularity of the Magistrate in specifying three distinct offences (committed in the same transaction) in one head of charge, instead of framing three separate charges may be excused under sec 537, where the accused has not been prejudiced—Bachhu v Piyara 4 O W N 341, 28 Cr L J 409

Alternative charge for contradictory statements —Where a person charged in the alternative with having made two contradictory statements, one to a public servant and another contradicting the first on oath before a Magistrate and was convicted in the alternative either under sec 182 or under sec 193 I P C the Magistrate being unable to find which of them was false it was held that the charge was not made in accordance with this section there were two distinct offences of which two separate charges were necessary—Q E v Ramji 10 Bom 124 But now see section 236 and illustration (b) to that section

748 Joint trial illegal —The accused was charged and tried at one trial for several distinct offences extending over more than one year and the Full Bench held that this was an irregularity curable by sec 537 But the Privy Council has laid down that the disobedience of an express provision of law is not a mere irregularity curable by sec 537, but an illegality and that such illegality cannot be made good even if there is enough left upon the indictment upon which a conviction might have been supported—Subrahmania Ayyar's case, 25 Mad 61 (P C) This decision overrules 28 Cal 7, 12 Mad. 273, 27 Cal 839 and 11 Mad

441, in which it was held that such a joint trial was a mere irregularity which could be cured by sec 537

Persons charged with offences committed in the course of separate transactions are entitled to separate trials A joint trial is illegal and must be set aside—Paw Tha v K E, 3 L B R. 280, Shankar v K E, 11 A. L. J 188 Krishnasami v Emp, 26 Mad 125. The joint trial of several persons charged with rioting together with other persons charged with criminal trespass is absolutely illegal—Q E v Chandi Singh 14 Cal 395

Where the Magistrate heard the prosecution against several persons (charged with distinct offences) together and afterwards called upon them to plead separately in defence it was held that such a trial was in substance a joint trial of all the prisoners, and therefore illegal, and a retrial was ordered—Paw Tha v K E, 3 L B R 280, 5 Cr L J 417 So also where the Magistrate framed distinct charges and numbered them as distinct cases but when the witnesses came to be cross examined, he lost sight of the necessity of keeping the two trials separate, and allowed the witnesses to be cross examined promiscuously in respect of both the charges, it was held that the joint trial offended against the provisions of this section and the illegality could not be cured by sec 537—Public Prosecutor v Mahakhal 39 Mad 527 29 M L J 101, 16 Cr L J 593

"Except Sections 234" etc —The broad rule enunciated in sec 233 (viz that for every distinct offence there should be a separate charge and every charge should be tried separately) is made subject to four exceptions But a Court cannot and ought not to treat a case as an exception to the general rule, unless it is satisfied that in the case before it the charge should be within one of the four exceptions, and it would be safer if the Magistrate or the Sessions Judge recorded in his charge sheet or judgment his reasons for treating the case as falling under one of the exceptions—Shankar v K E 11 A L J 188, 14 Cr L J 116

749 Counter cases —It is illegal to try two counter cases between the same parties at one and the same trial, and a conviction at such a trial must be set aside even though the cross cases were so tried together with the consent of the parties—Mimsa v Emp, 13 Bur L T 245 22 Cr L J 707 But a simultaneous trial of two counter cases is not the same thing as a joint trial, and is not prohibited by this section or by section 239 In certain cases and under certain circumstances a simultaneous trial may be irregular and improper, but that will not entitle the accused to have the whole trial set aside unless it is clearly shown that the procedure adopted has prejudiced him in his defence—Dhako v. Emp., 1 P L. T 498 21 Cr L J. 739 The proper course is to try the one case after the other But both the cases must be tried by one and the same Magistrate. The simultaneous trial of two counter cases in two different Courts over one and the same occurrence is undesirable and unsatisfactory—Sheikh Samir v. Beni Madhab, 37 C L. J. 410. Judhisthir v Sheik Samir, 27 C W N. 700

Three offences of same kind within year may be charged together.

234. (1) When a person is accused of more offences than one of the same kind committed within the space of twelve months from the first to the last of such offences, whether in respect of the same person or not, he may be charged with and tried at one trial for any number of them not exceeding three.

(2) Offences are of the same kind when they are punishable with the same amount of punishment under the same section of the Indian Penal Code or any special or local law.

Provided that, for the purpose of this section an offence punishable under Section 379 of the Indian Penal Code shall be deemed to be an offence of the same kind as an offence punishable under Section 380 of the said Code, and that an offence punishable under any section of the Indian Penal Code, or of any special or local law, shall be deemed to be an offence of the same kind as an attempt to commit such offence, when such an attempt is an offence.

Change —The italicised words have been added by sec 62 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923. The reasons are stated below

750 Object of section —Secs 234 235 etc are exceptions to the broad and general rule enunciated in sec 233 The object of these exceptions is to avoid the necessity of the same witnesses giving the same evidence two or three times over in different trials and to join in one trial those offences with regard to which the evidence would overlap But even when several criminal acts can be included in the same transaction (sec 235), no joinder of trials should be permitted which will result in bewildering the accused in his defence—Crown v Gulam, 1 S L R 73. 'The reason of the provision (i e the provision contained in sec 234) is obviously in order that the jury may not be prejudiced by the multitude of charges, and the inconvenience of the hearing together of a large number of instances of culpability and the consequent embarassment both to Judges and accused —Subrahmania Iyyar v K L, 25 Mad 61 (P C).

The provisions of sec 234, Cr P Code, limiting the number of charges to three are particularly wise and salutary The object of those provisions is to prevent any risk of the Court being satisfied by anything less than complete proof of the offences charged, and if the attention of the Court is limited to three offences, it is not very likely that it will be satisfied with anything less than full proof. But where a great number of charges are brought against an accused person, it might very often happen (particularly in cases tried by Judges) that the accused may be convicted not on actual proof of a particular offence, but more on susp c on and reputation owing to the fact that in a great number of cases offences are half proved against him It is therefore very important that the Magis trates framing charges particularly in offences relating to criminal mis appropriation and receiving stolen property should pay attention to this provision of the law They should be very careful to see that only three specific offences are charged against the accused if it is to be decided to bring the charge against him in such a manner and under such a sec tion that it is necessary to specify the specific offences—Hyder v Emp 20 S L R 3 ?7 Cr L J 3?

751 Scope of section —This section says that the trial must be limited to three offences it does not say that the trial must be limited to three charges The same offence may be charged under different sec tions of the I P C and any number of such charges can be tried in one and the same trial—Emp v Tribhuvan 33 Bom 77

Again this section simply limits the number of offences that can be tried in one trial But this does not mean that the prisoner canno be tried separately in one day for more than three distinct offences of the same kind committed during the year—Emp v Dharorjoj 3 Cal 51? So where the prosecution chooses under sec ?2? (2) and the proviso there to prosecute for some out of the different amounts misappropriated during the year they are not estopped by sec 403 from instituting any further prosecution in respect of any fresh items misappropriated during the same period—Emp v Kashinath 12 Bom L R 26 Nagendra Nath v Emp 50 Cal 632 ?7 C W N 5/S 38 C L J ?86

Moreover this section refers to trial and not to committme it Where the Magistrate committed the accused to the Sessions on six charges of criminal breach of trust and three of falsification of accounts all the offences having been committed within a year it was held that the order of committal was not illegal but merely irregular and the irregularity could be cured by the Sessions Judge trying the charges separately—Krish a Murthi v Emp (1916) ? M W N 179 17 Cr L J 369

This section contemplates a joint trial for offences committed with n one year if the offences extend over a period exceeding one year the joinder of charges is illegal—Dhanjibhoy v Kasim Khan 1905 P R 14

This section applies where a person is accused of more offences than one it does not apply where a person is charged for one offence only e g an offence under sec 401 I P C (belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft) and the trial is not therefore illegal if the period over which the association extends exceeds one year—Kasem Ali v Emp 47 Cal 154 31 C L J 192 I Cr L J 386

And lastly this section refers to offences and not to transactions It does not provide that all offences committed in a year in three different transactions may be tried in one trial—Gehimal v Crown 10 S L R 19 ?? Cr L J 664 I asi Viswanathan v Emp 30 Mad 3 8 The opera t n of the two sections 234 and 235 cannot be combined and therefore a joint trial in respect of two sets of separate and independent transactions in which different offences have been committed is not permissible Thus where two girls were kidnapped on different occasions and were passed off as girls belonging to a high caste and married to persons who gave money in return the offences of kidnapping and cheating with respect to each of the girls should not be tried jointly with the other—Foujdar v K E, 48 All 236 24 A L J 239 27 Cr L J 143

752 Offences committed by several persons —This section does not apply where several persons committing offences of the same kind are jointly charged to such a case sec 239 clause (c) will apply The present section applies to the trial of one accused only—Budhai v Emp 33 Cal 292 Tulsi v Crown 1917 P R 17, 18 Cr L J 282, Sayad Lal v Emp 20 Cr L J 7 (Nag) Nga San v Emp 21 Cr L J 794 (Bur) Ram Prasad v K E 19 A L J 796 22 Cr L J 657 In Kailash v Emp 3 P L J 124 19 Cr L J 673 however it has been held that the word person is to have its ordinary and natural meaning as defined by the General Clauses Act and is not to be restricted to the singular number Such a laboured interpretation would no longer be necessary because clause (c) of section 239 now expressly makes provision for the joint trial of several persons committing offences of the same kind within the period of one year

753 Offences of the same kind —See sub-section (2) for the definition of this expression Where a person is found in possession of several items of stolen property he has committed offences of the same kind under sec 411 I P C and they do not cease to be so merely because the stolen articles are of very diverse character (e g stamps carpets buckets padlocks)—K E v Bishun Singh 3 Pat 503 (519) 5 P L T 319 25 Cr L J 738

754 Not exceeding three —An accused can only be charged and tried at one trial for any number of offences of the same kind not exceeding three committed within the space of a year Every act of falsification of a book of account would amount to an offence under this section and not more than three of such offences can be tried together—Q E v Mati, 26 Cal 560 Emp v Salimullah 32 All 57 Raman Behari v Emp, 41 Cal 722 In re Chakrakodi 44 M L J 67 24 Cr L J 462 Fitzmaurice v Emp 27 Cr L J 793 A I R 1926 Lah 193 One charge under sec 124A I P C in respect of one article in a newspaper one charge under sec 124A I P C in respect of the same article, and a third charge under sec 124A I P C in respect of another article, can be tried together—In re Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 33 Bom 221

The joinder at one trial of 41 charges of extortion committed during a period of 2 years contravenes the provisions of sec 234 and is an illegality not curable by sec 537—Subrahmanya Ayyar v K E, 25 Mad.

61 (P C) Where an accused was charged at one trial with criminal breach of trust with respect to seventeen sums of money and also under sec 477A in respect of distinct offences in excess of three it was held that the course adopted was illegal—Emp v Nathulal 4 Bom L R 433 The joinder of charges of three offences under section 411 I P C and three offences under sec 414 I P C is bad—Chetto Kalaar v Emp 40 Cal 555 A charge under sec 411 I P C of having received six specific animals belonging to five specific persons and stolen by five different acts of theft is illegal and wholly vitiates the trial—Hyder v Emp 20 S L R 2 27 Cr L J 32 Three offences of forgery under sec 477A and three offences of criminal breach of trust under sec 408 I P C committed in the course of similar but separate transactions cannot all be lumped together in one charge and jointly tried—Sheo Saran Lal v K E 32 All 210 Six distinct and separate charges of falsification of six separate and distinct accounts cannot be tried together—Krishna Lal v Emp 45 C L J 1 28 Cr L J 291 Three distinct offences of criminal breach of trust and three distinct offences of falsification of accounts though in respect of the same items cannot be tried together—Emp v Marant 49 Bom 892 7 Bom L R 1343 27 Cr L J 305 Kasi Viswanathan v Emp 30 Mad 328 Such a joint trial cannot be justified even under sec 235 because there are three defalcations committed on different occasions and the false entries connected with one defalcation cannot be said to form part of the same transaction with the other defalcations and falsifications—Emp v Manent (supra) Three charges of criminal breach of trust in respect of three items of money and a charge of falsification of accounts in order to conceal the defalcations cannot be legally tried at one and the same trial—Emp v Shujauddin 44 All 540 (following 32 All 219) Three charges of criminal misappropriation (sec 409 I P C) and a charge under sec 210 I P C cannot be tried together—K E v Rajendra 2 C W N 596 19 Cr L J 868 Where the accused was tried under secs 211 409 and 466 I P C in eight counts the trial was held to be illegal—Avadh Behari v Emp 20 Cr L J 81 (All)

Illegality cannot be cured by striking off a charge — A trial of the accused for four offences is altogether illegal and the illegality cannot be cured by the Judge striking out one of the charges after the trial has closed —Maravala v Emp 29 Mad 569 Chetto v Emp 49 Cal 555 Fitzmaurice v Emp A I R 1926 Lah 193 27 Cr L J 793 Although the Judge has power under sec 227 to alter a charge before judgment is pronounced still he cannot cure an illegality—Ibid But the Judge can strike off a charge before the trial begins as was done in the case of Bal Gangadhar Tilak 33 Bom 221 where in the trial before the High Court Sessions four charges were at first framed against the accused but the Advocate General withdrew one of the charges and then the trial proceeded on three charges

755 Offences against several persons —There was a conflict of opinion as to whether this section applied where the offences were committed against several persons In the following cases it was held that the words 'offences of the same kind' were not limited to offences against the same person, an accused could be charged with and tried at the same trial for offences of the same kind though committed against different persons—Chhatradhari v Emp, 43 Cal 13 19 C W N 557, Babu Lal v K E, 2 P L J 209 Manu Mija v Emp 9 Cal 371, In re Raja Rao, 20 M L T 234 17 Cr L J 479 Emp v Berhan 38 All 457 Emp v Jagatdeo 38 All 458 (Note) Shri Bhaguan v Emp, 13 C W N 507 Q E v Dhondi Ratanlal 331 Krishnayya v Emp, 20 Cr L J 71 (Nag) Nga Po v K E 11 I B R 45 But the coutrary view was taken in some other cases Thus it was held in a Madras case that the offences of extorting bribes from three different persons could not be charged and tried together—Venkata 2 Weir 299 So also in a Calcutta case the joint trial of three complaints by three complainants alleging against the accused three offences of the same kind was held to be illegal—Nanda Kumar v Emp 11 C W N 1128 See also Asghar Ali v Emp, 40 Cal 846

In order to remove this conflict of opinion the words whether in respect of the same person or not' have been added in sub section (1) 'We have inserted words in section 234 (1) which will at all events make it clear that an accused person may be charged at one trial with three offences of the same kind though committed against different persons The addition will, we think cover the difficulty which has been referred to in most cases —Report of the Select Committee of 1916 Thus where an accused person was charged with having deceitfully induced three separate persons on three different occasions in the same month to deliver property to him under circumstances which amounted to offences under sec 420 I P Code held that having regard to the amended provisions of sec 234, there was no misjoinder of charges and that the joint trial was perfectly legal—Larsand Ali v Emp 27 Cr L J 909 (Pat)

Proviso — We have also added a proviso to section 234 (2) which we think, is required Sections 379 and 380 Indian Penal Code, refer to theft and theft in a building which should clearly be treated as offences of the same kind and we think that it should also be provided specifically that an attempt to commit an offence, where such an attempt is penalized by any law, is of the same kind as the actual offence' —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

This proviso overrules Rahiman v Molarik 20 C W N 672 and Hari Singh v Emp, 20 Cr. L J 751 (Nag) where it was held that theft in a building (sec 380 I P C) and theft of paddy in a field (sec 379 I P C) were not offences of the same kind 235 (1) If, in one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction more offences than one are committed by the same person, he may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, every such offence.

Trial for more than one offence

Offence falling within two definitions

(2) If the acts alleged constitute an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, the person accused of them may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, each of such offences.

Acts constituting one offence, but constituting when combined a different offence

(3) If several acts of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence, constitute when combined a different offence, the person accused of them may be charged with and tried at one trial for the offence constituted by such acts when combined, and for any offence constituted by any one or more, of such acts

(4) Nothing contained in this section shall affect the Indian Penal Code, Section 71

755A Scope —This section must not be taken as controlled by the words 'not exceeding three' occurring in sec 234, there is nothing in this section to warrant the rule that not more than three offences be combined even if those offences have been committed in the same transaction—Sanuman v Emp 19 A L J 397, 22 Cr L J 641 If the offences are committed in the course of the same transaction a charge is not illegal by reason of containing more than three offences spread over a period longer than a year—In re Gam Mallu 49 Mad 74 48 M L J 308 A I R 1925 Mad 690 26 Cr L J 1513

761 Section to be read subject to section 71 I P C —(For the text of section 71 I P C see notes under section 35 ante) Although in cases falling under section 235 a joint trial of several offences may be held still in awarding punishment Courts are to be guided by the provisions contained in sec 71 I P C Therefore where an offence comes within two sections of the I P C the accused may be charged with and tried at one trial for two offences (sub section 2) but the punishment cannot be cumulative—Q E v Francis Xavier Ratanlal 506 Reg v Dod Basaya 11 B H C R 13 So also where several acts each of which would by itself constitute an offence constitute when combined a different offence the person accused of them may be charged with and tried at one trial for the comprehensive offence or for any one of the offences

But it should be noted that section 71 I P C refers only to cases falling under sub sections (2) and (3) of this section and does not provide for cases under sub section (1) Therefore where offences are committed in the course of the same transaction but do not fall under sub-section (2) or (3) the Court is not precluded from passing sentence on every such offence—Q E v Pakira Ratanlal 369 Q E v Wazir Jan 10 All 58 Q E v Nirichan 12 Mad 36 Q E v Pershad 7 All 414 Loke Nath v Q E 11 Cal 349 Chandra Kant v Q E 12 Cal 495 but the principle of section 71 I P C is to be followed and the whole punishment should not be more severe than the punishment for the gravest offence provided —Emp v Budh Singh 2 All 101 Emp v Jubdar 6 Cal 718 Emp v Ajudhia 2 All 644 Where two offences are so compounded together that one substantive offence can be said to have been committed there should be only one sentence viz for the gravest offence proved, e g in cases of abduction of a child with intention to steal from its person and theft—In re Noujan 7 M H C R 375 house breaking by night in order to commit theft and theft—Reg v Tukaya 1 Bom 214 Q E v Mali 23 Bom 706 Reg v Covinda Ratanlal 79 Emp v Ajudhia 2 All 644 rioting and causing grievous hurt (constructively)—Q v Dinu Sheikh 10 W R 63 Q E v Bana Puna 17 Bom 260 rioting and murder —Q E v Muse, Ratanlal 493 riding a horse furiously and causing hurt to a bystander—Q E v Latti Ratanlal 159 house trespass with intent to commit assault and grievous hurt—Q v Basoo 7 W R 29 In all these cases the whole punishment will be the same as that provided for the graver offence

236 If a single act or series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, the accused may be charged with having committed all or any

of such offences and any number of such charges may be tried at once, or he may be charged in the alternative with having committed some one of the said offences

(a) A is accused of an act which may amount to theft or receiving stolen property or criminal breach of trust or cheating He may be charged with theft receiving stolen property criminal breach of trust and cheating or he may be charged with having committed theft or receiving stolen property or criminal breach of trust or cheating

(b) A states on oath before the Magistrate that he saw B hit C with a club Before the Sessions Court A states on oath that B never hit C A may be charged in the alternative and convicted of intentionally giving false evidence although it cannot be proved which of these contradictory statements was false

762 Application of section —This section contemplates a state of facts which constitute a single offence but where it is doubtful whether the act or acts involved may amount to one or other of several cognate offences—Q E v Croft 23 Cal 174 (177) Ganesh v Emp 5 S L R 16 (per Pratt J C) Where it is not at all doubtful which of several offences the facts found would constitute (e g where the facts as disclosed in the proceedings clearly amounted to the commission of acts which would constitute offences under the Excise Act and also offences under the Merchandise Marks Act) this section does not apply—Ibid Akram Ali v Emp 18 C L J 574 Moreover this section does not relate to distinct acts but to a single act or series of acts where the facts being ascertained it is doubtful which of several sections is applicable—Sher Shah v Emp 1887 P R 43

Again this section refers to cognate offences such as theft and criminal breach of trust and does not relate to offences of so distinct a character as murder and theft—Emp v Narottam 1888 A W N 85 So also an alternative charge should not be framed in respect of such distinct offences as offences under sections 182 and 211 I P C—Thakur Singh v Chattar 1910 P R 20 11 Cr L J 420

An alternative charge cannot be framed in respect of distinct offences nor even in respect of cognate offences when the difference is one of degree i e as to the intention imputed to the accused or as to some circumstances of aggravation The criminal intention imputed to the accused must be specifically determined and not allowed to remain a subject of doubt in an alternative charge—Ganesh v Emp 5 S L R 16 12 Cr L J 2 4

Section 236 does not apply where there is any doubt as to the fact but applies where there is a doubt as to the law applicable—Emp v Nga R 6 Bur L J 83 A I R 1927 Rang 251 An alternative charge under this section can be framed only in those cases in which the prosecution cannot establish exclusively any one offence but are able on the facts to exclude the innocence of the accused and to show that the accused must have committed one of two or more offences—Emp v Ganesh 5 S L R 16 12 Cr L J 224 This section applies where the law applicable to a certain set of facts is doubtful by reason of the nature of the single act or series of acts done and in which it is charged or found proved that the act or series of acts constitute one or more or some one of several offences the doubt being on a matter of law only—Khan Mahamad v Emp, 1887 P R 11 This section relates not to distinct acts but to a single act or series of acts where the facts being ascertained it is doubtful which of several sections is applicable—Sher Shah v Emp 1887 P R 43 and not where the facts proved raise a doubt as to whether the accused is guilty of any of the charges at all—Emp v Khudiram 12 C W N 530 The Code only contemplates an alternative finding when the facts are ascertained and it would follow beyond doubt that the facts proved constitute one of two offences under one section of the Penal Code or when the evidence proves the commission of an offence falling within one of two sections of the Penal Code and it is doubtful which of such sections is applicable—Reg v Dewji Ratanlal 20 Sections 236 and 237 are merely provisions against the defeat of justice on technical grounds Where an offence is proved by the evidence but its legal definition is doubtful or has been incorrectly given in the charge then section 236 or section 237 may be resorted to They really deal with instances which the language of section 235 might fail to cover—Mahadeo Gir v Emp 9 N L R 26, 14 Cr L J 135

Therefore this section does not apply where the doubt in the mind of the Judge was not whether on the facts proved the accused s act fell within the purview of sec 302 or sec 201 I P C but whether there was sufficient proof that the accused had in fact committed the murder of the deceased or had merely caused evidence of murder to disappear such a doubt being a doubt as to facts—Pirtapa v Crown 1913 P R 11, 14 Cr L J 664 So also the section is inapplicable where the doubt exists as to whether the accused had committed murder or culpable homicide not amounting to murder such a doubt being based on facts only—Khan Mahd v Emp 1887 P R 11 So also where the accused was charged under two heads of charge with committing dacoity in each of two adjoining houses and it was doubtful as to which house he entered an alternative charge that the accused committed dacoity either in A s house or in B s house is illegal—Reg v Dewji, Ratanlal 20

This section only authorises a charge in the alternative when it is doubtful which of the several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute and not where there may be a doubt as to the facts which constitute one of the elements of the offence—Wafader v Q E, 21 Cal 955 Nayanulli v Emp 26 Cr L J 594 (Cal) Ganesh v Emp, 5 S L R 16 (per Pratt J C)

This section does not apply where the two offences are distinct separate, the one offence being committed subsequent to the other, the offence of abetment of forgery and the offence of using the document In such a case the offence of abetment of forgery is complete when the document is written and signed the use of the forged document is a subsequent act and is a distinct and separate offence for which the accused is entitled to be separately charged—Harun Rashid v Emp 53 Cal 466 30 C W N 432 27 Cr L J 606

Where the offences are of a cognate nature e g theft and receiving stolen property charges may be framed alternatively—Sant Singh v Emp 1889 P R 26 So also a charge of murder may be joined in the alternative with a charge of causing evidence of murder to disappear—Begu v Emp 6 Lah 226 (P C) 30 C W N 581, 26 Cr L J 1059 Emp v Hanmappa 25 Bom L R 231 25 Cr L J 1349 Andal v Emp 18 S L R 185 26 Cr L J 909 Crown v Bawa Maghindas 4 S L R 471 11 Cr L J 731 (The contrary view expressed in Tarap Ali v Q E 22 Cal 638 and Sanmita v Emp 20 C W N 166 is overruled by the Privy Council case of Begu v Emp supra) On charges under section 489A (counterfeiting a currency note) and section 420 (cheating) the High Court directed the conviction to be in the alternative—Hira v Emp, 15 A L J 587 18 Cr L J 790

When it is doubtful as to whether the offence was under a certain section of the Penal Code or under a section of any other law (e g Post Office Act) the charge should be cumulative An alternative charge cannot be framed in respect of an offence under the Penal Code and an offence under a special law—Ganesh v Emp 5 S L R 16 See also Emp v Nga Shue 4 Rang 355 27 Cr L J 1360 But see Manhari v K E 45 Cal 727 and Tulsi Telini v Emp 50 Cal 564 24 Cr L J 372 where it has been held that a charge under section 380 I P C may be framed alternatively with a charge under section 54A of the Calcutta Police Act The Patna High Court also holds that a charge under section 16 of the Motor Vehicles Act may be framed alternatively with a charge under section 338 I P C —Mak uddan v Emp 2 P L T 31

If charges are framed cumulatively and such framing of charge is illegal the illegality cannot be cured by saying that if the charges had been framed alternatively it would have been valid Thus a joinder of charges of three offences under section 411 I P C with a charge of three offences under section 414 I P C is illegal because section 234 does not allow a joinder of charges of more than three offences but this illegality cannot be corrected by the argument that if the charges had been framed in the alternative under section 236 there would have been no defect in the trial—Chello v Emp, 49 Cal 555 24 Cr L J 86

763 Contradictory statements —Illustration (b) shows that contradictory statements constitute the offence of giving false evidence although it cannot be proved which of the two statements is false

An alternative charge in respect of two contradictory statements can be framed only when the prosecution is unable to prove which of the two statements is false—Harnam v Emp 1890 P R 27 Pul Pro v Muthu Karnan 2 Weir 300 Otherwise two separate charges ought to be framed one relating to each statement and such evidence as is procurable should be adduced to prove the falsity of one or other of the two statements—Pub Pro v Kali Vannan, 2 Weir 299

To attract the applicability of this section and justify a charge in the alternative in respect of contradictory stat ments it is essential to re member that it is only when the statements constitute a series of acts that an alternative charge can be framed under this section Thus, there is a common relation between a police investigation an inquiry by the Magistrate preliminary to commitment and a final trial in the Sessions Court the words series of acts' would be applicable to the statements made at these different stages and an alternative charge can be framed in respect of the statements—Saleh Shah v Crown 16 S L R 285 25 Cr L J 1195, A I R 1924 Sind 1 Pitraj v Emp 12 O L J 644 2 O W N 637, 26 Cr L J 1457

764 Sentence —When the conviction is in the alternative, the Court should pass the maximum sentence provided for the lesser of the two alternative charges—Hira v Emp, 15 A L J 587, 18 Cr L J 790, Sobha Singh v K E, 1903 P L R 63

When a person is charged with one offence he can be convicted of another

237. (1) If, in the case mentioned in section 236, the accused is charged with one offence and it appears in evidence that he committed a different offence for which he might have been charged under the provisions of that section, he may be convicted of the offence which he is shown to have committed, although he was not charged with it.

(2) (Omitted.)

Illustration

A is charged with theft it appears that he committed the offence of criminal breach of trust or that of receiving stolen goods He may be convicted of criminal breach of trust or of receiving stolen goods (as the case may be) though he was not charged with such offence

Change —Sub section (2) has been omitted from this section but has been re enacted as sub-section (2A) of section 238, as it should be more appropriately placed under that section

765 Scope of section —Section 237 has to be read with section 236 It applies to cases where section 236 applies If the facts of the case do not fall under section 236 section 237 has got no application —Genu Manjhi v K E, 18 C W N 1276 Harun Rashid v Emp, 53 Cal 466, 30 C W N 432, 27 Cr L J 606 Akram Ali v Emp, 18 C L J. 574 Raghunath v Emp, 24 A L J 168, 27 Cr L J 152 It is an enabling section which empowers the Court to convict the accused of offences for which no charge has been framed but for which a char could have been framed under section 236—Bhowanath v Emp, 4 P L W 40 19 Cr L J 202

766 Conviction for different offence —If on the facts found of which the accused may be taken to have notice another offence appears to have been committed by him and if on those facts it seems doubtful as to which offence the accused has committed he may be convicted under sections 236 and 237 of the other offence—Dibakar v Saktidhar 31 C W N 527 28 Cr L J 404 Thus a person charged and tried under section 411 I P C (receiving stolen property) may be convicted of an offence under section 379 I P C (theft)—Q E v Karim Baksh 1883 A W N 116 Similarly a person charged with theft may be convicted of receiving stolen property—In re Kuppam Ambalam 17 M L J 719 A person charged with criminal breach of trust may be convicted of attempting to cheat—Reg v Ramajiraw 12 B H C R 1 A person charged under section 380 I P C may be convicted under section 54A of the Calcutta Police Act although the was not charged with the latter offence—Tulsi Telini v Emp 50 Cal 564

But the two offences (i e the offence charged and the offence of which the accused is convicted) must be cognate offences Sections 236 and 237 refer to cognate offences such as theft and criminal breach of trust and do not relate to offences of so distinct a nature as murder and theft—Q E v Narotam 1888 A W N 95 Wallu v Crown 4 Lah 373 25 Cr L J 385 In other words the alteration of finding must not be such as to prejudice the accused by making him answer a charge of an entirely different character necessitating a distinct defence altogether Thus where the accused was charged with theft of a tree he could not be convicted under section 143 I P C on the ground that he had gone with his men to the spot armed with lathis as the defence for the two charges must be distinct and the accused must be held to have been prejudiced by the alteration of charge—Dibakar v Saktidhar 31 C W N 527 28 Cr L J 404 A person charged with rape cannot be convicted of kidnapping since the two offences involve different elements and different questions of fact—Emp v Sakharam 8 Bom L R 120 Persons charged with dacoity cannot be convicted of receiving stolen property—Reg v Gopala Ratanlal 34 A person charged with dacoity and riot cannot be convicted of house trespass—Q v Sa amat 23 W R 59 A person charged with the offence of abetment of forgery cannot be convicted of the offence of using a forged document because the latter offence is a distinct and different offence from the former and was committed subsequent to it The abetment of forgery was complete when the document was written and signed the use of the forged document was a subsequent act and was a different offence for which the accused should be separately charged—Harun v Emp 53 Cal 466 7 Cr L J 606 But a person charged with murder (section 302 I P C) may be convicted of causing evidence of murder to disappear (sec 201 I P C) without any charge in respect of the latter offence because the accused might have been charged with the two offences in the alternative under section 236—Begu v Emp 6 Lah 226 (P C) 30 C W N

A person charged under section 452 I P Code cannot be convicted of an offence under sec 19 Arms Act because the latter offence is an offence under a special Act and the accused was not charged with it and had no opportunity of meeting it—Emp v Nga Shwe 4 Rang 355 27 Cr L J 1360

A person who is charged under sections 149 and 325 I P C with having constructively committed the offence of causing grievous hurt by being a member of an unlawful assembly cannot be convicted under sec 325 I P C of causing grievous hurt with his own hands—Panchu Das v Emp, 34 Cal 698 K E v Madan Mandal 41 Cal 662 Reazuddi v Emp 16 C W N 1077 But the Madras High Court is of opinion that if a person is being charged with being a member of an unlawful assembly one of the members of which caused grievous hurt in pursuance of the common object there is no necessary implication that that particular member (who caused the grievous hurt) is not himself Consequently if he is charged under sections 326 and 149 I P C with causing grievous hurt by implication by reason of his being a member of an unlawful assembly and it is found that he himself caused the grievous hurt he may be convicted under section 326 I P C alone of the substantive offence of causing grievous hurt himself—Theethumalai v K E 47 Mad 746 (F B) 47 M L J 221 35 M L T 21

Alteration of charge necessary —When a person is charged with one offence and is convicted of a different offence the Court should alter the charge under section 227 of this Code before conviction Section 237 does not imply that a person charged under one section of the I P C may be convicted under another section without altering the charge—Q E v Karim Baksh 1888 A W N 116 When the charge is altered the altered charge must be read and explained to the accused as provided in clause (2) of section 227—Dhum Singh v Emp 23 A L J 436 Raghunath v Emp 24 A L J 168 27 Cr L J 152 Unless this is done the conviction under the altered charge will be set aside—Raghunath v Emp (supra)

767 Power of Appellate Court —An appellate Court has power to convict the accused for an offence though he was not charged and tried for that offence in the original Court—Lala Ojha v Q E 26 Cal 863 Kalicharan v Emp 41 Cal 537 18 C W N 309 And the Appellate Court can do so not only under this section but also under section 423 (b) (2)—Krishnan v Emp (1916) 2 M W N 267 17 Cr L J 384

But in so altering the conviction the Appellate Court must consider in each particular case as to whether the procedure followed by it although it may be strictly correct in law is one which should be adopted in the case If the prosecution establishes certain acts constituting an offence and the Court misapplies the law by charging and convicting an accused person for an offence other than that for which he should have properly charged, and if notwithstanding such error the accused has by his defence endeavoured to meet the accusation of the commission of these acts, then the Appellate Court may alter the charge or finding and convict him for an offence which those acts properly constitute, provided the accused be not prejudiced by the alteration in the finding. Such an error is one of form rather than of substance—Lala Ojha v Q E, 26 Cal 863. Thus, the accused was convicted by the trial Court for theft of a tree, under section 379 I P C. The lower Appellate Court found that the accused bona fide believed the tree to be his own, and set aside the conviction for theft but convicted the accused under section 143 I P C. on the ground that he had gone with his men to the spot armed with lathis held that the conviction by the Appellate Court was illegal in as much as the defence in the two charges must be distinct and the accused must be held to have been prejudiced by the alteration of conviction into one under section 143 I P Code—Dibakar v Sahtidhar, 31 C W N 527, 28 Cr L J 404

When offence proved included in offence charged

238. (1) When a person is charged with an offence consisting of several particulars, a combination of some only of which constitutes a complete minor offence, and such combination is proved, but the remaining particulars are not proved, he may be convicted of the minor offence, though he was not charged with it.

(2) When a person is charged with an offence, and facts are proved which reduce it to a minor offence, he may be convicted of the minor offence, although he is not charged with it.

(2A) When a person is charged with an offence, he may be convicted of an attempt to commit such offence, although the attempt is not separately charged.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize a conviction of any offence referred to in Section 198 or Section 199 when no complaint has been made as required by that section.

(a) A is charged, under Section 407 of the Indian Penal Code, with criminal breach of trust in respect of property entrusted to him as a carrier. He may be convicted of criminal breach of trust under Section 406.

(b) A is charged, under Section 325 of the Indian Penal Code, with causing grievous hurt He proves that he acted on grave and sudden provocation He may be convicted under Section 335 of the Code

Change —By section 64 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) sub-section (2) of section 237 has been transferred to the present section and re enacted as sub-section (2A) it being more appropriate under this section than under section 237

768 Principle of section —Where an offence consists of several particulars a combination of some only of which constitutes a complete minor offence the graver charge gives notice to the accused of all the circumstances going to constitute the minor offence of which he may be convicted The latter is arrived at by mere subtraction from the former But when the circumstances constituting the major charge do not necessarily and according to the definition of the offence imputed by that charge constitute the minor offence also the principle no longer applies because notice of the former does not necessarily involve notice of all that constitutes the latter—Reg v Chand Nur 11 B H C R 240

Though a Magistrate has power under this section to convict the accused of a different offence from what he was originally accused of still this must be done only in cases where the accused is not in any way prejudiced by the conviction on the new charge The accused person is entitled to know with certainty and accuracy the exact nature of the charge brought against him and unless he has this knowledge he must be seriously prejudiced in his defence—Balkeshuar v Emp 3 P L T 322 23 Cr L J 114 But where the accused is charged under sec 457 I P C for criminal trespass with intent to commit theft it is open to the Magistrate to convict him under sec 456 I P C for criminal trespass with intent to carry on an intrigue with a woman and the accused is not in any way prejudiced by such conviction because to sustain a conviction under section 456 I P C it is not necessary to specify the criminal intention it is sufficient if a guilty intention is proved such as is contemplated in sec 441 I P C —Karali Prasad v Emp 44 Cal 358 20 C. Minor offence —Minor offence is not defined anywhere in the Code and should be understood in its ordinary and not in any technical sense—Q E v Sitanath 22 Cal 1006 It means an offence deserving a lesser degree of punishment

769 Cases under this section —An offence [illegible] 365 I P C can be said to be a minor offence as compared [illegible] 366 and 376 I P C and a person charged under the latter

victed of the offence under the former section (365 I P C) even though he was not charged with it—Q E v Sitanath 22 Cal 1006 A person charged with dacoity may be convicted of theft though he was charged with dacoity and not with theft—Q E v Khoda 17 Bom 369 A person charged with an offence under sec 457 can be convicted of an offence under sec 414 I P C, since the latter offence is included in the former—Q E v. Balu Ratanlal 293

In the trial of an accused by a Sessions Judge with the aid of assessors for an offence so triable it is competent to the Judge to convict the accused of a minor offence though that offence is triable only by a jury—Emp v Changauda 45 Bom 619 Similarly an accused charged under sec 412 I P C (triable by jury) can be convicted under sec 411 I P C (triable with the aid of assessors) though not separately charged with the latter offence—Emp v Gulabchand 27 Bom L R 1416

770 Cases not under this section —A charge under section 376 I P C cannot be altered into a conviction under section 366 I P C because the two sections involve different elements and different questions of fact and the latter cannot be said to be minor to or included in the former—Emp v Sakharam 8 Bom L R 120 G C Sircar v Emp 3 Rang 68 4 Bur L J 29 Similarly where the accused was charged with murder but the evidence disclosed an offence of kidnapping from lawful guardianship a conviction for the latter offence could not be sustained since it was neither minor to nor included in the former offence—Savari Iyer 2 Weir 302 An offence under section 202 I P C is not a minor offence included in the offence under section 201 I P C and therefore a conviction for the former offence cannot be had where the charge was under the latter section only—Imp v Rino 5 S L R 123 13 Cr L J 18 A person charged with dacoity and riot cannot be convicted for house trespass the

Rioting and hurt etc —Where the accused were charged with rioting, they could not be convicted of criminal trespass and hurt because none of the latter offences was a necessary ingredient of the offence of rioting and it was not proved that the common object of rioting was criminal trespass or hurt—In re Mongalu 18 Cr L J 860 (Mad) Where the accused is charged with being a member of an unlawful assembly and with committing grievous hurt by implication (sections 149 and 325 I P C) he cannot be convicted of the substantive offence of causing grievous hurt under sec 325 by his individual act because under no reasonable construction of this section can the substantive offence of causing grievous hurt individually be regarded as minor to or included in the charge under sections 325 and 149 I P C of causing grievous hurt by implication—Panchu v Emp, 34 Cal 698 Emp v Madan Mandal 41 Cal 662 Dasarath v Emp 34 Cal 325 Reazuddi v K E 16 C W N 1077 Contra—Theethi malai v K E 47 Mad 746 (F B) cited in Note 766 ante

Sub-section (3)—When minor offence requires complaint — See sub-section (3) A person charged with one offence cannot be convicted of a minor offence, if the latter offence requires a complaint by a particular person mentioned in sections 198 and 199 Thus, the offence of adultery requires complaint by the husband, and therefore a person charged with rape cannot be convicted of adultery in the absence of a complaint by the husband Even the husband s giving evidence in the case will not amount to a complaint—Emp v Kallu, 5 All 233 See Notes 650 and 654 under secs 198 and 199

Change —This section has been redrafted by sec 65 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923

The actual change brought about by this amendment is the addition of clauses (c), (e) (f) and (g) ' It is provided that when two or more persons are accused of offences of the same kind committed by them jointly during the space of one year, they may be tried for the same at one trial Secondly, it is directed that when one person is accused of any offence which includes theft, etc , and another of receiving or retaining or disposing of the stolen property, they may be tried jointly Thirdly, provision is made for the joint trial of one person accused of counterfeiting coin and another of fraudulently possessing or uttering it "—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) Fourthly, another clause i e, clause (f), has been added by the Select Committee of 1916 allowing the joint trial of persons accused of offences under secs 411 and 414 of the Indian Penal Code

774 Scope and Application —This section lays down certain general principles for the combination of charges in a joint trial of several persons The object of these principles is to avoid the likelihood of bewildering the accused in their defence by having to meet many disconnected charges and of endangering the prospect of a fair trial by the production of a mass of evidence directed to many matters and tending by its mere accumulation to induce an undue suspicion against the accused persons—Sanuman v Emp, 19 A L J 392, 22 Cr L J 641

This is the last exception to section 233 which lays down the general principle that every offence must be charged and tried separately This is the only section which authorises a joint trial of several persons under circumstances specified in this section Except in cases failing under this [illegible] the trial [illegible]—Emp v

Lachchu v Emp, 1 O L J 141, 15 Cr L J 420, or by any waiver or consent of parties or their pleaders—Hussein Baksh v Emp, 6 Cal 96

This section applies to trials and not to inquiries The sections of the Cr P C relating to joinder of charges viz 233 to 239 refer to trial of the accused and cannot be extended to preliminary inquiries held by Magistrates prior to commitment to the Sessions—In re Govinda 26 Mad 592 Therefore in a joint commitment of several accused it is not necessary that the conditions of this section should be fulfilled—Nelluri Chenchia v Rex 42 Mad 561, 36 M L J 296, 20 Cr L J 379

But this section is applicable to inquiries under Chapter VIII The main principles applicable to a criminal trial regarding joinder of charges and the joint trial of accused persons are also applicable to inquiries under

775 Clause (a)— 'Persons accused of the same offence' — The words same offence imply that both the accused should have acted in concert or association and therefore where the allegation was that either one or the other committed the crime this section does not apply and the two accused must be tried separately according to sec 233—Azimuddin v Emp 6 Bur L T 191 7 L B R 68 14 Cr L J 563 Where it is merely shown that part of the stolen property was found in the possession of one person and another part was found in the possession of another it would probably be illegal to try the two men together but if the two men were acting in concert and were in joint control of the stolen property their joint trial would not be illegal—Jalunanda v *K. 777 Clause (c)—Offences of the same kind '—Section 234 applies only to the case of one accused committing several offences of the same kind within a year But where several persons committed several offences of the same kind there was no provision under the old law for the joint trial of those persons and consequently separate trial was necessary—Budhai v Tarap 10 C W N 32 Thus it was held that where three dacoities were committed by several dacoits on three different dates and at separate places the dacoits must be separately charged and tried for each dacoity as the offences were not committed in the same transaction—Ram Prosad v K E 19 A L J 796 22 Cr L J 657 So again three acts of robbery committed by several persons on the same night in three distinct places were to be tried separately—Q v Hyder, 6 W R 83 Where several persons looted the linseed crop of the complainant on one day and his tobacco crop on another day the offences must be tried separately as they were not parts of the same transaction—Budhai v Emp, 33 Cal 292 These cases are now overruled by this clause Under the present law the offences can be tried together provided that each offence is committed by the accused persons jointly and it is not necessary that all the sets of offences must be committed in the same transaction If the offences are not joint this section cannot apply thus where three persons were found to be in possession of stolen articles but none of the articles were in their joint possession they could not be tried jointly even though the articles were the proceeds of one burglary—Jiwan v Emp 19 A L J 815 23 Cr L J 409 Moosan v Emp 20 A L J 563 Where a woman was abducted by K and B and then rape was committed on the woman at a place D by the two accused persons and subsequently the woman was taken either by force or by fraud by one of the accused alone to different places and where he alone committed rape on her held that a joint charge of abduction against both the accused K and B under sec 366 I P C was justified that a joint charge under sec 376 I P C against both of them in respect of the rape which took place at D was also justified but a joint charge against both the accused of having committed rape at different places was improper and embarassing—Keramat v K E, 44 C L J 524 27 Cr L J 263 A I R 1926 Cal 320 conspiracy can be tried together—Abdul Salim v K E 49 Cal 573 26 C W N 680 35 C L J 279

(10) Where a gang of dacoits assembled on a highway for robbing passers by and in the course of the dacoity several offences were committed by them held that all these offences were committed in the course of the same transaction It is immaterial whether all the members of the gang took an active part in each offence—Ram Prosad v Emp 20 A L J 926

(11) The offence of dacoity the offence of dishonest possession of stolen property knowing it to have been stolen in the commission of a dacoity and dishonest reception of such property knowing it to be stolen from a known dacoit can be tried together as all the offences can be said to have been committed in the same transaction—Emp v Durga Prosad 45 All 323 20 A L J 981 24 Cr L J 149 It will now fall under clause (e)

(12) The offence of fabricating false evidence in order to procure the conviction of an innocent person the offence of instituting a false prosecution against that person and the offence of giving false evidence in that prosecution in order to secure his conviction —all these offences can be tried together as there was one sustained and continuous plot for procuring conviction of an innocent person—Emp v Ganesh 14 Bom L R 972 13 Cr L J 833

(13) Criminal conspiracy to commit the offences of importing arms and ammunition murder attempt to commit murder grievous hurt, robbery dacoity and the commission of those offences in pursuance of the conspiracy (secs 19 and 20 Arms Act secs 302 307 326 392 394 395 396 397 398 I P C and secs 120 B and 109 I P C)—Mukund Singh v Emp 8 Lah 230 (P C) A I R 1927 P C 215

(14) Where two persons were charged under two separate Acts (sec 72 Provincial Insolvency Act and sec 102 Pres Town Insolv Act), but the facts alleged against them were the same viz that the two accused carried on a joint business and each obtained credit concealing the fact that he was an undischarged insolvent held that the two accused could be tried jointly—Ganguly v Watson 53 Cal 9[illegible]9 27 Cr L J [illegible]

779 Offences not in the same transaction —(1) In case of rioting the two opposite factions cannot be said to commit the offence of rioting in the same transaction the action of each side forming a separate transaction the two parties must be tried separately—Hussain Baksh v Emp 6 Cal 96 Q E v Chandra Bhuiya 20 Cal 537, Ata Dya v K E 1906 P R 5, Emp v Bandho Singh [illegible] Contra—Emp v Mangal 18 A L J 744

(2) Murder and robbery on one occasion and another act of robbery committed a few hours after in another place though owing to the same [illegible] the former offences do not form parts of the same transaction—[illegible] Mulua 14 All 502 So also murder by four men and grievous [illegible] three of them caused upon a person who tried to prevent them [illegible] ing off the dead body some time after the murder [illegible]

(4) Where a person obtained a promissory note by cheating and on a subsequent date he went with another person and both cashed the note, the two persons cannot be charged and tried together for both the offences since the occurrence of each date formed a distinct transaction by its II—Hira Lal v Emp, 31 Cal 1053

(5) A charge of theft against one person and a charge against another person for rescuing the former from lawful custody cannot be tried together—Tilakdhari v Emp, 13 C W N 804; *Q. (6) The offences of rioting and murder committed by five persons, and the offence of concealing the dead body (of a person killed in the riot) committed by the 5th accused, cannot be tried jointly. The offence of the 5th accused (concealing the dead body) should be tried separately—Surendra v Emp, 40 C L J 559 A I R 1925 Cal 413, 26 Cr L J 467

(7) A charge against five men of having committed a riot, and a charge against four of them of having committed criminal trespass on a different occasion cannot be tried together in the same trial—Q E v Chandi Singh, 14 Cal 395

(8) A person charged under secs 414 and 411 I P. C cannot be tried jointly with four others charged under section 454 I P C—Sahib Singh v Emp, 1905 P R 38, 1905 P L R 115

(9) Two persons fabricating a kubliyat, and two other persons fabricating another kubuliyat the two sets of persons not having any community of interest, cannot be tried together—Kazi Safiuddin v Fazal Sheik, 21 C W. N 756, 18 Cr. L J. 833

(10) Two acts of abduction separate and distinct, though of the same girl, committed by two sets of persons at different dates cannot be tried together—Emp v Fsua, 1 C L J. 475

(11) Where several dacoities were committed by several persons, but the persons implicated in one dacoity were not the same as those implicated in the other or others, the dacoities were not committed in the same transaction and could not be tried jointly—Ram Sahai v. Emp, 19 A L J 610 22 Cr L J 397

(12) The author of a defamatory article, who is charged under sec 500 I P C, and the printer of the article, who is charged under sec 501 I P C cannot be tried together when there is no evidence of conspiracy,

(13) Murder by one person and intentional omission by another person who discovered the murder to give information in respect of the murder cannot be said to be offences committed in the same transaction—Ratan Singh v Emp 19 N L J 913 23 Cr L J 8

(14) The offence of receiving stolen property (sec 413 I P C) and the offence of belonging to a gang of thieves (sec 401 I P C) relate to different transactions and cannot be tried together—Chhajju v Emp 26 Cr L J 1097 (Lah)

780 Clause (e) —Under the old law it was held that where A and B were charged with house breaking by night with intent to commit theft and C with having received some of the stolen articles on a certain day and D with having received some other stolen articles on another day the joint trial of these persons would be illegal—Emp v Girdhari 1882 A W N 215 This ruling is now superseded by clause (e) of this section

Where one person has committed theft and another person received the stolen property knowing it to be stolen they can be tried jointly—In re A David 6 C L R 245 Emp v Bhima 38 All 311 14 A L J 344 Emp v Keshav Krishna 6 Bom L R 361 Anwar v Emp 44 All 276 20 A L J 96 Bishnu 1 C W N 35 Karu v Ram Charan 28 Cal 10 Nga Po v Emp 4 Bur L T 263 13 Cr L J 59 and it is not necessary that the receiving should take place simultaneously with the theft—Anwar v Emp 44 All 276 Even an appreciable interval of time between the two acts which are otherwise connected does not always prevent them from being parts of the same series of connected events and from being tried together—Nga Nyo v K E 14 Bur L R 38 6 Cr L J 78 Nga Ton Pu v K E 2 L B R 19 In Emp v Jethalal 29 Bom 449 and Ramratan v Emp 21 C W N 1111 19 Cr L J 17 however it is held that theft and receipt of stolen goods cannot be said to be acts committed in the same transaction because the thief and the receiver of goods are not associated in the series of acts which form the same transaction from the very start the one offence takes place after the other is completed In another Calcutta case also it was held that unless the theft and subsequent receipt were committed in pursuance of the same conspiracy the two offences could not be said to be parts of the same transaction and the offenders could not be tried together—Obi Bhusan v Emp, 46 Cal 741 23 C W N 463 29 C L J 217 Under the present clause however it is not necessary that the two offences must be committed in the same transaction or in pursuance of the same conspiracy all that is now required is that one offender should commit theft and the other offender should receive the stolen property

Dacoity and receiving the property stolen in the dacoity may be tried together under this clause—Durga Prosad v Emp 45 All 223 20 A L J 981

The offence of belonging to a gang of thieves (sec 401 I P C) is not an offence which includes theft within the meaning of this clause becaus

the former offence is committed as soon as a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft is formed and before any theft is actually committed by them Therefore, an offence of belonging to a gang of thieves and an offence of receiving stolen property cannot be tried together, under this clause—Chajju v Emp, 26 Cr L J 1097 (Lah)

781. Clause (f) :—The object of this clause and the meaning of the words 'possession of which has been transferred by one offence' have been thus explained by Mr Tonkinson during the debate in the Legislative Assembly 'Take a concrete example A is a cattle thief, two cattle are stolen B is the dishonest receiver to whom A has passed on one of the cattle, C is the dishonest butcher who knows the cattle to have been stolen and assists in their concealment by slaughtering the other Well, if A is present A, B and C can all be tried together under clause (e) If A has disappeared then this is not possible, and the provisions of clause (f) are required The possession of these cattle has been transferred by one offence, the original offence of theft One person has later committed an offence under sec 411 I P C and another person has committed an offence under section 414 I P C The two cattle were stolen at the same time, that is one offence'—Legislative Assembly Debates, 6th February 1923, page 1992 By this clause the ruling in 28 Cal 104 is rendered obsolete

The only offences mentioned in this clause are offences under secs 411 and 414 I P C, and the provisions of this clause cannot be extended by analogy to a trial of persons accused of offences other than those specifically mentioned herein Therefore, the joint trial of two accused both charged under sec. 412 I P C, is illegal—Behari v K E, 12 O L J 339 26 Cr L J 1291 A I R 1925 Oudh 452

Receivers of stolen property stolen at one theft can be tried jointly even though the stolen articles were received by them at different times—Guljamia v Emp 6 Pat 583, 28 Cr L J 962 The following cases may arise when stolen property is found in the possession of different receivers (a) there may be one theft and the several receivers may have received the property jointly i.e, at one and the same time (b) there may be one theft and the several receivers may have received the property at different times (as in the present case) (c) there may be two or more thefts and the several receivers may have received the property jointly, (d) there may be two or more thefts and the several receivers may have received the property at different times Now, in cases (a) and (c) a joint trial is clearly permissible, because the property was received jointly, whether there was one or more than one theft In case (d), a joint trial is illegal, because there is no community of purpose between the receivers In case (b) a joint trial is permitted by clause (f) of sec 239 This clause practically declares that the different acts of receipts are one and the same transaction if the transfer of possession from the owner to the thief was made by one and the same act (i e if the articles were stolen at one theft) The fact that the articles were received by the receivers at different times is immaterial the words 'possession of which has been transferred by one offence' refer to the transfer of possession from the true owner to the thief and not to the transfer of possession from the thief to the receivers—Ibid (Per Mullick J)

782 Clause (g) —A person who passes counterfeit coins and another who is in possession of them can be tried jointly—Emp v Prasanna 31 Cal 1007

783 Separate trial —A joint trial is not compulsory under this section the Magistrate has a discretion to proceed jointly or separately against the accused persons—Govinda v Emp 16 N L R 9 21 Cr L J 709 Though the offences are committed in the same transaction still it is a question for the Court in the exercise of its discretion to say whether the accused should be tried together or separately—Emp v Charu Chandra 38 C L J 300 25 Cr L J 704 This section gives a judicial discretion to the Court to try the accused persons jointly or separately, and the manner in which the discretion should be exercised must depend upon the facts of each case—Dwarka v K E 19 C W N 121 16 Cr L J 348 Although a joint trial is allowed under the circumstances specified in this section still it is the duty of the Magistrate to see that the accused are not prejudiced thereby No joinder of charges should be allowed if it bewilders any of the accused in his defence or unduly prejudices him—Crown v Gulam 1 S L R 73 Pitsanki v Q 5 Mad 20 Ahmuddi v K E 57 Cal 253 29 C W N 173 Thus a number of murders and an offence of arson were committed Though all the accused were present, there was evidence against some of them only as regards those offences There was evidence against all the accused together only of conspiracy to commit murder All the accused were charged with conspiracy murder and arson and the jury returned a verdict of guilty against all the accused on all the charges Held that the jury were embarrassed and the accused were prejudiced in their defence—Ahmuddi v K E (supra) If the accused appear to have acted independently and have separate defences the joint trial is illegal—Purasu Nayaka 2 Weir 303

Whenever the applicability of sec 239 is doubtful it is better that the accused should be tried separately—Samiullah v Emp 51 M L J 692, 27 Cr L J 1381

A separate trial is the rule and joint trial is the exception and it is for the prosecution to justify a joint trial—Emp v Durga Prosad 45 All 223 (224) 20 A L J 981

783A Applicability of sec 234 to sec 239 —In Burma and Oudh it has been held that the words the former part of this chapter occurring at the end of this section mean the part prior to the part headed joinder of charges i e the part under the heading form of charge" therefore sec 234 will not control the provisions of sec 239—Bishambhar v K E 20 W N 760 26 Cr L J 1602 Po Mya v Emp 7 L B R 272, 16 Cr L J 44 But in Shankar v K E 11 A L J 188 14 Cr L J 116 it has been held that the words mean that secs 234 and 235 shall also apply to this section and that sec 239 is governed by secs 234 and 235

784 Misjoinder not cured by acquittal —Where several persons were charged with and tried at one trial for dacoity and on these persons was also tried for an offence under sec 20 Arms Act for being in possession of arms and ammunitions at a time subsequent to the dacoity and after the transaction in which the dacoity was committed it was held that the trial was illegal and the fact that the Sessions Court acquitted him of the offence under the Arms Act observing that the accused could not be legally convicted at the same trial of the offence under the Arms Act, could not cure the illegality—Jaisingh v Crown, 1917 P R 44, 19 Cr L J 100

Withdrawal of remaining charges on conviction on one of several charges

240. When a charge containing more heads than one is framed against the same person, and when a conviction has been had on one or more of them, the complainant or the officer conducting the prosecution, may, with the consent of the Court, withdraw the remaining charge or charges, or the Court of its own accord may stay the inquiry into, or trial of, such charge or charges. Such withdrawal shall have the effect of an acquittal on such charge or charges, unless the conviction be set aside, in which case the said Court (subject to the order of the Court setting aside the conviction) may proceed with the inquiry into or trial of the charge or charges so withdrawn.

785. Scope of section :—This section applies where the accused is charged with several distinct offences and not where formal charges are drawn up against him—Amir Chand v Emp, 1889 P R 24 Where the offence is one but the charges are several because the offence falls under several sections of the I P C or because there is doubt as to which offence was committed this section does not apply and the conviction of the accused on one of the charges necessarily makes the other charges nugatory

If however the accused has committed several offences and several charges are therefore drawn up the conviction on one of the charges does not make the other charges nugatory but it is open to a Court to convict the accused on the other charges or to withdraw the charges under this section—Amir Chand v Emp, 1889 P R 24 This is an enabling section and gives the Court discretion either to convict or acquit the accused on the remaining charges and does not make it obligatory on the prosecution on a conviction on one charge, to withdraw the other charges

If the evidence is sufficient to sustain a conviction on all the charges and the Court considers a certain term of imprisonment adequate to meet all the offences, it is not a proper course for the Court to convict on one charge and drop the others but it should convict on all the charges and pass concurrent sentences—Reg v Ram Chandra, Ratanlal 19, Q E v Nadhariya, Ratanlal 288

Again this section applies only to charges framed in the same case and the prosecution cannot on conviction of the accused in one case withdraw a charge against the accused in another case—Q E v Sadia Ratanlal 36 Q E v Govinda Ratanlal 977

Charge when can be withdrawn —A charge can be withdrawn at any time before it is tried If however evidence on the charge is recorded and the pleaders heard it cannot be withdrawn and it is the duty of the Judge to sum up the whole of the evidence and to require the jury to return a verdict on the charge A fortiori a charge cannot be withdrawn after a jury has returned a verdict convicting the accused on that charge—Q E v Nadharia Ratanlal 88

High Court's power to direct withdrawal —Where the accused was charged with 10 offences of criminal breach of trust in respect of 10 small sums and the Sessions Judge convicted the accused on three only of the charges the High Court on appeal approved of the Sessions Judge's action and also directed that no furher proceedings against the accused in respect of the other offences should be taken—Basiruddin v K E 9 C L J 257

CHAPTER XX

OF THE TRIAL OF SUMMONS CASES BY MAGISTRATES

786 This chapter deals only with the trial of summons cases a warrant case cannot be tried under this chapter If however a warrant case is joined with a summons-case e g where two charges arising out of the same transaction are made against an accused person one of which is a summons case and the other a warrant case the procedure should be as in a warrant case—Raj Narain v Lala Zamoli 11 Cal 91 In re Sobha naran 39 Mad 503 Raghavalu v Singaram 41 Mad 727 But in such a case if the warrant case is not proved the Magistrate may proceed with the summons case according to the procedure laid down in this chapter and not under chapter XXI—Q E v Papadu 7 Mad 454

Procedure in summons cases

241 The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of summons cases

Substance of accusation to be stated

242 When the accused appears or is brought before the Magistrate, the particulars of the offence of which he is accused shall be stated to him, and he shall be asked if he has any cause to show why he shall not be convicted, but it shall not be necessary to frame a formal charge

787. Particulars to be stated to accused:—It is necessary that the accused should have a clear statement made to him (a) that he is about to be put on his trial, and (b) as to the offence or facts constituting the offence of the commission of which he is accused. If these particulars are not made known to him, the conviction will be set aside—In re Acharjee Lal, 3 C L R 87. Omission to state to the accused the particulars of the offence with which he is charged amounts to an illegality vitiating the trial, and not a mere irregularity curable by sec 537—Gopal Krishna v Moti Lal, 54 Cal 359, 31 C W N 167, 28 Cr L J 155. Where the Magistrate did not explain to the accused the particulars of the offence of which he was accused, but merely told him that he was accused of an offence under sec. 19 of the Burma Village Act, the trial was illegal—K. E v. Nga Sein, (1922) 4 U B R 127

788. Charge:—Although it is not necessary to frame a formal charge in a summons case, still the provisions of section 233 as to joinder of charges apply to summons cases as well because a charge is an essential element in any trial—K E v San Dun, 3 L B R 52. See also U. N Biswas v K E, 41 Cal 694 cited under sec 233

When a summons case is tried jointly with a warrant case, the procedure of a warrant case has to be followed, and a charge has to be drawn up not only for the warrant case but for the summons case also. Where therefore the accused was summoned for offences under secs 143 and 379 I P C, but only a charge for an offence under sec 379 I P C was drawn up, a conviction under sec 143 was set aside for the absence of a charge under that section—Hossein v Kalu, 29 Cal 481

Conviction on admission of truth of accusation.

243. If the accused admits that he has committed the offence of which he is accused, his admission shall be recorded as nearly as possible in the words used by him; and, if he shows no sufficient cause why he should not be convicted, the Magistrate may convict him accordingly.

789. Change:—The word 'may' has been substituted for the word 'shall', by sec. 66 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923. Under the old law the Magistrate was bound to convict the accused if the latter pleaded guilty and there was nothing to show that the plea was not unreserved or voluntary—Crown v Aslam, 8 S L R 213, 16 Cr L J 238. If the accused pleaded guilty the Magistrate was bound to convict him, he had no power to discharge the accused on the ground that his criminal intention was wanting. In such a case the Magistrate was bound to inflict a merely nominal penalty—Emp v. Nataraju 2 Cr L J 468, U B R 1905 Cr P C 37

Under the present amendment, the Magistrate is no longer bound to convict the accused on his own plea. "This amendment gives the Magistrate a discretion, which he does not now possess as to convicting an accused who pleads guilty in a summons case, and the Court is thus able to refuse to accept a plea of guilty which it believes to be untrue — Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) By making this amendment the Legislature has reverted to the wording of the 187 Code

790 Admission of accused —Where in a prosecution for obstructing the road with a bullock cart the accused on being questioned whether he drove the cart on the particular road without permission answered that he drove the cart without permission on account of ignorance and begged to be excused held that this did not amount to an admission that he had committed the offence and a conviction based thereon was wrong—Emp v Gulam Ra a 25 Cr L J 07 A I R 19 5 Lah 153

Where permission has been given to the accused under sec 205 to appear by pleader the latter can under secs 24 and 243 make the necessary answers and plead guilty or not guilty on behalf of the accused—Dorab kah v Emp 50 Bom 250 27 Cr L J 440 (see this case cited in Note 691 under sec 205) But the Oudh Chief Court holds that it is an incorrect procedure to convict an accused on an admission made by his counsel without examining the accused or recording any evidence—Municipal Board v Tulshi Ram 1 O W N 495 26 Cr L J 179

The Legislature requires that the admission shall be recorded as nearly as possible in the words used by the accused because the right of appeal depends upon whether he really pleaded guilty or not—Q E v Md Hanif 1889 A W N 81 When an accused person makes an exculpatory statement before the framing of a charge the Magistrate should take down the plea in the form of question and answer and in the exact words used by the accused in answer to the charge—Emp v Abdul Hossein 5 Bom L R 999

The admission of the accused should be recorded at once at the time of the trial and not afterwards from the rough notes nor from the Magistrate s memory—Q E v Emagadu 13 Mad 83

Where a written defence is tendered in a case under this chapter it is not incumbent on the Magistrate to take down the defence of the accused by personally exam ning him—Dila Mundal v Kally Shaha 16 W R 53

If a warrant case is tried under the summons case procedure the Magistrate cannot convict the accused on his own admission without recording evidence and without framing a formal charge—Natabar v K E 27 C W N 923

244 (1) If the Magistrate does not convict the accused under the preceding section, or if the accused does not make such admission the Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution, and also to hear the accused and take all such evidence as he produces in his defence

Procedure when no such admission is made

Provided that the Magistrate shall not be bound hear any person as complainant in any case in which the complaint has been made by a Court.

(2) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, on the application of the complainant or accused, issue process to compel the attendance of any witness or the production of any document or other thing.	(2) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, on the application of the complainant or accused, issue a summons to any witness directing him to attend or to produce any document or other thing.

(3) The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application, require that his reasonable expenses, incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial, be deposited in Court.

Change :—This section has been amended by section 67 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923

The italicised words at the beginning of the section have been added as consequential to the amendment made in sec 243 The proviso has been introduced 'to provide for the case where a complaint has been made by a Court, and we have made a similar amendment in section 252'—Report of the Joint Committee (1922) In sub-section (2) the word 'summons' has been substituted for process", for reasons see Note 792 below

791. Magistrate's duty to examine complainant, witnesses, etc. :—The Magistrate is not at liberty to stop a case whenever he likes. If the accused does not make the admission under section 243 the Magistrate is bound to hear the complainant and his witnesses, and he is not competent to acquit the accused without examining them—Q E v Toulman, Ratanlal 539, Bilas v Makroo, 2 B L R S N 15, Kesri v Md Baksh, 18 All 221, In re Ahlad Monee, 6 W R 75 It is not sufficient to examine the complainant alone, if the complainant has any witnesses, they must also be examined—Korapulu v. Monapa 5 Mad 160, and the Magistrate is not entitled to acquit the accused on a consideration of the complainant's statement alone—Q E v Sinnai, 20 Mad 358

If the complainant declines to be examined, it is the duty of the Magistrate to proceed to take the evidence of his other witnesses before dismissing the complaint, although, in any event, a strong preliminary presumption against the truth of the complainant's case would arise from his contumacious refusal to allow himself to be examined An order of acquittal passed under sec 245 (1) without so examining the other witnesses is a wrong order—Damdoo v. Harba 28 Cr L J. 511 (Nag)

Again, it is prima facie the duty of the prosecution to call the witnesses who prove their connection with the transaction in question and who from the connection must be able to give important information—Imp v Dhunno, 8 Cal 121, Q E v. Ram Sahai, 10 Cal 1070 All persons said to have witnessed the offence should be produced before the Magistrate—Karmi v Crown 1916 P R 12 17 Cr L J 267 If such witnesses are not called an adverse inference against the prosecution may be drawn—Emp v Dhunno 8 Cal 121

Moreover, the Magistrate is bound to examine the accused and his witnesses—In re Ahlad Moree 6 W R 75 He is bound to examine all the witnesses that are produced by the accused and has no discretion in this matter—In re Ameer Chand 13 W R 63 The Magistrate has no power to arbitrarily limit the number of witnesses to be examined though he has undoubted jurisdiction to curtail the number of unnecessary witnesses on the ground that their examination will delay and probably defeat the ends of justice—Biswanath v Shivanand 2 P L T 330 It is also the duty of the Magistrate to enquire of the accused as to whether he has any witness to produce Where no such enquiry is made the conviction is liable to be set aside—Emp v Jivai 1884 P R 7 If the accused does not produce any witness no unfavourable inference will be drawn against him—Emp v Dhunno 8 Cal 121

The Magistrate must base his decision on the evidence produced on either side in Court he cannot rely on statements made to him out of Court—Q E v Sahadeb 14 Bom 572

Cross examination —In summons cases the accused has no right to postpone the cross examination of any prosecution witness as in the case of trial of a warrant case But if the cross examination was postponed in accordance with the direction of the Magistrate he is bound to give further opportunity to the accused to cross-examine the witness Otherwise the evidence of such witness will not be legally admissible—Pirmeshwar v Emp 3 P L T 347

792 Issue of summons —If the complainant or the accused thinks that any witness is not likely to appear without summons he should apply beforehand to the Magistrate for summons to enforce his attendance—In re Chedee Koongra 14 W R 76 When such application is made the Magistrate must either grant or refuse the application he cannot simply file it—Bhomar v Digambar 6 C W N 548

The Magistrate has a discretion as to whether he will issue summons or not—In re Chedee 14 W R 76 Jhabbu v Emp 21 Cr L J 385 (All) Where a complainant mentioned the name of several witnesses but could only produce two of them the Magistrate could decide the case on the evidence of the two witnesses alone In re Notobur 15 W R 87 and was not bound to issue summons to the other witnesses—Anonymous 4 M H C R App 29

But where a summons had already been issued to a witness and he did not appear in obedience to the summons it was held under the old law that the Magistrate was bound to issue further process against that witness and had no discretion to refuse to issue further process—Daulat v Brinda 30 Cal 121 The party at whose instance the process was originally issued had a right to call upon the Court to compel the attendance of his witness—Bhomar v Digambar 6 C W N 548 But by virtue of the present amendment of sub section (2), this section read section 90 will give a discretion to the Magistrate to issue further process (warrant) or not This amendment has been made on the recommendation of the Select Committee of 1916 who observed. "The difficulty intended to be dealt with by this clause rests upon the words 'process to compel the attendance,' as seems clear from the Calcutta decisions We think that the only alteration really required is to substitute for the words referred to above the simple expression 'a summons to any witness directing him to attend, etc' This we think will make section 90 clearly applicable, which is, in our opinion, all that is required"

If a witness summoned by the Magistrate does not care to appear, the Magistrate is not bound to re issue the summons, it is in his discretion to issue fresh summons if he likes, but this section does not compel him to issue fresh summons to the witness—Selvamuthu v Chinnappan 27 Cr L J 72 A I R 1926 Mad 361 Under the old section, there was the phrase "compel the attendance of any witness" but in the present section the words used are "summon any witness directing him to attend." Under the present section, evidently the Magistrate cannot compel a witness to appear before him, if the witness refuses to appear. If the witness refuses to appear, he may be liable for disobedience of summons, but the complainant or accused is not entitled to ask the Court as a matter of right to compel the attendance of any witness who does not care to attend in obedience to the summons—Selvamuthu v Chinnappan (supra)

793. Sub-section (3)—Payment of process fee:—If the complainant fails to deposit fees for summoning witnesses, the Magistrate must deal with the case on such evidence as he may have before him but should not dismiss the complaint—Korapulu v Monappa, 5 Mad 160

If the accused fails to deposit process fees, the Magistrate may refuse to issue process, but this order of refusal must be sparingly passed, and such order would be improper in a case where the accused is unable or unwilling to deposit the money, and the result is that he is convicted without his witnesses being heard, especially if the case is one in which a severe sentence is passed—Qadu v Q E., 1898 P R 7.

245. (1) If the Magistrate upon taking the evidence referred to in Section 244 and such further evidence (if any) as he may, of his own motion, cause to be produced, and (if he thinks fit) examining the accused, finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal.

Acquittal

Sentence

(2) If he finds the accused guilty, he shall pass sentence upon him according to law.

(2) Where the Magistrate does not proceed in accordance with the provisions of Section 349 or Section 562, he shall, if he finds the accused guilty, pass sentence upon him according to law.

Change:—Subsection (2) has been amended by sec 68 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 This amendment is merely one of drafting A similar amendment has been made in sec 258 (2) and sec 306 (2)

794 Acquittal—Discharge '—A Magistrate who does not find the accused guilty, must record an order of acquittal No order of discharge can be passed under this section—Amir Khan v Emp, 1900 P R 19 Even if he styles his order as an order of discharge, the discharge will amount to an acquittal for no other order is contemplated in summons cases That being so the Sessions Judge has no power to take action under sec 437 (now 436) against a person alleged to be discharged—Sessions Judge v Venkataramaiyer S M I T 78 11 Cr L J 350

If, on the contrary, the Magistrate tried a warrant case as a summons case without framing a charge and passed an order of acquittal the so called acquittal would operate as a discharge under sec 253 of the Code—Emp v Jadu 1886 A W N 260 If however the Magistrate framed a charge in a summons case the acquittal should be under sec 258 and not under this section—Radanath v Hooma Churn 22 W R 12

Compensation to accused —When the Magistrate acquits an accused under this section on the ground that the complaint was vexatious, he can under sec 250 direct the complainant to pay compensation to the accused—Q E v Pandu 10 Bom 199 Namber v Ambu 5 Mad 381 Even if the Magistrate tries a warrant case as a summons case and acquits the accused he can award compensation

'Shall pass sentence —If the Magistrate convicts the accused he is bound to pass some sentence at least a nominal one—Anonymous, 4 M H C R App 66 Q E v Hanmant 2 Bom L R 611 Emp v Nataraja L B R (1905) Cr P C 37 2 Cr L J 468

246 A Magistrate may, under Section 243 or 245, convict the accused of any offence triable under this Chapter which from the facts admitted or proved he appears to have committed, whatever may be the nature of the complaint or summons

Finding not limited by complaint or summons

796. Scope of section —This section enables the Magistrate to proceed in regard to any other offence prima facie established by the evidence for the prosecution It is not necessary that the case started by the complainant must be the one which the Court should find proved before it arrives at a conclusion of the guilt of the accused The Court is not bound by all the statements of the complainant Its duty is to find out the truth in the midst of the conflicting evidence—Emp v Somnath 14 Bom L R 135 But it is not necessary, when the Magistrate thinks that other offences have been committed to reopen the trial or to follow the procedure of secs 243 and 244 Such a procedure would involve the rehearing of all the evidence in the same trial and is clearly opposed to the intention of the Legislature—Dasarath v Emp, 36 Cal 869

This section applies even in the absence of a formal complaint in the first instance The evidence of the complainant which evinces a desire on his part that the accused should be proceeded against may be treated as a complaint—Framji v Emp, 28 Bom L R 291, 27 Cr L J 496

This section does not mean that the accused in a summons case can be convicted of an offence alleged to have been committed on a date to which no reference has been made in the complaint or summons—Sarkar v Howrah Municipality, 22 Cr L J 559 (Cal)

247. If the summons has been issued on complaint, and upon the day appointed for the appearance of the accused, or any day subsequent thereto to which the hearing may be adjourned, the complainant does not appear, the Magistrate shall, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, acquit the accused, unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing of the case to some other day :

Non-appearance of complainant

Provided that, where the complainant is a public servant and his personal attendance is not required, the Magistrate may dispense with his attendance, and proceed with the case.

795A. Scope :—This section does not apply to cases instituted under section 195, and the Magistrate cannot dismiss the complaint for default of the complainant to appear—Ratanlal 137 See proviso

This section does not apply unless the case is instituted upon a complaint Under sec 47 of the U P Act II of 1916, it is the Magistrate who takes cognizance of the offence upon information received So the case is not one instituted on a complaint, and sec 247 of this Code has no application Inspite of non appearance of the complainant, the proceeding must continue—Basanti v Maqsud Ali A I R 1924 All 578 26 Cr L J 170

This section does not apply to proceedings under sec 107, because those proceedings do not amount to a trial of an accused for any offence Consequently the non appearance of the complainant does not enable the Magistrate to acquit the person proceeded against The proper order to be passed is an order of discharge under sec 119 on the ground that in the absence of any evidence on behalf of the complainant, it is not proved that the person proceeded against should execute a bond—Asrafali v Nasu Sarkar, 31 C W N 388, 28 Cr L J 479

796. 'Does not appear' :—The appearance of the complainant's Vakil is not appearance of the complainant within the meaning of this section, unless the Court has dispensed with his personal attendance and has specially allowed him to appear by a pleader—Ponnaganti v

Kolayyan, 2 Weir 309, Nagarambili v Malla Jagannath, 49 Mad 883, 27 Cr L J 958

If the complainant does not appear at the time of hearing the Court is not bound to wait for the complainant till the Court closes for the day—Kuttiah v. Pari Matai, 7 Mad 356 The Magistrate is empowered to dismiss the complaint if the complainant does not appear when the case is called on for hearing even though he appears soon after—Rangasami v Narasimhulu, 7 Mad 213 Nagarambili v M Jagannatha (supra)

Although a Magistrate has power to dismiss the complaint for default of the complainant's appearance he should exercise his power with a reasonable discretion He should not dismiss the complaint where the non appearance of the complainant was due to circumstances beyond his control e g a heavy flood which cut off all communications—Tazoonnissa v Wasil 24 W R 64 Q v Madhoo 5 W R 51 or when the case was transferred from one Magistrate to another, and the complainant was present in the Court premises but not having had notice of the transfer did not appear before the particular Magistrate who had charge of the case, but appeared in the previous Court—In re Ramanath, 13 C L R 303, Gunpat v Good 47 Cal 147 Faim Haji v Hamid 24 C L J 444, 18 Cr L J 104 or where the complainant had been kept out of the way by the action of the accused in getting a constable to arrest him on a false charge—In re Sinna Gourdan 38 Mad 1028 or where the case was called on for hearing on a date not fixed for hearing and the complainant was necessarily absent—Achambit v Mahatap, 42 Cal 365, 18 C W N 1180 16 Cr L J 148 or where the complainant was dead and another person wished to be brought on the record—Madhu Chowdhury v Turab 18 C W N 1211 Jitan v Domoo 1 P L J 264 20 C W N 862 18 Cr L J 151 (contra—Purna Chandra v Dengar 19 C W N 334) or where the complainant was in jail and could not therefore appear—Reg v Virbhadra Ratanlal 59

Non appearance on adjourned hearing —A Magistrate can dismiss a complaint and acquit the accused not only where the complainant does not appear on the first day of hearing but also where he fails to appear on the date of adjourned hearing—Latchamma a 2 Weir 308 Madhoo soodun v Hari Dass 22 W R 40 Ramjiwan v Abilakh 18 C W N 584 But this power to dismiss a complaint must be exercised with discretion Where the complainant has done all that is necessary for him to do to establish his case a complaint ought not to be dismissed for his non appearance on an adjourned date, unless his attendance is in the opinion of the Magistrate specially required on that day—Anonymous 2 Weir 306 Nagayya 2 Weir 306 Girish Chandra v Bhushan Das, 46 Cal 867, 23 C W N 959 20 Cr L J 492

Again a Magistrate cannot dismiss a complaint for non appearance of the complainant on the adjourned date if the order of adjournment was not made in the presence and hearing of parties—Anonymous, 8 M H C R App 5 or where the Magistrate did not specify the place where the case was to be taken up, but ordered the parties to appear either at Aligarh or at Tahbnagar —In re Bansidhar, 1882 A W N 229

Non appearance on date of judgment —This section applies to a case of absence of the complainant on the date fixed for his appearance or on the date of adjourned hearing, and does not apply to a case where the complainant is absent on the date fixed for delivery of the judgment If on such a date the complainant is absent (and the attendance of the complainant on that date was not specially directed by the Magistrate) an order of acquittal of the accused on the ground of absence of the complainant is erroneous—Girish Chandra v. Bhushan, 46 Cal 867, Emp v. Jangusingh, 19 N L R 48

797. Order of acquittal :—In a summons case, if the complainant is absent on the day of hearing, the proper order to be passed by the Magistrate under section 247 is one of acquittal and not one 'striking off the complaint—In re Dubash, 10 Bom L R 628

The accused is entitled to acquittal if the complainant is absent, and unless the Court thinks proper to adjourn the hearing of the case to some other day In other words the right to an order of acquittal accrues to the accused upon two conditions, and is dependent firstly on the absence of the complainant, and secondly on the Court not adjourning the case But if on the date of hearing the case is not taken up at all, it cannot be said that the second condition is fulfilled, and the accused is not entitled to acquittal owing to the absence of the complainant on that date—Rash Behary v Corporation of Calcutta, 26 Cr L J 1050, A. I R 1926 Cal 102

Warrant case —If a warrant case is tried by the Magistrate as a summons case, the procedure is bad, and he cannot pass an order under this section dismissing the complaint for non appearance of the complainant—Ram Coomar v Ramji, 4 C W N 26

Where two charges, one on a summons case and another on a warrant case, are jointly tried in one trial and the complainant is absent on the adjourned hearing the Magistrate ought to make an order of discharge under section 259 and not one of acquittal under this section—Raghs ali v. Singaram, 41 Mad 727, Rajnarain v Lala Zamoli, 11 Cal 91

If a summons case is tried under the warrant case procedure and eventually the Magistrate acquits the accused under section 247 on account of the absence of the complainant on an adjourned date of hearing held that the acquittal is legal and proper Section 247 lays down a general principle that a person charged with a summons case offence is entitled to an acquittal if the complainant is absent, and there is no reason why this right should be denied to him simply because the Magistrate has adopted a different procedure for the trial of the case—Venkatarama v Sundaram 44 M L J 219

Further inquiry —Since an order under this section is one of acquittal and not one of discharge, no further inquiry can be directed under sec 436—Bindra v Bhaguanta 25 Cr L J 359 (Oudh)

Absence of accused —This section has nothing to do with the presence or absence of the accused If the complainant is absent, the case will be dismissed and the accused acquitted, whether the latter is present or not—17 C W. N. clix. If the complainant is absent, the accused must be acquitted and it is immaterial that the summons to the accused had not been served and that the accused was not present when he was acquitted—Kiran Sarkar v Emp 5 P L T 15 24 Cr L J 815 (Contra—Kandappa Chetty 2 Weir 307) If there are several accused, and one is present and the others absent the order acquitting the accused who is present will put an end to the case also against the other accused who are not before the Court—Parchi Singh v Umar Mahomed 4 C W N 346

Appeal to District Magistrate —If an order of dismissal is passed under this section, the District Magistrate has no power to set aside the order of acquittal on appeal because under sec 417 an appeal against an order of acquittal shall be directed by the Government and presented to the High Court—Rangasami v Narasimhulu 7 Mad 213 Nityananda v Rakkahari 38 C L J 196 24 Cr L J 716

798 Revival of complaint—Retrial—The Code contains no provision empowering a Magistrate to revive a case after an order of dismissal is passed under this section—Ram Coomar v Ramji 4 C W N 26 The Magistrate has no jurisdiction to restore a case after it has been dismissed for default of appearance of the complainant and the accused has been acquitted even though good cause is shown for the complainant's non appearance—Lakshminarasimhan v Nalluri Bappanna 52 M L J 173 28 Cr L J 770 The dismissal of a complaint under this section amounts to an acquittal and bars a subsequent trial on the same facts (section 403) even if good cause is shown for non appearance of the complainant—Emp v Dulla 45 All 58 In re Sinnu Goundan, 38 Mad 1028 6 M L J 160 In re Guggilappu 34 Mad 253, 12 Cr L J 41 Paschu v Umar 4 C W N 346 Emp v Bhawani Prasad 1885 A W N 43 Ram Mahato v Emp 2 P L T 170 Kiran Sarkar v Emp 5 P L T 15 Nityananda v Rakkahari 38 C L J 196 Even the District Magistrate has no power to order the entertainment of a complaint which was dismissed for default of appearance—Narayanasami v Jataki 2 Weir 308 He cannot order the entertainment of a fresh complaint for a different offence on the same facts—Fazar v K E 37 C L J 253 25 Cr L J 149 But if the proceedings are so irregular as not to amount to a trial the dismissal will not amount to an acquittal and the complaint may be revived—Anonymous 2 Weir 307 Reg v Virbhadra Ratanlal 59 In Ram Mahato v Emp P L T 170 it has been held that even if the order of acquittal is passed under a misapprehension still the Magistrate cannot take cognizance of a fresh complaint if the order is wrong the complainant can take proper steps by way of revision but he cannot file a fresh complaint

In a Madras case it has been pointed out that the accused who is acquitted under this section owing to the absence of the complainant on the date fixed for hearing is acquitted without trial on the merits he cannot be said to have been tried within the meaning of section 403 and therefore an acquittal under this section is not a bar to a second complaint of the offence on the same facts—Kotayya v Venkayya 40 Mad 977 (Note) 19 Cr L J 497 dissenting from In re Guggilappu 34 Mad 253
